ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mrs. Judd, Mr. Radka, Mrs. Cushman and Mr. Davis introduce

Delegate Proposal 1635, A proposal to direct the use of legislative power with respect to natural resources for the public interest and to grant state and local government the power to acquire land. Creates a new article.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mrs. Judd, Mr. Radka, Mrs. Cushman, Messrs. Follo, Sharpe, Davis and Figy introduce

Delegate Proposal 1636, A proposal to provide a new article on natural resources.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Nord introduces Delegate Proposal 1637, A proposal to provide for a two house legislature representing the rural and urban areas and for the organization of the same. Amends article V.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative organization.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mrs. Cushman and Mr. Rajkovich introduce Delegate Proposal 1638, A proposal to provide for a method of altering boundaries of units of local government. Amends article VIII by adding a new section.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Shackleton, Leppien, Turner and Mrs. Cushman introduce Delegate Proposal 1639, A proposal to provide for the consolidation of townships. Amends article VIII, section 15.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mrs. Cushman introduces Delegate Proposal 1640, A proposal to provide for the interpretation of language used in the constitution. Amends article XVI by adding a new section.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Sleder and Allen introduce Delegate Proposal 1641, A proposal to retain restrictions on the legislature in passing special or local acts, and to place certain other restrictions on legislation affecting local units of government. Amends article V, section 30.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Powell introduces Delegate Proposal 1642, A proposal to authorize local approval of liquor licenses and require establishments to be 500 feet from a church or school. Amends article XVI, section 11.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Donnelly introduces Delegate Proposal 1643, A proposal to prevent judicial officers from appointment to other judicial offices during term of office and 1 year thereafter. Amends article VII, section 9.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Faxon introduces Delegate Proposal 1644, A proposal to provide for the establishment by the legislature of a business activities commission. Amends article V by adding a new section.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Faxon introduces Delegate Proposal 1645, A proposal to create a civil rights commission and to define its powers and duties. Amends article VI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Faxon introduces Delegate Proposal 1646, A proposal to provide for submission of constitutional amendments to electors by a majority of the legislature. Amends article XVII, section 1.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Faxon introduces Delegate Proposal 1647, A proposal to create a coordinating council and four governing bodies for all state institutions of higher learning, and to provide for membership, terms, powers and duties thereof. Amends article XI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Heideman introduces Delegate Proposal 1648, A proposal to guarantee teacher tenure in tax supported educational institutions. Amends article XI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Faxon introduces Delegate Proposal 1649, A proposal to provide for a constitutional convention each 20 years, to authorize the governor to appoint a preparatory commission, and to provide for the approval of a majority of those voting at the next fall election. Amends article XVII, section 4.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: That completes the introduction of proposals, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Dade offers Resolution 57, A resolution promoting fellowship and understanding among the constitutional convention delegates.

Following is Resolution 57 as offered:

Whereas, The Constitutional Convention of 1908 was immeasurably enriched in its morale, efficiency and cooperative action; and

Whereas, The Constitutional Convention of 1961-62, in the togetherness experienced by its several committees during the course of their being in the life and work of public hearings away from convention, has similarly been enriched; and

Whereas, It is the consensus of all experiencing such association that it is good for men to be together under such meaningful relationships; now therefore be it

Resolved, That the convention, through the proper committee, do devise ways and means by which the convention delegates may, from time to time, be drawn together in congeniality and friendship; and be it further

Resolved, That the purpose of such get togethers, accompanied with the breaking of bread and refreshments, be for the sole purpose of enriching and deepening common understanding, mutual respect and fellowship, toward a creative expression of a noteworthy document.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on rules and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only resolution on file, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: Under the order of unfinished business, the president lays before the convention Resolution 41, A resolution concerning referral to committees and reporting by committees; by Miss Hart and Mr. Downs. This resolution was reported Friday by the committee on rules and resolutions with a substitute therefor.

For Resolution 41 as offered, see above, page 299.

The following is proposed substitute Resolution 41:

Whereas, The convention has adopted as its objective the drafting of an entirely new constitution; and

Whereas, In so doing it is important that consideration be given to the manner in which the proposed new constitution differs from the present constitution, and that inadvertent omission of provisions of the present constitution be avoided; and

Whereas, It may be beneficial to the people of Michigan in evaluating the proposed new constitution and to the courts in construing it, if it is adopted, to indicate in the records of the convention the consideration given to each provision of the present constitution; now therefore be it

Resolved, That:

1. Primary jurisdiction for each article and section of the present constitution shall be assigned in accordance with the attached schedule.

2. Committee proposals shall include only such matter as is proposed to be included in the new constitution.

3. In supporting reports accompanying committee proposals each committee shall indicate the extent to which the committee proposal includes new matter not covered in the present constitution, and the extent to which the committee proposal continues, revises, or replaces provisions of the present constitution, and the reasons therefor.

4. When a substantive committee determines that a provision of the present constitution assigned to it in accordance with item 1 of the resolving clause of this resolution shall be omitted entirely from the new constitution, without replacement by new matter contained in a committee proposal, the committee shall so report to the convention within the time prescribed for substantive committee proposals and reports with a concise statement of the reasons therefor. All such reports shall be placed on general orders and considered in committee of the whole. Upon the consideration of any such report, it shall be in order for a delegate to move to include in the new constitution the provision of the present constitution which the committee recommends be omitted, and if such motion prevails, said provision shall then be known as a proposal of the committee of the whole, and shall thereafter follow the procedure provided under rule 57 for any other committee proposal.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I should like to move that the schedule be considered read in deference to Mr. Chase's voice.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection it will be so considered.

For text of schedule as amended, included as part of proposed substitute Resolution 41, see below, page 367.

MR. VAN DUSEN: And now, if I may, I should like to speak on the proposed substitute resolution and offer some explanation of it.

This is a somewhat complicated subject, I suspect. It is designed, however, to give guidance to committees in making their reports in the most useful fashion.

In the work of the committee on public information in preparing an address to the people explaining what we have done here, in our own work in explaining to our constituents what the new constitution does and purports to do, and in the consideration of the new constitution in the years to come by the courts of the state of Michigan, it will be helpful to all of these people to know to what extent consideration was given by this convention to the provisions of the present constitution and to what extent this convention intended to continue, to revise or to replace the provisions of the present constitution, to add entirely new material and to delete entirely material found in the present constitution.

Earlier, in response to a parliamentary inquiry by Mr. Marshall, President Nisbet responded to the effect that we are engaged here in writing an entirely new constitution. We are not, therefore, simply proposing several amendments to the present constitution.

Therefore, it is the theory of this resolution that because we are writing an entirely new constitution, committee proposals will include only that material which is intended to be included in the new constitution. Committee proposals will not simply be amendments to the present constitution.

But because the committee proposals will incorporate only new matter intended to be included in the new constitution, it is important that the supporting reports describe with reasonable care the intention of the committee with respect to the provisions of the present constitution which are being left behind.

And, therefore, the purpose of this resolution is, first, to assign every section of the present constitution to one of the 9 substantive committees; to state that committee proposals shall include only new matter proposed to be incorporated in the new constitution; and to require that in supporting reports accompanying committee proposals each committee shall indicate the extent to which that committee proposal includes brand new matter or the extent to which it continues, revises or replaces provisions of the present constitution, and the reasons.

Now, this leaves one subject which I think has been giving many committees some concern in recent weeks as they have prepared to submit reports. In many cases the committees in considering the present constitution have simply concluded that some provisions are so obsolete, so unnecessary and so —well, I repeat, unnecessary—that they may be completely deleted and not replaced by any new matter.

However, it is important that future courts, and that the convention as a whole, know that the committee has reached this conclusion advisedly and not simply inadvertently.

It is important, also, that if a delegate does not agree with a committee's decision or conclusion that a particular section of the present constitution be omitted, that he have an opportunity to have the full convention determine whether or not it should be continued in the new constitution.

Therefore, when a committee determines that a section of the present constitution shall be left out entirely it will so report under this resolution to the convention, giving the reasons.

That report will be placed on general orders and when it is considered on general orders it will be in order for a delegate to move to put into the new constitution the subject matter of the provision of the present constitution which the committee has concluded shall be deleted, and if that motion prevails then the retention of that matter in the present constitution will become a proposal of the committee of the whole and thereafter shall be treated like any other committee proposal.

As I say, this is a somewhat complicated subject, but I think it is one which merits our careful consideration and the resolution, if adopted, will be helpful in terms of guiding the committees in making their reports and in terms of guiding us through carrying out the balance of our work in this convention.

There is one amendment on the secretary's desk to which I should direct the attention of the convention. In preparing the schedule entitled "Schedule Showing Primary Jurisdiction of Substantive Committees" we had inadvertently assigned to the committee on legislative organization some matters which are properly within the jurisdiction of the committee on legislative powers and which have been handled by the committee on legislative powers.

If the secretary will read the amendment, I would move its adoption.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Van Dusen offers the following amendment to the schedule entitled "Schedule Showing Primary Jurisdiction of Substantive Committees" attached to the substitute for Resolution 41:

1. Amend under article V, by striking out lines 2, 3 and 4 which read as follows:

"2- 6	Apportionment, qualifications of legislature	Legislative organization
7- 8	Rights and privileges of legislators	Legislative powers
9-11	Compensation of legislators	Legislative organization" and inserting the following:

"2- 4	Apportionment of legislature	Legislative organization
5- 8	Qualifications, rights and privileges of legislators	Legislative powers
9-11	Compensation of legislators	Legislative powers".

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Van Dusen. Any discussion? If not, all in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

The question is now on agreeing to the substitute, as amended by the amendment offered by Mr. Van Dusen. Any discussion?

Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, I believe the committee has made a very good rewrite of the original resolution, and that this will help us in keeping track of our work throughout the convention. I recommend support of the substitute resolution that has been offered.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President, just a matter of inquiry. The committee's resolution says nothing with respect to concurrent jurisdiction on various matters.

I simply wish to clarify my understanding that this does not affect the earlier memorandum which assigned concurrent jurisdiction on many of these matters to committees other than those committees having primary jurisdiction, so that consultation and perhaps joint committee reports are still contemplated, are they not?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, Mr. Marshall, that is quite correct. I should add, Mr. President, in response to an inquiry just propounded by Mr. Kuhn who, like some others, may be confused on the point, concerning a couple parts of the schedule where ditto marks appear, that it is the intention of the amendment to the schedule that only sections 2, 3 and 4 of article V shall be assigned to the committee on legislative organization. The others would be assigned to the committee on legislative powers, except as otherwise indicated.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the substitute, as amended by the amendment offered by Mr. Van Dusen. Any discussion? If not, all in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The substitute, as amended, is adopted.

The question is now on the adoption of the resolution as substituted. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

Resolution 41, as substituted, is adopted.

Following is Resolution 41 as substituted and adopted:

A resolution concerning referral to committees and reporting by committees.

Whereas, The convention has adopted as its objective the drafting of an entirely new constitution; and

Whereas, In so doing it is important that consideration be given to the manner in which the proposed new constitution differs from the present constitution, and that inadvertent omission of provisions of the present constitution be avoided; and

Whereas, It may be beneficial to the people of Michigan in evaluating the proposed new constitution and to the courts in construing it, if it is adopted, to indicate in the records of the convention the consideration given to each provision of the present constitution; now therefore be it

Resolved, That:

1. Primary jurisdiction for each article and section of the present constitution shall be assigned in accordance with the attached schedule.

2. Committee proposals shall include only such matter as is proposed to be included in the new constitution.

3. In supporting reports accompanying committee proposals each committee shall indicate the extent to which the committee proposal includes new matter not covered in the present constitution, and the extent to which the committee proposal continues, revises, or replaces provisions of the present constitution, and the reasons therefor.

4. When a substantive committee determines that a provision of the present constitution assigned to it in accordance with item 1 of the resolving clause of this resolution shall be omitted entirely from the new constitution, without replacement by new matter contained in a committee proposal, the committee shall so report to the convention within the time prescribed for substantive committee proposals and reports with a concise statement of the reasons therefor. All such reports shall be placed on general orders and considered in committee of the whole. Upon the consideration of any such report, it shall be in order for a delegate to move to include in the new constitution the provision of the present constitution which the committee recommends be omitted, and if such motion prevails, said provision shall then be known as a proposal of the committee of the whole, and shall thereafter follow the procedure provided under rule 57 for any other committee proposal.

SCHEDULE SHOWING PRIMARY JURISDICTION OF SUBSTANTIVE COMMITTEES

Article and Section		Primary Jurisdiction
		Committee on:
Preamble		Miscellaneous provisions and schedule
Art. I (entire)	Boundaries and seat of government	" " " "
Art. II	— Declaration of rights
1- 2	Inherent power, right of assembly	Declaration of rights, suffrage and elections
3-	Separation of church and state	" " " " " "
4-10	Free speech, searches, seizures, etc.	" " " " " "
11-19	Rights relating to courts, etc.	" " " " " "
21-22	Treason, subversion	" " " " " "
Art. III	— Elective franchise
1-	Qualificators of electors voting	" " " " " "
2- 3	Residence of electors	" " " " " "
4-	Votes on bond issues	" " " " " "
5- 9	Rights of electors, recall, board of canvassers	" " " " " "
Art. IV (entire)	Division of powers	Miscellaneous provisions and schedule
Art. V	— Legislature
1-	Initiative, referendum	Legislative powers
2- 4	Apportionment of legislature	Legislative organization
5- 8	Qualifications, rights and privileges of legislators	Legislative powers
9-11	Compensation of legislators	" "
12-	Election of legislators	" "
13-18	Meetings of legislature, conduct of business	" "
19-26	Handling of bills, miscellaneous powers	" "
27-	Jury of less than 12	" "
28-	Indeterminate sentence	" "
29-35	Certain powers of legislature	" "
36-	Veto, procedure to override	" "

Article and Section		Primary Jurisdiction
		Committee on:
37-	Item veto	Executive branch
38-	Referendum by legislature	Legislative powers
39-40	Publication of laws	" "
Art. VI — Executive
1-	Constitutional officers, 2 year term	Executive branch
2- 3	Certain powers of governor	" "
4-	Military powers of governor	" "
5- 9	Certain powers of governor	" "
10-	Appointive power, senate approval	" "
11-18	Seal, eligibility, succession	" "
19-	The lieutenant governor, president of senate	" "
20-22	Certain duties, salaries, civil service	" "
Art. VII — Judicial
1-	Courts	Judicial branch
2-	Supreme court justices, election	" "
3- 7	Terms of supreme court, jurisdiction, staff, etc.	" "
8- 9	Circuit judges, election	" "
10-13	Circuit and probate court jurisdiction, staff salary	" "
14-15	Probate courts, justices of peace, election	" "
16-19	Jurisdiction of justices of peace, courts of record	" "
20-	Appointment to fill vacancies	" "
21-	Circuit court commissioners' election	" "
22-	Style of process	" "
23-	Nomination and election of judges	" "
Art. VIII — Local government
1- 2	Counties, organization, status	Local government
3-	County officers, election	" "
4-	County seat	" "
5-	Sheriff	" "
6- 9	Jury commissioners, boards of supervisors, powers	" "
10-	County taxing, borrowing power	" "
11-	County hospitals	" "
12-	County borrowing power	" "
13-15	County seat, navigable streams, townships	" "
15a-	Drainage district bonds	" "
16-17	Townships, powers	" "
18-19	Township officers, public utility franchise	" "
20-	Cities and villages, taxing, borrowing powers	" "
21-23	Home rule, parks, public utilities	" "
24-25	Cities, borrowing, taxing powers, public utilities	" "
26-	County roads	" "
27-31	Control of streets, franchises, port districts, metropolitan districts	" "
Art. IX — Impeachments and removals
1- 2	Impeachment by house of representatives	Legislative powers
3-	Trial of impeachment by senate	" "
4-	Impeachment of judge	" "
5-	Provisional appointment	Executive branch
6- 7	Removals by governor	" "
8-	Removal of municipal officers	Legislative powers
Art. X — Finance and taxation
1-	Primary school interest fund	Finance and taxation
2-	Annual tax to meet expenses	" " "
3-	Uniform rule, property tax	" " "
4-	Specific taxes	" " "
5-	Assessment of public utility property	" " "
6-	No taxation by reference	" " "
7-	Cash value standard	" " "
8-	Equalization	" " "
9-	Power of taxation never suspended	" " "
10-13	Borrowing, investment powers	" " "
14-	Internal improvements	Legislative powers
15-18	Deposits, payments, accounts	Finance and taxation
19-	Ineligibility to certain offices	" " "
20-20a	Railroad acquisitions, WWI bonus	" " "
21-	15-mill limit	" " "
22-	Gas tax earmarking	" " "
23-	Sales tax earmarking	" " "
23a-26	Various bond issues	" " "
27-28	School borrowing	" " "

Article and Section		Primary Jurisdiction
Art. XI — Education		Committee on:
1-	Preamble	Education
2-	Superintendent of public instruction	"
3-	Regents of U. of M., election	"
4- 5	Regents, body corporate, powers	"
6- 7	State board of education, MSU trustees	"
8-	MSU trustees, powers	"
9-	Primary school system	"
10-	Other colleges, etc.	"
11-	Proceeds of school lands	"
12-13	Escheats, salt spring lands	Miscellaneous provisions and schedule
14-	Libraries, penal fines	Education
15-	Institutions for deaf, etc.	"
16-	Wayne State U., board, powers	"
Art. XII — Corporations
1- 8	General provisions	Miscellaneous provisions and schedule
9-	Banking laws	" " " "
Art. XIII — Eminent Domain
1- 3	Taking, power, purpose, procedure	" " " "
4-	Regents of U. of M. have power	" " " "
5-	Power of municipalities, bonding	" " " "
Art. XIV (entire)	Exemptions	Legislative powers
Art. XV (entire)	Militia	Miscellaneous provisions and schedule
Art. XVI — Miscellaneous provisions
1-	Terms of office	Miscellaneous provisions and schedule
2-	Oath	" " " "
3-	Compensation of public officials	" " " "
4-	Tie votes, contested elections	" " " "
5-	Continuity in case of disaster	Legislative powers
6-	Use of English language	Miscellaneous provisions and schedule
7-	Courts of conciliation	Legislative powers
8-10	Property of married women, aliens, agricultural leases	Miscellaneous provisions and schedule
11-	Liquor control, excise tax, local option	Legislative powers
Art. XVII (entire)	Amendment and revision, schedule	Miscellaneous provisions and schedule

PRESIDENT NISBET (continuing): Any further unfinished business?

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only item on the calendar, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders of the day.

Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of discussing several proposals.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Baginski that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

Mr. Baginski will preside over the committee of the whole.

[Whereupon, Mr. Baginski assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The committee will be in order.

The Chair would like to call the attention of the delegates to rule 45. Rule 45 contemplates that all motions and proposals of business will be submitted in writing. The proposals have been before the convention for a number of days and I am sure we are all ready to submit all the amendments in writing.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Before we read the first proposal, the attention of the secretary has been called to 4 errors on the calendar.

Committee Proposal 4, Committee Proposal 7, Committee Proposal 8 and Committee Proposal 9 were reported by the committee on executive branch, not the committee on education.

From the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 4, A proposal to provide communication by the governor to the legislature on the condition of the state. Amends article VI, section 5.

Following is Committee Proposal 4 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

[He] THE GOVERNOR shall communicate by message to the legislature AT THE BEGINNING OF EACH SESSION, [and at the close of his official term to the incoming legislature, the condition of the state, and recommend such measures as he may deem expedient] AND MAY, AT OTHER TIMES, PRESENT TO THE LEGISLATURE INFORMATION AS TO THE AFFAIRS OF THE STATE, AND RECOMMEND MEASURES HE CONSIDERS NECESSARY OR DESIRABLE.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 4:

The committee on executive branch proposes to delete the present requirement for the exaugural message. The requirement is a potential source of embarrassment to an outgoing governor. However, an outgoing governor may, if he so desires, present an exaugural message under his power to "present to the legislature information as to the affairs of the state, and recommend measures he considers necessary or desirable." Only a half dozen states besides Michigan now require the exaugural.

In requiring the governor to "communicate by message to the legislature at the beginning of each session," the practice most common among the states is being followed.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to Committee Proposal 4?

Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, this proposal, as is clear from reading it, relates to messages from the governor to the legislature.

The present provision of the constitution provides for an exaugural message. It is felt that the governor should have the opportunity to present an exaugural message if he wishes to, and that is covered in the language that is now used. But it is not felt that he should be required to do so.

The remainder of the language is only clarifying. It relates to the beginning of the session and provides that the governor shall, at the beginning of each session, present his message, and at such other times as he considers it necessary.

The earlier provision reads "recommend such measures as he may deem expedient." The committee felt that the wording "and recommend measures he considers necessary or desirable" was better in that situation.

The committee unanimously recommends the adoption of this proposal.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to Committee Proposal 4? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 4 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Concurrently from the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, and from the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, by Mr. Erickson, chairman, Committee Proposal 5, A proposal pertaining to the inclusion in the constitution of all of section 9 of article XII except the portion relating to bank notes or paper credit.

Following is Committee Proposal 5 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. 9. No general law providing for the incorporation of trust companies or corporations for banking purposes, or regulating the business thereof, shall be adopted, amended or repealed except by a vote of 2/3 of the members elected to each house of the legislature. [Such laws shall not authorize the issue of bank notes or paper credit to circulate as money.]

Messrs. Hoxie and Erickson, chairmen of the committees on legislative powers and miscellaneous provisions and schedule, submit the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 5:

The committees on legislative powers and miscellaneous provisions and schedule purpose that the first sentence of section 9 of article XII of the 1908 constitution be retained in the proposed new constitution intact for the following reason:

This sentence provides that no general law in regard to banking and trust companies can be changed except on the vote of 2/3 of the elected members to each house of the legislature. This provision was put in the 1908 constitution in lieu of a provision in the 1850 constitution that all charters for banks should have to be submitted to the vote of the people. This provision in the 1908 constitution has proved effective and there has been no serious objection to it.

It is the belief of the committees that it is necessary to have this 2/3 provision in order that the banking laws may be kept as permanent and stable as possible. The history of banking during this period since 1908 has been to the effect that the provision has been amply protective of public rights, and it is not necessary to go back to the provision of requiring a vote of the people on banking laws.

It is recommended that the last sentence of said section in the present constitution be eliminated for the reason that the federal government has preempted the issuance of money and this provision has been practically obsolete for nearly 100 years.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, with respect to this particular section of the constitution—section 9 of article XII—the legislative powers committee and the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule have concurrent jurisdiction.

Under our table of organization of the legislative powers committee this particular section was assigned to a subcommittee composed of Mr. Millard, Mr. Downs, Mr. Wanger and Mrs. Koeze.

They worked in conjunction with the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, and I am sure they would like to speak also on behalf of this particular proposal and as to the activities of the two committees and the recommendations of the two full committees.

At this time I should like to call on Mr. Millard to state the position of the legislative powers committee.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, the subcommittee of the committee on legislative powers met with a subcommittee of the committee of miscellaneous provisions and schedule and held 2 hearings.

At the first hearing we heard Professor Conard of the University of Michigan law school who gave us the background of this particular provision.

Later, we opened a public hearing for the members of the banking fraternity, and we were pleased at having representations from large banks and medium size banks and small banks. They all appeared before the 2 subcommittees, together with the director of the Michigan bankers' association and the legal counsel. We found no one who was opposed to this particular section. Everyone seemed to be in favor of it.

This section has been in the constitution since 1908. At that time it was adopted in preference to a provision which had been heretofore in the constitution which required a vote of the people.

Instead of that, this section as it now is written was put in requiring that any change in any law would have to be by 2/3 vote of the members of the legislature of each house of the legislature elect.

According to the history of the provision, this section has worked very favorably. There have been no amendments to it. There seems to have been no objection to it and everything has seemed to work out satisfactorily.

I have gone over the arguments that were advanced and the debates that took place in the 1907 convention. At that time it was pointed out that this 2/3 provision was necessary to stabilize the banking laws. And in the course of the historical review, it seems to have done exactly what the members of that convention had anticipated.

Also, in that convention, a motion was made to strike out this last sentence which provided that no money could be issued. I will read this portion of section 9 of article XII as it presently appears in the constitution. It reads: "Such laws shall not authorize the issue of bank notes or paper credit to circulate as money."

That is the last sentence of that section. That was argued quite extensively. A motion was passed by the committee of the whole to strike out that sentence. Then another committee came along and found some provisions in another article which they thought were somewhat contradictory and that if this was not left in the others would have to be left in. So that the proposer of this amendment finally withdrew his objections and had this sentence reinstated so that the two other sections of another article could be taken out.

Since this has been in, no state banks or national banks have been allowed to issue money. That has been preempted by the federal government.

Your committee saw no reason for the continuation of this sentence any more than the 1907 convention found any reason to continue the sentence in that section of the article referred to.

The subcommittee of the committee on legislative powers passed unanimously this proposal embodying the first sentence of the section intact and eliminating the second sentence. This was referred to the full committee, the committee on legislative powers, and there it was also passed unanimously.

Then it was coordinated with the subcommittee of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, and I think the subcommittee chairman of that committee would like to heard on that matter and report on behalf of that committee. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, Mr. Millard has given a very complete report on the action with respect to this proposal. I should like to supplement what he said about the public hearing. In addition to the witnesses to whom he has referred, the state banking commissioner appeared and unequivocally recommended that the first sentence of this section be retained.

The subcommittee of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule which considered this matter was composed of Messrs. Lawrence, Binkowski, Mahinske, Hutchinson and myself. Its action was unanimous. The action of the miscellaneous committee as a whole was also unanimous.

I feel that unquestionably this proposal is in the best interests of the state and should be approved.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to the proposal?

If not, Committee Proposal 5 will pass.

Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I have a slight amendment which is purely procedural. The reference to section 9 in the proposal should be deleted because it is impossible to determine at this time whether this language will in fact be section 9 of the article.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Austin, it has been suggested that this matter might be properly taken up by the committee on style and drafting, rather than at this time.

Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, I was going to request that Mr. Cudlip make a statement on this matter. I understand that is the only way we can proceed from the committee. But it is also my understanding that the committee on style and drafting will have the authority to try and arrange these so that they will be consistent in the constitution. Mr. Cudlip, is that correct?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman, members and Mr. Hoxie, the committee on style and drafting held its second meeting today and I arise on behalf of the committee, since this question was raised by one of our distinguished members, to say this: as you know, under the rules of this convention, matters are referred by this body to the committee on style and drafting before and after second reading.

We get integrated parts of the constitution by article or section. To date, mostly by section.

Today at our meeting we determined that because we do not have before us the entire substance in connection with given articles, to say nothing about the entire document, we are not sending matters back to this floor, unless we are reversed, with the section number and the article number included in our report.

The reason is obvious. Until you have all the bricks before you, you do not know what kind of house you are going to build. And when we deal with these matters in this fragmentary style, we do not have complete information. Today, for example, we considered 8 proposals. Two did not come to us with the article or the section number, and 1 did.

The 1 that did will come back to the floor of this convention with the recommendation of the committee; and the recommendation is that for the time being we forget about the article and the section number.

Now, documentary wise in the office of the secretary and in the style and drafting committee, we have a history and we have the numbers. But again we cannot build the house the way it should be built by now suggesting to this body what those numbers would or should be.

Therefore, to get to the nub of the matter—and this may not be the appropriate place to say this; but it did arise here—I was going to make the suggestion under motions and resolutions that when committees report matters, even before they come to the floor, they keep them documented in terms of what our constitution is today, but let us not place the section and article number on the proposal, because we cannot build in that fashion.

So I feel that this is an appropriate time, in view of the tenor of the debate, to suggest to committees and to committee chairmen that we temporarily forget about the article and section number. In terms of documentation for internal purposes, yes, keep track of the article and section number, but when we have it before the committee here let us not use the section number or the article number. They will come on another reading.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chairman would like to ask Mr. Austin if that satisfies his desire?

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, after hearing the chairman of the committee on style and drafting, I am inclined to restate my motion, that we amend this proposal by deleting section 9, the reference to the section number.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Austin has offered the following amendment to Committee Proposal 5:

1. Amend line 7 by striking out "Sec. 9."; so the language will then read: "No general law providing for the incorporation of trust companies or corporations for banking purposes . . .", and so forth.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Detroit.

Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I have no objection to the amendment, but I would just ask if between now and our next meeting of the committee of the whole the style and drafting committee could accord this subject matter a little additional thought.

I think this would be of advantage and to the benefit of the delegates, and I certainly speak for myself when I say that I find that it is easier to follow the provision if there is a notation on the green sheet as to what section we are discussing in the present constitution. I would certainly rely on style and drafting to make the final, proper order.

I do not wish to make a motion or to oppose this. I simply request that the committee on style and drafting give this matter additional consideration before our next meeting as a committee of the whole.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman, the point that Mr. Downs makes is quite proper. All we are saying is that in the committee on style and drafting we are trying to avoid sending a message back here for your consideration in which we say we are eliminating the numbers.

If we could by consensus persuade the chairmen of committees to exclude them, except in their internal reports, then it would make our work easier because we would save a lot of trouble and we would not have to say we send it back with approval but we are requesting that the numbers be deleted because we cannot deal with numbers at this time. That is the whole philosophy.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I happen to be a member of the committee on style and drafting and we did discuss this matter at some length this afternoon.

It was my understanding that our purpose was that this material be left out of the body of the proposal but continued in the title so that it would be identified up there to tell where the language is now found in the existing constitution, but that it would not be carried forward in the body of the proposal.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chairman would like to know whether Mr. Woolfenden would like to say something. The Chair noticed that he was up and was not recognized.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Mr. Chairman, the amendment proposed is acceptable to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Erickson.

MR. ERICKSON: Mr. Chairman, I was simply going to say the same thing.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is now on the amendment offered by Mr. Austin.

Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, will the secretary please read that amendment again?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Austin has offered the following amendment to Committee Proposal 5:

1. Amend line 7 by striking out "Sec. 9."; so that the language will then read, "No general law providing for the incorporation of trust companies or corporations for banking purposes . . .", and so forth.

The secretary should make it clear that when he refers to lines in a proposal, they will be the lines as you find them in the official copy of the committee proposal that you have in your file.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Thank you. That is clear.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the adoption of the amendment. Those in favor signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

Are there any further amendments to Committee Proposal 5? If not it will pass.

Committee Proposal 5 is passed.

Proposal 6. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Committee Proposal 6, A proposal to preserve the state's responsibility under sections 20a, 23a, 24, 25 and 26 of article X of the 1908 constitution.

Following is Committee Proposal 6 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

NOTHING IN THIS CONSTITUTION SHALL BE CONSTRUED AS IN ANY WAY IMPAIRING THE OBLIGATION OF THE STATE IN CONNECTION WITH ANY BENEFITS CONFERRED BY OR ISSUE OF BONDS AUTHORIZED BY THE PROVISIONS OF ARTICLE X, SECTIONS 20A, 23A, 24, 25 AND 26 OF THE CONSTITUTION OF 1908, AND THE OBLIGATION OF THE STATE IN CONNECTION WITH SAID SECTIONS IS SPECIFICALLY RECOGNIZED.

FOR THE RETIREMENT OF SUCH NOTES AND BONDS AS MAY HAVE BEEN ISSUED UNDER SECTION 26 OF THE 1908 CONSTITUTION, THERE IS HEREBY APPROPRIATED FROM THE GENERAL FUND EACH YEAR DURING THEIR LIFE A SUM EQUAL TO THE AMOUNT OF PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYMENTS DUE AND PAYABLE IN EACH SUCH YEAR.

Mr. Brake, chairman of the committee on finance and taxation, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 6:

The committee reports that section 20a of article X providing for the borrowing of money for a bonus for veterans of world war I, has completely performed its service. The last of the bonds issued under that section were retired in the early forties.

As to section 23a under which money was borrowed to pay the bonus for service in world war II, the only liability that remains with the state is that of liability due a surviving dependent where the veteran dies for service connected causes, and act 171 of the public acts of 1951 has accepted that liability as a general fund responsibility.

As to section 24 for borrowing for mental hospitals and T. B. hospitals, the money has been borrowed and expended and there is no obligation remaining under this section.

The same is true as to section 25 which is supplementary to section 23a. There is nothing remaining to be done thereunder.

Under section 26 authorizing the borrowing for the bonus for veterans of the Korean war there remains an obligation for the continuing appropriations of sufficient funds to meet the payment for both principal and interest. The legislature assumed the responsibility for any claims under this section by making them a general fund liability under act 11 of the public acts of 1958.

All of the remaining responsibility of the state under these provisions is covered by the proposal reported herewith. The committee has decided not to report any of the sections mentioned above as they appear in the present constitution.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, under the 1908 constitution the state can borrow no money of any consequence at all except through amendment to the constitution, and we have in that constitution several amendments authorizing that power for bonuses and other purposes.

The purpose of this proposal is to retain in the state what little liability there is left under these borrowing proposals and to eliminate all the unnecessary language—and there is a lot of it.

Now, section 20a authorizes the borrowing of $30 million with which to pay the bonus to the veterans of world war I, and the matter is completely dead.

The last of the bonds issued under that authority were retired during my first term as treasurer in the early '40s, so there is nothing left in the way of liability whatsoever under that provision.

Incidentally, we paid through the nose in connection with that borrowing. The interest rates were high—5 and 5½ per cent, as I remember it. The bonds were not serials but long term bonds. There was a sinking fund in connection with it. Many of the investments made in the '20s and '30s went sour. It was an extremely expensive bit of financing.

Section 23a contains the authority to borrow $270 million with which to pay the bonus to the veterans of world war II. It was not found necessary to borrow that much money.

We did borrow $230 million and, incidentally, it had an average interest rate of 1.44 per cent.

Practically all of the liability under that borrowing is gone, but there is still a small possibility, and I guess a probability, of the need for payment to dependents of veterans who died of a service connected cause. You will find that near the end of the amendment. The legislature, by act 171 of 1957, dissolved this special fund and assumed whatever liability remained as a general fund liability.

Probably as a matter of legal need we could get along without putting this saving clause we are proposing into the new constitution at all because of the fact that the legislature has made that a general fund liability, and likewise with the later provision that I will mention, but to avoid any question and to make doubly certain, we are proposing this saving clause.

Section 24 authorized the borrowing of $65 million with which to build mental hospitals and tuberculosis hospitals. That has been carried out. There is nothing yet remaining to be done and no liability remains.

Section 25 is supplementary to 23a and contains only the same kind of liability as section 23a, a liability to the survivors of veterans who died from service connected causes.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

Section 26 authorized the borrowing of $80 million for the bonus for the veterans in connection with the Korean war. That also has been dissolved as a special fund and the liability assumed under act 11 of 1958.

That particular constitutional amendment has a feature none of the others did in that it provided for a continuous appropriation of sufficient funds each year to meet those bonds, and the last of them will not be due until 1970.

That language is carried forward in our proposal in the exact words that you find in the amendment itself which was adopted in 1954. Here again, probably it is unnecessary to have the saving clause, but it can do no harm and we are using very few words.

Now, in the proposal there should have been, for clarity, the words "of article X" inserted after the words "section 26" in the second paragraph. While probably that figure 26 would refer back sufficiently to the first paragraph which does say "article X", there is no use leaving it at loose ends, and I therefore offer an amendment to that effect.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Brake offers the following amendment to Committee Proposal 6:

1. Amend the second paragraph, line 13, after "section 26" by inserting "of article X"; so the language will then read:

> For the retirement of such notes and bonds as may have been issued under section 26 of article X of the 1908 constitution, there is hereby appropriated from the general fund each year . . .

and so forth.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Brake.

Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, I should like to direct a couple of questions to Mr. Brake, if I may. Would it be possible to have more general language than this referring to all other general bonds?

While this undoubtedly takes care of a lot of the language contained in the present constitution, would it not be better if we just had a general clause of this nature, and maybe at the end of the constitution, and maybe one that had a time limit to it so that we would not have this type of carryover material actually found in the body of the constitution?

MR. BRAKE: If I might reply to that question, Mr. Chairman, I would say this. There are no other general obligation bonds outstanding except under these issues. I think anybody who was interested in this particular subject matter would expect to find these issues referred to specifically here.

Very likely there will be at the end of the constitution somewhere a saving clause for everything, but for these particular bond issues, which are specific, I think there should be a specific provision so that no one will need to search beyond that.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I should like, if I may, to ask Mr. Brake this question. Mr. Nisbet and I are puzzled in trying to find section 23a in the copy we have of the Michigan Statutes Annotated. Is that a new section that is later than the date of publication of our book?

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, Dr. Nord, the reference is to 23a which was adopted on November 2, 1954. I refer to the constitutional amendment. Are you looking at the amendments or the statute, Dr. Nord?

MR. NORD: We looked in each of the 3 parts. Apparently it exists, but it is not in our book. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Mr. Brake, according to the Michigan Statutes Annotated there are 2 amendments numbered 23.

MR. BRAKE: There is one 23 and one 23a. This one is 23a.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Was it in fact adopted as 23a or is that some editorial notation?

MR. BRAKE: Section 23 is the sales tax amendment.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Michigan Statutes Annotated says there were 2 adopted and both were numbered 23, apparently by inadvertence, including the one you are referring to. I am just wondering whether you are historically correct in calling this one 23a.

MR. BRAKE: I think so. This is the senate's handbook, and so it couldn't be wrong. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, I am quite sure if it was done by mistake originally, the "a" was inserted later to take care of it. It was a mechanical error in the beginning.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, just so there will not be any feeling of partisanship here, let me say this. Mr. Brake referred to the senate's handbook. I refer to the constitution as compiled by the secretary of state and the secretary of state also refers to section 23a. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the adoption of the amendment of Mr. Brake. Those in favor of the amendment shall so signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hubbs offers the following amendment to Committee Proposal 6:

1. Amend page 1, after line 16, by inserting a new paragraph to read as follows:

"When all bonds outstanding complete with interest due thereon have been redeemed and paid in full, this section of the constitution shall be automatically removed from the constitution.".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, during the campaign we heard a lot of conversation about making this constitution just as short as we possibly could.

Therefore, in the interests of keeping it from getting "fat" over the years, I should like to make provision for having it automatically pruned, and this is my method.

This will apply only for a limited length of time, will become operative and then it will not be printed in future constitutions, after these bonds have been redeemed and paid in full.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Upon whom do you place the responsibility of deciding that the obligation is over?

I cannot stress too strongly the difficulty of determining when the liability will expire. There is the possibility of some person dying and leaving dependents—dying from a service connected cause to which I referred earlier.

Nobody knows how many years in the future the obligation will continue, unless you are going to rely completely on what the legislature did in assuming the liability. I should like to know who can determine when everything is all over.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Well, Mr. Brake, that is a very good question, and not being a former treasurer of the state I would not be able to say when, exactly, all the state's obligations would be fully met.

However, I would say that if no one came forward within a period of 15 or 20 years, let us take it out then, because we are going to write a constitution which, I hope, will last 100 years. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Hubbs. Those in favor so signify by saying aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted.

Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman, following up the discussion that has just taken place, I should like to address a question to Delegate Brake. I understood him to say that all obligations under section 20a of the Constitution of 1908 had been fully satisfied.

On that basis, why should we continue at least that one section in the new constitution that we are writing?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: If our proposal is adopted, we are not going to carry any of these forward in the constitution.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman, perhaps I did not state my question quite clearly. The proposal refers to article X, section 20a, and I wondered whether that might not, with wisdom, be eliminated.

MR. BRAKE: That again brings us back to the question of someone wondering what has become of it. There it is—you have the record.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any further amendments to the proposal?

Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I should like to direct a question to Mr. Brake. I should like to refer Mr. Brake to section 10 of article X, and call attention to that statement that was put in there in 1919, where it says:

> . . . The state may borrow not to exceed $50,000,000 for the improvement of highways and pledge its credit, and issue bonds therefor on such terms as shall be provided by law.

I wonder whether any reference should be made to that bond issue in this committee proposal, and if not, why not.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, Senator Hutchinson, section 10 of article X is not confined to the matter of highway borrowing.

That is the section that gives us a $250,000 limitation that we can borrow without amending the constitution under certain circumstances.

It has been the feeling of the committee that when we deal with that section and report back here what we think ought to be done in the way of state borrowing, that the whole matter should be taken care of at that time instead of including it with these other proposals.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Brake, is there some anticipated liability with regard to the world war I bonus still outstanding?

MR. BRAKE: Not a thing. There couldn't be.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Then I do not suppose there could be with regard to the $50 million bond issue, either?

MR. BRAKE: That is right.

MR. HUTCHINSON: So I do not understand why we do not treat them the same. If you are going to refer to section 20a in this committee proposal, why do you not refer to the bond issue referred to in section 10?

MR. BRAKE: We could have, and it could be done here in committee of the whole. We did not, however, because there are other things in that section, and we thought we would take care of everything in that section at one time.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Then you would save and reserve and preserve any possible liability as to the $50 million bond issue at another time?

MR. BRAKE: No. There isn't any. The bonds have all been paid and there is nothing to be done.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Then I want to ask Mr. Brake why we cannot strike from the committee proposal any reference to 20a?

MR. BRAKE: There will be certainly in the committee report on the subject matter of section 10 a reference to this to show what has become of it.

It could have been done with these others, but we thought we ought to handle everything under section 10 at one time instead of carrying it over into this other field.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Well, Mr. Brake, somehow or other, apparently, I do not seem to get the distinction in treatment between the bond issue in section 10 and the bond issue in section 20a.

MR. BRAKE: Section 20a has nothing else in it. It is just that bond issue, and that is that. Here we have something that is going to have serious attention and quite a lot of action in connection with state borrowing which is part of that same section.

Perhaps we were in error in thinking we ought to take care of this $50 million at the same time we are taking care of the rest of section 10, but that is nevertheless the reason we did it that way as I have attempted to make clear.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Well, then, Mr. Brake, I should like to ask why it is necessary to make any reference at all to section 20a in the new constitution if there is no possible liability under that section. Why do we try to save it?

MR. BRAKE: I just answered that to someone on the other side of the hall. Someone will be looking to see what became of that section. This tells you, and it only requires about 2 words to do it.

MR. HUTCHINSON: And you propose, Mr. Brake, that as to the $50 million referred to in section 10 that if anybody wanted to find out what became of that matter they would have to find out in another manner; but as to section 20a they could find it out by looking at the section within the text of the constitution which refers to section 20a of article X; but there is nothing, apparently, going to be there in the new constitution, no reference as to the $50 million in section 10 and we have to look for that in one of the committee reports?

MR. BRAKE: We think we should take care of that in the same company that it is now in.

MR. HUTCHINSON: All right. Maybe we can take care of it in style and drafting. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I think that Mr. Hutchinson has anticipated my point. I raised the same question in finance and taxation that he has raised here, and I think because of the possibility of dealing with it in finance and taxation at a later point, it seemed that when we got to dealing with section 10, if the $50 million bond issue was the same as that in this provision here, we were relying on style and drafting to put the reference to section 10 into this provision.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask Mr. Brake a question about section 26 as it now reads:

> The state shall borrow not to exceed $80,000,000.00, pledge its faith and credit and issue its serial notes or serial bonds therefor, with maturities of not to exceed $1,000,000.00 in each of the years 1956 to 1965, both inclusive, and $13,000,000.00 in each of the years 1966 to 1968, both inclusive, and $14,000,000.00 in each of the years thereafter, . . .

et cetera.

Now, do I understand that all the notes and bonds issued or authorized by section 26 have been issued?

MR. BRAKE: I think not, Mr. Bentley. I think they borrowed $60 million.

MR. BENTLEY: Then I am wondering if the language of the second paragraph of the committee proposal should not read: ". . . for the retirement of such notes and bonds as may have been or are hereafter issued . . ."?

MR. BRAKE: There will not be any more bonds issued. The legislature has closed the account and assumed the liability in a general fund obligation.

MR. BENTLEY: Do I understand correctly that section 26 does not authorize any more notes or bonds to be issued?

MR. BRAKE: It is all over.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, I suggest to Mr. Brake, and for the convenience of the style and drafting committee, if section 20a is referred to and covered in the accompanying reports and schedules, in accordance with Resolution 41, section 4, I think that can be handled very nicely in the manner in which Mr. Hutchinson suggested.

In the accompanying reports, of course, you can explain why it was left out, and the information then would be preserved, but it would be left out of the body of the constitution.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, I was just going to state the same thing, that we have an address to the people to explain why we are going to delete certain things. If we have to explain in the constitution everything we do, we will have in the new constitution just about everything we have in the present constitution.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, earlier Delegate Nord referred to some question concerning the numbering of section 23a. I should like to call to the attention of the delegates page 189 of the cumulative supplement of our Michigan Statutes Annotated where it states that 2 amendments to article X, both numbered 23, were submitted to the voters at the general election of November 5, 1946 and both were adopted.

It goes on to explain what actually happened. I would suggest that, after the committee proposal is referred to style and drafting, they give serious consideration to the numbering of these sections and determine whether any language change is necessary.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Any further amendments to Committee Proposal 6? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 6 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 7, A proposal to provide that the governor shall issue writs of election to fill vacancies in the legislature. Amends article VI, section 6.

Following is Committee Proposal 7 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

[He] THE GOVERNOR shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies as occur in the senate or house of representatives IN A MANNER PRESCRIBED BY LAW.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 7:

The committee on executive branch recommends that section 6, article VI be included in the constitution in substantially its present form except to recognize the right of the legislature to prescribe procedure for the filling of vacancies in the senate or house of representatives when the governor has determined, as he is required to do, whether a special election shall be held or that the vacancy shall be filled at the next general election. The present provision of the constitution has worked well in conjunction with the provisions of the present Michigan election law and the committee sees no reason for change other than to recognize the need for legislative action to establish procedure upon the determination of the governor as to when the election shall be held.

It is, therefore, recommended that this section with the proposed committee amendment be adopted by the convention.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the committee on executive branch unanimously recommends the proposal be adopted in its form here presented.

The requirement on the governor is a mandatory one that he shall decide whether a special election be held or will permit it to be held at the next general election.

The only effect of the proposed new language is to permit the legislature to do what it has already done, and that is to provide a manner in which such elections shall be held.

Therefore, the committee recommends the language proposed here.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to Committee Proposal 7? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 7 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 8, A proposal to provide that the governor may convene the legislature on extraordinary occasions. Amends article VI, section 7.

Following is Committee Proposal 8 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

[He] THE GOVERNOR may convene the legislature on extraordinary occasions.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 8:

The committee on executive branch recommends the adoption of section 7, article VI, without substantial change. The present provision has become less needed today in view of the fact that the legislature now holds annual sessions, but it is still necessary from time to time to hold extraordinary sessions and the committee feels that the need for such sessions is a determination which should be made by the governor in the light of all the facts existing at any particular time.

The committee, therefore, recommends that section 7, article VI of the present constitution be adopted with the proposed committee amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, the committee on executive branch unanimously recommends the adoption of this section in its present form except for the minor change indicated.

The question was raised as to whether there should be other methods of calling extraordinary sessions. The committee felt that if an extraordinary session were necessary it should be called by the governor.

The calling of extraordinary sessions is somewhat less necessary today than it was in the past, perhaps because we now have annual sessions, but there may be times occasionally when it is necessary, and the committee feels that the provision should remain in the constitution.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask Mr. Martin to tell me what an extraordinary occasion is. (laughter)

MR. MARTIN: Well, Mr. Chairman and Mr. Hutchinson, I do not know that we can say what an extraordinary occasion is, but the language has been used for a long time, and it seems to imply something other than the basis on which the general session usually came together; that is, some form of emergency or some provision, some action, which the legislature either did not take because it did not think it was necessary or which it did not take because at the time it came together in general session it was not necessary to consider it —something of an emergency nature.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I wonder why, as a matter of common parlance, we do not refer to these as special sessions? I wonder why we do not forthrightly empower the governor to convene the legislature in special session rather than on extraordinary occasions?

I ask that because, as I understand it on the basis of Mr. Martin's exposition of the point, an extraordinary occasion is any time that the governor wants to convene the legislature in special session.

He has that power and under another section of the constitution, as it now stands at least, the legislature in special session convened on such extraordinary occasions can consider only such matters as the governor submits.

I do not wish to be unduly technical, pedantic, or fly speck things here, but I was just wondering whether the committee had given any consideration at all to a change in that phraseology as it appears there.

That phrase "extraordinary occasions" has always puzzled me. Did you give any consideration to it?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I should say that the committee did not consider the idea of changing this wording "extraordinary occasions" to the wording "special session."

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

We felt that the present wording "extraordinary occasions" had a well established meaning from antiquity, and still had that meaning, and that it would suffice.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I should then like to ask Mr. Martin this question. I am seeking his opinion on this proposition. If the committee on style and drafting should change that phraseology from "extraordinary occasions" to "special session", do you think that would bring about any change in substance?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I think the general concept of a special session is that it does involve something unusual, some unusual need, but I should like to think that over. I think the meaning of the original phrasing is well established and in this case it seems to me it is well to retain it.

MR. HUTCHINSON: All right, thank you, Mr. Martin.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask Mr. Martin a question, too. The question I raise has to do with whether or not, in his opinion, the lieutenant governor would be able to act in this way in the event of the absence of the governor, and whether the change in language from the word "he" to the words "the governor" could possibly cause any trouble in that respect?

MR. MARTIN: I do not think so, Dr. Nord. The word "he" referred back originally to the governor, and the lieutenant governor is acting in the shoes of the governor when he is serving in that capacity. I do not think there would be any question as to the authority of the lieutenant governor, if he were properly acting as governor, to call an extraordinary session.

MR. NORD: The reason for my question, Mr. Martin, is that I see in section 16 of article VI the lieutenant governor is not called the governor on that occasion. It is stated that he has the powers and duties of the governor, but he is not called the governor and, therefore, if you use the words "the governor" here, I just wondered whether that would cause any unnecessary trouble. I do not think it does, actually, but the thought just crossed my mind.

MR. MARTIN: I do not think so. I think that this is a matter which the committee on style and drafting might consider. I do not believe, however, it causes any difficulty that I can envisage.

MR. NORD: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, in view of the recent exchange, I should like to ask Mr. Hutchinson if he construes the powers of the committee on style and drafting to be such that they would be empowered to change the words "extraordinary occasions" to the words "special session" if that committee so desired, before it was presented back to the convention?

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, in answer to the question, I will stick my neck out this far and say that if a majority of the committee, the committee on style and drafting, concluded that there was no change in substance arising from such an alteration, it might dare do so. That is as far as I can go. If the committee on style and drafting concludes that there might be a change in substance resulting from such an alteration, I suppose the committee members would not feel themselves empowered to change the phraseology.

MR. DOWNS: Well, Mr. Chairman, I was perhaps unduly —I hope unduly—anticipating a problem in raising the suggestion that we might have an occasion on which the committee on style and drafting might think that something did not change the substance, yet the convention did.

In this particular case I do not pretend to speak as to which language is better. But it would suggest that if we do have differences in language, that so far as possible they should be resolved at this stage of our procedure, instead of waiting until the documents come out of the committee on style and drafting, at which time there might be a great number of changes which might not seem substantive to the committee but which may appear extremely substantive to the delegates sitting on this convention floor. This would possibly cause a terrific procedural log jam.

I am not speaking of this with respect to this particular occasion. What I am really seeking to indicate at this time is that it would appear wise to get as many of these problems as possible resolved on the floor of this convention before these matters are referred to the committee on style and drafting.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair wishes for a moment to refer to the fact that there is an amendment offered by Mr. Prettie which may clear the air, if it is read.

The secretary will please read it.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Prettie offers the following amendment to Committee Proposal 8:

1. Amend page 1, line 7, after "legislature" by striking out "on extraordinary occasions" and inserting "in special session"; so that the language will then read: "The governor may convene the legislature in special session."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman, in view of the discussion that we have had this evening on this point, and in view of the points raised by Mr. Hutchinson to which Mr. Downs indirectly addressed himself, and, further, dealing with Mr. Martin's statement to the effect that he thinks this ought to be given some consideration, and particularly in view of the provisions presently appearing in section 22 of article V, which is the one, I think, to which Mr. Hutchinson referred, which reads: "No bill shall be passed at a special session of the legislature . . .", et cetera.

It seems to me that this is the time, in the committee of the whole, to get these matters before us, to clarify this language, and bring about a consistency if section 22 of article V is to be continued; and to obviate the problem we might be faced with in a report brought forward by the committee on style and drafting. I therefore offer the amendment which the secretary has read.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman, I subscribe to Mr. Prettie's remarks. That was one thing I was going to say. The other was that it should be obvious to the members of the convention who create these committees and who prescribe their orbit, that the committee on style and drafting is bound by the rules of this convention. And if I am going to act as chairman of that committee there is not going to be any change in the meaning of anything that comes from this floor, because that is far beyond our power.

But I do think that in the committee of the whole when these questions arise they should be clarified because it would be awkward for our committee if they were not. We would not assume such powers, I am sure, but when there are these matters I think they should be cleared up.

The average voter, including myself, is used to the governor's power to call a special session of the legislature. Because of the conflict, as pointed out by Delegate Prettie, it would be well to resolve these matters while we are meeting together as a committee of the whole.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Prettie.

Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I am not sure that this amendment greatly changes the import of the provision, but I do think that the words "extraordinary occasions" create a picture which is desirable. In other words, the governor should not call socalled special sessions just for ordinary reasons. He ought not to have the legislature in socalled special sessions on all occasions. I think the word "extraordinary" puts an emphasis on the calling of these special sessions only when there is a real and a distinct necessity for so doing.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: I wonder, Mr. Chairman, if it might not be wise, since there is no clear indication that those two phrases mean the same thing, for this to be sent back to the executive committee for their report?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Prettie. Those in favor will please signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

Are there any further amendments to Committee Proposal 8? Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I do not have a specific amendment to offer at this time, but I do wish to mention one thing. In the committee on style and drafting this afternoon we had before us, among others, Committee Proposal 3, which is one of a series from this committee which changes the pronoun "he" to the noun "the governor." I think it was Delegate Mrs. Cushman who raised the point: are we going to change that throughout the article?

If you examine the article you will notice that in section 2 the executive power is vested in the governor. You will notice I slipped by and did not say whether it was going to be chief executive power or just executive power is vested in the governor.

The next section starts out "The governor . . ." and so forth, but then there follow 6 sections beginning with the pronoun "he" instead of the noun "the governor" being repeated. To us on the committee this afternoon, giving it as little thought as we had in the committee, "he" looked simpler and more direct and saved a little space. But apparently the committee on executive branch has some reason to think that in each section they should start off with the words "the governor."

I personally, and I think the members of the committee on style and drafting, would be interested in hearing the point of view of Mr. Martin or any other member of the committee as to why the words "the governor" should appear at the beginning of each of these sections.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Bentley is recognized.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I have a motion on the secretary's desk.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bentley moves that when the committee rises, it recommend that Committee Proposal 8 be referred to the committee on legislative powers.

MR. BENTLEY: Very briefly, Mr. Chairman, I think that since we have changed the wording from "extraordinary occasions" to "special session" it would now be helpful to the committee on style and drafting, and probably the convention, to allow the committee on legislative powers to consider this section in conjunction with section 22 of article V.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I simply rise, Mr. Chairman, to answer Delegate Stanley Powell's question. The only reason I can see for changing the language from "he" to "the governor" is that most of us on the committee did not wish to go around referring to Miss Donnelly as "he" when she becomes governor. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the motion of Mr. Bentley that when the committee of the whole rises, it recommend that Committee Proposal 8 be referred to the committee on legislative powers. Those in favor of the motion please signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The motion does prevail.

The secretary will please read.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 9, A proposal to provide that the governor may convene the legislature at other places when the seat of government becomes dangerous. Amends article VI, section 8.

Following is Committee Proposal 9 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

[He] THE GOVERNOR may convene the legislature at some other place when the seat of government becomes dangerous from [disease or a common enemy] ANY CAUSE.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 9:

The committee on executive branch recommends that provisions of section 8, article VI of the constitution be broadened to recognize that disease and the threat of enemy attack are not the only possible sources of danger to the seat of government. The possibility that there might be radioactive fallout not directly accompanied by enemy attack and not specifically involving disease is one such possibility. For this reason the committee recommends that the governor be authorized to convene the legislature at some other place than the seat of government if the present location becomes dangerous to human life from any cause.

It is, therefore, recommended that section 8, article VI, as amended by the committee, be adopted by the convention.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, the proposed change was made to recognize the fact that disease and enemy attack, referred to in the present provision, are not the only possibilities today which may make the seat of government dangerous. One, in particular, of course, relates to radioactive fallout which may create a situation not directly connected with enemy attack at all and possibly not connected directly with disease.

I realize that this is a time of peril—world peril—and that the seat of government might become dangerous from some of these other causes, so the provision is slightly broadened to take care of that situation.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, I raise this question just as a point of clarification and to set the record straight. Did we refer Committee Proposal 8 to a particular committee and, if so, was it the committee on executive branch to which it was referred?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: It was recommended that the proposal be referred to the committee on legislative powers.

MR. KING: For what reason, may I inquire, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: It was recommended that the proposal be referred to the committee on legislative powers on motion of Mr. Bentley.

Mrs. Cushman.

MRS. CUSHMAN: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, since we are going to get into the question of language there, I wonder if we need the 3 words "for any cause" contained in the proposal. I think that if the seat of government becomes dangerous it will surely become dangerous from a cause. It seems to me that we could very well do without those 3 words to which I have referred, if we are going to get into that type of detail at this time.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Well, Mr. Chairman, if I might comment on that, the committee considered doing just that, just ending the provision with the word "dangerous", but they felt the additional words added or contributed some meaning to the provision and so they proposed their addition in the proposal now before us.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hubbs has an amendment. Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, before we get on to another amendment, I should like to ask Mr. Martin whether consideration was given to the following: if the seat of government becomes dangerous from any cause, why should the governor's power be restricted to convening the legislature at some other place?

I would think the problem would then be to have him empowered to move the entire government somewhere else. I simply wonder why we should restrict it to empowering the governor to convene the legislature at some other place.

MR. MARTIN: Well, Mr. Chairman, there is another provision of the constitution which gives the legislature authority to set up a general provision with respect to the removal of the entire government, as I understand it, in the event of enemy attack.

This provision does not relate solely to enemy attack and it was thought desirable to have it included, although the other provision could perhaps be broadened to include this.

This is a possibility, but we had no jurisdiction over the provisions with respect to the actions of the legislature in the event of enemy attack.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I think that I get the point, and being a loyal legislative man I kind of support the idea. But I wonder whether it is actual and pertinent in this day and age.

I mean to say, back there in earlier times it probably was conceived that if the governor could get the legislature assembled somewhere else the legislature could then pass a law which would provide for the removal of the rest of the government.

I just wonder if in this day and age, and in the circumstances in which we find ourselves, that would happen; whether, as a practical matter, that would happen. I daresay the whole government would move out of Lansing before the legislature ever assembled. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hubbs has offered an amendment which the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hubbs offers the following amendment to Committee Proposal 9:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "from" by striking out "any cause" and reinserting "disease or a common enemy"; so that the language will then read: "The governor may convene the legislature at some other place when the seat of government becomes dangerous from disease or a common enemy."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, I respectfully submit that there are probably a great many causes as a result of which the seat of the legislature could become dangerous—such as termites in the floor of the capitol building, or too many people of the opposite party sitting around throwing rocks at the governor and things like that. (laughter)

I think "any cause" is far too broad and that the original intent of this language was to protect the government from disease or a common enemy, and nuclear fallout or nuclear attack, in my opinion, would be a common enemy. Therefore, I think that the original language in that section is completely appropriate and that the phrase "any cause" is far too broad, because we all could think of a great many reasons why a particular governor would say: "This is a dangerous place to be." (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, if I might comment on those remarks, the only problem you get into in returning to the original language is that you avoid the very cause about which most people are concerned today, that is the problem of radioactive fallout. The danger is danger to human life. If Mr. Hubbs wishes to offer an amendment such as "dangerous to human life from any cause" I am sure the committee would have no objection. But that is the point with which we are concerned.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I do not believe that anybody would conceive that nuclear fallout was not a common enemy. I should also like to have this question answered. If we were having nuclear fallout here in Michigan, where would you go?

MR. MARTIN: The nuclear fallout might result from our own detonations which would hardly be a common enemy, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, it would be a common enemy of all the people, not necessarily an enemy at war. I think the phrase "any cause" is much too broad. It brings in the possibility of skulduggery.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Hubbs. Those in favor please signify by saying aye. Opposed, no. The Chair is in doubt. The delegates will please rise.

Members of the committee who are in favor of the amendment of Mr. Hubbs will please raise their hands.

SECRETARY CHASE: Twenty-nine.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Those opposed?

The amendment is not adopted.

Are there any further amendments to this proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 9 is passed.

Dr. Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I was pleased to observe that we are spending a great deal of time in the selection of words because this is very, very important so we will have no misunderstanding.

Noah Webster found it so one day when his wife discovered him sitting with a very attractive young lady on his lap, and she commented, "I am surprised!"

He replied, "No, my dear, you are amazed. I am surprised!" (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Batchelor.

MR. BATCHELOR: I move we rise.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the motion of Mr. Batchelor that the committee of the whole rise and report back to the convention. Those in favor will please signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration several proposals concerning which the secretary will now make a complete and detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 4, A proposal to provide communication by the governor to the legislature on the condition of the state; Committee Proposal 7, A proposal to provide that governor shall issue writs of election to fill vacancies in the legislature; and Committee Proposal 9, A proposal to provide that the governor may convene the legislature at other places when the seat of government becomes dangerous; and reports these 3 committee proposals back to the convention without amendment and with the recommendation that they do pass.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, Committee Proposal 4, Committee Proposal 7 and Committee Proposal 9 are referred to the committee on style and drafting. I hear none. They are so referred.

For Committee Proposal 4 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 369.

For Committee Proposal 7 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 375.

For Committee Proposal 9 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 377.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 5, A proposal pertaining to the inclusion in the constitution of all of section 9 of article XII except the portion relating to bank notes or paper credit; reports this back to the convention with an amendment and with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and that the proposal, as thus amended, do pass.

[The following is the amendment recommended by the committee of the whole:

1. Amend line 7, by striking out "Sec. 9.".]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment. Those in favor say aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendment is agreed to and without objection, Committee Proposal 5, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 5 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

No general law providing for the incorporation of trust companies or corporations for banking purposes, or regulating the business thereof, shall be adopted, amended or repealed except by a vote of 2/3 of the members elected to each house of the legislature.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 6, A proposal to preserve the state's responsibility under sections 20a, 23a, 24, 25 and 26 of article X of the 1908 constitution; reports this proposal back to the convention with an amendment and the recommendation that the proposal, as thus amended, do pass.

[The following is the amendment recommended by the committee of the whole:

1. Amend the second paragraph, line 13, after "section 26" by inserting "of article X".]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment. Any discussion? If not, those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is agreed to and without objection, Committee Proposal 6, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 6 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Nothing in this constitution shall be construed as in any way impairing the obligation of the state in connection with any benefits conferred by or issue of bonds authorized by the provisions of article X, sections 20a, 23a, 24, 25 and 26 of the Constitution of 1908, and the obligation of the state in connection with said sections is specifically recognized.

For the retirement of such notes and bonds as may have been issued under section 26 of article X of the 1908 constitution, there is hereby appropriated from the general fund each year during their life a sum equal to the amount of principal and interest payments due and payable in each such year.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 8, A proposal to provide that the governor may convene the legislature on extraordinary occasions; reports this proposal back to the convention with the recommendation that it be referred to the committee on legislative powers.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question now is on concurring in the recommendation of the committee of the whole. Those in favor, say aye. Those opposed, no.

The recommendation is concurred in and Committee Proposal 8, together with the amendment thereto adopted by the committee of the whole, is referred to the committee on legislative powers.

[Mason's Manual, sec. 388, par. 3, provides that "Reference of a measure to committee when amendments are pending, carries the amendments to the committee with it. . . ."]

For Committee Proposal 8 as referred to the committee on legislative powers, see above, page 375; for the amendment, see above, page 376.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, that completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The following announcements have been filed with the secretary:

The president's office has a group of letters which were returned. There is no return address or signature inside, making it impossible to return them to the correct delegate. The contents are a newsletter on con con, volume I; and Journal 38 under date of December 5. Those who are interested can obtain these from the president's office.

Mr. Danhof has requested that the following correction be made in Delegate Proposal 1601 which was offered by him. Delegate Proposal 1601, A proposal to provide for a house of representatives based upon districts, which districts shall be entitled to increased representation in accordance with population growth. There was an error in the drafting of this proposal. In line 15 of the proposal strike out the figure "2" after the word "and".

May the secretary suggest that he has been importuned by several delegates that inasmuch as you each have on your desks a composite calendar of committee meetings and a composite notice of public hearings which is prepared every day and placed there, that the reading of all of these notices of committee meetings and notices of public hearings be dispensed with except in cases where there may be changes, and if that is agreeable we will follow that practice.

The committee on public information will be meeting in room E this evening after the session. The committee designation does not appear on the calendar. Ink White is chairman.

The subcommittee on budget and fiscal management of the committee on executive branch will be meeting this evening following the adjournment. Mr. Dan E. Karn, chairman.

The committee on administration will be meeting in the conference room Tuesday, tomorrow, at 1:00 o'clock. Walter DeVries, chairman.

The committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, which has on your composite calendar a notice of a committee meeting for tomorrow morning at 9:00 o'clock in room F, wishes it to be emphasized that this will be the last opportunity for the delegates to be heard on their delegate proposals before that committee.

Otherwise, the announcements are as they appear on the calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase, may I announce that Messrs. Joiner, Combs and Kelly have informed me today that almost all of the delegate proposals are now typed, with very few exceptions. The proposals have been put in the mailboxes of the delegates. Will the delegates please get them and see to it that they get to the secretary's office. If, for some reason, a proposal which you put in is not there, will you please see the directors of research because there is some question in their minds as to the drafting of a few of the proposals. In other words, the proposals are practically all finished that have been put in, and should be presented to the convention tomorrow.

SECRETARY CHASE: I have the following requests for leave of absence from the session:

Mr. Romney requests to be excused from tomorrow's session due to a preconvention speaking engagement at the national convention of the American farm bureau association.

Mr. Bentley requests leave of absence from the session of Wednesday afternoon, December 13.

Mr. Karn wishes to be excused from Thursday's session, December 14, because of a speaking engagement before the Jackson exchange club.

Mr. Sablich wishes to be excused from the session of Friday, December 15.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection they will be excused.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the requests for leave, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Dade.

MR. DADE: Mr. President, I move that this convention adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion for adjournment. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The convention stands adjourned until 2:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

[Whereupon, at 9:45 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 2:00 o'clock p.m., Tuesday, December 12, 1961.]

FORTY-FIRST DAY

Tuesday, December 12, 1961, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

The minister who will give the invocation today comes through the courtesy of one of our delegates, Mr. Tom Sharpe. He is the Reverend William Varian, Pastor of the Nazarene Church, Howell.

Will you please rise.

REVEREND VARIAN: Blessed heavenly Father, we thank Thee for the privilege of bringing this convention to Thee.

We thank Thee that Thy word declares that Thy arm is not shortened that Thou canst not save; and that Thy ear is not closed that Thou canst not hear; and that Thy eye is not heavy that Thou canst not constantly watch Thy people.

We are glad today for the opportunity to bring this very important part of our life to Thee, and ask Thy divine direction for each one of the delegates represented here.

May we have the judgement of God which is greater than the judgement of men. May we have the wisdom of God which is more far reaching than the wisdom and understanding of men.

Grant to us to know Thy will and may we somehow understand better the truth that is found within Thy word and within Thy wisdom.

Grant Thy grace and blessing to each one today and may there be, when this session is over, a sense in which we can say: "Thy will has been done."

We ask these favors in the name of Christ our Savior. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. All present please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The machine is now locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Excused to conduct committee hearings in Detroit: Messrs. Blandford, Bledsoe, Boothby, G. E. Brown, T. S. Brown, Mrs. Cushman, Messrs. Dehnke, Donald Doty, Gover, Greene, W. F. Hanna, J. A. Hannah, Hodges, Hood, Kirk, Liberato, Lundgren, Mahinske, Marshall, Nord, Plank, Rood, Sablich and Yeager.

Absent with leave: Messrs. Kelsey, Knirk, Romney and Shackleton.

Absent without leave: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Perhaps I might offer this comment. One reason for the high number of absentees today is that one of our committees, the committee on legislative organization, is meeting in Detroit.

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Martin, for the committee on executive branch, introduces

Exclusion Report 2001, A report recommending the exclusion of article VI, section 14.

The committee on executive branch recommends that article VI, section 14 of the present constitution be excluded entirely from the new constitution.

Mr. Martin, for the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2001:

Over ½ of the states have no such provision. The type of dual office holding prohibited by section 14 involves such obvious incompatibility, there appears to be no need for constitutional prohibition.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Martin, for the committee on executive branch introduces Exclusion Report 2002, A report recommending the exclusion of article VI, section 15.

The committee on executive branch recommends that article VI, section 15 of the present constitution be excluded entirely from the new constitution.

Mr. Martin, for the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2002:

Very few states have similar provisions. Much of the justification for section 15 disappeared with the seventeenth amendment to the United States constitution (1913), which provided for the selection of United States senators by popular election instead of by election by state legislatures.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

[Exclusion Reports 2001 and 2002 are presented here in full as they later die in committee.]

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on administration, by Mr. DeVries, chairman, reports back to the convention Resolution 55, A resolution requesting authority and funds for the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections to hold hearings in the cities of Detroit, Saginaw and Flint; without amendment, and with the recommendation that the resolution be adopted.

Walter DeVries, chairman.

For Resolution 55 as offered, see above page 358.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President and fellow delegates, this recommendation had the unanimous approval of the committee on administration.

The committee will hold morning and afternoon hearings on Monday, December 18, in the city of Detroit, and then move on to Saginaw on Monday evening, stay overnight, and hold hearings there the following morning. The committee will then move to Flint for an afternoon hearing and will then return to Lansing, at a total cost not to exceed the amount of $300.00.

Mr. President, I move the adoption of the resolution.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the resolution. Any discussion? If not, all in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The resolution is adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the standing committee reports, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Introduction, first reading and reference of proposals.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Buback, Baginski, Madar, Durst, T. S. Brown, Miss Hart, Messrs. Stamm and Leppien introduce

Delegate Proposal 1650, A proposal to provide an alternate form of county government. Amends article VIII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Higgs, Everett, Heideman and McLogan introduce Delegate Proposal 1651, A proposal to establish a constitution and law revision commission to be appointed by the chief justice. Amends article V.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Higgs introduces Delegate Proposal 1652, A proposal to provide that the accused shall have the right of appeal in all criminal prosecutions and that the appellate court shall have the power to reduce sentences. Amends article II.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Martin and Leppien introduce Delegate Proposal 1653, A proposal to provide for the establishment and support of county and district departments of health. Amends article VIII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Rush and Rood introduce Delegate Proposal 1654, A proposal to amend article V, section 2, to increase the number of seats in the senate and to provide for senatorial districts.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative organization.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Marshall introduces Delegate Proposal 1655, A proposal to retain article XVI, section 5, relative to vacancies in office and the continuity of government in emergencies.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Rood introduces Delegate Proposal 1656, A proposal to provide that the power of eminent domain shall be exercised only for public use or purpose, that necessity be determined by jury, and that compensation be paid for damages as well as value of property taken. Amends article XIII, sections 1 and 2.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Bonisteel introduces Delegate Proposal 1657, A proposal to amend the powers of the board of governors of Wayne State University. Amends article XI, section 16.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Nord introduces Delegate Proposal 1658, A proposal to authorize circuit court judges to give the attorney general the power to subpoena witnesses for certain purposes. Amends article VII by adding a section.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mrs. Daisy Elliott, Messrs. Young and Greene introduce Delegate Proposal 1659, A proposal to resolve the submission of conflicting provisions to the electors at the same election. Amends article III by adding a section.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mrs. Daisy Elliott, Messrs. Young and Greene introduce Delegate Proposal 1660, A proposal to provide for the encouragement and operation of a system of primary and secondary education. Amends article XI, section 1.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mrs. Daisy Elliott, Messrs. Young and Greene introduce Delegate Proposal 1661, A proposal to expressly permit the passage of mortgage moratorium legislation. Amends article II, section 9.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mrs. Daisy Elliott and Mr. Young introduce Delegate Proposal 1662, A proposal to provide for appeal to the courts of decisions of the civil service commission. Amends article VI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Young and Mrs. Daisy Elliott introduce Delegate Proposal 1663, A proposal to guarantee more impartial consideration in civil service appointments. Amends article VI, section 22.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Baginski and Barthwell introduce Delegate Proposal 1664, A proposal to allow resident veterans, widows and persons over 62 years of age to deduct $3,000.00 from the assessed valuation of realty. Amends article X.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Suzore introduces Delegate Proposal 1665, A proposal to provide that provisions on home rule be retained and that there be no loss of home rule status. Amends article VIII, sections 20 through 29.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Suzore introduces Delegate Proposal 1666, A proposal to provide that there shall be no personal income tax. Amends article X.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Woolfenden introduces Delegate Proposal 1667, A proposal to establish a senate elected on population and a house of representatives with one member from each county. Amends article V, sections 2 and 3.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative organization.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Woolfenden introduces Delegate Proposal 1668, A proposal to permit salary increases for judges of courts of record during term of office. Amends article XVI, section 3.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Woolfenden introduces Delegate Proposal 1669, A proposal to grant probate judges the same tenure of office as other courts of record. Amends article VII, section 14.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. McCauley introduces Delegate Proposal 1670, A proposal to elect judges of courts supported by a county from the county of electorate. Amends article VII by adding a new section.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. McCauley introduces Delegate Proposal 1671, A proposal to authorize the incorporation of metropolitan districts and to define their purposes and powers. Amends article VIII, section 31.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Boothby introduces Delegate Proposal 1672, A proposal to provide for the diversion of a portion of the gasoline taxes for the enforcement of boating laws and regulations. Amends article X, section 22.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Boothby, Gust and J. B. Richards introduce Delegate Proposal 1673, A proposal to provide that the legislature may submit any bill passed by it to the electors to determine whether the same should become law. Amends article V, section 38.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Boothby introduces

Delegate Proposal 1674, A proposal to require a financial certificate to be attached to all bills requiring an expenditure of funds. Amends article V by adding a section.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Boothby introduces

Delegate Proposal 1675, A proposal to provide that the territory of no senate district shall be changed without the consent of a majority of the electors residing therein. Amends article V.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative organization.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Andrus and Mr. Rajkovich introduce

Delegate Proposal 1676, A proposal to establish a board to supervise the community and junior colleges. Amends article XI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Heideman introduces

Delegate Proposal 1677, A proposal to substitute the word separation for division, and to limit exercise within branches. Amends article IV, sections 1 and 2.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Woolfenden introduces

Delegate Proposal 1678, A proposal to retain and delete certain sections concerning corporations. Amends article XII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, in view of the impending visit of the former president tomorrow, I move that when the convention adjourns today, it stand adjourned until 10 minutes past 10:00 o'clock in the forenoon tomorrow.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Hutchinson. Any discussion? If not, all in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, having decided to adjourn this afternoon, following the conclusion of the session, to an early hour tomorrow, and keeping in mind the present provisions of rule 56 which says that any delegate proposal which would be introduced tomorrow would have to be filed with the secretary at least 3 hours prior thereto, and also keeping in mind that that would unduly cut off the consideration of the introduction of proposals tomorrow, I now move that the provisions of rule 56 be suspended, insofar as necessary, to permit the introduction of delegate proposals tomorrow, so long as they are filed with the secretary not later than 11:30 a.m.

That will permit the filing of delegate proposals with the secretary during the morning hours and when the convention reconvenes after recess tomorrow afternoon, then these delegate proposals which are filed during the morning tomorrow may be introduced just as though we were actually starting in the afternoon session as usual.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, fellow delegates, I rise to speak in favor of the motion. I think the adoption of this motion will permit the convention to have the introduction of proposals tomorrow in the usual manner.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Is there any objection to Mr. Hutchinson's motion? If not, it will prevail.

The motion prevails.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. White moves that that portion of rule 2 which bars accredited press and television photographers from the floor of the convention during plenary sessions be suspended for the period beginning with the entry of General Eisenhower into the convention hall on Wednesday, December 13, and ending not more than 7 minutes thereafter.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. White.

MR. WHITE: Mr. President, fellow delegates, you will have noted that this provides for the suspension of the rules for this Wednesday morning's session only. It implements an arrangement we have worked out with the cooperation of our regular news correspondents to permit picture coverage of General Eisenhower's appearance for a period not to exceed 7 minutes from the time he enters the hall.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Is there any objection to Mr. White's motion?

The motion prevails.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Martin offers

Resolution 58, A resolution requesting authority and funds for the committee on executive branch to hold hearings in the city of Pontiac.

Following is Resolution 58 as offered:

Whereas, 1,444 classified employees of the state of Michigan live and work in Oakland county, more such employees than in any other county in the state except Ingham and Wayne; and

Whereas, Many other varied and diverse points of view are represented in Oakland county; and

Whereas, In consideration of the numerous requests from constituents expressing interest in the subject of civil service and a desire to be heard; now therefore be it

Resolved, That such hearings be held in the city of Pontiac on Tuesday, December 19, 1961, in order to guarantee the possibility of maximum participation of interested citizens in the Oakland county area and that the public be given sufficient notice; and be it further

Resolved, That the convention appropriate the necessary funds to defray the cost of travel for the members of the subcommittee to and from Pontiac and other expenses necessary and incidental to the holding of such hearings.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on administration.

SECRETARY CHASE: Those are all the resolutions on file, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The secretary would like to announce that because of the serious misprinting of the journal of yesterday, Journal 40 will be reset and reprinted in the proper form.

Also, the apples furnished yesterday were furnished by Mr. J. B. Richards, and today they were furnished by Mr. Rush. (applause)

The committee on administration requests that the following announcement be made:

In the matter of individual delegates sending out journals, proposals, booklets and handbooks to their constituents, it is requested by the committee on administration that you do not seal the envelopes as these can be sent third class bulk mail rather than first class letter rate. Thank you. The committee on administration.

In addition to the composite calendars of committee meetings and public hearings, there are the following announcements:

The subcommittee on corporations of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule will meet in room G, Wednesday, tomorrow, at 3:00 o'clock p.m. Claud Erickson, chairman. Henry L. Woolfenden, subcommittee chairman.

An announcement with respect to the subcommittees of the committee on education. There will be a meeting of the primary and secondary committee and the school finance committee in room J immediately after the session today.

The committee on local government will continue the meeting on townships at 7:30 this evening. Also, the committee on local government will meet at 8:30 a.m. tomorrow, Wednesday, in parlors A and B of corridor A in the civic center to consider the subject of county government. The meeting will adjourn at 9:30 a.m. sharp. The committee will reconvene in the afternoon for the continuation of the committee meeting in their own room, room A.

That is all of the announcements on file, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. White.

MR. WHITE: Mr. President, I should like to call the attention of the delegates to the fact that they should wear their badges when they come to convention hall tomorrow. The doors will be handled by police officers and if delegates will wear their badges this will save the police trouble, and will save the delegates trouble, too.

I might make one other announcement. There will be 2 cameras on the floor of the convention tomorrow during the morning session, but they will be in the hands of employees of the convention — our film documentary crew — so if you see them you will know what they are doing. Thank you.

SECRETARY CHASE: Delegate Davis wishes to be excused from the session of Friday to address a meeting of the Michigan agricultural council.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, he will be excused.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the items on the secretary's desk, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Just to be certain about tomorrow's session and to make it run as well as possible, may I say this. To assist us in keeping our arrangement for the hour of assembly at 10:10 a.m., would delegates please be in the convention hall or in their seats at 10:00 o'clock or at least by 5 minutes after 10:00 because tomorrow we will be operating on a very tight schedule.

Following the presentation to General Eisenhower of a gavel that has been prepared for him, opportunity will be given the delegates to shake hands with the general. Just so that this can be done quickly, it will be done in sections. The general will stand in this particular spot right here, and after this section over here on my right has been given a nod or some signal of that nature they will rise.

Mr. Allen, the first man in the row, will come around to the front of the secretary's desk, go by the place around in front of where Mr. Chase stands, and if the delegates in that section follow Mr. Allen on that course they can shake hands with the general who will be standing here, and return to their seats. As soon as this section has completed shaking hands with the general, we will then start with Mr. Austin in the next section, and then Mr. Balcer in the next section and then Mr. Batchelor in the next section.

If you will wear your badges, this will be a means of introduction to our guest as well as a means of getting you into the hall, because to the policemen on the door you are not Delegate Tom Jones but just some guy trying to get in unofficially. If you do not wear your badge you will cause Mr. White a lot of trouble, and he is already in enough trouble making arrangements for the meeting tomorrow. (laughter) Thank you very much.

We are anxious not to delay the general because it is important that he follow his schedule and address a meeting at Michigan State University tomorrow. We are anxious that our arrangements for tomorrow run smoothly and that there be no delay.

If there are no other announcements, the Chair recognizes Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. President, I move that we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Danhof moves the adjournment of the session. The question is on adjournment. Those in favor say aye. Those opposed say no.

The motion prevails. We are adjourned until 10:10 a.m. tomorrow.

[Whereupon, and in pursuance of the order previously made, at 2:25 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 10:10 a.m., Wednesday, December 13, 1961.]

FORTY-SECOND DAY

Wednesday, December 13, 1961, 10:10 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation this morning is through the courtesy of one of our own delegates, Tom Sharpe. Our invocator is Reverend Dale Stewart, Associate Minister of the Presbyterian Church of Howell.

Will you please rise.

REVEREND STEWART: Our Father, God, we give thanks unto Thee that Thou hast given into the hands of the elected representatives of the people the government of these United States.

We pray that Thy presence might be with these delegates assembled here, that it might be as a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night, guiding and directing us amidst chaos, confusion, conflict and compromise.

We give Thee thanks that in Thy providence Thou hast given wisdom, courage and strength to those leaders in all generations who consciously looked unto Thee for guidance and support.

We pray that those assembled here who seek Thy purpose might be given Thy power to perform it in Thy name.

We give Thee thanks that Thou hast never relieved the burden of concern from that leader in our midst who has been relieved of the burden of office of president of these United States.

We pray that those assembled here might have their concern enlarged and enlightened, that we might seek more than personal advantage or party power, local gain or states' rights; that we might even look beyond the welfare of our own nation and seek the welfare of all Thy children throughout the world.

May Thy presence be with us, for we make our prayer in Jesus' name. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. All present, please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Absent with leave: None.

Absent without leave: Mr. Pellow.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, Mr. Pellow is excused.

[During the proceedings Mr. Pellow entered the chamber and took his seat.]

The Chair recognizes Mr. Dean Doty.

MR. DEAN DOTY: Mr. President, I move that the regular order of business be temporarily postponed and that the convention receive an address by General Dwight D. Eisenhower, former president of the United States.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the motion prevails and it is so ordered.

The Chair recognizes Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: Mr. President, I move that the president appoint a special committee consisting of 6 delegates to wait upon former President Eisenhower and to escort him to the rostrum.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mrs. Butler. Is there objection?

If not, the motion prevails and the president appoints Delegates Bentley, Conklin, Figy, J. A. Hannah, Millard, and Pollock to escort the president to the rostrum. Without objection, the appointments are approved.

Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, will the members of the committee just named meet immediately outside of the president's office for this purpose.

PRESIDENT NISBET: May I just mention this to the photographers who are present. Shortly after the president begins his speech I will raise my hand like this [indicating] and that will be the signal that you people should leave the floor for the purpose of the address by Mr. Eisenhower. Will you please observe that signal.

The Chair now recognizes the delegate from the eighteenth senatorial district, Mr. Romney, for the purpose of making the introduction. Mr. Romney, will you approach the rostrum, please.

The sergeant at arms.

SERGEANT AT ARMS DES ROCHER: Mr. President, I announce the special committee appointed to wait upon and escort the former president.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Permit them to approach the rostrum. (standing ovation)

Mr. Romney, will you assume the Chair?

[Whereupon, Mr. Romney assumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Mr. President, Governor Swainson, honored guests including our wives and staff, delegates:

It is my high honor to introduce the Honorable Dwight D. Eisenhower. (applause)

GENERAL EISENHOWER: Governor Swainson, President Nisbet, Mr. Romney and delegates to this convention, and honored guests:

By the terms of the invitation that I received from this convention by the hand of Mr. Romney, I have the honor of speaking to you briefly as you meet in the bipartisan purpose of rewriting the constitution of the great state of Michigan.

Such a purpose, pursued in such a setting, cannnot fail to bring to me, as an out of stater, renewed respect for my late friend, Senator Arthur Vandenberg. As the first individual of our nation to give true significance and real depth to the concept of bipartisanship in our country's international affairs, it would be strange indeed if any of you engaged in this worthy effort should fail to feel a sense of guidance from his spirit and his mature wisdom. I am certain that all of you here are convinced—as I am—that his passing was a grievous loss to his state, his nation, and indeed, the world.

Because in political work at the state level, I have had no experience whatsoever, it would be far from fitting for me to urge upon you any notion of mine respecting either the form or content of the document you are engaged in preparing. But since I did have the privilege of serving for 8 exciting years as head of the federal government, it might be appropriate for me first to express to you some personal thoughts as to the desirable relationships between state and federal levels of government in this nation.

The several states—at least the first 13 of them—are the collective parents of the federal government; our constitution recognizes that each of them possesses a sovereignty limited only by the special grants of authority given by them to the central government.

If it were possible for us to have here, at this moment, a temporary reincarnation of any one of the framers of our constitution, telling us with what care those men defined this relationship and how they believed it would develop, I am quite sure that we would be astonished by the differences in his vision in 1787 and the reality of 1961. By the same token our spiritual visitor would be bewildered, if not dismayed, by the result he would see around him.

For example, some years ago a court decision extended the meaning of that section of the constitution which accords to the congress the power to regulate commerce among the several states so as to include in the term, interstate commerce, also those things that affect such commerce. The changes that have grown out of that decision are indeed great —for the better or for the worse is here beside the point. But, because we are bound by the judicial interpretations made of any part of the constitution, the effect has been to place in the hands of the central government more power over the nation's internal commerce than was previously and popularly supposed to have been intended.

So, as you set about the rewriting of your constitution, it seems to me you must take account of other governmental changes in our nation. Such an examination is timely and I have felt—and surely you have felt—that there are tendencies developing that affect adversely our cherished ideas of government and tend to revise the structure built by those who preceded us. Of those principles I refer specifically to one drawn from the colonists' bitter struggle against tyranny and from man's progress from serfdom to liberty and to self government. That principle is this: those who would be and would stay free must stand eternal watch against undue centralization of power in government. Faithful to that principle, our founder saw to it that governmental authority would be diffused—counter balanced—checked, hedged about, and restrained so as to minimize the possibility of its abuse. In that principle and in those precautions, we have believed, was established the true anchor of our freedom.

Due to our decentralized system, most political and economic questions can be approched in many reasonable ways. With our constitutional checks and balances, with our state and territorial governments, our multiplicity of county and municipal governing bodies, without emphasis upon individual initiative and community responsibilities, there is encouraged unlimited experimentation in the solving of America's problems, and through this diversified approach the effect of error is restrained, calamitous mistakes are avoided, and the self governing genius of our people is perpetually renewed.

In this vast system of self government, the state echelon is of vital importance, and was so recognized by our forefathers.

Being accustomed to decentralized authority, we are too often inclined to accept it as an ordinary fact of life, and to assume that it will always endure. But in other lands millions, helpless before concentrated power, have been born and lived and have died in slavery, or have lost their liberties to despots.

Today, in those areas, any one who speaks does so as the government directs, or he speaks no more. A meeting such as this one would be unthinkable in those regions.

Contemplating these things, we in America gain renewed determination to hew to the principle of diffusion of power, knowing that only thus can we be sure to avoid drifting irretrievably—even though so slowly as to be almost imperceptible—into the grasp of some form of centralized government.

Our governmental system has survived longer than any other attempt to conduct a nation's affairs by the authority of the people themselves. Yet we have often been cautioned by responsible observers that in the measurable future, if present trends continue, the states will finally become nothing but powerless satellites of the national government in Washington.

The tendency of bureaucracy to grow in size and power does not bear the whole of the blame for the march of political power toward Washington. Never under our constitutional system could the national government have siphoned away so much state responsibility and authority without the neglect, acquiescence, or unthinking cooperation of the states themselves. Every state failure to meet a pressing public need has created the opportunity, developed the excuse and fed the temptation for the national government to poach on the state's preserve. Year by year, responding to transient popular demands and localities seeking special advantage, the congress has increased federal functions. The pendulum of power has swung far from our states toward the federal government.

Eight years ago, I publicly expressed the conviction that unless we preserve the traditional power and responsibilities of state government, with revenues necessary to assure exercise of that power and discharge those responsibilities, there will not forever be preserved the kind of America we have known. Eventually, we shall have, instead, another form of government, and therefore quite another form and kind of America. That conviction I hold just as firmly today.

In that same year I obtained congressional authority to establish a commission to study and report on intergovernmental relations. The study brought long needed perspective and pointed the way to improvement in areas of mutual concern to the states and to the federal government. Unfortunately, sound recommendation and resultant action are not always the same.

Opposed though I am to needless federal expense and centralization of power, I found it necessary at times, during my terms in the presidency, to urge federal action in some areas traditionally reserved to the states. In each instance, state inaction or inadequate action, coupled with undeniable national need forced emergency federal intervention. But I tried to keep the word "emergency" of real significance in such legislation so that the invasion, which I felt forced to accept, would not be of long duration. These recommendations applied to such problems as classroom shortages, slum clearance, urban renewal, relief in the case of natural disasters and matters of traffic safety.

In varying degrees and varying circumstances, both federal and state responsibility in some types of activity has been, is now, and will continue to be indispensable. But I would urge that the states insistently contend for the fullest possible responsibility, well knowing that with responsibility there goes, in the long run, authority.

Take the matter of traffic safety. This happily is still a state and local responsibility, but day by day the American people are paying a fearful price for the failure of the states to agree on such safety essentials as standards for licensing of drivers and vehicles and basic rules of the road. Each year, from 35,000 to 40,000 persons are killed on our highways, a million and a half citizens injured, of whom many are disabled for life. In addition, the estimated cost to the country in the year 1956, for example, was almost $5 billion. We simply cannot let this go on. The human and material costs of inaction are prohibitive. Who is going to fill the vacuum? Someone must and someone will. I believe that the federal government has a function, but only as a leader and a coordinator. The basic responsibility and authority should be with the states among which there should be effective cooperation.

I believe that the preservation of our states as vigorous, powerful governmental entities is essential to permanent individual freedom and to national growth. But it is idle to champion states' rights without upholding state's responsibilities as well. So I hope that the rewritten draft of Michigan's constitution will define carefully the responsibilities that its people believe should belong to Michigan, and that they will forthrightly assume and exercise the authority essential to the carrying out of those responsibilities.

So acting, they will do something positive and effective about problems that directly concern their fortunes, their welfare and their lives.

Of and by and for themselves, they will be using their money; improving their present; exploring their future—as these things can never be done by a distant and centralized bureaucracy, always preoccupied with its own amplification and the manufacture of inflexible master plans for the infinitely varied circumstances of 50 sovereign states and many thousand communities.

The responsibilities, best exercised by the people of a state, can be returned to them in all 50 states. And Michigan can lead the way.

The only limit placed by the constitution on the kind of state government established by its people is that it must be republican in form. I believe therefore that this body, awakened to the trends of our time, has an opportunity to establish greater respect for the vital place that state government has fulfilled in our national development. Michigan's example of self examination and its assertion of responsibility and authority could lead to like action in other states of the union.

And, my friends, let us not forget that the American people are not completely dependent upon congressional action to accomplish any amendment in the national constitution if they should believe such action desirable. On the application of the legislatures of 2/3 of the several states, the congress is compelled to call a convention for proposed amendments. It is quite clear that if 2/3 of the states wanted our constitution so amended as to define more exactly proper relations between the federal and state governments, they could accomplish this by calling such a convention and gaining the approval of 3/4 of the states.

Now a final word which may be shooting far wide of the target at which you are aiming. It is my hope that in its preamble or in the accompanying documents of your new constitution, there will be greater emphasis placed, particularly before our young people, on the opportunities before them, [rather] than merely upon the problems and fears of our age. The hope of life long individual security is a natural one; but it is not an inspirational impulse. It does not encourage exploration, venturesomeness, ambition. Unless the individual is inspired to dream, to work and accomplish according to his own needs and desires, he will be courting a dreary, dull and eventually an insecure life indeed. I pray that the language of your new constitution will bring to its people a message of hope, a feeling of greater courage and confidence, a pioneering urge to sustain and enjoy freedom to the full.

Put it this way—if our people are to be tireless, two fisted champions and workers for America's great goals, they should have two fisted, sturdy, alert and tireless state governments to preserve their opportunities and give them a real example.

And I should add, my friends, Merry Christmas. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: We are very fortunate that after this inspiring talk General Eisenhower has indicated a willingness to answer questions. As the delegates know, we agreed that questions would be filed with the committee on public information by Monday night. Now, a number of questions have been filed and those delegates filing such questions will be asked to state their questions first. Following that, time permitting, other questions will be permitted from other delegates. I shall call on the delegates in the order in which I have been given the questions by the public information committee.

Delegate Koeze.

MRS. KOEZE: Delegate Koeze, Grand Rapids, Michigan. General Eisenhower, would you care to comment on the implications of the Baker vs. Carr case, the socalled Tennessee apportionment case, now before the United States supreme court? I am not asking that you state your views on any decision the court may render, but rather on the implications that the appealing of this case to the federal supreme court may portend in regard to federal-state relationships.

GENERAL EISENHOWER: I do not believe I could comment usefully on the very last part of your question [concerning] what this distribution may portend.

I do believe this—this is largely a state business, of course, and my idea is merely a personal one. There is, of course, first of all, the obvious distribution according to population —population alone. But through great areas of the United States we also have great problems of distribution.

Now, as I understand it, each man in the legislative body is to represent the views of people of a region. If these people are difficult to reach, it is obviously more difficult for him to represent them accurately if he does it completely by the population ratio. I would think, therefore, that there must be a good, common sense compromise, although I think always the great weight would be according to numbers. But certainly if you have a great city, you can much more easily reach those people than you can through large districts where populations are sparse.

As I say, I believe the basic thing must be population; the rest of it, some modification because of special conditions.

MRS. KOEZE: Thank you, sir.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Raymond L. King, delegate from the city of Pontiac. General Eisenhower, the tenth amendment to the United States constitution, as you know, provides that

> The powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people.

My question is this. What special responsibility, if any, does this amendment place upon us as delegates to a state constitutional convention?

GENERAL EISENHOWER: My goodness, I gave my whole talk on that one. (laughter) As a matter of fact, I suspect from the tenor of your question that you are thinking exactly as I am, and that is that the states themselves do have a great responsibility, because if you duck your responsibility, then it goes to the federal government, and along with that, final authority is bound to go.

You cannot give all your tax money to one central authority and then suppose that the people of the United States are not going to call for an accounting of the way this is done. Once you have to account for the way you distribute this money, that is the authority of the federal government. So I would think that the convention would want very clearly to spell out what they think their authorities and comparable responsibilities are in this field.

MR. KING: Thank you, sir.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Blandford.

MR. BLANDFORD: Delegate Blandford from Grand Rapids, Michigan. General Eisenhower, I believe my question has been fairly well answered already by your first answer. As you well know, of course, having worked 8 years with congress —and many of us wish it could have been longer— (laughter)

GENERAL EISENHOWER: Thank you. (applause)

MR. BLANDFORD: The house of representatives is elected on a population basis, and the senate, of course, is elected on an area basis with 2 senators from each state. This results in a diffusion of power.

In your judgment is this system—electing one house by population and the other by area—a sound method of selecting a legislative body?

GENERAL EISENHOWER: Well, now, first I will comment on your comment. Then I will try to answer your question. (laughter)

You said that many of you wished that I could have stayed in Washington longer. I will point out, I believe it was Republican pressure that made it impossible for me to try. (laughter)

MR. BLANDFORD: One of our errors. (laughter)

GENERAL EISENHOWER: Let us remember this. The states were entities in themselves and believed they were sovereign entities before they established the federal government. So their compromise demanded that while the house could be organized on the basis of population in the several states, each state would have 2 senators. I think that this was —and I think the reading of the papers of the time would corroborate this belief, this opinion—that they were anxious to keep the proper sovereign power in the states except that given specifically and that they had equal representation, each as a state rather than as a group of people, this was the compromise they believed in.

Now, when you go to applying this same principle further down, I am not so certain of my ground and I do not believe I could quite go along, for the simple reason that a county or a subdivision of a state is not sovereign, and I would believe that the practice of using population as the principal factor in producing a representative legislature is good. Although, as I remarked before, I think other factors must be taken into consideration, particularly distribution of population.

MR. BLANDFORD: Thank you, sir.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Delegate Prettie from the Hillsdale-Branch representative district. General Eisenhower, in your masterful address you commented that Michigan had the opportunity to lead the way.

Let us assume that this constitutional convention recommends and the people adopt a constitution designed to strengthen government at the state level so as to reverse the trend toward greater centralization of power at the federal level. Let us further assume that state services would require additional state tax revenues. Do you know of any way in which the citizens of this state could be relieved of any portion of the federal tax burden to offset an increased state tax burden?

GENERAL EISENHOWER: I do not want to be too sure of an older man's failing memory. I have constantly urged that as the states took back more responsibility they should have some revenue. I remember in one instance—I forget the exact power we wanted to give back—but we were going to give back the taxes on the tolls on telephone calls. Whether or not we thought it was possible to give back those taxes to a specific state rather than to the generality, I do not now recall, and I would not wish to be too positive in my answer.

But I believe if you set before the United States a real shining example of self dependence and individual initiative —in other words, a true example of Americanism as we have believed it has existed and has brought us to this stage of our development—I believe you are going to get a lot of other states excited and pretty soon you might have it easily within your power to make this apply to all the states rather than merely to one. That, of course, would be the ideal.

MR. PRETTIE: Thank you, sir.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Tweedie.

MR. TWEEDIE: Delegate Tweedie from the St. Clair-Sanilac representative district, and specifically from Port Huron. General Eisenhower, generally speaking, what length of term of office do you feel is best for heads of the executive department and what factors should be considered in determining this length?

GENERAL EISENHOWER: Well, personally, I think 2 years is too short for any elective official, certainly above the city level.

I believe that for governors—of course, this is state's business and I do not wish to be guilty of invading that, even in advice—but I think 2 years is too short. In this day and time of almost instant communication, when anyone in public office is brought much closer to the people than he ever was before, I believe it should be at least 4 years. Along with this I believe we should some day have a constitutional amendment that will make our congressmen's terms 4 years, being elected at the same time as the president, rather than having 2 years, and running back and forth, thinking every single instant of campaigning. That simply is not good practice in my opinion.

MR. TWEEDIE: Thank you, sir.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President—that is a habit I got into in Washington, sir, so I am not prepared to abandon it—this question has been touched upon, of course, sir, in your speech, and also in Mr. Prettie's remarks. Do you think the federal government can and should return many of its functions to the states, along with additional sources of tax revenue? And have you any further specific suggestions?

I recall, sir, that in 1957, I believe, you did make a very specific recommendation to the conference of state governors about returning the tax on long distance telephone calls. I am wondering if you have any other suggestions, principally in those areas in which you said you felt, as president, compelled to act which had formerly been reserved to the states.

GENERAL EISENHOWER: Well, we are talking now about getting back revenues. This, of course, is a very tough thing and that is why I believe very positive and definite action will be required. Whenever any level of authority has gotten its hands onto any part of the treasury and of our tax money, they are not going to give it up very easily. But I believe pressures can be brought so they will. I think there are a lot of things to be borne in mind. Remember, the federal government lives largely upon income tax. It lives on profits. There have to be profits. But I think the federal government should not constantly seek to invade those areas which have been traditionally reserved to the localities and states, the fields of sales taxes and excise taxes of all kinds. I think the best way it could be done would be an agreement in the fields of taxation. Naturally, states and localities get tired of trying to live just on property taxes.

The owner of a farm—and I am one of them—believes that taxes go up too high if local needs are met. So I think a good study will have to be developed in the fields of taxation that properly or, let us say, primarily belong to the several echelons of government before we are going to get anywhere. In the meantime, I believe that all sorts of things need attention; everything from schools to urban renewal and every other kind of problem that has been too much neglected by the states, and has been passed along to the federal government with the money. I feel that both the revenue and the responsibility in these areas should be returned to the states.

MR. BENTLEY: Thank you, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Delegate Milton E. Higgs representing Bay county. General Eisenhower, during the period of your presidency, it seemed to many that you exercised a great deal of restraint in the use of federal power in domestic crises. Would that have been based upon a faith in the power of the people through state and local units of government to solve such problems; and, if so, do you feel that such a faith was justified in the light of subsequent events?

GENERAL EISENHOWER: Well, I would say that is almost a principal tenet of my political faith. I believe, with Jefferson, that the government that is closest to the people is the best. Whether it is in welfare or any other kind of governmental activity—the development of roads, public buildings and everything else—if the people close by feel keenly about it and are paying for it, I think there is always greater efficiency. I do not have very great respect for a bureaucracy's efficiency in handling the business and affairs that range all the way from Seattle to Pensacola. There are many, many problems that are so localized or so colored by the locality that we need more of this kind of government and less of the centralized kind.

Now, the only time that I can recall intervening with force was when I sent troops to Little Rock and there, I believe, a very definite principle was involved. There was a properly issued order of a federal court, and the federal court had approved a plan for the locality, working with the school board, and so on. All was in accordance with the supreme court's decision.

The president of the United States is sworn to defend the Constitution of the United States and to execute its laws. Now, if any mob action, organized or unorganized, or indeed a local national guard tries to get in the way of a federal court's order being properly executed, then I think the president has no other recourse but to intervene.

But I do say that we must recall this. I think it was Wilson who used a very beautiful phrase, "The highest form of efficiency is the spontaneous cooperation of a free people." If we are going to live with freedom, if we are going to venerate and depend upon freedom and preserve it, we must not lose this faith in the ability of the locality to handle its own affairs to the maximum. Now, I do not mean to say there are not certain federal functions. Of course there are. But it is always a better relationship if, when the federal government has to intervene, there is a study made with the state and locality to see what the problems are. And then, let's cooperate; let's have a proper field or sector allotted to the federal government. But, my goodness, let's not surrender our responsibilities and our opportunities to better ourselves to the hands of someone sitting in Washington, 3,000 miles away, or less.

MR. HIGGS: Thank you, sir.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Sharpe.

MR. SHARPE: Delegate Sharpe from Shiawassee representative district. General Eisenhower, according to the secretary of health, education and welfare, Abraham Ribicoff, the federal government anticipates a constantly expanding welfare program. Do you see in the near future any major changes in this area that would be of some relief to the taxpayer, particularly in state-federal aid to dependent children programs?

GENERAL EISENHOWER: Well, just right now, the details of this particular law I couldn't recall and therefore I would not want to discuss them. I do have very definite opinions about your general question. I do not believe that we should be pressing our welfare problems more and more to Washington. I believe we ought to take them more to ourselves. I believe they will be done better, more sympathetically and more in accordance with the needs of, not merely the people who are helpless and cannot help themselves, but more nearly in accordance with our own self respect and our own concern for helpless human beings. I just distrust this business of putting all of our welfare and relief programs and that kind of activity in the hands of someone who would rather make speeches than to go around and see whether someone is hungry. I simply believe that is local business.

MR. SHARPE: Thank you, sir.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Durst.

MR. DURST: Delegate Durst of Adrian. President Eisenhower, the state of Michigan now has more than 120 executive agencies, departments and boards. Would you have any comment on the desirability of streamlining this multiplicity of agencies? And would you have any comment on the maximum number of executive agencies that a chief executive can efficiently administer?

GENERAL EISENHOWER: Well, of course, when you have 120, that, in my opinion—and I hope I am not too severely criticized for my opinion—is an absurdity. (laughter) In other words, if you are going to have good people running things and the chief executive is going to take a real interest in them, well then, it can't be done. If, on the other hand, they are of minor importance and are related to others, any principle of sound logic applied to the matter of organization would group some of them under a man with whom the governor or the president could deal.

Now this is a matter, strangely enough, that has been argued, talked about and discussed in the staff schools of military organisms, I guess, since the time of Caesar. How many men can the high commander handle? This limits the number of divisions you have in a corps, the number of regiments or brigades you have in a division and, finally, the number of separate commands that the very highest commander, say in a whole theatre, can handle. This particular principle, or consideration, or factor in organization applies everywhere. How much can the top man do efficiently and get it done?

I think we must start with this solution to the problem. How good are the men you get around you? Are you getting political hacks, someone who thinks he is being a help, or are you getting people who can really serve the people of the state? And if you get enough of them—and I am just guessing offhand—there should be not over 7 or 8 of those who are really at the top, and they will have supervision under properly grouped agencies under them.

Now, as a matter of fact, in relation to this matter, the federal government has many, many socalled independent agencies—those that belong to the legislature. Of course, there is nothing any executive can do about that—I mean the I.C.C. and the F.C.C. and that sort of thing—they are set up separately and they are there, although I do not believe in them particularly. I believe there should be an executive responsibility toward them, too. But the others in the federal government are largely grouped so that they are put under some secretary who has a large interest in their welfare. So, I would say the 120 ought to be grouped together so you could certainly handle them through 7 to 10 people.

MR. DURST: Thank you, sir.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Delegate Jack Faxon, fifth senatorial district, Wayne county. General Eisenhower, my question is in line with the last question that was put to you with regard to these executive agencies. Would you see any need for a state to go into areas of responsibility already covered by the federal government, such as intrastate business activities, civil rights, et cetera? And, if so, what recommendations would you care to make?

GENERAL EISENHOWER: Well, in the case of civil rights, assuming that in their general principles all state constitutions must be in accord with the national constitution, this is a matter for all our people, and that means the federal government. The federal government must do its best to see that equal rights guaranteed by the constitution are given and accorded to every individual in the whole nation. But, when it comes to this business of concurrent jurisdiction or some conflict of jurisdiction, this became a very troublesome problem during my administration. One of them was this. I believe the state of Pennsylvania convicted someone of communism, or some communistic association, and the supreme court ruled that the congress had preempted the field in this matter and that a state had no authority of any kind to punish a man for communistic actions.

Personally, I was just about horror-stricken because I did not believe that any free nation or any governing element or any part, would be stopped from looking into this matter of communism and taking action. But then the leaders of congress finally told me there was no thought, at the time of the passage of that act, that they were preempting. They thought everyone could look into it. But then they decided to establish a practice—which may have been abandoned or may not, I do not know—that each law passed by the congress should state whether or not there was any intent to preempt the field, or whether the state should have the right to take concurrent jurisdiction.

My own feeling would be, if I had the honor of sitting here as one of these delegates, I would want to define our rights and our authorities and if the congress had already preempted some of them, I would make my fight through the state's attorney and make suit to try to get them back. If I could not do that, I would again go back to my old scheme of a national constitutional convention.

I believe you are not going to do these things and be satisfied that you have done these things correctly unless you are ready to stand up and be counted and fight right down to the last ditch.

MR. FAXON: Thank you, sir.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Mrs. Judd.

MRS. JUDD: Delegate Judd from Grand Rapids. General Eisenhower, I believe that this convention is consciously engaged in doing just what you suggest, that is, attempting to strengthen our state and local governments in large part to retard the growing reliance of local government on Washington, and to preserve our federal system of government. However, it has puzzled me as to just what we, as a single state, can accomplish in this direction.

Now, you have answered my question in part with regard to the effect of our leadership on other states, but could you tell us something of the possible movements in other states to modernize their constitutions also?

GENERAL EISENHOWER: No. As a matter of fact, I must say this one was the first one I heard of, and that is the reason that, without any quarrel, I accepted the invitation to come here; not because I thought I could give you people any particularly worthwhile counsel but because if my coming here would publicize a little bit better what you people are trying to do, I was all for it. That is the real reason for my being here.

Now, I should make this clear. There are certain things that are going to congress now by law. With those changed, you can get back your traditional authority and responsibility in these fields. If, wherever there has been an interpretation of the constitution you think is not quite correct, then you would have to make that change by constitutional convention, that's all. But I believe that your example, your fighting the laws that you think are wrong in the federal area and finally by continuing to urge other states to join you—these are the only ways by which you will do it.

MRS. JUDD: Thank you, sir.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Delegate Norris, sixth district, Wayne county. General Eisenhower, you touched upon the subject matter very briefly, but I would like to ask this specific question, sir. During your presidency you appointed a commission on national goals. This commission reported the following in 1960:

> Respect for the individual means respect for every individual. Every man and woman must have equal rights before the law and an equal opportunity to vote, to be educated, to get a job, to buy a home. These goals, which are at the core of our system, must be achieved by action at all levels.

End of quotation, sir.

Do you not believe that action at all levels to secure equal opportunity for employment, housing and education, includes appropriate expression in a state constitution, and would not a clear cut expression at the level of state government on behalf of such equal opportunity be helpful in strengthening America's moral position in the world?

GENERAL EISENHOWER: Well, I think it is an essential, because I believe this, I believe that every individual in this room possesses moral responsibility in this field. We are citizens of a free nation and wherever we impinge upon or diminish the freedom of another individual, we impinge upon our own.

I believe that self interest demands that every single individual put himself four square on this principle. Certainly it is implied and stated as solemnly as it can be in the constitution. I see no reason for any state refraining from making such a declaration. I would be very much in favor of it.

MR. NORRIS: Thank you, sir.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: It happens that we had a preponderance of questions from Republican delegates submitted to the committee.

In fairness, it seems to me that in the brief time we have remaining we ought to give the Democratic delegates a little priority in asking questions from the floor.

I have had 3 additional questions sent up to me, but they are also from Republican delegates and I am therefore, going to see if there are any questions from Democratic delegates that they would like to ask.

I recognize Delegate Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: Thank you, Mr. Romney.

Delegate Joe Snyder from St. Clair Shores, Macomb county. Mr. President, with improved technological processes and with people getting older, what are our responsibilities at this constitutional convention to help those who have reached the years of life where they cannot find a proper employment and they have not had the availability of resources to provide them through the end of their lives?

GENERAL EISENHOWER: Well, of course, I believe in many of our industrial organizations we have already got pension and retirement systems and, of course, O.A.S.I., and all that sort of thing. They are not adequate, particularly where emergency strikes. I believe we should sponsor voluntary plans for insurance in this field, making the state the agent rather than the federal government, but with the federal government participating wherever it can be shown the need, for the simple reason—as your Governor Swainson pointed out to me this morning when we were riding in—that a state boundary is not anything sacrosanct. People can come in who can be indigent, old, sick, in far greater proportion than in many other states, and therefore you have a big problem.

But you pointed out in your question that technology is making us all older. Also, I think it is giving us a greater span of useless—pardon me—of useful life. (laughter) Because we are having automation coming along, we have been talking for some time about shorter periods of active service. I doubt that this is the answer. I believe that old people can be used—I am very sensitive about that point—(laughter) in our industries, in our whole social arrangements, in our lives—maybe we have to study more what is the kind of thing that older people ought to be doing and so on down the line. So, I believe that they must be given help in terms of subsistence and proper medical care, as far as possible on a voluntary basis, but make sure they have it. I think, also, we ought to be studying this whole problem, how a population is best employed. And not to get so many of these arbitrary laws that at 60 you are done. As a matter of fact, my friends, at 62 I was nominated to the presidency. Now, I do not think I was completely useless, even if the calendar would have said so. (applause)

MR. SNYDER: Thank you, sir.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Delegate Binkowski, second senatorial district, representing part of the east side of Detroit and Hamtramck. General, do you believe that a limitation on the term of governor, such as a 2 term limitation, is advisable?

GENERAL EISENHOWER: I did not quite understand you. A limitation of 2 terms?

MR. BINKOWSKI: Yes, general.

GENERAL EISENHOWER: Well, I have felt this way about it. Let us go back to the presidency. Certainly at my age I was never going to run for the presidency again, I don't care what the constitution said. (laughter) So I could study and examine this question very objectively.

I believe, in the case of the presidency, that the weight of evidence is on the side of limiting it—I mean the weight of logic is on that side—because of the possibilities that you could encounter. Take the president, who is also commander in chief of the armed forces, who is certainly the most powerful individual and occupying the most powerful office in the free world. There is always a possibility of a development in that area that we would not want to have. Then I studied along with that—should we limit the number of years a senator should serve? I raise that question because if you do it with the president, should you do it with senators and congressmen? I think there might be some advantages in that (laughter), but I do not believe it is a good thing because there you again have a proliferation of authority. One man stays one term, another fellow stays 20 terms in the house. I do not think the same thing applies.

When you come to the governor, I really am not qualified to talk, but I do think that in my state, where we have 1 term —1 term and he is out—that is too short. I certainly think that is too short, but I believe you might make a reasonable number of years—8 years, or something of that kind, or 10 years—and say that is the limit. I believe that you would not ever want to see in the state some kind of machine-hold of popular elections, popular elections that could, just by that very fact, perpetuate a man in office. Actually, I do not think the question is too important because there are not many Americans, I think, that would have that kind of venal ambition.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Thank you, sir.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: I am going to have to exercise a pocket veto over the other questions that have been sent up because we are already 10 minutes behind schedule. I am sure we all appreciate General Eisenhower's willingness to answer questions as he has. I am sure, also, that we would like to have him take with him at least some symbolic mementos of our appreciation of the effort he has made to be with us on this occasion.

I believe I voice the attitude of all of us in saying that we are grateful to him for sharing with us his wisdom and his great integrity and that we appreciate not only what he has done today, but what he has done throughout his life—both in war and in peace. General Eisenhower, on behalf of the delegates, I would like to present you with a gavel which, after all, is a symbol of democratic society, and an engraved copy of the Michigan Constitutional Convention Handbook, and to express our heartfelt appreciation.

GENERAL EISENHOWER: Thank you. (applause)

[Whereupon, General Eisenhower retired from rostrum; and President Nisbet resumed the Chair to preside over the convention.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: I might say to the convention that sometimes even the best laid plans go awry. The question of time enters the picture, and the General is now unable to remain to shake hands with the delegates. The General is on a very tight schedule and he was kind enough to take a little longer time than was planned on in answering the questions put to him by the delegates.

General Eisenhower has another appointment he must keep. I think we are all grateful that he could be with us today.

The Chair will now call upon Delegate Davis.

MR. DAVIS: Mr. President, I move that we recess this convention until 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Davis that we recess the convention until 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. The hour of resuming is a little different from our usual convention procedure because of our having met here this morning. For that reason it was necessary to put before you a motion to reconvene at the hour of 2:30 p.m. I hope you will agree. (laughter) All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails and we will now recess until 2:30 p.m.

[Whereupon, at 11:20 o'clock a.m., the convention recessed; and, at 2:30 o'clock p.m., reconvened.]

The convention will please come to order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, reports back to the convention Delegate Proposal 1504, A proposal to limit reforestation power to state lands. Amends article X, section 14; Delegate Proposal 1512, A proposal to provide that all contracts entered into by the state with private contractors doing business with the state shall prohibit discrimination because of race, creed, color, religion or national origin; Delegate Proposal 1532, A proposal to delete article X, section 14, relative to internal improvements; Delegate Proposal 1536, A proposal to increase the power of the legislature with respect to internal improvements; and Delegate Proposal 1554, A proposal to provide that the state may aid in the internal improvement of harbors; with the recommendation that the proposals be referred to the committee on legislative powers.

D. Hale Brake, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the recommendation of the committee that these 5 delegate proposals be referred to the committee on legislative powers. Any discussion? If not, all in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

They will be so referred.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only standing committee report, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Introduction, first reading and reference of proposals.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Everett, Page and Seyferth introduce

Delegate Proposal 1679, A proposal to authorize the legislature to provide for changes in boundaries of local units of government by use of courts. Amends article VIII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Higgs, Everett and Seyferth introduce Delegate Proposal 1680, A proposal to provide for a unified court system. Amends article VII, section 1.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Follo introduces Delegate Proposal 1681, A proposal to provide for libraries throughout the state, for a state board of libraries, and for financing of libraries. Amends article XI, section 14.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Buback, Downs, Mrs. Daisy Elliott, Messrs. Lesinski and Perlich introduce

Delegate Proposal 1682, A proposal to provide that no vendors of supplies, material or contractual services shall be required to supply the same to any governmental unit at less than cost. Amends article XVI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mrs. Daisy Elliott introduces

Delegate Proposal 1683, A proposal to provide for a court of domestic relations and its operation within each county by local option. Amends article VII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Buback, Mrs. Daisy Elliott and Mr. Snyder introduce

Delegate Proposal 1684, A proposal to provide that wages shall not be subject to garnishment or other legal process prior to payment. Amends article XVI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Buback, Hood, Murphy and Mrs. Daisy Elliott introduce

Delegate Proposal 1685, A proposal to provide that no member of the legislature shall be appointed to offices created, or have his pay raised during his term of office; and other matters. Amends article V, section 7.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Binkowski, Buback, Downs, Mrs. Daisy Elliott, Messrs. Hood, Murphy, Snyder and Walker introduce

Delegate Proposal 1686, A proposal to provide for a program of natural resources development for recreational purposes. Amends article XVI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Buback, Downs, Mrs. Daisy Elliott and Mr. Hodges introduce

Delegate Proposal 1687, A proposal to provide that the full time head of each executive agency shall be an exempt position under civil service. Amends article VI, section 22.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Buback, Downs, Mrs. Daisy Elliott, Messrs. Marshall and Snyder introduce

Delegate Proposal 1688, A proposal to provide that members of the executive and legislative branches may also serve on the county board of supervisors. Amends article VIII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Buback, Downs, Mrs. Daisy Elliott and Mr. Snyder introduce

Delegate Proposal 1689, A proposal to provide for apportionment of the legislature every 10 years after the effective date of this constitution and for the secretary of state to act if the legislature does not. Amends article V.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative organization.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Binkowski, Buback, Downs, Mrs. Daisy Elliott, Messrs. Hood, Murphy, Perlich and Snyder introduce

Delegate Proposal 1690, A proposal to provide that there shall be no denial of equal protection of the laws by the state or its subdivisions and no discrimination in civil rights. Amends article II, section 23.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Van Dusen and A. G. Elliott introduce Delegate Proposal 1691, A proposal to provide that all elections be held on one day in each year except those for vacancies and certain constitutional exceptions. Amends article III.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. T. S. Brown introduces

Delegate Proposal 1692, A proposal to reorganize county boundaries; to establish school districts therein; to establish representation in the senate on the basis of said county system; to provide for the method of representation in the house of representatives; and to define the powers of the senate and house. Amends articles V and VIII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Hodges and Yeager introduce

Delegate Proposal 1693, A proposal to establish a board of colleges and universities with jurisdiction over all 4 year colleges and universities. Amends article XI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Suzore introduces Delegate Proposal 1694, A proposal to provide that the present personal property tax laws be retained and also the tax base of home rule communities. Retains legislation enacted pursuant to articles VIII and X.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Suzore introduces Delegate Proposal 1695, A proposal to restrict municipal income taxes to persons resident within the corporate limits of any municipality levying such tax. Amends article X.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Norris introduces Delegate Proposal 1696, A proposal to guarantee rights not enumerated in the constitution. Adds new section to article II.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Ford, Binkowski and Suzore introduce

Delegate Proposal 1697, A proposal to provide for an auditor general; to provide for his election and term; to describe his powers and duties. Amends article VI by adding a new section.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Ford introduces Delegate Proposal 1698, A proposal to provide for the continuance of present municipalities until otherwise provided for by law. Amends article VIII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Ford introduces Delegate Proposal 1699, A proposal to grant all powers of local self government to municipalities. Amends article VIII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Ford and McCauley introduce

Delegate Proposal 1700, A proposal to guarantee liberal construction by the courts of laws conferring powers upon local units of government. Amends article VIII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Ford introduces Delegate Proposal 1701, A proposal to provide for election of township officials; their term of office; the time of their election; and to authorize the legislature to create additional township offices. Amends article VIII, section 18.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Upton, Ford, McCauley and Pugsley introduce Delegate Proposal 1702, A proposal to make appeal of administrative rulings a matter of right. Amends article VII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Dade, Downs, Mrs. Daisy Elliott and Mrs. Hatcher introduce

Delegate Proposal 1703, A proposal to guarantee equal opportunity to learn regardless of race, creed, color, national origin, or geographical location. Amends article II and revises Delegate Proposal 1130.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Everett and Higgs introduce

Delegate Proposal 1704, A proposal to provide that all vacant judicial offices be filled by special election and authorizing the supreme court to temporarily fill vacancies with retired judges. Amends article VII, section 20.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Everett introduces Delegate Proposal 1705, A proposal to authorize the supreme court to create judicial circuits for circuit courts. Amends article VII, section 8.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Shackleton introduces

Delegate Proposal 1706, A proposal to eliminate the commissioner of highways from township government. Amends article VIII, section 18.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Shackleton introduces

Delegate Proposal 1707, A proposal to limit the borrowing power of the state to 1 per cent of the average annual revenue for the preceding 3 years. Amends article V.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Shackleton introduces

Delegate Proposal 1708, A proposal to provide that the legislature shall make no appropriations, nor do any borrowing for financing or subsidizing private enterprise. Amends article V.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Sablich introduces

Delegate Proposal 1709, A proposal to create a coordinating council of higher education composed of members from each institution. Amends article XI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Rajkovich, Howes, Perlich, Dean Doty, Turner and Sleder introduce

Delegate Proposal 1710, A proposal to increase to $1,000 the amount over which justices of the peace have concurrent jurisdiction. Amends article VII, section 16.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Rajkovich, Howes, Perlich, Dean Doty, Turner and Sleder introduce

Delegate Proposal 1711, A proposal to provide for the election of justices of the peace. Amends article VII, section 15.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Rajkovich, Howes, Perlich, Turner, Dean Doty and Sleder introduce

Delegate Proposal 1712, A proposal to retain in the constitution sections 1, 18 and 19 of article VII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Liberato introduces

Delegate Proposal 1713, A proposal to provide that no person over 70 shall be elected or appointed to public office. Amends article XVI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Liberato, Snyder and Kelsey introduce

Delegate Proposal 1714, A proposal to divide the state into 19 congressional districts and to apportion the state legislature within the 19 districts. Amends article V, sections 3 and 4.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative organization.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Liberato and Kelsey introduce

Delegate Proposal 1715, A proposal to provide that tie votes in the house shall be broken by the speaker and in the senate by the lieutenant governor. Amends article V.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Romney and A. G. Elliott introduce

Delegate Proposal 1716, A proposal to restrict the number of executive agencies and to provide for executive appointment and confirmation and reorganization power. Amends article VI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Murphy, Hood, Mrs. Hatcher, Mrs. Daisy Elliott and Mr. Young introduce

Delegate Proposal 1717, A proposal to provide salaries of $8,500 and expenses of $3,500 for members of the legislature. Amends article V, section 9.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: That completes the proposals, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Van Dusen moves that all committee reports recommending exclusion of present constitutional provisions submitted pursuant to the last paragraph of Resolution 41, as substituted, and known as exclusion reports, be automatically laid over 3 days before consideration on general orders.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, this motion would simply subject these exclusion reports, which are in effect committee proposals for deletion, to the requirement of rule 36 of the convention that no committee proposal be considered by the convention until it has been before us for 3 days.

I think the matters are of equal importance, and it is just as important that we be able to read the journal and know what the committees recommend be taken out as it is that we read the journal and know what the committees recommend be put in. I think it is important that both be considered as far as consideration on general orders is concerned.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen.

Mr. Chase, would you read the motion again, please?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Van Dusen moves that all committee reports recommending exclusion of present constitutional provisions submitted pursuant to the last paragraph of Resolution 41, as substituted, and known as exclusion reports, be automatically laid over 3 days before consideration on general orders.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion. Any discussion? If not, all those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Spitler and Snyder offer Resolution 59, A resolution to commend Chairman White and the committee on public information for their work in connection with the visit of General Dwight D. Eisenhower.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Spitler.

MR. SPITLER: Mr. President, I move the suspension of the rules and immediate consideration of the resolution.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion of Mr. Spitler is to suspend rule 44 to provide for immediate consideration of the resolution. Is there objection? The Chair hearing none, the rule is suspended.

The secretary will read the resolution.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Spitler and Snyder offer the following resolution,

A resolution to commend Chairman White and the committee on public information for their work in connection with the visit of General Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Whereas, The visit this morning of General Dwight D. Eisenhower, former president of the United States, necessitated a vast amount of work and planning; and

Whereas, This work was undertaken and well performed by Chairman White and the committee on public information; now therefore be it

Resolved, That this convention commend Chairman White and his committee for their work and furnish them with copies of this resolution.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the resolution. Is there any discussion?

Mr. Spitler.

MR. SPITLER: Mr. President and delegates, I think the resolution speaks for itself. I believe it was only last week that consideration was given to the possibility of this type of program we had this morning. I am sure that the task of Mr. Ink White and his committee was not easy.

It was necessary for the committee to satisfy a great many individuals and many groups and they discharged their responsibility with outstanding efficiency. I myself was very much impressed with the orderly and effective manner in which that program was carried out this morning.

I think the least we can do is to commend the chairman and members of this committee for the splendid manner in which their work was carried out.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the resolution. Are there any remarks?

Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. President and delegates, I do not want to act as the devil's advocate here, and I certainly think that Chairman Ink White is to be commended, as are the members of the committee on public information, but I do question the wisdom of our having these self gratification or self congratulatory type resolutions moved on the floor of this convention commending the work of members or committees within our own convention.

I think that when the work is performed by those outside the convention a resolution might very well be in order, but not when the work originates among those within the convention.

I can envisage that this might very well get out of hand, with every committee offering resolutions commending the work of the other committees and the effective manner in which they are performing the work of this convention.

After all, I remind the delegates, that is what we are here to do.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the resolution. All those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The resolution is adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only resolution on file, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar today, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The secretary has the following announcements:

Delegate and Mrs. Henry L. Woolfenden are pleased to announce that immediately after the departure of General Eisenhower this morning, they were presented with a beautiful baby granddaughter—their sixth grandchild—by their daughter, Mrs. Edward A. Cote of East Lansing. (applause)

There are the following notices of committee meetings which do not appear on the composite calendar:

The committee on administration will meet on Thursday, tomorrow, at 1:00 o'clock p.m. Walter DeVries, chairman.

The committee on judicial branch will meet in room B on Friday at 9:00 o'clock a.m. Robert J. Danhof, chairman.

There is the following addition to the composite calendar:

On Thursday, December 14, the fifth item on that calendar, at 8:30 in the morning, the committee on legislative powers, subcommittee 4, meeting in room H, will meet with the sponsors of Delegate Proposals 1369 and 1370, and Mr. George Burke, Jr., of the state liquor commission.

The secretary is pleased to announce that tomorrow morning at 8:00 o'clock the mileage and salary checks may be picked up in the secretary's office.

We have the following requests for leave of absence:

Mr. W. B. Cudlip requests leave from the session of Friday.

Mr. Page wishes to be excused from the sessions of Thursday and Friday, December 14 and 15.

Mr. Paul Goebel wishes to be excused from Friday's session to attend a meeting of the board of regents of the university.

Mr. Radka wishes to be excused from the sessions of Thursday and Friday to prosecute a manslaughter case that has been pending for nearly 3 years. (laughter)

Mr. Don Binkowski requests to be excused from the session of Thursday, December 14, to attend the presentation of the portrait of the late United States District Judge Arthur A. Konscinski.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection the leaves will be granted.

Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President, perhaps I am in error but I did not hear the announcement relative to the meeting of the committee on legislative powers. Do I understand that the committee will be meeting immediately following the session today?

SECRETARY CHASE: Legislative powers committee, immediately following the session today.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. President, I should like to speak to a matter of personal privilege. With some consternation I noted that my microphone up to this point was not manufactured by a Michigan firm, whereas most of my associates here at this convention had microphones which were manufactured by the only Michigan firm manufacturing microphones. This particular industry is in my district, in Buchanan. However, I noted, on returning from the delightful trip we took to Detroit yesterday, that some person had the keen foresight to observe that Michigan workmanship is far superior to any other. Now I have a microphone manufactured by Electrovoice of Buchanan, and I thank that individual. (laughter)

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Cudlip announces a meeting of the committee on style and drafting tomorrow evening, Thursday, at 8:00 o'clock, in room K.

Delegate Wood requests to be excused from the sessions of Thursday and Friday due to illness.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the request will be granted.

I hate to spoil the very pleasant time you are having this afternoon, but the Chair recognizes Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. President, I move that the convention do now adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion for adjournment. All those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. We are adjourned until 2:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

[Whereupon, at 2:55 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 2:00 o'clock p.m., Thursday, December 14, 1961.]

FORTY-THIRD DAY

Thursday, December 14, 1961, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation today is given by Mr. Maurice W. Kempthorne, former Reader of Third Church of Christ, Scientist, Detroit.

Will you please rise.

MR. KEMPTHORNE: Let us have a moment of silent prayer, after which I shall conclude with verses from the Bible.

> Wherewith shall I come before the Lord, and bow myself before the high God? He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?
>
> O man, greatly beloved, fear not: peace be unto thee, be strong, yea, be strong.
>
> Let Thy work appear unto Thy servants, and Thy glory unto their chidren.
>
> And let the beauty of the Lord, our God, be upon us: and establish Thou the work of our hands upon us; yea the work of our hands establish Thou it. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. All present please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The voting machine is now locked, and the attendance will be recorded. Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following communication:

> I ask to be excused from the session of the convention today, December 14, because of a meeting of the interim legislative committee with the state board of college presidents.
>
> I also ask to be excused from the session of Friday, December 15, because I will be meeting with the board of trustees of Michigan State University. John A. Hannah.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the request is granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. J. A. Hannah, Karn, Page, Radka, Shanahan and Wood.

Absent without leave: None.

The secretary wishes to announce that the speech of General Eisenhower, and the questions and answers following his speech, are being printed as a supplement to the journal of yesterday, and will be on your desks tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, reports back to the convention Delegate Proposal 1478, A proposal to provide for the distribution of federal funds and to guarantee against the denial of same to any person on account of race, religion, or national origin; with the recommendation that the proposal be referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

James K. Pollock, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the recommendation of the committee on referral. Any discussion? If not, all in favor please say aye. Opposed, no.

The recommendation is concurred in and it is so referred.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on administration, by Mr. De Vries, chairman, reports back to the convention Resolution 58, A resolution requesting authority and funds for the committee on executive branch to hold hearings in the city of Pontiac; without amendment, and with the recommendation that the resolution be adopted.

Walter DeVries, chairman.

For Resolution 58 as offered, see above, page 382.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, fellow delegates, this resolution has the unanimous recommendation of the committee on executive branch and the committee on administration, and authorizes a 5 man subcommittee to hold hearings in the city of Pontiac on Tuesday evening, next week, at a cost not to exceed $75.

Mr. President, I move the adoption of this resolution.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the resolution. Is there any discussion? If not, all in favor say aye. Those opposed, no.

The resolution is adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Brake, for the committee on finance and taxation, introduces Exclusion Report 2003, A report recommending the exclusion of article X, section 20.

D. Hale Brake, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2003 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 415.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The report will be referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Erickson, for the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, introduces Committee Proposal 10, A proposal to amend article I, section 2 of the present constitution pertaining to the seat of government at Lansing;

with the recommendation that it pass.

Claud R. Erickson, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 10 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 416.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Introduction, first reading and reference of proposals.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Sleder introduces

Delegate Proposal 1718, A proposal to clarify provisions for the control over highways and streets by local units and to delete reference to townships. Amends article VIII, section 28.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Mr. President, I move that we suspend the rules and dispense with the reading of the titles of the delegate proposals.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Elliott moves that the rules be suspended and the delegate proposals for introduction today be considered read, and that they be printed in the journal. Any discussion? Is there objection?

[Objection was heard]

The secretary will read.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. A. G. Elliott and Yeager introduce

Delegate Proposal 1719, A proposal to establish a method of election of candidates for governor and lieutenant governor and to establish their tenure of office. Amends article VI, section 1.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Hart introduces

Delegate Proposal 1720, A proposal for retaining the primary school fund. Amends article XI, sections 11 and 12.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Douglas introduces

Delegate Proposal 1721, A proposal to substitute specific tax limitations for certain units of government for the present section 21, article X. (The present 15 mill limitation).

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Austin introduces

Delegate Proposal 1722, A proposal regarding the qualifications of electors in any election. Amends article III.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Douglas introduces

Delegate Proposal 1723, A proposal for election of members of the board of governors for Wayne State University on a partisan basis at large. Amends article XI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Douglas introduces

Delegate Proposal 1724, A proposal for election of members of the board of regents for the University of Michigan on a partisan basis at large. Amends article XI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Douglas introduces

Delegate Proposal 1725, A proposal for election of members of the board of trustees for Michigan State University on a partisan basis at large. Amends article XI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Hart introduces

Delegate Proposal 1726, A proposal regarding the primary school system. Amends article XI, section 9.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Hart introduces

Delegate Proposal 1727, A proposal to provide a uniform rate of assessment on real property. Amends article X, section 7.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Hart introduces

Delegate Proposal 1728, A proposal to provide for equalization of assessments. Amends article X, section 8.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Hart introduces

Delegate Proposal 1729, A proposal relating to the election and duties of the superintendent of public instruction. Amends article XI, section 2.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Hart introduces

Delegate Proposal 1730, A proposal relating to the election and duties of the superintendent of public instruction. Amends article XI, section 2.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Hart introduces Delegate Proposal 1731, A proposal to establish a separate governing board for Central Michigan University. Amends article XI, section 6, and adds a new section.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Hart introduces Delegate Proposal 1732, A proposal for election of a partisan state board of education at large and duties thereof. Amends article XI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Hart introduces Delegate Proposal 1733, A proposal to establish a separate governing board for Grand Valley State College. Amends article XI, section 6.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Hart introduces Delegate Proposal 1734, A proposal to establish a separate governing board for Western Michigan University. Amends article XI, section 6, and adds a section.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Hart introduces Delegate Proposal 1735, A proposal to establish a separate governing board for Ferris Institute. Amends article XI, section 6.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Hart introduces Delegate Proposal 1736, A proposal to establish a separate governing board for the Michigan College of Mining and Technology. Amends article XI, section 6.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Hart introduces Delegate Proposal 1737, A proposal to establish a separate governing board for Eastern Michigan University. Amends article XI, and adds a new section.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Hart introduces Delegate Proposal 1738, A proposal to establish a separate governing board for Northern Michigan College. Amends article XI, section 6, and adds a new section.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Everett introduces

Delegate Proposal 1739, A proposal to provide for the appointment of supreme court justices by the governor with public notice; with senate approval; and removal thereof. Amends article VII, section 2.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Suzore introduces

Delegate Proposal 1740, A proposal to retain home rule and provide for municipal courts. Amends and retains article VIII, sections 20 through 29.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Suzore introduces Delegate Proposal 1741, A proposal to provide governmental immunity in tort actions. Amends article XVI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Walker introduces

Delegate Proposal 1742, A proposal to provide for statewide equalization to be performed by a board subject to mandamus. Amends article X, section 8.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Walker introduces Delegate Proposal 1743, A proposal to earmark funds in an equal amount for each pupil attending schools in the state with the existing debt payable from existing school districts, and for statewide school assessments. Amends article XI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Walker introduces Delegate Propoal 1744, A proposal to allow any municipality, by a majority vote, to assess a municipal income tax on its residents. Amends article VIII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on local government.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Walker introduces Delegate Proposal 1745, A proposal allowing property to be condemned for the highest assessed valuation of any 1 year of the last 5 years. Amends article XIII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Walker introduces Delegate Proposal 1746, A proposal to assess property at 100 per cent of cash sale value. Amends article X, section 7.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Walker introduces Delegate Proposal 1747, A proposal to assess buildings or other improvements at replacement value. Amends article X.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Walker introduces Delegate Proposal 1748, A proposal to eliminate existing school districts and in their place form countywide school districts. Amends article XI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Walker introduces Delegate Proposal 1749, A proposal placing any justice court, municipal court or like court under the supervision of the circuit court in that district. Amends article VII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Walker introduces Delegate Proposal 1750, A proposal to assess land at a rate higher than improvements. Amends article X.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs Leppien and Shackleton introduce

Delegate Proposal 1751, A proposal to appoint a state health commissioner. Amends article VI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs Van Dusen and Romney introduce

Delegate Proposal 1752, A proposal to provide for a supreme court to be appointed by the governor to 8 year terms, justices to be elected to additional terms. Amends article VII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Boothby, Yeager, G. E. Brown, Knirk, Kirk, W. F. Hanna, Dehnke, A. G. Elliott, Rood, Lundgren, Plank, Donald Doty, J. A. Hannah and Blandford introduce

Delegate Proposal 1753, A proposal to provide for all standing committees of the legislature to hold open meetings and, upon demand, record all votes and other matters. Amends article V.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. W. F. Hanna introduces

Delegate Proposal 1754, A proposal to limit the privilege of candidates from libel and slander suits. Amends article II.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Buback, Leppien, Madar, A. G. Elliott, Baginski, Downs, Pellow, White, Stamm and Miss Hart introduce

Delegate Proposal 1755, A proposal to provide that all elections for state and local office shall be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November. Amends article III. Replaces Proposal 1406.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Gover introduces Delegate Proposal 1756, A proposal to provide for senate apportionment on a 1 to each district basis with additional senators for specified population increases. Amends article V, section 2.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative organization.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Boothby and J. B. Richards introduce

Delegate Proposal 1757, A proposal to provide for a 28 member senate, elected from single districts for 2 year terms. Amends article V, section 2.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative organization.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Boothby introduces

Delegate Proposal 1758, A proposal to provide for the diversion of a portion of the gasoline taxes for the enforcement of boating laws and regulations. Amends article X, section 22, and replaces Delegate Proposal 1672.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Blandford, Goebel, De Vries and Page introduce Delegate Proposal 1759, A proposal to reapportion the state senate and house of representatives. Replaces sections 2 and 3 of article V.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative organization.

Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hoxie, on behalf of the committee on legislative powers, offers Resolution 60, A resolution requesting the authority and funds for the committee on legislative powers to hold hearings in the cities of Grand Rapids and Detroit.

Following is Resolution 60 as offered:

Whereas, There is widespread interest in what should be included in the new constitution relative to the subject covered in article V, section 33 of the present constitution which now reads: "The legislature shall not authorize any lottery nor permit the sale of lottery tickets."; and

Whereas, Delegate proposals are now pending which would retain this provision; delete it entirely, leaving the entire field to legislative discretion; amend it to provide exemption for lotteries conducted by charitable or fraternal organizations, subject to a county referendum; or to amend the section by adding an exemption for controlled, legalized bingo for charitable purposes, after an approving vote in any city, village or township; and

Whereas, Individual delegates and the committee on legislative powers have received extensive and widely diversified correspondence on these matters; and

Whereas, Many persons and organizations have expressed a desire to be heard; now therefore be it

Resolved, That such hearings be held in Grand Rapids on December 18, 1961, and in Detroit on December 19, 1961, both hearings beginning at 7:00 p.m. in order to provide an opportunity for maximum participation of interested citizens in these areas in the consideration of these maters; and be it further

Resolved, That the convention appropriate necessary funds, not to exceed $300.00, to defray the cost of travel of the members of the committee and the committee clerk to and from Grand Rapids and Detroit, and other expenses necessary and incidental to the holding of these hearings.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on administration.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only resolution on file, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: The items on general orders are not in order for consideration until tomorrow.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule will hold a public hearing on natural resources this evening at 7:30 in committee rooms A and B. Claud R. Erickson, chairman.

The committee on administration will meet in the conference room today immediately following the session. Walter DeVries, chairman.

The committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E tomorrow morning at 8:30.

The committee on local government will meet in room A tomorrow from 8:30 until 9:40 a.m. Arthur Elliott, chairman.

All notices to delegates with reference to being heard on proposals referred to the committee on judicial branch must be returned not later than Monday evening, December 18, 1961. Robert J. Danhof, chairman.

The committee on legislative powers will meet in room H Thursday, December 14, 1961, at 3:00 p.m., or immediately following the session. T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

Mr. Brake requests the following announcement be read:

> In addition to the prescheduled meetings on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the committee on finance and taxation will meet from 6:00 until 7:50 p.m. on Monday, January 8, and at the same time on every other Monday in January; and it will likewise meet from 8:00 o'clock in the morning until 9:50 on Friday, January 5, and every other Friday in January. D. Hale Brake, chairman.

The committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections requests that attention be called to the composite calendar, page 2, the committee meeting at 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning, Friday, in room F for the final consideration of the report.

The secretary has been requested to make the following announcement:

The document room is being swamped with requests for complete sets of delegate proposals, resolutions and so forth. If the immediate filling of these requests is important, the document room people will do their best. If a little time over the coming weekend or over the holiday can be granted, it will be greatly appreciated. Please indicate on your request how soon it needs to be filled.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I have been asked to announce the subcommittee on libraries of the education committee will hold a hearing in committee room J immediately after the session today and, further, I would like to announce that the time for the full education committee meeting tomorrow morning in room J has been changed from 8:30, as appears on the composite calendar, to 9:00 o'clock.

SECRETARY CHASE: The following requests for absence with leave have been filed:

Mr. Perras requests leave from the session of tomorrow because of a prior commitment; and Mr. Donald Doty requests leave from tomorrow's session.

Mr. Pollock, chairman of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, requests leave of absence for the entire committee from the session of December 18 and the session of December 19 for the purpose of conducting a committee hearing in Detroit, December 18, and in Saginaw and Flint, December 19.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the leaves will be granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: That completes the business for today.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The chair recognizes Mr. Dell.

MR. DELL: Mr. President, I move that we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. All in favor say aye. Those opposed, no.

We are adjourned until 10:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

[Whereupon at 2:25 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 10:00 o'clock a.m., Friday, December 15, 1961.]

FORTY-FOURTH DAY

Friday, December 15, 1961, 10:00 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation this morning will be given by the Reverend Father John Steffey, secretary to the Bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Lansing.

Will you please rise.

REVEREND FATHER STEFFEY: We pray Thee, O almighty God, through whom authority is rightly administered, laws are enacted and judgment decreed, assist with Thy holy spirit of counsel and fortitude the delegates to this constitutional convention, that their deliberations may be conducted in righteousness and that their conclusions be eminently useful to the people of the state of Michigan. Inspire them with due respect for the dignity of the human person and for the common good. Let the divine light of Thy wisdom shine forth in all the proceedings and laws framed for our rule and government. We beg Thee, O God, to shower Thy choicest blessings on this convention and its delegates. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. All present, please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The machine is now locked, and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave:

Mr. Hodges, from today's session; Mr. Lundgren, to attend a business conference in Chicago; and Mr. Romney, to attend important church business in Chicago.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Cudlip, Davis, Donald Doty, Goebel, J. A. Hannah, Hodges, Lundgren, Page, Perras, Radka, Romney, Sablich and Wood.

Absent without leave: Mr. W. F. Hanna.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, Mr. Hanna is excused.

Your president is not in good shape, so with your permission I would like to ask Mr. Hutchinson, vice president, to preside at this morning's session.

[Whereupon, Vice President Hutchinson assumed the Chair to preside over the convention.]

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on administration, by Mr. DeVries, chairman, recommends to the president for his consideration the appointment of the following persons to the constitutional convention staff:

Dr. John White as research consultant and Mr. Harold Arnow as research assistant.

Walter DeVries, chairman.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the recommendations will be concurred in.

SECRETARY CHASE: The president appoints, pursuant to authorization by the convention, and with the approval of the committee on administration, the aforenamed persons to the respective positions indicated.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the appointments are approved.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on administration, by Mr. DeVries, chairman, reports back to the convention, Resolution 60, A resolution requesting the authority and funds for the committee on legislative powers to hold hearings in the cities of Grand Rapids and Detroit; without amendment, and with the recommendation that the resolution be adopted.

Walter DeVries, chairman.

For Resolution 60 as offered, see above, page 395.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President and fellow delegates, this resolution has the approval of the legislative powers committee and the unanimous recommendation of the committee on administration, which will allow the committee on legislative powers to conduct hearings in the cities of Grand Rapids and Detroit on proposals relative to legalized gambling. The cost of the hearings and travel are not to exceed $300.

The committee on administration wishes the committee on legislative powers a lot of luck in this enterprise, and moves the adoption of this resolution.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the adoption of the resolution. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed?

The ayes have it, and the resolution is adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the standing committee reports on file.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Introduction, first reading and reference of proposals.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Ostrow and Walker introduce Delegate Proposal 1760, A proposal to provide a new financial article. Amends article X.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Marshall introduces

Delegate Proposal 1761, A proposal relating to powers of the lieutenant governor. Amends article VI, section 19.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Marshall introduces

Delegate Proposal 1762, A proposal to amend the provisions with respect to the requirement that legislation originate in either house. Amends article V, section 19.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Marshall introduces

Delegate Proposal 1763, A proposal to amend the provisions with respect to the eligibility to office of federal office holders. Amends article V, section 6.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Lesinski and Marshall introduce

Delegate Proposal 1764, A proposal to delete sections 31 and 32 of article V.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Lesinski and Marshall introduce

Delegate Proposal 1765, A proposal to eliminate article V, section 27.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Lesinski and Marshall introduce

Delegate Proposal 1766, A proposal to delete article V, section 11.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Marshall introdues

Delegate Proposal 1767, A proposal to combine article V, sections 21 and 24, relative to the legislative process.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Marshall introduces

Delegate Proposal 1768, A proposal to amend the provisions relative to succession to the governorship by the lieutenant governor. Amends article VI.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Marshall introduces

Delegate Proposal 1769, A proposal relating to compensation for the governor, secretary of state, state treasurer, lieutenant governor and attorney general. Amends article VI.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Marshall introduces

Delegate Proposal 1770, A proposal to delete section 20 of article VI.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Marshall introduces

Delegate Proposal 1771, A proposal to amend article VI, section 5.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Mahinske and Snyder introduce

Delegate Proposal 1772, A proposal to include representation in the inherent political power of the people. Amends article II, section 1.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Mahinske introduces

Delegate Proposal 1773, A proposal to provide for succession to the office of governor, and to provide for election of the presiding officer of the senate to replace the lieutenant governor. Amends article VI, sections 16, 17 and 19.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Mahinske and Snyder introduce

Delegate Proposal 1774, A proposal to define certain duties of the governor and of the attorney general. Amends article VI.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Mahinske and Snyder introduce

Delegate Proposal 1775, A proposal to declare the constitution the fundamental law of the state and to grant any citizen the right to seek redress if the constitution is abused by any public official. Amends article II.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Mahinske and Binkowski introduce

Delegate Proposal 1776, A proposal to remove and recall public officials who are chronic absentees from duty. Amends article III.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Mahinske introduces

Delegate Proposal 1777, A proposal to require the legislature to abolish secret sessions, to construe publication to permit reproduction processes other than printing, to delete the section covering the sale of real estate and to define jurors as citizens. Amends article V, sections 16, 18, 22, 25, 27 and 31.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Norris introduces

Delegate Proposal 1778, A proposal relating to election, term and duties of state officers. Amends article VI, section 1.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Norris introduces

Delegate Proposal 1779, A proposal for appointment of a state board of education by the governor, and duties thereof. Amends article XI.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Norris introduces

Delegate Proposal 1780, A proposal to retain in the Michigan constitution the present content of sections 27 and 28 of article X.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Norris introduces

Delegate Proposal 1781, A proposal to empower the legislature to contribute to the support of community colleges and to place them under the general supervision of the state board of education. Amends article XI.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Norris introduces

Delegate Proposal 1782, A proposal for election of a nonpartisan state board of education at large, and duties thereof. Amends article XI.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Norris introduces

Delegate Proposal 1783, A proposal for retaining the primary school interest fund. Amends article X, section 1.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Stopczynski introduces

Delegate Proposal 1784, A proposal to establish a governor's consumer council and to describe its responsibilities and duties and the manner in which funds are to be appropriated for it. Amends article VI.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Ford and G. E. Brown introduce Delegate Proposal 1785, A proposal to give township option in the creation of the office of the justice of the peace. Amends article VII.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Ford introduces Delegate Proposal 1786, A proposal to reenact section 1 of article VII and to provide for local courts locally elected, the judges of which be paid a salary in lieu of fees and to empower the supreme court to establish qualifications for nonlawyer justices of the peace. Amends article VII, section 1.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Downs introduces Delegate Proposal 1787, A proposal to allow the governor to organize all administrative branches of government. Amends article VI.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Downs introduces Delegate Proposal 1788, A proposal to establish a state department of public welfare. Amends article VI.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Downs and Lesinski introduce

Delegate Proposal 1789, A proposal to provide for a continuing constitutional revision committee. Amends article XVII.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Walker introduces Delegate Proposal 1790, A proposal to vest the judicial power in the supreme court, a court of appeals, circuit courts, and such other courts as the legislature may establish by law. Amends article VII, section 1.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Binkowski introduces

Delegate Proposal 1791, A proposal to define eligibility for judicial office. Replaces article VII, section 17.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Binkowski introduces

Delegate Proposal 1792, A proposal to define judicial vacation of office. Amends article VII, section 19.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Binkowski introduces

Delegate Proposal 1793, A proposal to amend article VII, on appointment of successors.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Binkowski introduces

Delegate Proposal 1794, A proposal to amend article VII, on dissenting opinions.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Binkowski introduces

Delegate Proposal 1795, A proposal relating to the superintending powers of the supreme court. Amends article VII, section 4.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Ford and Hodges introduce

Delegate Proposal 1796, A proposal to provide for the size, election, and tenure of the state supreme court. Replaces article VII, section 2.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Ford and Hodges introduce

Delegate Proposal 1797, A proposal to provide for terms of the supreme court. Replaces article VII, section 3.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Ford and Hodges introduce

Delegate Proposal 1798, A proposal to provide for establishment by the supreme court of general rules for practice and procedure in the state courts. Amends article VII, section 5.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Ford and Hodges introduce

Delegate Proposal 1799, A proposal to authorize one supreme court to appoint its administrative staff and prescribe duties for such staff. Amends article VII, section 6.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Ford introduces Delegate Proposal 1800, A proposal to provide for the nomination and election of judges of the court of appeals. Adds a new section to article VII.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Ford introduces Delegate Proposal 1801, A proposal to amend article VII, section 8.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Ford introduces Delegate Proposal 1802, A proposal to define the jurisdiction of the court of appeals. Adds a new section to article VII.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Ford and Ostrow introduce

Delegate Proposal 1803, A proposal to amend article VII, on nomination of judicial officers.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Boothby, Gust, Batchelor and J. B. Richards introduce

Delegate Proposal 1804, A proposal to liberalize Delegate Proposal 1216 by the inclusion of new language.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Gust introduces Delegate Proposal 1805, A proposal to prevent escheat of property prior to final judicial process although the statutory limitation has expired. Amends article XI, section 12.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Gust introduces Delegate Proposal 1806, A proposal to require closed party primary elections. Amends article III.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Boothby, Gust, Batchelor and J. B. Richards introduce

Delegate Proposal 1807, A proposal to liberalize Delegate Proposal 1126 by the inclusion of new language. Amends article II.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Boothby, Gust, Batchelor and J. B. Richards introduce

Delegate Proposal 1808, A proposal to liberalize Delegate Proposal 1175 by the inclusion of new language. Amends article V.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Boothby, J. B. Richards, Gust and Batchelor introduce

Delegate Proposal 1809, A proposal to provide that contributions to political parties shall not be a condition of employment. Amends article II.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Miss Donnelly introduces

Delegate Proposal 1810, A proposal to provide for a minimum of 8 years' admission to practice for eligibility to be a circuit judge. Amends article VII, section 9.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Bledsoe and Garvin introduce

Delegate Proposal 1811, A proposal to permit the governor to issue executive orders to carry out his existing powers. Amends article VI, section 3.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. A. G. Elliott and Yeager introduce

Delegate Proposal 1812, A proposal to establish a commission on reapportionment and to provide for its membership and duties. Amends article V, section 4.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on legislative organization.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. A. G. Elliott and Van Dusen introduce Delegate Proposal 1813, A proposal to provide for governing boards for institutions of higher learning. Amends article XI.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee on education.

Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I wonder if the convention and, most specifically, the committee chairmen, could be advised as to when the delegate proposals now pending in research and drafting will be completed?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: The secretary has been informed that the research and drafting people have completed all of the delegate proposals that were filed with them before the deadline of 5:00 o'clock on December 1, and they are now in the possession of the delegates.

MR. BENTLEY: In other words, Mr. President, it is contemplated that all delegate proposals will be introduced at the convention at the latest sometime next week?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair would so contemplate. It would be in order to move to set a deadline on that, Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: I don't think that is necessary, Mr. President, in view of the fact that we have a deadline, I believe, of January for the hearing of proposals. But I'm sure that many of the chairmen share my own feelings that we are anxious to get these delegate proposals before us, and give the delegates who introduced them a chance to be heard, if they so desire. Thank you.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, we will return to the order of communications from state officers. The Chair hears no objection.

SECRETARY CHASE: We have the following message from the governor, addressed to the convention:

To the constitutional convention delegates,

Constitution Hall, Lansing, December 15, 1961.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Friday, December 15, 1961, marks the anniversary of the adoption — 170 years ago — of the first 10 amendments to the federal constitution which have come to be known as the bill of rights.

This national recognition of the meaning to democracy of the federal bill of rights offers the opportunity to call the attention of the citizens of Michigan to the protections afforded them by the declaration of rights of our own state constitution. This public recognition can result in wider interest and attention to the activities of the constitutional convention directed to strengthening our political and civil rights.

The drafting of a declaration of rights that will incorporate the distilled wisdom of the past and provide for the protection of individual rights emerging from the social and economic ferment of the twentieth century could very well be the most important and lasting contribution that this convention can make to the preservation of the democratic ideal.

Other provisions of the fundamental law of the state affect some of us in our relation to state government and the services it provides for us. But the rights guaranteed by the declaration of rights affect all of us.

Action by the state to buttress the protection of the individual against the possible tyrannies of bureaucracy, exploitation, discrimination, invasion of privacy, and unequal access to justice will give strong support to the revitalization of our state.

Affirmative support for state action to provide individuals — as a matter of right — constitutional protection from the most devastating effects of the changes which to date have marked our development as a highly organized, impersonal, urbanized, industrial society will do much to strengthen the ties between the people of Michigan and their state government.

To the extent that this constitution makes it possible for the state to meet the needs of its people, to that degree will it contribute to the infusion of new strength into our federal system — with the states being more nearly equal, working partners in this bold experiment to provide effective, democratic government. And it will provide a positive answer to those on both the left and on the right who say that democracy cannot work.

Man's struggle for constitutional government has been chronicled in the pages of history which record the great human and material sacrifices that marked the way. The symbol of victory has everywhere been the establishment of civil liberties.

At a time in history when the political faith and ideals of democracy are being threatened at home and abroad, it is especially fitting that we in Michigan use this opportunity — the writing of a new constitution — to restate our faith in the validity of these principles which were purchased at such a high price — and to apply them clearly, forcefully and succinctly to a state government serving all of Michigan's citizens in the twentieth century. We can establish a framework for government in Michigan which will, in the words of Justice Douglas, provide "security for the individual and freedom for the development of his talents."

While the federal bill of rights — especially through recent supreme court interpretation — stands as an important protector of individual rights, both historical practice and practical considerations seem to me to make it essential that we have a declaration of rights in our new constitution — a declaration which will have continuity with the past — and at the same time will provide an umbrella of constitutional protection for the emerging needs for individual guarantees and protections arising out of a changing society.

The role of the states as partners in our federal system has been a cause for concern on the part of many. Concern has been expressed about the centralization of power in Washington. In the eyes of some, the states have been becoming more and more junior partners in the federal system.

Part of this trend has been the result of the growing recognition of our role in a world in which the menace to freedom looms large. But another important reason for the trend has been the failure of our states to meet the needs of their citizens. In this they will not — as they should not — be denied if government is to function as an instrument of the people.

As Mr. Justice Holmes so well stated it, the states have an unusual opportunity to serve as laboratories for economic and social experimentation. And — if the states are to become vigorous and active partners in the federal system — then they are going to have to utilize the opportunities thus afforded to them. They are going to have to break new ground as they respond to the challenge of new ideas and new problems.

A declaration of rights for the '60s and into the foreseeable future must certainly recognize that the individual must not only have protection from the possible dangers of a police state, from arbitrary bureaucratic behavior, but also — in the words of Robert Hutchins — from the "remorseless tendency of the industrial system."

The political forms and freedom so dearly won by our forefathers must be maintained and strengthened. But we also must provide individual protection from the tyrannies they did not face.

In a society that is becoming more highly organized in groups, the proper expression of these group interests and activities must be harmonized with the urgent necessity to reassert the doctrine that the essential feature of democracy remains the status of the individual.

The state constitution should reflect our determination to achieve equal treatment of men and women, to enlarge their incentives, and to expand their opportunities for self development and self expression.

In the words of the president's commission on national goals, in their report issued last year, we must remove the "vestiges of religious prejudice, handicaps to women, and, most important, discrimination on the basis of race must be recognized as morally wrong, economically wasteful, and in many respects, dangerous."

Our state constitution should point out in unmistakable language that respect for the individual means respect for every individual. Not just those with whom we happen to agree.

We have achieved our present position of greatness because — as a people — we have rejected the idea that unpopular or controversial ideas or people must be throttled. We have long held that the market place offers the best test of ideas. And we have directed our efforts to the maintenance of fair competition in that arena.

The threat to our democratic institutions posed by those who seek to promote conformity by labels and who set themselves up as arbiters of what is and what is not "100 per cent American" is one that must be answered vigorously and affirmatively by a strong statement of principle in support of freedom.

I am certain that the convention has received many good suggestions of concepts that should be incorporated in a new declaration of rights.

I, personally, find myself in agreement with the tenor of the proposals in this vital area contained in the civil rights and national goals reports made under Presidents Roosevelt, Truman, and Eisenhower. And I note that many proposals incorporating these principles have been introduced by delegates to this convention.

But I would like to suggest that the approach to a new declaration of rights should be widened to include what to me seems an equally important facet of citizenship in the twentieth century — a bill of duties for the individual as a citizen.

For many of the rights that should be embodied in a new declaration of rights, it seems to me that there is an equal duty which we must accept as individuals — if these rights are to be meaningful. These, I submit, should be incorporated in a companion bill of duties.

For the right of freedom of speech, for example, there is a concurrent duty for every individual to be concerned about the fullest possible guarantee of the exercise of this right by others. When we acquiesce in any threat to the fullest exercise of freedom of speech, by that degree we impair the effectiveness of this guarantee.

When we remain quiet when the privacy of an individual is invaded by illegal means, by this lack of concern we, to that extent, undermine the strength which this guarantee affords members of a free society. We, also, thereby help to destroy the way of life which has been purchased for us — at such a high price — by our forefathers.

When we sit quietly by while equal access to justice, in fact, is not available to a defendant before the bar of justice, by that measure do we destroy the concept of justice so essential to individual freedom. By our failure to see our duty — in this instance to insure equal access, in fact — we impair the guarantee of equal justice, without which democracy is reduced to a hollow shell.

When we remain silent while fellow citizens are denied equal opportunity because of race or religion — when equal opportunity to vote, to be educated, to get a job, to buy a home, to adequate medical care, to fair pay, are denied our fellow men, then we fail to accept the duty that is ours as a member of a democratic society. Through such silence we subvert our way of life more effectively than those who would elicit our support for some foreign power or ideology.

When we fail to exercise our duty to see that the rights of all citizens are preserved and protected, then we become the hand maidens — knowingly or unknowingly — of the enemies of democracy.

This convention can write and the people will, I am certain, adopt a declaration of rights and a companion bill of duties that will provide a forceful answer to those of small mind and little faith in popular, democratic government.

Such a document should include the hard won principles of political and civil liberties that are part of our democratic heritage. It should also accept as "rights" those basic social and economic goals which meet the needs of Michigan citizens living in the twentieth century.

Acceptance of this challenge will demonstrate the vitality of our democratic system and enable Michigan to assume a role of leadership among the states. It will also make a significant contribution to the strengthening of our federal system.

We, in Michigan, have the opportunity to establish another benchmark in the history of the struggle to enhance the dignity of man.

John B. Swainson, governor.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The message will be referred to the secretary, and is ordered printed in the journal.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only communication, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Motions and resolutions.

Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, at the time that Exclusion Reports 2001 and 2002 were reported out to the convention, there had been no concurrent jurisdiction assigned on sections 14 and 15 of article VI. Our attention has been called to the fact that sections 6 and 7 of article V, which are being handled by the legislative powers committee, are closely related to these sections; and in order to develop a cooperative stand on these, I move, Mr. President, that Exclusion Reports 2001 and 2002 be referred to the committee on legislative powers for coordination.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Martin moves that Exclusion Reports 2001 and 2002 be referred to the committee on legislative powers. The question is upon the motion. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. The exclusion reports are so referred.

For Exclusion Reports 2001 and 2002, see above, page 380.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Stevens offers Resolution 61, A resolution that the constitutional convention recognize the significance of bill of rights day, Friday, December 15, 1961.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. President, I would like to move that the rules be suspended and the resolution be considered immediately.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Pollock moves that the rules be suspended for the immediate consideration of this resolution. Is there objection?

Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I do not rise to object, but I rise to ask a point of information of Professor Pollock. If you would give us some indication of the nature of the resolution, it would be helpful in considering whether or not there is objection to suspension of the rules.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Van Dusen, are you objecting to the suspension of the rules?

MR. VAN DUSEN: No, I'm not, Mr. President. All I'm doing is inquiring, before the rules are suspended, for what specific purpose it is asked that the rules be suspended.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Van Dusen reserves the right to object, and the Chair recognizes Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. President, this is a resolution from the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections to commemorate today as bill of rights day.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I have no objection, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the rules are suspended.

The secretary will read the resolution.

SECRETARY CHASE: Resolution 61, by Mr. Stevens, A resolution that the constitutional convention recognize the significance of bill of rights day, Friday, December 15, 1961.

Whereas, Friday, December 15, is officially recognized as "bill of rights day"; and

Whereas, The declaration of rights is recognized as an important part of our own state constitution; and

Whereas, Said declaration of rights contains most of the guarantees of the fundamental rights of the people, protecting them to a large degree against arbitrary, unjust and discriminatory acts by the state and its agencies; and

Whereas, It is our traditional American dedication to the freedom of all citizens, a concept enshrined in our bill of rights, which chiefly distinguishes us from the tyranny of totalitarian governments; and

Whereas, The freedom of speech, press, assembly, association and religious worship, the right of due process under law and equal treatment under law are a priceless heritage which must constantly be safeguarded; now therefore be it

Resolved, That this convention recognize the significance of bill of rights day as a symbol of human rights and the principle that governments are created for the benefit of mankind.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question being upon adoption of the resolution, the Chair recognizes Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. President, I should like to have a few moments to appropriately recognize this occasion, as chairman of the committee on rights, suffrage and elections, and on behalf, I hope, of the Michigan constitutional convention, to make appropriate remarks celebrating this occasion.

Public law 392 of the seventy-ninth Congress, signed by the president on May 29, 1946, has designated December 15 as bill of rights day and it invited "the people of the United States to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies and prayer." The people of Michigan, having selected us to reconsider the basic values and institutions of the state, are now in session on this auspicious occasion, and one of your committees, which I have the honor to represent, has been deliberating for months on the declaration of rights which it will soon present to this convention.

Because of the desirability of public hearings away from Lansing and the delay in the receipt of delegate proposals, our committee is unable on this day, as it had originally planned, to present to you our recommendations for that vital portion of our state constitution known as the declaration of rights. Due to these circumstances beyond our control, we shall have to delay the presentation of our proposals until a later day.

But we do not want this day to pass without reviewing before you, very briefly, the record which shows the development of our own declaration of rights in the Michigan constitution.

Bill of rights is the term commonly applied to the English statute of William and Mary of 1689, the most important of the parliamentary enactments by which legal effect was given to the revolution settlement. Its chief constitutional and political significance lies in the important limitations it imposed on the royal prerogative.

The bill of rights, although in form and legal effect an ordinary act of parliament, has always been ranked with magna carta and the petition of rights as one of the few fundamental documents of the English constitution.

In America, as earlier in England, a "revolution settlement" brought with it the apparent need for formulations of rights. But in this case the representatives of the people were drawing up constitutions for their newly created governments and were therefore enabled to guard more effectively against government encroachments on individual rights by embodying these rights in the constituent law itself rather than in the isolated acts of a purely legislative body. The first "bill of rights" in America after the outbreak of the revolution was that adopted by the Constitutional Convention of Virginia on June 12, 1776, to accompany the first Virginia constitution, which was agreed to about two weeks later. As adopted, it follows closely a draft, still in existence, made by George Mason, and 14 of its 16 articles are in substance his.

The first constitution of Pennsylvania, prefaced by a "declaration of rights" also of 16 articles, was completed on September 28, 1776, and was followed by those of Maryland, North Carolina, Vermont, Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

In the first constitution of New Jersey, of New York, of Georgia and of South Carolina, no distinct bill of rights appears, although somewhat similar safeguards are usually included in the body of the constitution.

In all subsequent state constitutions in the United States varying types of "bills" or "declarations" of rights are to be found, related in their general character to the early ones and usually following them rather closely in both form and substance.

The draft of the Constitution of the United States as completed by the assembly at Philadelphia in 1787 contained no distinct bill of rights. The debates in the several states on the ratification of the constitution, while disclosing a great difference of opinion as to the necessity for one, did indicate a widespread feeling that such a bill was required. Among the amendments proposed, the addition of a formal declaration of reserved rights was several times included. Hamilton argued with force against this in number 84 of the Federalist, but it was becoming evident that without the assurance of the addition of some such reservations a sufficient number of ratifications was unlikely to be obtained. As a consequence a resolution of the first congress which met under the new constitution in 1789 proposed 12 amendments, 10 of which received the requisite number of ratifications on December 15, 1791.

These first 10 amendments to the federal constitution, popularly known as the "bill of rights," and composed mainly of parts drawn from the earlier state bills of rights, forbid the government of the United States to do certain things and enjoin certain other things upon it.

All these restrictions affect the organs of the national government, not those of the several states, and many of them are identical with limitations originally imposed upon English kings.

But it was not alone the Constitution of the United States which was patterned after the bills of rights adopted in the American states before 1789. These were also the models for the famous French declaration of the rights of man and of the citizen, drawn up in 1789 and later combined with the Constitution of 1791, and for similar declarations in the constitutions of 1793 and 1795. From France these ideas spread throughout Europe and ultimately beyond. The Belgian Constitution of 1831, for example, contained a bill of rights, and after the revolution of 1848 the number of such constitutions increases. The revolutions and the creation of new states which accompanied or followed the world war naturally brought about the adoption of many new constitutions containing for the most part bills of rights on which the influence of the French declaration of 1789 is obvious. Among the most important is the Constitution of the new West German Republic of 1949.

The basic theory underlying the early bills of rights is a belief in the rights of individual men and in rights existing in the law of nature independent of states or their laws, as set forth especially in Locke's Second Treatise on Government (1690). Some of these rights were regarded as alienable and might be entrusted by a people to its government for due compensation, but there are others of which no man is ever capable of divesting himself or his posterity even by consent or for compensation; they are inalienable.

An instrument of government ought then to consist of two parts: a "frame" or form of government in which the first of these two kinds of rights, the alienable ones, are entrusted to the various organs of the state under proper safeguards for due compensation in the form of just and effective government; and a "bill of rights" enumerating the inalienable rights of the people which they cannot delegate to their government and upon which the latter is explicitly forbidden ever to infringe. Such was the theory.

Our earlier Michigan Constitutions of 1835, 1850 and 1908, faithfully followed the historical pattern which I have traced. Changes here and there in some details were made, but the basic substance of inalienable rights, declared to be basic and fundamental, remained substantially the same.

Today we are reviewing this impressive historical record to see if our present social and economic situation, and our juridical experience since 1908, require changes, adaptations, or additions to those sacred rights which have been handed down to us by our ancestors.

At a time when only a portion of the world enjoys the blessings of freedom, it is well for us, as the representatives of the free and sovereign commonwealth of Michigan, in convention assembled, to pause these few moments at least, in tribute to our ancestors and our sacred heritage.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Thank you, Dr. Pollock.

The question is upon the resolution. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed?

The resolution is adopted.

The Chair recognizes Miss Andrus.

MISS ANDRUS: Mr. President, I move that these remarks by Dr. Pollock from the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections be printed in the journal.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Miss Andrus moves that the remarks of Dr. Pollock, because of their historical content, be printed in the action journal. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed?

The motion prevails, and it is so ordered.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only resolution on file, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: General orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: Two items on the general orders calendar have been referred to committee. There are no general orders for the day.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on administration will meet in the conference room on Monday next at 7:30 p.m. Walter DeVries, chairman.

The committee on public information will meet in room 2 on Monday, December 18, immediately after the session. Ink White, chairman.

The committee on judicial branch will meet in room B, Tuesday, at 9:30. Robert J. Danhof, chairman.

The committee on legislative powers will meet in room H for a short meeting on Monday, immediately following the session. T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

The other committee announcements are in the composite calendar.

The secretary has been requested to read this announcement:

On your desk this morning is the book entitled, Poles in Michigan. These booklets have been given by Benjamin Stanczyk and have been placed through the courtesy of Delegate Frank Balcer and the historical society of Michigan. These books would be a valuable addition to any public library. Submitted by Roscoe Bonisteel.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Dr. Pollock

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. President, could I point out a mistake in the public hearing schedule? Instead of the hearing in Flint being on Wednesday afternoon, it is on Tuesday afternoon. Tuesday morning in Saginaw, and Tuesday afternoon in Flint. The hours and the place are correct, but not the day.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, composite calendar 41 shows the subcommittee on libraries of the education committee as meeting at 8:30 a.m. on Tuesday morning. I am informed by the chairman of the subcommittee that that is in error. The subcommittee on libraries will meet on Monday, immediately after the session of Monday night; and at the time of 8:30 a.m. on Tuesday there will be a meeting of the full education committee.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: The committee on executive branch will meet today, after the session, for a short meeting; and will meet Monday evening at 6:30 in committee room C. The committee members are requested to have their dinner first.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President, there was an error in the announcement that was just made relative to a meeting of the legislative powers committee immediately following the session Monday. That should have been immediately following today's session. There will be a short meeting of the members of the legislative powers committee immediately following the session today.

While I have the mike, Mr. President and fellow members, I would like to call your attention to the program of the public hearings to be held in Grand Rapids and Detroit. We are going to ask the cooperation of those delegates from the Grand Rapids area, as well as the Detroit area, to help us advise the people in that district of these 2 public hearings. The public hearing arranged in Grand Rapids by Delegate Koeze will be at the commission chambers Monday evening at the city hall, in the city of Grand Rapids. The public hearing in Detroit, arranged by Delegate Baginski, will be in the supervisor's room of the city-county building on Tuesday evening, at 7:00 o'clock.

Letters are going to be sent to various groups and organizations — church groups, legion groups, all types of organizations — that would be particularly interested in this subject. But, because of the shortness of time, we are going to ask the delegates from the Grand Rapids area as well as the delegates from the Detroit area, to cooperate and spread the news of these 2 public hearings in those respective districts. Thank you.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Are there any further announcements?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are the following requests for leave of absence:

Requests to be excused from the session of Monday: Messrs. G. E. Brown, Lawrence, Marshall, Snyder and Suzore.

Mr. Hoxie, as chairman, requests leave for the committee on legislative powers to be excused from the session of Monday for the purpose of conducting the committee hearing in Grand Rapids; and for the members of the committee on legislative powers, Messrs. Baginski and Murphy, to conduct committee hearings in Detroit on Tuesday.

Dr. Hannah has filed a request that the committee on legislative organization be excused from the session of Wednesday, for the purpose of conducting committee hearings in Kalamazoo and in Berrien Springs.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Is there objection to the several requests for leaves of absence? Hearing none, they will be granted; and they are granted.

Any further announcements? What is the pleasure of the convention?

Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, I move that the convention now adjourn.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The gentleman moves that the convention now adjourn. All those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The convention stands adjourned until Monday evening, December 18, at 8:00 p.m.

[Whereupon, at 10:55 o'clock a.m., the convention adjourned until 8:00 o'clock p.m., Monday, December 18, 1961.]

FORTY-FIFTH DAY

Monday, December 18, 1961, 8:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation tonight will be given by one of our own delegates, Walter DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Our Father in heaven, we thank Thee for the many blesings that are ours. In the week that lies ahead grant us continued clarity of mind and purpose that we may responsibly fulfill our tasks in this convention. Keep us Christian in our thoughts and actions as we attempt to implement Christian principles. Prevent us from becoming intolerant and undemocratic in the pursuit of tolerance and the goals of a democratic society. May we follow the mandate of Jesus Christ that in all things the work of God should be our first consideration, the welfare of our fellowmen second, and ourselves last. We ask this in the name of the Father, Son and the Holy Ghost. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. All present please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is now locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to the session this evening, the secretary received the following requests for leave: Messrs. Dehnke, Habermehl, McAllister and Wood, indefinitely due to illness; Mr. Gust had a speaking engagement that lasted longer than he expected. (laughter) He will be here later but asked to be excused at the opening of the session; and Mr. Norris, from tonight's session.

I have a communication from Mr. Romney:

> I have met with former President Hoover relative to his con-con visit. New York airport has grounded all planes due to bad weather and I am forced to take a train back. Please excuse my forced absence from tonight's session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Excused to conduct committee hearings: Messrs. Baginski, Beaman, Buback, Mrs. Butler, Messrs. Dade, Gadola, Habermehl, Mrs. Hatcher, Messrs. Hodges, Hoxie, Hubbs, Mrs. Koeze, Messrs. Kuhn, Leppien, Lesinski, Murphy, Norris, Perras, Pollock, Powell, Shaffer, Shanahan, Stevens, White and Youngblood.

Absent with leave: Messrs. G. E. Brown, Dehnke, Gust, Lawrence, Marshall, McAllister, Romney, Snyder, Suzore and Wood.

Absent without leave: Messrs. Krolikowski and Lundgren.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the delegates are excused.

We should recognize tonight that 2 of our committees are out of Lansing for hearings, which accounts for a great deal of absenteeism.

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Brake, for the committee on finance and taxation, introduces Committee Proposal 11, A proposal to provide for care and control of state funds, accounting for public moneys, audits, and publication of reports, and covering the general subject matter found in sections 15, 16, 17, 18 and 13 of article X of the 1908 constitution;

with the recommendation that it pass.

D. Hale Brake, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 11 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 416.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only standing committee report, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Introduction, first reading and reference of proposals.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Lesinski, Krolikowski and Mahinske introduce Delegate Proposal 1814, A proposal to change the power of married women to devise and bequeath property. Amends article XVI, section 8.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mrs. Daisy Elliott and Mr. Young introduce

Delegate Proposal 1815, A proposal to amend article V, section 19.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mrs. Daisy Elliott and Messrs. Young and Greene introduce Delegate Proposal 1816, A proposal to prohibit the offering and giving of bribes and acceptance thereof by public officers. Amends article XVI by adding a section.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mrs. Daisy Elliott and Mr. Young introduce

Delegate Proposal 1817, A proposal to provide for the designation of terms of court for the supreme court by court rule. Amends article VII, section 3.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Suzore introduces

Delegate Proposal 1818, A proposal to provide that the present legislative establishment of school districts be retained and protected in the constitution. Amends article XI.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on education.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Suzore introduces

Delegate Proposal 1819, A proposal to provide that consideration be given to the more equitable representation in the legislature of Wayne county outside of the city of Detroit. Amends article V.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative organization.

I might say that all of the delegate proposals that were presented before the deadline are now back in the hands of the delegates from the drafting room. You delegates who have them, please see that they are turned in immediately so this phase can be completed.

Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, I move that the 2 matters that are eligible for general orders for tonight's consideration be postponed to Thursday of this week.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Brake that the 2 items on general orders for tonight be postponed to Thursday of this week. Any discussion? If not, all in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[The 2 items mentioned above were Exclusion Report 2003 and Committee Proposal 10.]

Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. President, I would like to inquire, was there a motion before this body that we would be in session at 10:00 o'clock Thursday or 2:00 o'clock Thursday?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase will make an explanation.

SECRETARY CHASE: The secretary would like to point out that on October 4, the second day of the convention, on the recommendation of the committee on permanent organization and rules, the time of the daily sessions was set. That time was, Mondays at 8:00 p.m., Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays at 2:00 p.m., and Fridays at 10:00 a.m., unless otherwise ordered by the convention. That order has not been changed and under the present schedule the convention will meet Thursday at 2:00 o'clock.

The secretary would also like to suggest that when the time comes for adjournment, it is not necessary to make any other than the simple motion that we adjourn because under this agreement that has been adopted by the convention, the time is automatically set for the session each day.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders of the day have just been taken care of.

Announcements.

Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Excuse me, Mr. President. Are we still under "motions?"

PRESIDENT NISBET: We can be.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Thank you. At this time, then, Mr. President, I would move that the convention allow me to introduce a delegate proposal.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Binkowski that he be allowed to introduce a delegate proposal. Any discussion?

Mr. Walker.

MR. WALKER: Mr. President, I request a record roll call vote.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, I would like to inquire whether the proposal that is offered now for introduction is one that was filed with the drafting division on or before the first day of December.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. President and Mr. Hutchinson, no, sir, it was not.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: I just wonder what the proposal is about. I think the delegate should inform us what kind of a proposal he intends to present here.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the secretary will indicate.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Binkowski's proposal as laid on the desk proposes the following or its substance as a part of the constitution:

> Citizens shall have the right to organize, except in military organizations not under the supervision of the state, and except for purposes of resisting the duly constituted authority of this state or of the United States. Public employees shall have the right, through representatives of their own choosing, to present to and make known to the state, or any of its political subdivisions or agencies, their grievances and proposals. Persons in private employment shall have the right to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Is the demand for the yeas and nays seconded? Those in favor, please rise.

There are not a sufficient number up.

The question is on the motion of Mr. Binkowski. Those in favor, please say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion does not prevail.

Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: I have the following announcements of committee meetings:

The committee on administration will meet in the conference room tomorrow, Tuesday, at 1:15 p.m. Walter De Vries, chairman.

The committee on executive branch will meet tonight immediately after the session.

The committee on legislative powers will meet in the supervisors room of the city-county building in Detroit tomorrow, Tuesday, at 7:00 p.m. on the subject of lotteries.

The committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E tomorrow at 8:30 a.m. D. Hale Brake, chairman.

The chairman of the committee on judicial branch has requested that emphasis be given to the following announcement which is on the composite calendar. Item 2 under Tuesday, December 19: committee on judicial branch will meet in room B at 9:30 a.m. Note the change in time. Sylvester Smith, president-elect of the American bar association, will appear.

Mr. A. G. Elliott, the chairman of the committee on local government, moves that the subcommittee appointments made to date within the committee on local government be considered read and published in the daily journal.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they will be published in the daily journal.

Following are the subcommittee assignments for the committee on local government:

Legislative report
- McLogan, chairman
- Mrs. Cushman
- L. W. Richards

Constitutional matters
- Farnsworth, chairman
- Tweedie
- Ford

Concurrent jurisdiction, article VIII, section 18
- Ford, chairman
- Radka
- Tweedie

Concurrent jurisdiction, article XIII, section 5
- Gover, chairman
- Mrs. Cushman

Township government
- Radka, chairman
- Farnsworth
- Ford
- Suzore

City government
- McCauley, chairman
- Dell

Tweedie
L. W. Richards

County government
Mrs. Judd, chairman
Baginski
Finch
McLogan
Figy

Metropolitan areas and intergovernmental relations
Allen, chairman
Brake
Sharpe
Mrs. Cushman

Annexation and consolidation, and miscellaneous provisions
Follo, chairman
Gover
Batchelor
Thomson
Buback

Public utilities
Sleder, chairman
Mrs. Hatcher
Madar
J. B. Richards

SECRETARY CHASE: The secretary has placed in the box of each of the delegates in the mailroom a memo for your assistance, entitled, For Chairmen of Committee of the Whole, which spells out in detail the procedure if and when you are called upon to preside as chairman. In the event you are not, you can familiarize yourselves with the processes that ordinarily will occur in the committee of the whole.

There are no other announcements, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I move we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. We are adjourned until 2:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

[Whereupon, at 8:15 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned to Tuesday, December 19, 1961, at 2:00 o'clock p.m.]

FORTY-SIXTH DAY

Tuesday, December 19, 1961, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

The invocation today will be given by one of our own delegates, Lee Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Father, we accept the scriptural promise that if we acknowledge You in all our ways, You will direct our work. We do look to You for guidance in all our affairs. We ask for wisdom in search of truth and justice. Give us strength to never compromise principle. Grant to us, however, understanding of our fellow man so that we may seek accord. Remove selfishness from our lives. In our work let us always keep foremost those rights that flow from You. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The machine is now locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Excused to conduct committee hearings were Messrs. Baginski, Beaman, Buback, Mrs. Butler, Messrs. Dade, Gadola, Mrs. Hatcher, Messrs. Hodges, Hubbs, Leppien, Murphy, Norris, Pollock, Shaffer, Shanahan, Stevens and White.

Absent with leave: Messrs. Dehnke, McAllister and Wood.

Absent without leave: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on style and drafting, by Mr. Cudlip, chairman, submits Report 1 of that committee, reporting back to the convention the following committee proposal, recommending that the style and form be approved:

Committee Proposal 1, A proposal pertaining to the inclusion of section 1 of article XI in the constitution.

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged.

William B. Cudlip, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The committee proposal will be placed on second reading for tomorrow.

Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. President, in view of the fact that the committee on legislative organization will be holding hearings outside of Lansing tomorrow, I would like to move to postpone this until Thursday.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Faxon.

Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, it is a matter of personal irrelevance to me whether this matter is debated Wednesday or Thursday, but in view of the fact that we already have several matters before the convention scheduled for Thursday, I am a little surprised that my friend, Jack Faxon, is reluctant to return home for the Christmas holidays. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, with respect to this particular committee proposal, I spoke to Mr. Cudlip a number of times, pointing out to him that, in my opinion, there is a conflict of language between the present language of article II, the bill of rights, sections 1 and 3, together with other language that has been proposed to be incorporated in this article and the committee proposal, and that one of the duties of the style and drafting committee is to determine whether there are any such conflicts. Mr. Cudlip agreed that I should be given an opportunity to appear before the style and drafting committee in order to speak on that subject. He guaranteed me twice, on 2 different occasions, that he would not submit this committee proposal to the floor without giving me an opportunity to speak.

I therefore move that this committee proposal be returned to the style and drafting committee with instructions to hold it until they have had an opportunity to examine the question of whether there is, in fact, any such conflict with the bill of rights.

PRESIDENT NISBET: A motion to postpone to a day certain takes priority over Mr. Nord's motion to commit.

Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. President, as you all realize, this was the first proposal referred to style and drafting. The attitude of style and drafting committee was simply that we have nothing, of course, to do with meaning, and we couldn't improve on the language. The disposition of the matter obviously is before the members of this convention. We disposed of this matter some time ago, and my remarks now are just for the record.

On 2 or 3 occasions Chairman Bentley spoke about the matter. We said we have no particular desires in this case except that we have decided what we should do within our function, and I was advised by Mr. Nord and by Mr. Bentley that it should be held there, and I said, "That is all right. We will hold it there for awhile."

The last understanding I had — and if I am wrong, I am sorry — I was told by the chairman of the committee on education that Mr. Nord and Mr. Gust and perhaps some others would be witnesses before their committee a couple of days ago, and that after they appeared before the committee on education, the matter would be resolved. The witnesses were heard, as I understand it. And when the chairman of the committee on education told our committee that witnesses had been heard and it was now in order, if we were ready, to report the matter to the floor. I assumed that all of the conflict had been resolved. And so this morning in the order of business, we sent the matter to the secretary's office.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, what Mr. Cudlip says is basically correct. We heard several witnesses within the past few days who wished to be heard on this subject.

Following the final witness — a member of our committee, Mr. Faxon — only yesterday afternoon I asked the full committee whether there was any disposition on the part of anyone to further delay the style and drafting committee from bringing this matter to the floor. Finding no such objection, I then notified Mr. Cudlip that it was the intention and desire of our committee that his committee would proceed, as they have done.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, I would like to point out several inaccuracies in Mr. Cudlip's statement. First of all, I have a letter from him in which he stated that I could speak before his committee on this subject, and it has nothing to do with whether or not I appear before Mr. Bentley's committee, because the question is a question of conflict between article II, the bill of rights, and this Committee Proposal 1. Obviously this can't be cleared up by appearing before the education committee. That can only be cleared up after 2 things happen:

1. The bill of rights is reported to the committee on style and drafting; and

2. They have had an opportunity to determine whether I am right or wrong in saying there is a conflict.

Further, when Mr. Cudlip was reported as intending to bring this on the floor previously about a week ago, I spoke to him about it and reminded him that he had made a commitment to me in writing that I would be given an opportunity to speak before his committee. He remembered it, and he said to me — and I quote: "I will not put this on the floor until I have a release of Mr. Bentley and of you."

I said, "I don't want you to wait for me to release it, but I want you to give me an opportunity to speak."

He said, "You will be sure to have an opportunity to speak before my committee."

Now I wish that I can have an opportunity to speak. And it seems to me there is no reason why we have to ask the committee a question, when this comes on the floor, whether they have made a determination, a finding of fact that there is no conflict.

I therefore adhere to my position that this should be rereferred to the committee.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Faxon that this be postponed until Thursday.

Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, I think that in a deliberative body of this nature, we should have a maximum discussion at the committee level and get as many questions as possible resolved at the committee level so that we will then have only the main key issues in the committee of the whole.

I personally regret if there has been any misunderstanding on people appearing before a committee. However, I think that if a committee does not provide a maximum opportunity to clear up questions in that committee, then the only recourse is to use up the time of the whole convention and resolve the questions in the committee of the whole.

Personally, I would rather see the committee of the whole used only for those questions that cannot be resolved within the various substantive or technical committees, but I do think there is an obligation to a delegate who does not have the opportunity to have his presentation heard within the smaller committee, that then his only resort is to use the committee of the whole for that function.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Faxon that consideration of Committee Proposal 1, now on order of second reading, be postponed until Thursday, December 21. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion does not prevail.

The question is now on Mr. Nord's motion that this matter be rereferred to the style and drafting committee. Is there any further discussion?

Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: Mr. President, it doesn't seem to me that Mr. Nord's point is valid. As I understand it, his point is, as far as substance is concerned, that there is a conflict between this preamble of article XI and section 3 of article II.

It happens that I am chairman of the subcommittee of the education committee responsible for this part of article XI, and we are in the process of giving consideration to the suggestions that have been made for additions to the preamble, and we have also given consideration to this question of whether there is a conflict between the preamble and section 3 of article II.

It was our deliberate conclusion — and unanimous conclusion — as we reviewed the two, that there was not the conflict that Dr. Nord speaks of, and that this language in the preamble should be in article XI and that it would be unwise to leave out of article XI the language in the preamble in that there is no conflict and that there is a need for this language in the article on education.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, I am puzzled how anyone is in the position to affirm in a deliberative manner that there is no conflict between Committee Proposal 1 and another committee proposal which we do not even have the language of. How do you know what it will look like when it comes to the floor? There have been proposals to amend it. Maybe it will be amended. It might even be amended on the floor. You won't be able to determine whether there is a conflict until you have two things. How can you determine that there is no conflict when you have only one thing before you? I can't understand how that can be.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: That was not the point and that was not what I said. Your point was there was a conflict between the present section 3 and the preamble that has been submitted for approval, and it was on that basis that I said that our committee had concluded that this language in the preamble was needed in the constitution and in the part relating to education, and that it should be in without regard to the facts that you are raising.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, the discussion by the 2 delegates has, I believe, demonstrated the very point I made; namely, that if a delegate requests the opportunity to appear before a committee for some reason or other — perhaps a misunderstanding — and does not have that opportunity, then we end up using the time on the floor discussing what more appropriately should be screened through the committee. And I believe the chairman of the education committee had pointed out that there had been full opportunity for discussion there. Nobody is questioning that. But when the delegate, Mr. Nord, had asked for the chance there, I feel that it would be good wisdom and good judgment to see that he was afforded that opportunity, and perhaps in the committee hearing these problems could be resolved so that we could use our plenary sessions or our committee of the whole to discuss only those problems we have not been able to resolve in the smaller working committees. I support Dr. Nord.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, just a brief statement regarding the rule which has recently been adopted by the convention on the subject of jurisdiction. On this particular section, no concurrent jurisdiction with any other committee is listed. The only jurisdiction is in the education committee.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. President, I would like to call a point of order. Rule 24, the times a delegate may speak on the subject; the times a person introducing a motion may speak and the times the chairman may speak on a subject.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Nord that this be rereferred to the committee on style and drafting. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails and Committee Proposal 1 is rereferred to the committee on style and drafting.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, reports back to the convention Committee Proposal 8, A proposal to provide that the governor may convene the legislature on extraordinary occasions. Amends article VI, section 7; without amendment and with the recommendation that it pass.

Walter DeVries, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 8, the reasons submitted in support thereof and prior action thereon, see above, page 375.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bentley, for the committee on education introduces Exclusion Report 2004, A report recommending the exclusion of article XI, section 13.

Alvin M. Bentley, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2004 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 434.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on administration, by Mr. DeVries, chairman, submits the following report for the information of the delegates:

Convention stationery for use of individual delegates in some instances is being used at a rate far in excess of anticipated needs, and the committee on administration requests the cooperation of delegates in conserving paper.

No additional personally imprinted letterheads will be ordered for delegates, but a supply of convention letterheads and envelopes is being ordered. If delegates need additional stationery, they may obtain this type through the president's office.

If any delegate has need of or desires the personally imprinted letterhead, he can order this at his own expense through the secretary's office. The cost is $30.03 per 1,000 sheets and envelopes; however, if more than 4 such orders are placed together, the price would drop to $19.75 per 1,000.

As the convention has more than 3 months yet to run and the amount originally budgeted for office supplies has about been depleted, we ask your cooperation in this matter.

T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Dr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, a brief word of explanation for this report. Under the rules the committee on administration has the power to authorize more than 1,000 sheets of stationery and envelopes. In some cases, personal stationery is being used in excess of anticipated needs, and of course we urge conservative use of the stationery. We are almost over our budgeted amount for office supplies at the present time.

A survey has shown that there is still a large amount of personal stationery downstairs, over 54,000 letterheads and envelopes. Therefore, the committee decided not to authorize any more personally imprinted stationery for the delegates. However, the committee has authorized the purchase of more convention letterhead stationery and envelopes for use of delegates if they run out of their own stationery. As the report points out to you, we can order additional personally imprinted stationery for your own use if you are willing to pay for it.

I will be happy to answer any questions and then move that the convention accept this report as information, and that it be printed in the journal.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the report of the committee on administration. Is there any discussion? If not, all in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The report is accepted and will be printed in the journal.

Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President, I wonder if I might request that the members of the legislative powers committee be excused at this time. As you all know, we are going to Detroit and the roads are kind of bad.

I would also like to call to your attention the fact that subcommittee 4, chaired by Mr. Millard, has sent notices to several members that wish to be heard on exemptions, so that subcommittee is going to meet right away, and we urge that all delegates who received a notice from Mr. Millard come immediately to the committee room. So at this time, all members of the legislative powers committee will meet in room H.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the committee will be excused.

Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: Mr. President, at this time I would like to move that when the convention adjourns tomorrow, that we stand adjourned until 10:30 on Thursday.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Perras that when we adjourn tomorrow, we stand adjourned until Thursday at 10:30.

Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: As one of those gentlemen who unfortunately has a committee which meets on Thursday afternoon, I had relied upon the original resolution as it was adopted by this convention, and pursuant to the schedule of work that we adopted in this convention to end the public hearings by Thursday of this week, I made necessary contact with the attorney general of the state of Michigan, requesting him to appear before my committee. After much discussion, we arrived at a time of Thursday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. He not only is now the attorney general but he is a supreme court justice-designate, who will assume office shortly after the first of the year.

Now, having visited the upper peninsula many times, I can see Mr. Perras' concern about wanting to start for home, and I don't blame him if he would start Thursday morning if the roads are going to be the way they are.

But when I look at the schedule, I find that my committee meets on Wednesdays at 8:30. Now, if we leave here Thursday at noon and we don't come back until Wednesday at 2:00, I am sure that I will not get my committee back here 8:30 Wednesday morning, January 3, and I don't blame them. I don't think I would want to start out that early either.

I think that we passed a motion setting up the timetable for this convention, with the timetable that we have for our work. If those members who have long distances to travel wish to be excused, I think the policy of this convention has been very lenient in granting such an excuse. I think we should stay with our original resolution as passed, and as a committee chairman, I would urge the convention to oppose the motion and to abide by the resolution so we may finish the public hearings, as stated in here, by the afternoon of the twenty-first. I think it would be quite inopportune for me to recontact the attorney general and tell him that while we passed one resolution, that now, when we get close to the deadline, we have changed our minds and can he please come back another time.

Therefore, I would urge that we abide by our original decision. Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, the committee on finance and taxation has that hour of meeting on Thursday morning, 10:30 to 12:30, and we have a full schedule laid out. We are adjourning a day early this week in order to let people get home. We object to having our time cut down.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, we have the same problem that Mr. Danhof's committee has, and we had hoped to hear delegate proposals in time for our committee meeting after the session on Thursday afternoon, so I would certainly agree with him. If we are going to get the job done, we had better stay here long enough to do it.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I concur with the previous speakers, Mr. President, and request a roll call vote.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the roll call vote. Those in favor please rise. A sufficient number are up. Those in favor of Mr. Perras' motion that when we adjourn Wednesday, we stand adjourned until 10:30 Thursday morning —

Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. President, can you tell me by way of information what kind of a vote is required to pass this sort of a change in the permanent rules?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Majority vote.

MR. KING: Is it the majority present and voting?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Yes.

Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: Mr. President, in view of all the trouble we are causing, I withdraw my motion. (laughter and applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion is withdrawn.

Further reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no other standing committee reports.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Introduction, first reading and reference of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Sharpe introduces

Delegate Proposal 1820, A proposal to authorize income taxes and to provide for reduction in taxes on real property if income taxes are enacted. Amends article X.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing there.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, when delegate proposals were logged in down at the drafting department, they were given a log number, a request number, and when they are introduced up here, they are, of course, given a proposal number. If you take the total number of proposals that were drafted down there and delivered to delegates, and the total number of proposals that have actually been introduced up here, as of the moment there is a difference of 113. In other words, there are 113 delegate proposals kicking around someplace which haven't been introduced.

The work of drafting has been completed. The delegate proposals have been presented to the delegates. Certainly from the standpoint of proceeding in this convention, it is necessary to now establish a cutoff date. The president of the convention has done some checking, inquiring from various delegates who are supposed to have these proposals outstanding, and we have found that for the most part, they were drafted, but upon further reflection on the matter, the delegates have decided not to introduce them. I dare say that these delegate proposals are now all virtually in. But so that there will be no misunderstanding, I now move that no delegate proposals shall be introduced after the adjournment of the session on Thursday, December 21, without leave of the convention.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Hutchinson. Is there any discussion? All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. President, on the delegate proposals, I notice that there are quite a few that haven't been printed, or at least we haven't received them. We are way behind on some of these proposals. I wonder why they couldn't go ahead and bring up some of these lower numbers instead of going along with the 1700's, and get caught up.

For instance, we have a hearing coming up tomorrow on one proposal, and it would be a good thing if we had these proposals to refer to and talk to the committees about. As yet we haven't received the printed proposals.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase, can you answer that question?

SECRETARY CHASE: The only answer the secretary has, Mr. President, is that because of the number of proposals that came in, the machine room has been absolutely swamped on a production basis, and they are being gotten out just as fast as it is humanly possible.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: That doesn't quite answer the question. Here we are with Proposal 1759. Yet, the last proposal I received prior to that was 1704. Why can't we catch up on some of these others prior to 1759? There are a lot of others besides that.

PRESIDENT NISBET: That will be checked on, Mr. Madar, and an effort made to correct it.

Further motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. DeVries, on behalf of the committee on administration, offers Resolution 62, A resolution expressing appreciation of services provided by the Michigan state medical society and the Ingham county medical society.

Following is Resolution 62 as offered:

Whereas, The Michigan state medical society and the Ingham county medical society have provided for the use of the convention delegates a first aid facility staffed by a registered nurse, located in the civic center; and

Whereas, A number of doctors of medicine and general practitioners located in the downtown Lansing area have volunteered to be on call at all times for emergency service to insure that every member of the constitutional convention shall have available 24 hour adequate medical care while he is away from his own doctor; now therefore be it

Resolved, That the constitutional convention go on record expressing its appreciation of this arrangement enabling the delegates to approach their deliberations with the knowledge that an important medical service protecting their well being is at their disposal; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the Michigan state medical society and the Ingham county medical society.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on rules and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only resolution, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: I have the following announcements of committee meetings:

The committee on administration will meet in the conference room Thursday, December 21, at 1:00 o'clock p.m. Walter DeVries, chairman.

There will be a brief meeting of the special committee created to make arrangements for the appearances of the former presidents in the conference room next to the president's office immediately after the session this afternoon. Mr. Romney, chairman.

The committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E tomorrow immediately after the session. D. Hale Brake, chairman.

The committee on judicial branch will meet in room B Thursday at 3:00 o'clock p.m. Robert J. Danhof, chairman. Attorney General Adams will appear before the committee. The composite calendar showing Mr. Adams appearing before the committee on executive branch is in error.

Due to an illness in his immediate family, Highway Commissioner John Mackie will not appear at the subcommittee hearing on eminent domain today. The legal advisor for the highway department, Mr. James Andrews, will appear for Mr. Mackie. Paul R. Mahinske, subcommittee chairman on eminent domain.

The other changes in the composite calendar:

On page 2 should be inserted 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, tomorrow, committee on local government will meet in room A, subcommittee on annexation and consolidation. Charles Follo, chairman.

The committee on executive branch will meet after the session Thursday in room C. Hearings on delegate proposals referred to the committee on executive branch.

A notice of a meeting on Wednesday, January 3. The committee on local government will meet in room A at 7:30 p.m. Subcommittee on metropolitan government hearing on delegate proposals.

The apples today were furnished by Delegate Turner. (applause)

It is requested that we have the cooperation of all delegates to please refrain from the use of the wall telephone in the corner of the convention hall. This will expedite convention business, as this phone is needed for incoming calls in regard to convention business, to locate delegates and so forth.

I have the following requests for leave of absence: Mr. Haskill, due to an important meeting being held in Detroit tomorrow, would like to be excused from tomorrow's session; and Mr. Hutchinson requests leave from tomorrow's session so that he may attend the hearings in Kalamazoo and Berrien Springs on reapportionment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they will be excused.

Mr. Doty.

MR. DEAN DOTY: Mr. President, I move we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

We are adjourned until tomorrow at 2:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 2:35 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 2:00 o'clock p.m., Wednesday, December 20, 1961.]

FORTY-SEVENTH DAY

Wednesday, December 20, 1961, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

The invocation today will be given by one of our own delegates, Herbert Turner from Saginaw.

MR. TURNER: Our Father who art in heaven, lend us Thy hand. Lead us through the coming days of deliberations. Give us the strength, O God, to find what is right, not for our selfish interest but for the good of all people. Give us courage to face our problems, to listen to reason and debate, to carefully weigh the facts, to reach a decision that is right — not for the satisfaction of pressure groups, not necessarily for the benefit of ourselves, but for the good of the forthcoming generations whose lives will be guided by what we do here. Give us the strength, O God, to exercise our virtue of speech to help others to find the right way. Give us the strength to exercise our virtue of silence when our words will not aid the decision. Watch over us and guide us, O God. We ask it in Christ's name. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary.

Those present, please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is now locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave:

Mr. Finch, from today's session; and Mr. Upton, from today's session to attend a meeting of the committee on legislative organization in Berrien Springs.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Excused to conduct committee hearings: Messrs. Blandford, Boothby, G. E. Brown, T. S. Brown, Dehnke, Donald Doty, Greene, W. F. Hanna, J. A. Hannah, Hodges, Kirk, Knirk, Liberato, Lundgren, Marshall, Nord, Plank, Rood, Sablich and Yeager.

Absent with leave: Messrs. Finch, Haskill, Hutchinson and Upton.

Absent without leave: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, reports back to the convention Delegate Proposal 1448, A proposal to deny tax exempt status to any eleemosynary, charitable or service organization which violates public policy by discriminatory practices; Delegate Proposal 1476, A proposal to provide that exemption from taxation shall be granted only by general laws; and Delegate Proposal 1625, A proposal to provide that all nonprofit religious, educational, charitable, and benevolent organizations shall be exempt from state and local taxation; with the recommendation that these 3 delegate proposals be referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they will be referred to the committee on finance and taxation, and they are so referred.

Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. President and members of the conventon, I rise at this time to discuss briefly some aspects of convention procedure. This is not a committee report of the committee on style and drafting, of which I have the honor to be chairman, but I speak as a member of that committee because of the relationship between the work of that committee and the various procedures of this convention. I think it is appropriate to do that at this time because we are going home soon for a holiday and you will have time to think about these procedural aspects. Furthermore, after we return you will be hearing more about them — all of us will — and a corollary to all of that is the fact that soon now the deadlines will have passed for public hearings, hearings on delegate proposals and the hearing of witnesses.

Let me start by saying this — and there is an interchange here of necessity between a discussion of the style and drafting committee work and the work on the floor of this convention — first of all, a report of a select committee of this convention, defining the powers of the committee on style and drafting, was adopted on October 9 of this year. It hardly seems possible we've been here that long. And I think it behooves us all from time to time — if we are interested — to read the powers of this committee as approved by the convention on October 9. It has been underlined before, but I want to emphasize again that this committee has no power to change the substance. We are interested, at your direction, only in arrangement, chronology and phraseology. Next, I think when you have time, when we all have time, you should read our convention rules, chapter IV, rules 27 to 35, inclusive, which govern committee procedure, including the committee on style and drafting. In examining these rules, I would call your attention to rule 35, which states that on 1 day's notice this convention can require a committee to report any proposal without recommendation.

To date, the committee on style and drafting has dealt with 8 submitted committee proposals, and we are up to date. Why we are up to date will appear as I go forward with the remainder of this message.

Now, let's go back a minute to some of our basic rules of procedure with respect to entire convention practice. Rule 20 provides that the directors of research shall supervise all research and drafting activities of the convention. In connection with the committee on style and drafting, we have had assigned to us — and it gives us great pleasure — Dr. Charles Joiner, associate dean of the University of Michigan law school, and professor of law, and he in turn has a staff, as you are aware. Now, it is my understanding that the research staff of this convention is willing to take any committee proposal before it comes before this convention and make suggestions, if any, as to form, and all committee chairmen have been advised to that effect. I call your attention again to rule 20, which provides that these directors shall supervise all such work.

Under rule 57 of this convention, the substantive committee reports committee proposals to the convention, which proposals are placed on general orders. Recently we amended rule 36 of this convention to provide that after 3 days, the proposal referred by the committee to the floor is considered in the committee of the whole of this convention and of course, after that, we rise as a committee of the whole and convention action is taken, and then is the first reference to the committee on style and drafting. The committee on style and drafting then reports back to the convention.

Here I should make the following remarks. After this first reference of a committee proposal from the convention to the committee on style and drafting, the research department of this convention examines the language of that committee proposal for suggestions. Rule 20 empowers the research department to do this. We have also arranged by common consent that the research staff will investigate any court interpretations of the existing constitution to make sure that we know what words have been construed by any competent court — I mean by that a federal court or the state Supreme Court of Michigan — because it could just happen that the committee or the convention might not want to change meaning but has done so by inept use of words. So it is important that we know if there have been any final court determinations with respect to the language of the present constitution. At that point the research department gives to each member of the committee on style and drafting a report with its suggestions and these are carefully considered by our committee when it is preparing its first report back to this convention. We do not necessarily need to agree with the suggestions but 15 people, plus any other help we can get, discuss these matters and resolve them to the best of our ability.

It has been determined by the officers of this convention and others, within the rules, that the committee on style and drafting may, in its own discretion, retain a section or sections or an article of the proposed constitution in order that it might obtain a complete picture before it makes its first report to the convention. You can readily see that if we get a 4 line sentence pertaining to some article of the constitution that deals with chief executive, for example, it is only good sense to wait until we get all the bricks before us to see what kind of a house is being built, to avoid inconsistencies.

Further, when we have these meetings, we notify each chairman of the committee involved if a committee proposal of his committee is to be discussed that evening. We do not hold up any meetings for any chairmen. We're glad for their advice. We want them to know that they are welcome while we are considering the matters in which thy are involved and our experience to date has been interesting and the cooperation complete on all sides.

When we act for the first time and before sending our first report back to this floor, we pay no attention to article numbers or section numbers, but they do appear in the committee proposal in the title. The reason that we pay no attention to them is that we do not know quite how the house will be built in the end and we don't want to get the bathroom in front of the kitchen.

Now, we have approved in this committee 2 forms for reporting back to the floor; one, a form where no amendments are proposed, and two, a form where amendments are proposed. These forms have the approval of the office of the secretary and the research division.

Now, when style and drafting reports a committee proposal back to the floor after the first reference to it, the proposal is then before this convention for what you are well aware is a second reading and vote. At this point the convention does not resolve itself into a committee of the whole and, of course, the difference is generally that there is limited debate when we are not acting as a committee of the whole. After the consideration by this body, there is a rereference to the style and drafting committee for incorporation in the final proposed draft of the constitution. The committee then waits until the entire set of proposals comprising the entire proposed constitution is before it and it then makes its suggestions, within the powers allotted to it, as to the document as a whole and reports it back for the second time to this convention floor as a complete revision. The convention then acts on the revision as a committee of the whole, followed by final action on the order of third reading and the convention then makes its final determination.

You will notice that a delegate, under the rules adopted by you ladies and gentlemen, has 3 chances to make his wishes known on the floor and he has, of course, a chance, if the committee is willing to hear him — I guess they all are — to appear before the substantive committee.

I think it is good that we get these rules in mind because as the flow of work comes in here, we are going to be very much concerned with orderliness and with an understanding of what we are about.

The last 3 months for all of us have been pretty much a matter of black type and white paper, some blue paper. I hope that in the next 10 days you will find more red, green, pink, silver and other colors of your favor and that you come back refreshed and ready to play the second half. A Merry Christmas.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you, Mr. Cudlip. I am glad you gave that report because I think it is important that we understand the procedure that will continue from now on in style and drafting.

Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, particularly because there are a number of delegates absent this afternoon attending committee meetings and because it may be helpful to all of us to refer from time to time to the substance of Mr. Cudlip's report, I would like to move that after suitable editing to accomplish brevity, Mr. Cudlip's report be printed in the journal.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. Is there discussion? If not, all in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no other standing committee reports, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Introduction, first reading and reference of proposals.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Faxon and W. F. Hanna introduce Delegate Proposal 1821, A proposal to provide for a senate elected by population and area. Amends article V. Replaces Delegate Proposal 1212.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative organization.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mrs. Daisy Elliott and Mr. Young introduce

Delegate Proposal 1822, A proposal to require that all state depositories must be in full compliance with the provisions of the constitution. Amends article X, section 15.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. White introduces Delegate Proposal 1823, A proposal that laws and records be in English, and open for public inspection. Amends article XVI, section 6.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

May I announce that tomorrow is the last day for the receiving of any delegate proposals that have to be printed. If any of you still have them and want to present them, be sure they are in tomorrow before 11:00 o'clock in the morning.

Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, I wasn't paying as close attention as I should and I didn't get the name of the delegate or delegates that introduced one of those proposals. That section to which the proposal refers is on general orders here tomorrow. Our committee will be working tomorrow morning from 10:30 to 12:30 and if that delegate wishes to present anything to the committee, it will need to be done at that time.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The proposal that was referred to the committee on finance and taxation was 1822, by Mrs. Daisy Elliott and Mr. Young. You both heard Mr. Brake's statement on the matter.

Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: Items on general orders are not in order for consideration until tomorrow.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on judicial branch will meet in room B tomorrow at 9:00 o'clock a.m. Robert Danhof, chairman.

Committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E tomorrow at 10:30 a.m.

The subcommittee on public utilities of the committee on local government will meet in room A tomorrow at 8:30 a.m. for a hearing on delegate proposals; the subcommittee on cities of the committee on local government will meet Thursday, January 4 at 7:30 p.m. in room A; and the local government subcommittee on township government will hold committee meetings on delegate proposals immediately following the session today and at 10:30 tomorrow morning in room A. Elmer L. Radka, subcommittee chairman.

The committee on legislative powers, subcommittee 1, will meet in room H tomorrow at 9:30 a.m. for a hearing on Delegate Proposals 1109 and 1111, having to do with the legislative auditor. T. Jefferson Hoxie, committee chairman.

The committee on administration will meet in the conference room tomorrow at 1:15 p.m. Walter DeVries, chairman.

The remaining committee meeting announcements and public hearing announcements appear on the composite calendar.

Mr. Romney has the following announcement:

Due to your lack of time to shop for Christmas, in the probability you have missed some child on your list, I thought you might like to have a model car. (applause)

On Sunday afternoon, December 31, I invite you to listen to the Columbia broadcasting system television network, entitled "Let Freedom Ring," a thrilling story of America primarily in song.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Mr. President, it may have been announced and I may have missed it. But I would like to inform the delegates that this evening at 7:30 the committee on local government will have its last general public hearing.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I am a little disappointed. It was partly through my efforts, I'm sure, that we finally received this token from our illustrious delegate, Mr. Romney. In examining it I fail to find it qualifies with what I expected to receive. It doesn't have any engine. (laughter) The steering wheel doesn't operate. (laughter) It doesn't have any con con plates. And further than that, my 1962 Rambler is a station wagon, green and white. I wonder if this could be corrected, Mr. Romney. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Hoxie, I am sure you know you might have opened up a whole afternoon of advertising here. (laughter)

Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. President, having spent 33 years in the business of retailing automobiles, I might say that Delegate Hoxie is a difficult customer. (laughter) The one who pays the least for what he gets in the way of an automobile usually does the most complaining. (laughter and applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: As a matter of fact, this all reminds me of a favorite old Christmas story about the pessimist and the optimist. You never satisfy everyone. A father had 2 sons, Johnny and Bill. Johnny was an optimist and Bill was a pessimist and he wanted to test their respective qualities on Christmas. So he bought Bill, the pessimist, a Rambler and a Buick and a baseball bat, and a bike, and a whole raft of presents, and he took Johnny, the optimist's, stocking and filled it full of horse manure. And the 2 boys came down on Christmas morning and Billy, the pessimist, saw the automobile and said, just like Jeff Hoxie here, that it wasn't green and white and it wasn't a station wagon; it was a convertible. And the Buick had the wrong type wheels on it and the bike was red instead of black and he didn't like anything. And so the father said to Johnny, the optimist, "Johnny, what do you think of Santa Claus?" He said, "Santa Claus is great, dad." He said, "Santa Claus left me a horse and if I'd been here soon enough I'd have had him." (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Figy.

MR. FIGY: Mr. President, along the same line, if you'll notice (laughter) — of course, you know I'm a farmer. (laughter) The 2 gentlemen that got the cars and spoke first about them, the 2 delegates, if you notice, they've both got sport cars. We farmers are very glad to get one of the cheaper model 2 doors. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: I think since everybody is so happy I should put my motion back before the convention. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: I knew we were going to get into trouble.

SECRETARY CHASE: We have the following requests for leave: Mr. Perras, Mr. Gadola, Mr. Gust, Mr. Sablich, Mr. Lundgren, and Messrs. Pellow and Perlich wish to be excused from tomorrow's session.

Messrs. Beaman, Karn and Thomson ask to be excused from the session of January 3 to permit them to participate in a panel discussion on con con before the Jackson rotary club.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they will be excused.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the items on the secretary's desk, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Douglas.

MR. DOUGLAS: Mr. President, I move the convention now adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. All those in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

We are adjourned until tomorrow afternoon at 2:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 2:30 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned to Thursday, December 21, 1961, at 2:00 o'clock p.m.]

FORTY-EIGHTH DAY

Thursday, December 21, 1961, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation today will be given by one of our own delegates, Mr. Gover.

Will you rise.

MR. GOVER: Our Father, we come to Thee with grateful hearts today, thankful for Thy care and guidance during the past weeks. We have felt Thy guiding hand as we deliberate on the many issues before us. We pray for Thy blessings to continue, and that from this convention will come a document of which we can be proud. Go with each of us as we travel to our homes for the holidays. May the spirit of Christmas fill our hearts and lives according to our beliefs. In the name of our Lord we ask. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you.

The roll call will be taken by the secretary. All present, please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is now locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session the secretary received the following requests for leave: Messrs. Dell, Ostrow and Stamm, from today's session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Dehnke, Dell, Gadola, Gust, Lundgren, Ostrow, Pellow, Perlich, Perras, Sablich and Stamm.

Absent without leave: Mr. Batchelor.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, Mr. Batchelor is excused.

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hoxie, for the committee on legislative powers, introduces Committee Proposal 12, A proposal pertaining to exemptions as a substitute for all of article XIV;

with the recommendation that it pass.

T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 12 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 435.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, reports back to the convention Delegate Proposal 1426, A proposal to guarantee freedom of expression to the press, radio, television and other modern means of communication; with the recommendation that the proposal be referred to the committee on legislative powers.

James K. Pollock, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, it will be referred to the committee on legislative powers.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on administration, by Mr. DeVries, chairman, submits the following report and recommends that the constitutional convention budget be amended as follows:

1. Reduce item M. Contingency fund, $42,075.03, by $17,557.05 to read $24,517.98.
2. Add an item to read as follows:

"N. Office of public information

1.	Brochures	$3,002.60
2.	Radio tape equipment	1,500.00
3.	Mailing	2,930.45
4.	Photography	341.00
5.	Engraving and mats	1,573.00
6.	Stock	460.00
7.	40 prints of documentary film	6,600.00
8.	Slide or film strip presentation	750.00
9.	Contingency	400.00
		$17,557.05"

Walter DeVries, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Dr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President and fellow delegates, it was anticipated in our general budget which was adopted on October 18 that we would provide a special line item for the committee on public information in that we didn't know how many staff people they would have and what kind of equipment they needed. We held off until this point. The committee on public information has submitted these requests to the committee on administration.

Briefly, to go through these items in the budget, they request a transfer from the contingency fund to a new item in the budget called the office of public information. This provides $3,000 for brochures. This will cover the cost of 10,000 convention brochures, the brown colored kind that you have seen on your desks. It also provides $1,500 for radio, which covers the cost of equipment, materials and distribution, providing radio coverage of the constitutional convention to the radio media. It also provides for close to $3,000 for expenses connected with the mailing of releases to the weekly and daily newspapers of this state.

There is an item in there of $341 for photography, which covers the professional cost involved in photography for this convention. One other explanation about an item in this, the documentary film. We have provided $6,600 to cover the cost of 40 prints of the documentary film being made by the 3 major universities for distribution when the convention ends, and for use by schools and other service groups around the state. We also provided $750 for a slide or film presentation to be completed within 1 month, to be used by school and other service groups throughout the state.

Mr. President, I move the adoption of this report.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on concurring in the recommendation of the committee. Any remarks? If not, all in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The recommendation is concurred in.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on administration, by Mr. DeVries, chairman, submits the following report and recommends its adoption:

That we enter into a contract with general television network to provide 1 fixed closed circuit television camera and 6 monitors for overall view of proceedings, at a cost of $75 per week.

Walter DeVries, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Dr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President and fellow delegates, we have considered this matter carefully. We have asked the chairman of the committee on public information to testify on it and it is our best judgment that we ought to reinstall some form of closed circuit television. In our original budget adopted on October 18 we provided $4,200 for closed circuit television. We have used $2,700 of that amount. If we adopt this contract, it will cost us $975. The convention will have left in that line $525. This service will commence on January 3.

Mr. President, I move the adoption of this report.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on concurring in the recommendation of the committee. Any discussion? If not, all in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

The recommendation is concurred in.

Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, the committee on administration a week ago authorized the purchase of shelves to fit underneath your desks. These shelves are being prepared at a cost of not to exceed $5.00 and will be installed by the time you return from the holidays.

Thank you, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you. (applause)

Are there any further reports of standing committees?

SECRETARY CHASE: I have the following communication, Mr. President, addressed to the president, dated December 20:

Dear Mr. Nisbet:

Please accept my resignation from the committee on executive branch effective today.

Very truly yours,
Frank G. Millard.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, it will be accepted.

SECRETARY CHASE: To fill the vacancy on the committee on executive branch, the president appoints Mr. Dean Doty.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, Mr. Doty's appointment will be approved. Any objections? If not, it is approved. Mr. Doty, you are a member of that committee.

SECRETARY CHASE: The president appoints, pursuant to the provisions of Resolution 30, as amended, the following delegates to the committee on emerging problems:

Mr. Frank Millard, chairman
Mr. Roscoe Bonisteel, first vice chairman
Mr. Theodore S. Brown, second vice chairman

Charles Anspach	Paul Goebel
Richard Austin	H. V. Hatch
Tom Downs	Raymond King
Mrs. Daisy Elliott	Melvin Nord
Claud Erickson	Earl Pugsley
Charles Figy	Weldon Yeager

For Resolution 30, see above, page 263.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The committee on emerging problems has been named, and unless there is some objection, the appointments will be approved. Any objections? Hearing none, they are approved.

SECRETARY CHASE: The president announces that the committee on emerging problems just named will meet briefly after today's session in the president's conference room.

That is all of the reports of standing committees, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communication from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Introduction, first reading and reference of proposals.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mr. Rood introduces Delegate Proposal 1824, A proposal to broaden eminent domain by including public purpose and to provide for determination of just compensation by a jury as in other civil cases. Amends article XIII, sections 1 and 2.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Krolikowski and Mahinske introduce Delegate Proposal 1825, A proposal to increase the supreme court to a chief justice and 13 associate justices, 5 of whom shall sit as an intermediate appellate court. Amends article VII, section 2.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Krolikowski, McCauley and Mahinske introduce Delegate Proposal 1826, A proposal to retain the primary school interest fund without restrictions on subjects contributing. Amends article X, section 1.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Krolikowski and Mahinske introduce
Delegate Proposal 1827, A proposal to reduce the number of justices to 7 upon the creation of an intermediate appellate court and to prescribe qualifications of judges of the intermediate court. Amends article VII.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on judicial branch.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Krolikowski and Mahinske introduce
Delegate Proposal 1828, A proposal to elect senators from congressional districts and representatives on population, and for the house of representatives to pass legislation by a 2/3 vote. Amends article V.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative organization.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Messrs. Boothby and J. B. Richards introduce Delegate Proposal 1829, A proposal to provide for a separation of powers in the government and a two house legislature based on population and area. Amends article IV, section 1.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative organization.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY KNAPP: Mrs. Daisy Elliott and Mr. Young introduce Delegate Proposal 1830, A proposal to provide the legislature shall pass no laws impairing the right to contract of a labor organization. Amends article V.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on legislative powers.

SECRETARY CHASE: Relative to the delegate proposals, the last of which has now been introduced, under the usual procedure the secretary's staff would prepare a status as of this weekend, and again on the following weekend would present a final status to you. The staff is not satisfied as to all of the details in the present status and would like the opportunity to omit the preparation of the status this weekend so that we may make a complete check and revision and present to you a final status the first week end in January.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unless there is some objection, that procedure will be followed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: May I make my motion and then state the reason, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Yes.

MR. DOWNS: I would like to move that the copies of the journal today be mailed to the delegates, so that if there are any matters that will come before us as a committee of the whole, since the rules provide for 3 calendar days, we will have an opportunity to review those before we come back into session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Will that be done, Mr. Chase?

SECRETARY CHASE: We will be very happy to do that.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, that will be done.

Without objection, we will return to the order of reports of standing committees.

Mr. Chase.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bentley, for the committee on education, introduces Exclusion Report 2005, A report recommending the exclusion of section 11 and section 12 of article XI.

For Exclusion Report 2005 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below under date of April 25, 1962.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I move that this exclusion report be referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, Exclusion Report 2005 will be referred to the committee on finance and taxation.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only standing committee report remaining, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon offers

Resolution 63, A resolution to amend rule 33 regarding proposals reported out by committees.

Following is Resolution 63, as offered:

Resolved, That rule 33 be amended at the end of the first sentence, after the word "committee.", by inserting a sentence to read as follows: "No proposal may be reported out by any committee until it shall have been under consideration therein for at least one day." The balance of the rule will remain unchanged.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on rules and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only resolution on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders.

Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into a committee of the whole for consideration of matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Powell. All in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

Mr. Powell, would you take the Chair?

[Whereupon, Mr. Powell assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The committee will be in order.

The convention is in the committee of the whole for consideration of items on the general orders calendar, which the secretary will report.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Exclusion Report 2003, A report recommending the exclusion of article X, section 20.

Following is Exclusion Report 2003 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on finance and taxation recommends that article X, section 20, of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Brake, chairman of the committee on finance and taxation, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2003:

The committee on finance and taxation, as to section 20 of article X of the constitution, says that from the reading of this section it is apparent that it was designed to meet a specific problem existing at one time in the state's history but that the problem no longer exists and that therefore there is no reason for continuing it in the constitution.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I think that the reasons the committee had for making this recommendation have been stated in the report as read by the secretary.

It is very obvious that this was passed to meet a particular problem and was necessary if that problem was to be met in this way because of section 14 in the same article, which forbids the state to go into the matter of internal improvements.

I think that the section is no longer needed and may as well be deleted.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, supplementing what Mr. Brake had to say, I think that it is well to point out that this section very obviously was placed in the finance and taxation article of the constitution because it had something to do with taxes.

The work prepared by the Michigan citizens research council has this to say — and I'd like to read it:

Railroad charters were granted with provisions limiting the amount of taxes payable but reserving rights to the state to buy the railroads.

Now, this was the apparent practice throughout the whole United States. The charters as granted limited the taxing power, but reserved rights to the state to buy the railroads. Similar rights to purchase reserved by other states in similar charters became instruments for changing the charters in a way to permit tax changes. Michigan found this instrument ineffective because of its constitutional restrictions on internal improvements. The United States supreme court had ruled that the charters were contracts which the state must observe. That sounds like the principle of the decision of the supreme court under John Marshall which held that a corporate charter was a contract.

The constitutional amendment to include section 20 had as its purpose making the right of the state to purchase railroads effective, thus enabling the state to change the railroad tax. I am led to believe that at least one railroad still in existence in Michigan has a Michigan charter, and a special charter at that. I believe it is the Michigan Central Railroad. That is the information given us in the committee on miscellaneous provisions.

Will Mr. Brake assure me that the taking of this section from the constitution will leave unaffected the state's power to tax that railroad?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: I can't make any such assurance. We have gone many, many years without it being used in any way whatsoever, either by the taking over of the railroads or the compulsory paying of taxes. What the situation will be for 100 years I don't know. The fact that it has never had any use would seem to indicate that it is useless.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: All I'd like to say, Mr. Chairman, is I think this convention should be very careful that we make sure that if this thing were taken out, some railroad would not claim that its original charter, having a tax limiting power in it, is still effective. I think we'd better make sure of that.

That is why I asked for the assurance. I assumed that the committee had probably made sufficient investigation so that it could tell us that.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Is there any further discussion? Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, with regard to the statements of Mr. Hutchinson, it seems to me that if the matter that he has brought out is not the intention of the committee, this should be included in the committee report.

Inasmuch as under Resolution 41, the committee report determines constitutional intent, we must be very careful in examining the committee report — just as careful in examining that report as in examining the text of the law itself which we adopt. And I think that that kind of a problem could be resolved very easily in the committee report, and I wonder if Mr. Brake would care to comment upon that.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Brake, do you have any comment?

MR. BRAKE: No, I have no further comment. This is not a matter of any great consequence so far as we see it. If you want to take a week or a month, we don't care.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Are there any amendments to this exclusion report?

Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, as to Mr. Hutchinson's question I, as a member of the committee, was not present when any factor as you brought out was discussed or explored, so I can't help you in that respect. But you do raise a point which perhaps should be considered.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Are there any amendments regarding the exclusion report? The question is on the passage of this exclusion report. As many as are in favor of it, say aye. As many as are opposed, say no.

The Chair feels that the ayes have it. Is there a desire for a rising vote?

MR. YEAGER: I ask for a division.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: A division has been requested. As many as are in favor of the passage of the report, please rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Sixty-eight.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Those opposed, rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Forty-three.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The exclusion report is passed. The secretary will read the next item on the calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, by Mr. Erickson, chairman, Committee Proposal 10, A proposal to amend article I, section 2, of the present constitution pertaining to the seat of government at Lansing.

Following is Committee Proposal 10 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

The seat of government shall be at Lansing.

Mr. Erickson, chairman of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 10:

Article I, section 2 of the 1908 constitution reads: "The seat of government shall be at Lansing, where it is now established.". Committee Proposal 10 states "The seat of government shall be at Lansing."; and "where it is now established" is deleted for the following reasons:

Since 1847, the seat of government for the state of Michigan has been located at Lansing (acts 60 and 65 of 1847, 237 of 1847). Prior to 1847, the seat of government was located at Detroit (Constitution of 1835, article XII, section 9).

The Constitution of 1850 first presented the language "The seat of government shall be at Lansing, where it is now established.". The Constitution of 1908 carried over the same language unchanged.

The wording in the 1850 constitution was thought necessary to resist the occasional desire to move the seat of government to serve personal and political need.

In view of the seat of government now having been at Lansing, its present location, for 115 years, it is recommended by this committee that the clause following the comma, to wit, "where it is now established", be deleted.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Erickson.

MR. ERICKSON: I would like to yield to Miss Donnelly, who is chairman of the subcommittee that handled this matter, along with Messrs. Bledsoe, Seyferth, Mahinske and Leppien.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: Mr. Chairman, we feel that our report is rather self evident. If there are any questions I'd be glad to attempt to answer them. In essence, we think that "where it is now established" is surplusage.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will be passed.

Committee Proposal 10 is passed.

The secretary will read the next item.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Committee Proposal 11, A proposal to provide for care and control of state funds, accounting for public moneys, audits, and publication of reports, and covering the general subject matter found in sections 15, 16, 17, 18 and 13 of article X of the 1908 constitution.

Following is Committee Proposal 11 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

No state money shall be deposited in banks other than those organized under the national or state banking laws. No state money shall be deposited in any bank in excess of 50 per cent of the capital and surplus of such bank. Any bank receiving deposits of state money shall show the amount of state money so deposited as a separate item in all published statements.

* * * *

No money shall be paid out of the state treasury except in pursuance of appropriations made by law. THE LEGISLATURE SHALL PROVIDE BY LAW FOR THE USE OF ALL STATE RESOURCES TO PAY ALL STATE OBLIGATIONS REGARDLESS OF FUND CLASSIFICATION, SUBJECT TO ANY FIDUCIARY, CONTRACTUAL OR CONSTITUTIONAL OBLIGATIONS TO WHICH THE STATE IS PLEDGED. THE LEGISLATURE SHALL CONSOLIDATE ALL STATE RESOURCES SUBJECT TO APPROPRIATION INTO A GENERAL FUND AND MAY ESTABLISH OTHER FUNDS FOR THE EXERCISE BY THE STATE OF ITS FIDUCIARY AND CONTRACTUAL RESPONSIBILITIES AND FOR THE OPERATION OF INTERNAL ENTERPRISES.

THE LEGISLATURE MAY ESTABLISH WITHIN THE GENERAL FUND SUCH ACCOUNTS AS IT DEEMS NECESSARY TO REFLECT FINANCIAL TRANSACTIONS FOR OPERATING PURPOSES IN ACCORDANCE WITH ACCEPTED GOVERNMENT ACCOUNTING PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICES AND AS REQUIRED BY THIS CONSTITUTION OR BY LAW.

* * * *

THE LEGISLATURE SHALL PROVIDE BY LAW FOR THE ANNUAL ACCOUNTING FOR ALL PUBLIC MONEYS, AND MAY ALSO PROVIDE BY LAW FOR INTERIM ACCOUNTING. THE LEGISLATURE SHALL PROVIDE BY LAW FOR THE AUDIT OF STATE AND COUNTY ACCOUNTS BY COMPETENT STATE AUTHORITY, AND MAY ALSO PROVIDE FOR THE AUDIT OF ANY OTHER PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.

ALL ACCOUNTINGS, RECORDS, AUDIT REPORTS AND OTHER REPORTS OF PUBLIC MONEYS SHALL BE PUBLIC RECORDS AND OPEN TO INSPECTION. A DETAILED STATEMENT OF ALL REVENUES AND

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

EXPENDITURES OF PUBLIC MONEYS SHALL BE PUBLISHED AND DISTRIBUTED ANNUALLY AS PRESCRIBED BY LAW.

* * * *

The state shall not subscribe to, nor be interested in the stock of any company, association or corporation[.], EXCEPT THAT FUNDS ACCUMULATED TO PROVIDE RETIREMENT OR PENSION BENEFITS FOR PUBLIC OFFICIALS AND EMPLOYEES AND ENDOWMENT FUNDS MAY BE INVESTED AS PROVIDED BY LAW.

Mr. Brake, chairman of the committee on finance and taxation, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 11:

The first paragraph of the proposal dealing with state deposits in banks is section 15 of the present constitution unchanged. In the opinion of the committee and of the fiscal officers of the state it is adequate and satisfactory.

The committee recommends adoption of the second and third parts of this proposal in order to provide adequately for control of state funds, accounting for public moneys, audits, and publication of reports. Sections 16, 17 and 18 of article X of the present constitution have provided the framework for these functions in the past. However, the greater portion of the provisions of these sections have been rendered obsolete because of their inadequacy to fulfill today's fiscal management needs and those needs which can be reasonably anticipated in the near future.

The present provisions do not permit sufficient freedom of access to available resources to pay the obligations of the state. Section 17, which relates to the publication of reports, is ambiguous. Section 18, which provides for the keeping of uniform records and the supervision, audit and inspection thereof, includes legislative detail which is not needed in the constitution. The language is so restrictive as to fail to accomplish its purpose.

Section 18 was first introduced into the Michigan constitution in 1908 as a way to force the legislature to make suitable provision for uniform accounts and audits. When appraised against this background it would not appear to perform a useful purpose in the new constitution. A uniform accounting law was passed in 1919 which contains considerable detail in prescribing accounting and auditing responsibilities and duties. Moreover, accounting and auditing concepts and techniques have advanced to the point where a body of generally accepted standards of uniformity, consistency and competence is available as a guide.

The first 2 paragraphs of this part of the proposal (which should comprise a single section) provide adequately for control of state funds but allow necessary flexibility to use available resources to pay state obligations. They also authorize the consolidation of resources subject to appropriation into a single general fund. The committee has taken cognizance of the need for separate funds to fulfill the state's fiduciary, contractual and constitutional obligations, and for the operation of such internal enterprises as the liquor fund, state (prison) industries, airport terminal, motor transport, industrial fund for the blind, office services, and the insurance fund. The committee has taken cognizance also of the need for separate accounting for separate functions within the general fund.

The last two paragraphs of this part of the proposal direct the legislature to provide for the annual accounting (and interim accountings where desirable) of all public moneys and the audit of state and county accounts by state authority, and any other public accounts. There is a declaration that all records and reports relating to public moneys shall be public records and open to inspection. Finally, there is the requirement that there be annual publication and distribution of reports of public moneys.

Section 13 of the present constitution, which is revised by the committee proposal, has the desirable object of preventing state ownership of private business. However, it has some other results which the committee believes are unduly restrictive. The development, since the adoption of the present constitution, of substantial public employee retirement funds and university endowment funds, has made necessary reexamination of the type of investments available for such funds. The committee believes that, if these funds are to earn the best return and are to be protected against inflation the legislature should have the power to permit, under appropriate restrictions as to quality and amount, investment of these funds (but not other public funds) in such things as share accounts in savings and loan associations, and high grade corporate securities.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal?

Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, just a brief statement supplementing the report that the secretary has just read. We know that the first paragraph of the second part — it is a little awkward to deal with several sections when we are not allowed to have a number or letter or something on them — but the first paragraph of the second part is controversial. For some of us it is going to be a rather hard decision. I just want to say that there is a human trait, I suppose, recognized by everybody, to put off tough decisions just as long as you can put them off, and there is another human trait when vacation is coming up, to get away just as fast as you can. I hope that we can resist both of those temptations.

We have been here 3 months and this is the last working day of the first half of our scheduled convention and we have not yet processed on the floor of this convention one single item of major importance. I am not saying we haven't worked. I have never been in a group in my life that worked as hard as this convention has worked. But it hasn't shown up above the committee room. Here is one chance to go home for vacation with one thing accomplished, whether you leave it as we have presented it or whether you amend it. If we can get it through, we have done one major job.

The report indicates the general nature of what we are trying to do. We are fortunate in having on our committee a professional accountant, Mr. Austin. On the 2 middle sections of this proposal, we will ask that your questions be directed to Mr. Austin. On the final section dealing with an enlargement of the legislature's power with reference to investments, we will ask that you direct your questions to Mr. Van Dusen.

Now, as to the first section which is immediately before us, there is no change in the present constitutional language. The experience of the fiscal officers of the state is that it is sufficient, it is adequate; and it is the belief of the committee that it ought to remain in the constitution unchanged.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Is it the understanding of the Chair that the proposal is just as reported? I know that the committee was deliberating. Is there anything to offer in the way of an amendment by the committee?

MR. BRAKE: When you get to the second part of it, there will be an amendment offered, and when you get to the final part there will be an amendment offered.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Are there any amendments to this first portion of the committee proposal?

Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Point of information. I'd like to know whether we are dividing this into paragraph by paragraph treatment or whether we are considering it all at once.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Apparently section by section down to the asterisks, I gather. Is that agreeable?

MR. BRAKE: Perhaps I've had too much legislative experience. When we go through a bill, we go through it a section at a time, asking if there are amendments, and when you get all through with that, you ask if there are any amendments to the body of the bill. I assumed that we were following that procedure.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: If it is agreeable, let us take this a portion at a time, down to the first row of asterisks.

Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Still on the same point of information, I am not clear in my mind whether we vote on each one, one at a time as it is subdivided, or whether we vote on all at the same time.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I think that it would expedite the orderly consideration of the matter if we might.

MR. NORD: I would move that we do that. I wondered if that is the standard procedure, in any event.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I said we would. Maybe I was sort of making it up but as Delegate Brake just said, here we have a document which by our procedure does not have numbers on it, of course, because that has been held in abeyance until the final report of the committee on style and drafting which will arrange these paragraphs and articles and sections. For the time being, we do not have that advantage. But let us take it down to the first line of asterisks.

Are there any amendments to that portion? If not, it will be passed. The first paragraph is passed.

Let's take the middle portion, which involves 2 paragraphs, and I will call on Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I offer the following committee amendments to the second portion of this proposal:

1. Amend page 1, line 19, after the word "obligations" by inserting the words "when due".

2. Amend page 1, line 21, after the word "shall" by striking out the word "consolidate" and inserting the words "provide for the consolidation of".

3. Amend page 1, line 23, after the word "fiduciary" by striking out the word "and" and inserting a comma and after the word "contractual" by inserting the words "or constitutional".

Each delegate now has on his desk a copy of that paragraph which has been changed to read as it will be, or as it is to be amended, so that it will now read, if amended:

> No money shall be paid out of the state treasury except in pursuance of appropriations made by law. The legislature shall provide by law for the use of all state resources to pay all state obligations when due regardless of fund classification, subject to any fiduciary, contractual or constitutional obligations to which the state is pledged. The legislature shall provide for the consolidation of all state resources subject to appropriation into a general fund and may establish other funds for the exercise by the state of its fiduciary, contractual or constitutional responsibilities and for the operation of internal enterprises.

The purpose of these amendments is to clarify some of the questions that were raised in the committee meeting this morning and at this point I would like to talk on the paragraph, or I should say, the whole section taken as a whole and as amended. My responsibility in connection with Committee Proposal 11, as suggested by Chairman Brake, is to explain the proposed revisions relating to the control of funds, accounting for moneys, audits and publication of reports.

Now, I think it should be made clear that this first paragraph deals with the control of funds. It is not an accounting function. It is a function relating to the handling of money. The consideration of this proposal is an awful blow to strike on the eve of the Christmas holiday, when everyone is anxious to be on his way. There is probably not a more mundane section of the whole constitution. Perhaps when we have completed this discussion, if indeed we should, each of you will have a greater appreciation for your holiday. (laughter) And I hope you will have some sense of accomplishment because it is hoped that you will pass this section.

As we discuss this part of the proposal, may I suggest that each of you have before you sections 16, 17 and 18 of article X. When you have this material before you, you are ready for the short course in control of funds, accounting and auditing.

Traditionally, Michigan has stood alone in the comprehensive manner in which it has provided in its constitution for fiscal controls. In proposing these recommendations, the committee on finance and taxation is attempting to update the very fine work of the 1908 convention and to maintain Michigan's tradition of comprehensive coverage in this area. This to me is very important. No one member of the committee on finance and taxation claims pride of authorship in drafting this portion of the proposal. We have had plenty of research, plenty of help, plenty of advice and assistance in its preparation, and I should say, plenty of opposition. I feel it is appropriate to mention some of our outside consultants, the department of administration, with particular credit to Ira Polley who is the controller of the state of Michigan; Frank McLaury, who is in charge of the accounting division of the department of administration; the treasurer of the state of Michigan, Sanford Brown; the auditor general of the state of Michigan; the citizens research council; and some of the professors from the accounting department of Michigan State University. And, as has been mentioned by our knowledgeable chairman, D. Hale Brake, although we have not satisfied all interests with this draft, we believe we have divided the framework for dealing with Michigan's complex fiscal management problem. With minor amendments, our Committee Proposal 11 should do the required job.

And now I am wondering if you will read with me sections 16, 17 and 18, and I will try to explain what we had in mind.

Section 16 now reads "No money shall be paid out of the state treasury except in pursuance of appropriations made by law." The committee felt that this section should be retained verbatim because we will all agree that no money should be paid out of the state treasury unless it has been properly appropriated by law. However, where it becomes necessary, as it has been in recent years, to manage a sizable deficit — today the deficit of the general fund is somewhere in the neighborhood of $75 million — the treasurer needs some freedom of access to whatever resources are available to keep his bills current. So the committee felt, along with the state treasurer and many others who are interested, that we should provide for free access to funds that are available, certainly on a temporary basis.

It is the intention of the committee, I should relate at this time, to increase the borrowing power of the state on a very limited basis, but even if we give it the borrowing power that it needs, the treasurer may be able to save some interest if he is able to manage whatever funds he has properly.

I would like to give an example. This is an oversimplification, but I think it will explain the point. If, for example, we should have $50 million on hand — and this is not an unusual situation — of earmarked moneys, and we do not have cash available to meet current bills, and if it should happen that $50 million is reposing in bank A, we could authorize the treasurer to go to bank A and borrow $10 or $20 million, pay interest on the loan to meet these obligations that are due. When he does that, what money is he borrowing? He's got $50 million on deposit. He is borrowing his own money and paying interest for the use of it. Some of you may feel that that interest is not worth saving. Maybe it isn't. Maybe it's not even an important factor. But I think you will agree that there ought to be more freedom of access to manage the money and manage it properly. Incidentally, this practice is being followed today but it is of questionable legality. There is no reason why it should not be made legal since we all agree that it is desirable and necessary.

We now proceed to section 17, which I will read with you.

> An accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures of the public moneys shall be attached to and published with the laws passed at every regular session of the legislature.

This is ambiguous, I believe, to anyone who reads it and is required to act upon it. "An accurate statement of receipts and expenditures of the public moneys . . . ." Does this mean all public officials throughout the state? It does not in any way indicate what public officials are required to account, nor does it indicate what period the receipts and disbursements should reflect. And, just to show you how confusing this can be, during a regular session of the legislature funds are appropriated. Those funds are spent during that year and in subsequent periods. Now, obviously, it would be impossible to publish a statement of receipts and disbursements pertaining to those particular appropriations in the same publication. It would be necessary to publish figures for some preceding period. This language does not make that very clear. We have attempted to clear up this language, and I would like to point to our new language, which I think you will agree is an improvement.

I suggest that you move to the very last sentence of this section — actually it's the next section — of Committee Proposal 11. If you will turn to page 2, line 16, you will find new language which will take care of the requirement of section 17. "A detailed statement of all revenues and expenditures of public moneys shall be published and distributed annually as prescribed by law."

Here it becomes necessary for the legislature to determine which officials should report which funds, how they should report, and how the reports are to be distributed. The language of section 17 does not give the legislature the authority to prescribe the manner of publication of reports. It tells how it is to be done, but in a very ambiguous manner.

Now we turn to section 18. It now reads:

> The legislature shall provide by law for the keeping of accounts by all state officials, boards and institutions, and by all county officials; and shall also provide for the supervision and audit thereof by competent state authority and for uniform reports of all public accounts to such authority. Such systems of account shall provide for accurate records of all financial and other transactions and for checks upon all receipts and disbursements of all such officials, boards and institutions; and shall be uniform for all similar boards, institutions and county officials. All public accounts and the audit thereof shall be public records and open to inspection.

There is considerable language in this section which is unnecessary for the constitution and, just by way of example, it is not necessary to provide for the keeping of accounts if we provide for an annual accounting because it is impossible to make an accurate accounting without maintaining accurate records. Added to that is the fact that in 1919 the uniform accounting law was passed, which has established a uniform system, or the concept of uniformity in accounting in our state. I might add that in 1908, when this section was passed, there was not a pattern of uniform accounts or of reporting in the state of Michigan. Since then the concept of uniformity and competence has been well established, not only in the state, but also within the profession, on which the legislature should rely for consultation and advice on how to provide for better accounting.

I might add also that, just as in the legal profession we have found considerable advance, within the accounting profession there has been considerable advance in establishing generally accepted standards of auditing and generally accepted accounting principles. The standards of auditing are well established and the American institute of accountants, incidentally, is in the process now of spending $2 million in an effort to better define generally accepted accounting principles. But aside from that, the government officials have also established generally accepted government accounting principles for governments, and I think that with this body of knowledge available to us, we can be a little more general in expressing our language and devote our expressions in the constitution to more inclusive language of those who are required to report and giving the legislature a little more authority in providing for audits.

I would like, if you don't mind, to just read the new language and we might comment on it briefly. I would like you to turn to line 8, page 2. "The legislature shall provide by law for the annual accounting for all public moneys, and may also provide by law for interim accounting . . . ." Here we have established the concept of an annual accounting of all public moneys. Wherever public moneys are handled in the state of Michigan, an annual accounting is required. The legislature may, wherever it feels it desirable to do so, require interim accountings.

> The legislature shall provide by law for the audit of state and county accounts by competent state authority, and may also provide for the audit of any other public accounts.

The constitution will specifically provide for the audit of state accounts and county accounts by a competent state authority, but the legislature may in its wisdom decide that other public accounts should be audited also by a competent state authority.

We have not sought in this section of the constitution to provide who shall do the audit. That will be left to either the committee on legislative powers or the committee on executive branch. But we do insist that it be a competent state authority. Now, as for "All accountings, records, audit reports and other reports of public moneys shall be public records and open to inspection," this is found in the present constitution, but we believe we have improved the language some and made it a little clearer. I have already commented on that last sentence, which is an improvement over the present section 17.

Are there any questions?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Austin has discussed really 2 sections here. Maybe they are so well tied in together that he had to, but the material I brought to the rostrum was the journal and apparently he has taken the 2 center sections.

Would it be the desire of the committee to consider them as a unit, or do you want to take them down to the first asterisks?

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I would suggest that they be taken separately but I wanted to discuss them together because the material was in the section of the constitution and I wanted to show how it had been reorganized.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I believe Delegate Downs was next on his feet.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I have some questions. As a procedure, I direct them through you to the speaker. The first question is on the word "shall" on line 17, on page 1, where it says, "The legislature shall provide . . ." and so forth. The existing language says, "No money shall be paid out of the state treasury except in pursuance of appropriations made by law." I assume that under the present language, if the treasurer would try to spend money in some way considered illegal there could be a citizen or other person go to court and obtain an injunction and there would be some judicial review. The question I have is: since the legislature cannot be mandamused or brought to court, what is the enforcement procedure of the language beyond the word "shall"?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Austin, would you care to reply?

MR. AUSTIN: First of all, it should be understood that Delegate Austin is not a lawyer. Delegate Austin is not a legislator. So Delegate Austin may give only a layman's answer and I am hopeful that some legal mind will come to my rescue if I'm neither right nor wrong.

It would appear to me that any penalty on the legislature for failure to comply with any section of this constitution would be found elsewhere in the constitution, and not here. All we can do is provide what our intent is, and that is that the legislature shall do these things. If it does not, I have no answer.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I was about to suggest that we wait until "elsewhere," but I think that would be flip.

My next question is on line 20 on page 1. The 2 words inserted, I believe were "when due" after "obligations." I want to see if I understand this right. Would this mean that earmarked funds or other reserve funds could be spent until they were due? Specifically the question, Mr. Chairman, is, if there were a few million dollars in pension funds for state employees, could those funds be spent until such time as they were due the employees who retired? And if the answer to that is yes, what assurance is there that employees would get their pension?

MR. AUSTIN: I think it would be better to say that the money could be spent until it is required to be placed in the appropriate funds; certainly not until it is due to be paid to employees, I mean if you are referring to the pension fund.

You see, as I understand it, the treasurer is required to receive all moneys from all sources and maintain that first of all, let's say, in a common depository. He is able to manage this money in some instances for a period of 30 days, and some even longer. And at the end of that period, he is required to make the necessary deposits or separations or divisions to the appropriate funds. And when he is called upon to do that, he will be required to do so because it will be due at that time. Now, it is quite possible that our chairman may want to add to that.

MR. BRAKE: I'll take those two, Mr. Downs, before you get any more out here. Let me call your attention to the word "shall" that you mentioned. Can you compel the legislature to do this? No. There is no way. If the legislature does not do it, this whole thing will never go into effect because it is not self executing. The legislature must act or this provision never becomes effective law.

On the other question as to employees retirement funds, you will notice the word "fiduciary." We have been economical in the use of words, I admit that. But that covers that. Fiduciary funds are not included in this provision. Pensions and such things as that have got to be kept separate. They are not included in the general fund. It is only operating funds that we are talking about and not what the employees retirement fund takes, or any other retirement funds. They are not operating funds.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, may I show my grammatical ignorance? Do the words "when due" not apply to the word "fiduciary" in lines 19 and 20?

MR. BRAKE: Nothing in this procedure applies to fiduciary funds. It is operating funds.

MR. DOWNS: Well, I may have read the insert wrong, Mr. Chairman. I am sorry if I have.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Isn't there a correction in line 19?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The Chair has a copy with the correction in line 19.

MR. AUSTIN: Is that where you have yours inserted, Mr. Downs?

MR. DOWNS: I have it. I am glad to stand corrected. Thank you very much.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Any other questions, Mr. Downs?

MR. DOWNS: The other question I have is whether this would have any effect on bonding provisions, particularly for highway funds or any other purposes.

MR. AUSTIN: Well, the direct answer is it would have no effect.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: I have a number of questions as well for Mr. Austin. I am still puzzled, and I am not quite certain that I understand all of his answers. For example, I notice we begin in the second sentence with "The legislature shall . . . " do so and so. And the next paragraph reads "The legislature may . . ." do so and so. Now, I have a number of questions. My first question is, what happens if the legislature does not? Another one is, suppose there is no legislature? We have none provided for as yet. It is a little premature to be certain. (laughter) Another one is, if we do have a legislature, the committee on legislative powers could conceivably limit the powers of the legislature contrary to this. I don't know whether they would, but they might. I also question that the legislature may do this because maybe the committees on legislative powers or legislative organization might limit the money powers of 1 house. That is not an uncommon proposition. Therefore, I am not clear on how we can go about adopting a section which says what the legislature shall do before we have any idea what the legislature shall be or how it shall be apportioned, for example, and so on.

I am also concerned about this question. Should we write the entire principles of accounting into the constitution? It appears to me we are moving in that direction. The reason I object to that is because I don't understand those principles. And if they are in the constitution, that means I will not understand that part of the constitution.

Another thing that is bothering me is that there have been some amendments on the floor by your committee to this particular section. I deduce from that your committee has not been completely satisfied or else is confused about the meaning or the impact of some of the words in this section. I would like you to realize that if you are confused, then you should imagine how confusing it is to us. It seems to me that the rule about 3 days' notice permits us to deliberate about the meaning of a section. Now, if the section is changed in any substantive way, then we don't have 3 days' notice to deliberate on it and we will come across problems of this type.

Finally, I am not at all satisfied that I understand what is meant by "subject to any fiduciary obligation." As far as I can determine, I don't know what "subject to" means. I do not see that that means that it strikes that kind of obligation out of this section. The reason I feel it is not clear is because in discussing this with many members of the committee just before I came onto the floor, they all gave me the reverse impression. Many of them indicated to me that they were not clear about the language of this section; that they thought there were questions about earmarking but they were not certain what effect it had on earmarking. That is the main thing that puzzles me. It is not whether or not we will have a legislature, but it is whether or not we will have earmarking. I can't tell for sure from this whether we have earmarking or whether we can have earmarking, or whether if we do, earmarked funds will have the security that we think they will have. If I could be sure, I could vote intelligently on this. If I could not, I do not see how I can vote on it. I believe since there are members of the committee who informed me that they are not certain, since there are amendments on the floor, it seems to me that many members of the committee must not be certain.

I therefore move that we postpone this question until January 10.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: May the Chair comment that if we are to hold everything until everything else is decided, this thing would run into infinity. Obviously we have to start somewhere. Each of these matters will be subject to a second and third reading so they can be further integrated as we go along. However, I think the motion is in order that this whole report be postponed until a day set. January 10, you say?

MR. NORD: Yes, sir.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: All those in favor, signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The motion does not prevail.

I think the question is on the committee amendments that have been discussed. We have 2 or 3 folks wanting to be heard. Those who have been on the floor the longest in sequence that I observed them were first, Mr. Yeager. What is your desire, Mr. Yeager?

MR. YEAGER: I wanted to rise to a small point of order here, Mr. Chairman, that was brought up by the Chair. Calling your attention to rule 38:

> In the committee of the whole proposals shall first be read through by the secretary, and then read, debated, and acted upon by clauses. . .

There was some question about that earlier.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: A clause is a pretty short thought, isn't it? It's not even a complete sentence. I wasn't aware that that was the procedure, but we have established this other modus operandi. I wonder if there is any desire to depart from the way we are proceeding.

MR. YEAGER: I simply called your attention to the rule as written.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Stafseth, did you want to talk on these amendments?

MR. STAFSETH: Yes. First I'd like to ask, if you have an amendment to an amendment that the committee has offered, you just offer the amendment, is that correct?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I would say yes, if it is an amendment to this language. However, it might simplify things if we could get this behind us and see what you have up your sleeve. (laughter)

MR. STAFSETH: All I was going to do was to try and solve some of this problem in relation to the earmarked funds, where they affect the highway bonds or any other bonds that may be earmarked. I have an amendment that our bond attorneys whom we talked to today said would be sufficient to take care of this. I might point out one thing: on the question that was asked Mr. Austin, if the highway bonds would be affected by this provision, that Mr. Brown—who is Mr. Nunneley's assistant in the firm of bonding attorneys in Detroit—said that it definitely would affect the bonding provision or there would be a higher interest rate on the bonds if this provision stood as it is.

I might say in general—and this is referring to the new language of the second paragraph—as I view the situation here today, we are in a similar situation to what we have been in this state for quite a long time. We are not facing up to our responsibility of getting sufficient revenue to meet our appropriations. We have gone through a period where we have liquidated the veterans trust fund. I don't have any quarrel on that because I don't think we should finance funds on interest money. But there are a lot of people that thought we should. Next we sold the liquor stock in order to meet our expenditures. Now we are licensing the treasury of the state, or the legislature, to intermingle funds to avoid facing the day of financial responsibility. To me this is just going to be an excuse for the people that have to do this to delay or procrastinate a little bit longer.

Now, this is new. This intermingling of funds in a constitutional provision, I think, is quite new. I am not quite sure if it is in any other constitutions in the United States. But I certainly can see if we get into trouble on this, it is going to be an awfully hard thing for the people of the state of Michigan to rectify because you can easily pass a law and change it if you have it in a statute, but if you have it in a constitutional provision, it would require a referendum of the people.

I was going to offer an amendment, but if you want me to wait until this is straightened out—

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Stafseth, I think it would simplify things if you would wait. I understand your amendment has to do with a provision which was already in the committee report prior to this pending amendment. I think it would simplify things if we consider now what has been proposed by the committee and explained by Delegate Austin. Are there any further comments on that?

Mr. Snyder, you have been trying to get recognition.

MR. SNYDER: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I know it was easy to overlook me because in accordance with rule 22, I stayed at my seat where I feel you should remain until you are recognized. I feel that some of us in the back row have an advantage. We can get to the microphone rapidly. But I think we should remain at our seat.

I certainly agree with Mr. Stafseth in his argument that we have more than a basic problem of combining the funds. We've got to cut a little deeper and try to correct the cause of our problems and inasmuch as he has already brought this to your attention, I won't repeat my thinking on this thing because it does coincide.

I would like to get a little clarification from Mr. Austin, if I may, on some of the more mechanical aspects of the change that the committee has presented to us. Certainly, I agree that there has been a lot of work and a lot of effort and a lot of collective thinking pulled together and brought into this report, and I do not want to appear to be presumptuous at this particular point and say that with my limited knowledge of accounting or arithmetic that I can improve upon some of the efforts of some of the people who are exceedingly qualified. However, I do seriously question the inclusion of some of the language at the present time, especially that section that says that an annual accounting will be sufficient.

I have had experience personally of having annual accounts and I know that the annual accounting is an end product. It is not the means that provides for the end product. There are certain basic steps and processes that you must take before you get to an annual accounting and I believe that in their wisdom the delegates at the preceding convention prepared and put into our present constitution some of the essential safeguards that would require the records such as we have at the present time.

Certainly, with the need of uniformity of records, if we are going to have uniformity in our accounting, regardless of the exceedingly high standards set by the profession, I feel that there may be times in which we will have a deviation from the high standards, human beings being what they are. And I can only say that this coming April 15 we will be having a final accounting of some of the records that we should have been maintaining throughout the whole year. I am certain that some of us will spend a great many long hours preparing for our income tax returns because we haven't made the necessary steps for this final accounting. So there is serious doubt in my mind whether we should exclude from the present constitution some of the language which has served us so well.

Now, with the danger of oversimplifying our problem, Mr. Downs asked a question and Mr. Austin gave him a direct answer. However, I feel in this case that if he gave him an indirect answer it would have been apropos to the problem because this borrowing of funds over an extended period of time will correct itself. But I want to caution you that the earmarking in the various statutes that are set up are a simple budget with which we must operate and if the circumstances are such that we overborrow within a short period of time, regardless of the long term direct answer to their problem, we will not be able to face our immediate responsibility to the specific budgetary item that is involved.

I feel again that the committee has made some good progress in this respect. However, I am willing to stay here as long as anyone in the interest of reporting something out. But I think just to report something out for the sake of reporting something out will not accomplish what we are here for. We are here today to take care of one of the most vital problems of our constitution, that is, a pocketbook problem of our constitution, and we should not do it in haste. And I certainly would appreciate it if the committee would take into consideration some of the statements that I have made. Thank you very much.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The question is on the committee amendments offered by Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, was he asking me a question?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I wondered.

MR. AUSTIN: It sounded more like a speech.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Is there a specific question in your mind on which you desire an answer from Delegate Austin?

MR. SNYDER: I just brought to Delegate Austin's attention some of the shortcomings which I felt the new language would create. However, if he would care to answer them, I would feel it would be in order.

MR. AUSTIN: I think that the one question that I got out of your comments was whether we should continue the same language that we have in the present constitution. I don't know whether you have read the public acts of 1919—I cannot remember the exact number of the act now, but it is in the uniform accounting act—but it might be appropriate for me to give you some idea as to the amount of detail that we now have in our statutes in regard to uniform accounting, and when you have seen this and read it, I think you will wonder too why we need any detail about accounting in our constitution except to require that we shall have an annual accounting and an audit of these accounts and require publication of these accounts.

But I would like to know from you, since you have asked me the question, why you feel that we need accounting detail in our constitution, especially in view of the remarks made by Dr. Nord.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Does Delegate Snyder wish to reply?

MR. SNYDER: I feel that we have an area here which is not primarily a statutory matter. I feel that we have here a matter of finances, of money, that can be changed from time to time. A problem as important as this should not be covered merely by the statutory provision. I feel that the control of state money, the control of the auditing, which is the final accounting, should be a constitutional matter, and not one of a statutory nature.

MR. AUSTIN: Delegate Snyder, I am agreeing with you that the constitution should provide for audits and it should also provide for the publication of accountings and it should also require accounts, but why is it necessary to provide in the constitution how records are to be kept? Let me, for example, read to you what the title to act 71 of the public acts of 1919 provides.

> An act to provide for the formulation and establishment of a uniform system of accounting and reporting in the several departments, offices and institutions of the state government and in all county offices; to provide for the examination of the books and accounts of each state department office and institution and each county office; to provide for annual financial reports from all such departments, institutions and offices and for the tabulation and publication of comparative financial statistics relating thereto; to provide that the auditor general and the board of state auditors shall administer the provisions of this act prescribing their powers and duties in relation thereto; to provide penalties for the violation or failure to comply with the requirements of this act; to provide for the expense authorized by this act.

This is just the title. The act goes into considerable detail in prescribing the accounting and auditing responsibilities and duties. Certainly, it does not seem wise to include matter of this sort in the constitution.

MR. SNYDER: I agree with you and I do not believe the language as such should be included in the constitution, Delegate Austin. I am only saying that we should at least include the concept of this regardless of legislative detail, to provide for "accurate records of all financial and other transactions and for checks upon all receipts and disbursements of such officials. . . ." These are the few words that I feel should be a constitutional matter. I feel we have here a question of the basic constitutional concept in statutory detail. I feel the statutory detail that you mentioned is well, but we should cover it with a constitutional concept.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I realize that this has developed into colloquy between 2 delegates, but the only way I know how to handle this is to continue to answer the questions that he has raised. You see, Delegate Snyder, the present constitution does not provide for all of the checks that ought to be made in connection with an audit. There are quite a few more checks that any auditor would make — and I am sure you are aware of that — so why attempt to indicate in the constitution what checks ought to be made? Require an audit and whatever is required to make a comprehensive audit would be made and these concepts are changing from time to time. It would be possible for the legislature to examine them from time to time and update the laws as it found it necessary. But don't attempt to determine how an audit should be conducted in the constitution. It is terribly unnecessary and it is entirely too restrictive.

MR. SNYDER: I will yield to Mr. Norris.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate W. F. Hanna is the one I have observed waiting the longest.

MR. FORD: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: What is your point?

MR. FORD: I think that the discussion for the last 20 minutes has concerned itself with lines 8 through 18 of page 2 and it was my understanding that we were going in a seriatim process through this and we were discussing lines 16 through 24 on the first page.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The question is on the committee amendments offered by Mr. Austin. I believe they were made to that portion which you mentioned.

MR. FORD: The amendments we are talking about are contained in the lines between 16 and 24 on the first page. We have for 20 minutes been engaged in a scholarly discussion of the accounting procedures set out in lines 8 through 18 of the second page and I am getting a little confused as to just which part we are debating.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Thank you for that suggestion. Let's stick to the second section.

Mr. Hanna, what was your —

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, I've been standing, if you'll glance over in this direction. I've had the red light for quite some time. I believe it was turned on approximately the same time that Mr. Snyder got up. I am awfully sorry if that can't be seen but I believe we ought to recognize that the gentleman up there in that window is pressing the buttons.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, I will be glad to wait until the gentleman is through.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The delegate yields to Delegate Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, I just want to say this, now that I have been recognized. Mr. Austin answered a question very quickly for Mr. Downs by saying "no" — and he referred to whether or not this would affect bonds. Well, I don't think that any good banker, any good investment company in the entire United States would want to invest in Michigan highway bonds when they read that the constitutional convention assembled here today gives our treasurer the right to juggle these highway funds, earmarked funds.

Now, in the last paragraph it says

> The state shall not subscribe to, nor be interested in the stock of any company, association or corporation, except that funds accumulated to provide retirement or pension benefits for public officials and employees and endowment funds may be invested as provided by law.

Now, the legislature may, after this goes through, decide that it is all right for the retirement systems to invest in highway bonds. You can be well assured that as a member of the board of trustees of the Detroit system pension fund — and that does amount to approximately $200 million — I am not going to be crazy enough to invest in bonds when I know that there is a juggling of highway funds. And I believe that that is what you are going to have everybody thinking.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I believe I should respond to the comments.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Very well. Delegate Hanna did yield but you may answer those points. (laughter)

MR. AUSTIN: I believe this is proper procedure, is it not? I would like to make it clear that in answering Delegate Downs I was merely stating that the language that has been suggested would not affect the obligation of the state in regard to any bonds that we now have. I thought that was his question.

I would not presume to tell you what would happen to the bond market, that is, what effect this provision would have on the sale of bonds. I think that answer should be left to someone who is more competent to give the answer, and I hope that everyone understands that I was only talking about our obligation under our bonds.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Austin, in the last part of this line 22, you have "may establish". Would this defeat your entire purpose if you inserted the word "shall"?

MR. AUSTIN: I can not say for all of the members of the committee because we discussed the possibility of using both "may" and "shall". I do not believe we defeat our purpose if we use the term "shall".

MR. W. F. HANNA: The second question. As to "when due", is there anything here to assure that they will be paid in the order that the obligation became due, or is there discretion left in the treasurer to pick out those items that are due and of those items pay part and leave part of them to remain?

MR. AUSTIN: Yes, he would have that same discretion that he has now.

MR. W. F. HANNA: If he is going to follow this procedure, should your language not read, then, ". . . when due in the order that the obligation became due" so that he is not accused of favoring one department or one group of creditors over another?

MR. AUSTIN: I am not absolutely sure that that language is necessary to be added because I think the impression we want to convey is that he will honor all obligations when they are due and I think there is a presumption — certainly an assumption — that if one item is due before another, that it would be paid before one that is due subsequent thereto.

MR. W. F. HANNA: If a general cash deficit results from this language, I assume then that you are saying that the legislature shall at its next regular or special session levy sufficient taxes to raise cash revenues to reimburse any fund or earmarked obligation?

MR. AUSTIN: I think you have hit a key point here and one which maybe we have overlooked in our discussion, and that is that our problems in the management of moneys are not going to be solved until we have sufficient tax revenue to pay all obligations. The problem is that we have a $71 million deficit which has to be managed by someone, and the responsibility seems to be that of the treasurer. And if you expect him to do the job well, you've got to give him the freedom that he needs to handle the money properly.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Austin, should there not then be a limitation of time during which this procedure can continue so that it does not go on, starting with the first month of a fiscal year and continuing thereafter for 11 months, without some requirement that the governor call the legislature into special session, and if they fail to act in 90 days, this practice should cease? Otherwise, it is conceivable that the failure of the legislature so to act in appropriating or levying sufficient revenue ultimately would result in a specific earmarked fund, such as highway funds or sales tax diverted to local schools, being put off and put off, and in turn, each fund remains bankrupt, and local governments, to wit, county road commissions or school districts who have based their local budgets for a fiscal year on the estimated funds to be received from designated or earmarked funds, not receiving even a substantial percentage thereof over a period of years.

MR. AUSTIN: Again, this gets back to a question that was raised earlier as to what should be done if the legislature does not act to fulfill its full responsibility. I do not know what we can do to require the legislature to do whatever it must do, but I would like to get back to this question of the management of moneys.

The schools are complaining now that they do not get their money soon enough. And it is not because of any mismanagement of the school money. It is simply that there just isn't enough money to do the job.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Austin, my only comment is that it seems to me that while the treasurer should have management of the funds, and I agree with the principle by which you are trying to enunciate some method that can eliminate this should be placed in connection with this section, even if it means that you put in a penalty provision someplace in the constitution, that the legislature shall no longer draw its pay until it performs its obligations. (laughter)

MR. AUSTIN: Well now, I am wondering if that would not be appropriate for either the committee on legislative powers or some other committee. I do not believe that that is the responsibility of this committee.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: May the Chair restate that the question, of course, is on the committee amendments offered by Delegate Austin. I have tried to keep track of the people standing around here and I think that Delegate Norris has been very patient.

Do you wish to speak on these pending amendments, Delegate Norris?

MR. NORRIS: Yes, Mr. Chairman. I think the observations I have are related and germane. I think the discussion thus far indicates that we are in a pretty delicate area and I would suggest here that we would bear in mind the purpose that Mr. Austin has suggested to us, and on that purpose I wish to oppose what is now pending. The idea is to give the treasurer more flexibility and discretion with regard to where he derives money to pay expenses of the state and to do this in such a way as to impair the demarcations clearly delineated in the past by constitutional amendment for earmarked purposes.

The schools and the highways have worked hard over a period of some decades to secure earmarking in order to protect the integrity of their function. And what you are doing here is taking certain steps to undermine the integrity of that function, in my judgment. I think what is happening is because the ineptitude and inadequacy of the legislature in the financial field, which has led to payless paydays, and so forth, that we've seen — and which brought about the existence of this convention, incidentally — is compounded.

What is going to happen under this particular proposal to accomplish this objective? The legislature does not appropriate enough; there is not enough money coming in as was anticipated for the earmarking. So they are going to rob Peter to pay Paul. And by continuing to do that, we are not going to get the kind of functions that we intended to accomplish by earmarking in the first instance. I don't think that this particular proposition can be appraised independently of what is a sine qua non of this convention, and that is to develop a satisfactory tax and financial structure necessary to meet the needs of the state. We are doing this on a piecemeal basis by this particular proposition, and by doing it in this fashion, we are not acquitting ourselves of the responsibility that we have to the people that elected us.

I oppose this particular section that is before us, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Brake, do you wish to comment?

MR. BRAKE: Yes, I would like to comment to the effect that we are trying to put into the constitution what is already in the statute and that which is already being done; and to call your attention to the fact that sometimes just plain necessity is a pretty powerful law. Three times in the time that I have been around state government we have had to resort to what could not be avoided, even though we did not have the legal sanction to do it. The legislature has authorized just exactly what we are proposing here. It is being done; it has been done. Some day somebody is going to take that to the supreme court. That is what we are thinking about in putting it into the constitution.

Sanford Brown was before us this morning. He said that recently, time after time, payment is due the schools. There is not enough money in the school fund to meet it but there is money in the general fund. Part of it is highway money; part of it is conservation money; part of it is civil service money. It is taken and the schools are paid. In a few days the money is back. And we go on doing the same thing the next time it happens. What are you going to do? Tell the road people, "Go on, build your roads; make your contracts; let's have roads. It's your money"? And let people go hungry? Close your institutions? Close up your payroll? Certainly, there ought to be more money. Certainly, it ought to be raised. But what are you going to do in the meantime when you've got these kinds of necessities before you?

While I am on my feet I want to answer what was said about that bond business. There are so few words in this proposal — and I assumed that that was one of the objectives of this convention, not to overload the thing with details — there are so few words that a lot of us are missing some of them. Mr. Madar missed one. This excepts anything required for a contractual obligation. Your bond is a contractual obligation. If the legislature were to authorize the taking of money which would leave nothing to meet bonds, it would be violating exactly what we have said, and that is so for the fiduciary and other items here.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, may I answer that, please?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: If you want to answer that particular point.

MR. MADAR: I did not make any mistake in regard to that particular section, Mr. Chairman. I said that if the legislature gave us the right to purchase this type of bond, I certainly would not recommend the purchase of them. I did not misunderstand it.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Marshall, do you wish to speak on the committee amendments?

MR. MARSHALL: Against the amendments, Mr. Chairman. But I would like to ask a question, in closing, of Mr. Austin.

I agree with Mr. Brake that under the present method that is being used we might some day have someone go to the supreme court with it. I am not so sure that they should not do just that. I would ask Mr. Austin, in making it possible to make a raid on funds that people have earmarked for a specific purpose, such as highway and schools and others, at the same time not having any constitutional guarantee for the repayment of this money, aren't we being somewhat hypocritical?

On the one hand, I know some of us — I don't know the position of all the delegates — have very strong, deepseated viewpoints on the question of earmarked funds in certain areas. We want to see these earmarked funds used for the purpose for which they were earmarked. It seems to me under this proposal that what we are doing, constitutionally, is making it possible to make a raid upon any of these earmarked funds at any time with absolutely no guarantee — as I read this provision — or limitation upon time to repay. To me this would completely do away with earmarked funds. And too, we are trying to erase an image in this proposal of the legislature's failure to act to raise the necessary funds and this would simply make it much easier for the legislature to measure up to its responsibility in this all important area.

For these reasons I am opposed to the amendments.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Is there a rejoinder on behalf of the committee?

MR. AUSTIN: I think that he is right in expressing the view that it would be possible for the legislature or for the treasurer, having been authorized by the legislature, to use earmarked moneys where he felt that those were needed for other purposes. But the obligation is there to place the money back. And if you are of the view that this is an unsatisfactory arrangement, you would vote no on this proposal.

MR. MARSHALL: May I ask Delegate Austin one question?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Proceed.

MR. MARSHALL: You state that the obligation is there to repay the money. If this is true — and I can see where maybe the obligation might be there — is there any specific provision that guarantees that they have to meet the obligation?

MR. AUSTIN: Well, as clearly as we can state it.

> The legislature shall provide by law for the use of all state resources to pay all state obligations when due regardless of fund classification, subject to any fiduciary, contractual or constitutional obligations to which the state is pledged.

MR. MARSHALL: I am in the same boat you are in, Dick. I am not an attorney but I don't believe this makes it mandatory.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: Mr. Chairman, could I have a point of order, please? I think there may be a little confusion here but I would just like for my own information, so we can understand ourselves, the proposal that was printed up, the green sheet, has now been amended with just a minor change. In effect, it has substantially the same meaning.

As I understand it, all we vote for is to amend it. We don't necessarily vote it down. If we voted it down we would not change the meaning a great deal. So in this process, don't we just keep amending it? We vote on something. Then if we do not like that, we amend that. So you can not in effect vote it down, can you?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Not right at this moment.

The question pending is on the committee amendments, which I think are not on the green sheet. They are on a white sheet, aren't they?

MR. STAFSETH: The thing I am getting at, Mr. Chairman, is that they are arguing more in the line of what my amendment would deal with than what the committee's amendments are dealing with right now. If they voted on this so we could get into the new area, I think we would open it up to where they could discuss it and either accept it or reject it.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The question is still on Mr. Austin's amendments.

Mr. Mahinske, you have been waiting a long time. Do you wish to speak on those amendments?

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. Chairman, I wish to speak against the amendments and against the committee report and against the submission of the committee report at this time.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Don't go too far. Just take the Austin amendments. (laughter)

MR. MAHINSKE: On the amendments to the report, I have to agree with Mr. Marshall, that this—in my interpretation—leaves the raiding of funds wide open here. There is absolutely no guarantee that the repayment has to be made. The inclusion of the phrase "when due" would lead me to believe that an interpretation could justifiably be had here that "when due" also applies to fiduciary and contractual obligations up to the point when the fiduciary and contractual obligations absolutely have to be met; that these trusts or funds could be violated until such time as payment must be made under the trust fund or the contractual obligation, which would take in highway bonds.

Also, the clause here that really bothers me and leads me to believe that this is a basic, fundamental policy that the legislature will have to follow to implement the whole finance and taxation article of the constitution is the phrase "constitutional obligations". At this point the committee on finance and taxation has come out with this report only. We have before us no idea or indications of what, if any, constitutional obligations there will be written into this article of the constitution. It seems to me that until we know that there are going to be constitutional obligations, we don't know that there are going to be any earmarked funds, so called.

At this time I would have to rise in opposition—as I mentioned before—to the amendments for the same reasons that I would be opposed to the committee report itself.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Do you wish to speak, Delegate Austin?

MR. AUSTIN: Yes. I would like to know whether you are suggesting we postpone action on this until you get the rest of article X? Is that what you are referring to?

MR. MAHINSKE: I think that—because you are talking about constitutional obligations in addition to fiduciary and contractual obligations—until we know what constitutional obligations there are, we can't intelligently pass this basic policy procedure that we are laying down for the legislature in finance and taxation.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Austin has pointed out you are not adopting anything in the constitution at this stage of the game because there is a second reading and a third reading coming along a little later. But you are within your bounds in suggesting that these amendments be voted down or that anything be deferred if there is any such motion. But right now the question is on the Austin amendments.

Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I have attempted to answer all questions related to any aspect of this proposal. It is my feeling that at this point it might be best to confine the questions just to the language which I have proposed in the amendments, to see whether or not the delegates approve of the improvement in the language which the committee voted this morning. You see, this language was presented on behalf of the committee to clear up some ambiguities which were raised in the committee this morning and I am just hopeful that we can confine our questions right now to these amendments and then take up the question of the section following that. In that way we may be able to get through something here.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I don't like to keep a lady standing so long and Miss Donnelly has been on her feet for a good time.

MISS DONNELLY: Thank you. Whether we're ladies or not, we have to stand on our feet too, and this is the procedure to get recognition. Back to the issue though, there is no question in your mind, is there, Mr. Austin, that this provision as written at this moment with your amendments still allows the use of earmarked funds as we know them, and if we were to retain it in the constitution it will allow their temporary use?

MR. AUSTIN: Yes, it will. It will permit temporary use of earmarked funds.

MISS DONNELLY: There is no question?

MR. AUSTIN: No.

MISS DONNELLY: On that basis, I must oppose that issue at this time.

May I also go to a term nobody has gone into—and I hate to confuse things more—but the use of "all state resources" is a term which to me is very ambiguous. Regardless of whether we are going to use earmarked funds or evade them or invade them or not, "state resources" can involve all resources in the aspect of natural resources as well as assets which we can bring in and cash, and what have you. Has your committee considered another term which could indicate to all that you do not intend to utilize, in effect, the water? In backing these obligations, you intend to use the cash resources which you may collect?

MR. AUSTIN: The term "all resources" is subject to legal interpretation and I will not presume to be competent to answer that question directly. I am wondering if some other member of the committee would be willing to answer that question.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Van Dusen, are you rising to do that?

MR. VAN DUSEN: That was my purpose, Mr. Chairman, yes. The committee considered the use of the term "resources" and considered it confined to what we normally consider intangible liquid resources, such as securities, cash, money.

MISS DONNELLY: Couldn't they use "assets" as opposed to "resources?"

MR. AUSTIN: That would mean the same thing.

MISS DONNELLY: It would mean the same thing for your purposes but I think it may remove question. Did you go over this word?

MR. VAN DUSEN: We went over this word for at least 20 minutes and concluded because the word "resources" was used in the context of the present constitution, it was a good word to be continued in the proposed new constitution.

MISS DONNELLY: I would have to object to that too if we are going to other resources in the proposed new constitution.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Bentley, did you wish to speak on the Austin amendments?

MR. BENTLEY: Yes, Mr. Chairman, on the specific amendment of the insertion of the words "when due". I would like to say that I have been very impressed by the committee presentation, specifically the presentation of Mr. Austin in this respect. But I would like to ask one question. As chairman of the committee on education, I have been aware that there have been many of our local school districts throughout the state that have been seriously embarrassed at times through the failure or the tardiness of the state in making the payments to these districts under the school aid fund. My question is this: if these earmarked funds can be temporarily used for other purposes, is this likely to further delay the payment to these local school districts, thus forcing them to continue and even increase the practice of borrowing at burdensome rates of interest from local sources? Or rather, Mr. Austin, does the committee on finance and taxation contemplate subsequently any increase in the present constitutional borrowing authority of the state to permit the state to borrow at rates of interest which would be lower than are available to most of these local districts?

MR. AUSTIN: Thank you for the compliment, Delegate Bentley. I think it is appropriate to explain something that I hoped I would not have to say, and that is that it is quite possible that with the language that we have suggested, the schools may fare a little better. I am reluctant to say that because it means that perhaps someone may be hurt. But the point is that if we can get this language into the constitution, it is quite possible that there will be a little more freedom to provide moneys for schools when due. As it is now, the treasurer is somewhat handicapped in being able to find money to send to the schools. This may give him a little more freedom. Does that answer your question?

MR. BENTLEY: Most satisfactorily. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, if I might simply elaborate briefly on Mr. Austin's fine answer to Mr. Bentley's question. The committee has also had under consideration and has adopted in substance, a proposal which will increase the short term working capital borrowing power of the state which would enable the state to do the kind of borrowing which the school districts are now forced to do because of the inability of the state to do it. So while it is not incorporated in this proposal, it is one on which the committee has already acted tentatively without as yet deciding the exact language.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: If I might, Mr. Chairman, I would like to revert to a little bit of history here because as I understand the committee proposal, it effectively vetoes or negatives the provisions of the second paragraph of section 23, which specifically provides that 2 cents of the state sales tax

> . . . so collected shall be deposited in a special school aid fund and be expendable only by legislative appropriations, for aid to the school districts and school employees retirement purposes as shall be provided by law.

A further sentence states, "Said school aid fund shall be separate and distinct from the state general fund."

I think that the committee's amendments are in clear contradiction of that section of the constitution. And I assumed from the questions and from the discussion I have had with the committee members, that they recognize this and that they intend to provide a deletion of at least the last sentence of that second paragraph in section 23 and 1 or 2 words above there, to make possible the proposal which is now before us to be effective and not in contradiction of another section of the constitution. The section that I am quoting from was enacted, I believe, in 1954. It became effective in '55 and it was enacted because we went through a crisis at that time in which we simply did not have enough money and we were accumulating a very large deficit. I think it didn't run to $70 million, but it ran to $40 or $50 million, and as auditor general I was unable to pay the schools. There were other very pressing needs that are not in the constitution. There was no provision of that kind. So the schools had to wait, and they did wait, and they were very patient. They waited for long periods of time—in fact, several months some of them—and they borrowed very heavily, and in many instances they paid very substantial sums by way of interest for their borrowing, which was not repaid to them because when they were finally paid out of the school moneys, they were not paid the interest which they had had to pay for the money which they borrowed.

For that reason I was especially interested in this proposed change because I do not think that the schools will want to find themselves back in that situation again. I am sure they won't. And I do not want to see them in that situation.

In talking with members of the committee I was assured—and Mr. Van Dusen has just brought out the point—that they do propose to introduce a provision with respect to borrowing on tax anticipation notes, which would give the state some authority for short time borrowing to meet situations of this kind, where there was a shortage or an insufficient amount of money to pay all obligations, particularly if these earmarking provisions prevailed. That change providing such authority to borrow might meet this problem. I would want to at least consider whether it did or not when I saw what that provision was. But I don't see how the committee can intelligently vote on this provision as it stands now without knowing what kind of a provision there will be with respect to additional borrowing. I, of course, assume Mr. Van Dusen is correct when he says the committee is coming forth with some such proposal.

It seems to me that if the committee is going to amend section 23, and possibly section 22, to make it fit the proposal which it now submits, if that is necessary, that this matter, if it is passed, should be delayed or held in the committee on style and drafting until the other provisions catch up with it, or else should be referred back to the committee. I would be satisfied with either provision.

I want to get along with these things, but this is a very, very important provision to a very large number of people throughout the state and we are just lacking the factor in the equation to know whether the problem can be cured in some other way than it is now being handled.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Delegate Martin raises a very significant point. It is true that the committee is contemplating revision of the section dealing with the borrowing power of the legislature and it is also considering a small change in the one he referred to in section 23. There would be no change necessary in section 22 because section 22 does not provide for a separate fund. It merely states that the highway revenue shall be earmarked. But section 23 does provide for a separate fund which shall be separate from the others.

There is a legitimate reason, as I see it, for withholding a view on this proposal until you see what we do with section 23. That is my personal view. There may be other views on the committee. Mr. Chairman, would you care to express a view on that?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Powell, acting as our chairman, gave the only answer I can give on that to Mr. Martin or anybody else. We can not pass the whole constitution at once.

What the committee has in mind—and it has been agreed to except for detail in language—is that short term borrowing shall be permitted, if the legislature authorizes it, up to 15 per cent of the unrestricted revenues of the previous year, which at the present time would run somewhere in the neighborhood of $50 million, or possibly $60 million, all to be repaid within the fiscal year in which it is borrowed. In other words, it is a borrowing against incoming taxes. That, however, is not a substitute for what we are trying to put here for better management of the state's funds. It would help and would often avoid any taking of restricted funds for any purpose other than for which they were restricted, but it would not be a complete answer to the problem.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: I would like to rise in support of the committee amendments by Mr. Austin, for I feel that this addition clarifies our financial situation and will help guide the legislature in meeting its payments when due. I feel this will not only help us manage money better but establish a pattern in our state for recognition throughout the country that we intend, constitutionally, to pay our bills when due. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I rise to a point of information. I think Mr. Van Dusen could answer this. The first sentence in both the amended language and the section as submitted by the committee says, "The legislature shall provide by law for the use of all state resources to pay all state obligations." Does your interpretation of this go so far as to allow the state to issue full faith and credit bonds for the payment of any obligation?

MR. VAN DUSEN: No.

MR. MAHINSKE: Do you feel it could legitimately be interpreted to mean that?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Mahinske, no.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Kelsey.

MR. KELSEY: I rise in opposition to the amendments, Mr. Chairman. And I wonder what happened to the rule on the maker of a motion being able to speak twice, unless it doesn't apply to the committee of the whole.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: It does not apply here. It is unrestricted debate.

MR. KELSEY: Thank you very kindly. Let me first, in respect to the committee on finance and taxation, acknowledge that I certainly appreciate that they are trying to take a bad situation and correct it. We know that there have been irregularities in this area of making payments to different institutions and using this money. However, I don't want to open the door any further to allow the people on the "hill", when they come here in January, to drag their heels.

We have heard our great president say to us that we have to have responsibility right here in the state. We have had adversaries, of another ideology, say that they are going to bury us. They tell us this in this very area of dollars and cents. I say we should defeat this at least until we have a tax structure that we can accept, that we will be sure that we will have the moneys, that the legislature will act and take the able members of both parties and go over on the "hill" after we come back after our adjournment, and get them to do something about this fiscal problem, and not delay it any more and drag our heels. I am against the amendments and I would like to have this entire delegation join me if it is at all possible.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I would just like to remind us—and I think we need to remind ourselves—that one of the compelling arguments for this convention was that we would have the time, in a deliberative, responsible sense, to solve those problems that were difficult for the legislature because of the pressures of day to day financial problems. And I say that if we are to be successful, that finance and taxation is one of the main things we should do. I would hope that first we would put in the constitution a sound provision to insure adequate revenue provided equitably for the people of this state. And secondly, if we need to borrow, to provide full faith and credit rather than to get off to what was called robbing Peter to pay Paul.

Now, getting back to this amendment, I think it either does too much or too little, and I am not quite sure which. (laughter) If the words "the legislature shall" are legally meaningless, then it does nothing. If the term "shall" is a moral suasion that is carried out, then that applies to all state resources when due, and if I read that properly, then the legislature would have to sell the little pigs at Michigan State University until the $71 million debt is liquidated.

I think that that is not the approach. I think that, unfortunately, this is taking an approach that is an oblique attack on earmarking. And earmarking again, we should remember, was adopted by the vote of the people to assure the people that tax payments would be spent as the people provided on the ballot. I, for one, would not want to limit the earmarking provisions that the people voted for.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. McLogan.

MR. McLOGAN: Mr. Chairman, as a layman, I rise to speak in favor of the Austin amendments, based on what I consider to be a matter of simple logic. Here is a report of a specialized committee on a matter most technical. I, for one, being a layman, would be willing to favorably consider their considered judgment. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: I think we are again faced with the problem of whether we are speaking on the Austin amendments or whether we are speaking on the committee proposal. At least in my own mind the Austin amendments aren't too controversial. I think maybe for just good parliamentary order we ought to get these out of the way and then get on to the other question and decide whether we are going to put it over, or what we're going to do.

Therefore, I move the previous question.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The question is on the committee amendments offered by Mr. Austin. All in favor, signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendments are adopted.

A while ago Mr. Stafseth had an amendment here.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, a point of order. I make the point of order that a motion to put the previous question is not permissible in the committee of the whole.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I didn't even hear it. It certainly is not permissible in the committee of the whole. I did not recognize that such a motion had been proposed.

I call attention to the fact that after this has been adopted here, as I understand it, there is on the secretary's desk an amendment proposed by Delegate Stafseth which the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Delegate Stafseth offers the following amendment: —

MR. STAFSETH: Just a minute, Mr. Secretary. May I say this first? There is more than a reasonable doubt in my mind — I assumed, when I offered that amendment, that the reaction of the people on the floor would be to allow this using of funds intermingled. If that is the case and you have the Austin amendments, the purpose of my amendment would be to guarantee that the bonds that somebody else had on revenues would be protected. After you read it, I will comment a little more.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Stafseth offers the following amendment to Committee Proposal 11:

1. Amend page 1, line 18, after "resources" by inserting a comma and "except funds dedicated by the constitution to a specific purpose,"; so that the language will then read:

> The legislature shall provide by law for the use of all state resources, except funds dedicated by the constitution to a specific purpose, to pay all state obligations when due regardless of fund classification. . . .

and so forth.

MR. STAFSETH: I think this amendment is pretty clear. There is no question about it that this is a case where you have a revenue. I think from the statement of Mr. Brown in the committee this morning he gave clear evidence that the more you can guarantee a revenue account or a revenue fund that is coming into the state, the better chance you have of a lower interest rate.

I might say at the time the highway bonds were sold in the state of Michigan we got rates that were comparable to some general obligation bonds for some of the school districts. In other words, we got very favorable rates in selling these bonds, and one of the things it was predicated on was the existing constitution which guaranteed that all the funds that were collected from gas and weight taxes were pledged to the paying off of these bonds. In addition to the amount you pay off, you have an additional amount which gives an extra safety factor. And I think this is important.

We may be faced in the next 100 years that maybe all our schools may get out of the property situation and they will be on a revenue bond basis. Maybe they will have to use this provision. They would have the same protection. This is basically all I want to say on the amendment, although there is just one thing I would like to see on this money management that was just brought to my attention. One of the reasons that the committee had for adding this new language was so that you could intermingle funds. Now, one thing I want to point out to the committee is that if you had funds that were laying in an account for a period of time, you could buy government certificates and you could earn money on those funds. Then you could turn around — which the committee proposes to do, or thinks that it will propose to do — and let the treasurer go out and borrow the money and pay interest.

So you have very little difference. But if you had this money management of the funds that are in the accounts and are earning this interest, you would not have very much gain in interest in today's market. You would make money. If you had money today in government certificates, you could get more interest than it would cost you to borrow them on short term notes. So it is not very far apart. I just make that comment.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, if that is the wish of the committee, Mr. Stafseth's amendment should be to strike out everything after the first sentence. Everything that is left we can do now. We need no constitutional provision for it whatsoever. It strikes out every change that we have tried to make. So his amendment should be to strike out everything from the proposal in this paragraph — not the others — after the sentence "No money shall be paid out of the state treasury except in pursuance of appropriations made by law."

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: I so move to amend.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Stafseth. We should not interpose another amendment.

Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: Mr. Chairman, I will be very glad to withdraw my amendment if the committee of the whole would like to vote on Mr. Nord's amendment first. Then if they are successful in that, they would not need my amendment.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Stafseth withdraws his amendment with that understanding. I believe Mr. Nord made a motion. Do you want to restate your motion to amend?

MR. NORD: I would like to make that motion and speak in support of it.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: What is your amendment?

MR. NORD: My amendment is:

1. Amend page 1, line 17, after "law.", by striking out the balance of the line and all of lines 18 through 24 and all of lines 1 through 5 on page 2.

The reason for this amendment is that whatever effort we have promised that may be made later by this committee to permit borrowing by the schools, whatever other approach you may have as suggested to guarantee people who hold bonds, that is the wrong approach in my opinion. The people we have to protect are the children in the schools. They are not going to be protected unless we have earmarked funds for the schools. I might say further I don't take the view that every earmarked fund is sacred. There are some earmarked funds I would like to get rid of, but the school is not one. And if we take the approach we are taking here, we cannot take them up piecemeal. I would like to consider earmarked funds one at a time and decide whether highways are entitled to priority over schools, for example, and so on. But if we take the approach we have been taking, we must do this to all earmarked funds, and that means some funds which we certainly do not wish to attack. I think we should leave the earmarked funds alone until we get to them in the constitution one by one, treat them, decide which ones we want and which we do not.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The portion of the report that we have before us is the second section. We have adopted the Austin amendments. Now it is proposed we strike out everything from this section except the first sentence, which says "No money shall be paid out of the state treasury except in pursuance of appropriations made by law." Any discussion?

Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, I move that we lay this question over to next week. I join Dr. Anspach's kid that spells "confused" with a "K" at this point and I am neither ready at this point to vote on Mr. Austin's amendments or Mr. Nord's amendment or to the proposal. And I certainly would like some opportunity to look into this matter, discuss it with members of the committee on finance and taxation, and to move intelligently. I recognize that we should move this along but I am getting more and more perturbed as I listen to these gentlemen.

Mr. Martin shows how it is tied with another provision. And unless we get these out more than just as subject matter — more than an article, but in an entire subject matter — we are going to lose some continuity and certainly, I, for one, feel perfectly ignorant at this point to vote on either amendment.

The coaches say to move the committee rise. I will so move.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I was just going to put your other motion, but this is the one you have now placed. The motion is in order.

Delegate W. F. Hanna moves that the committee of the whole do now rise.

Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: I am not going to speak on this question but before we rise, I do want to make a motion. It has to do with —

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I think you would not strictly be in order. The question is on the motion to rise, which is equivalent to adjournment of the committee of the whole. Can't your statement be made after the committee rises? We will still be here.

MR. CUDLIP: I would just ask for information. I was going to ask under rule 40 that we reconsider our action in connection with article X, section 20, which was discussed in this committee of the whole, and I thought I should do it or we should consider it before we rise. If it can be done later when we do rise and get back to the convention session, why, O.K. I do not know the parliamentary rule.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order that under rule 39 a motion to rise shall be decided without debate. I ask for a division on this motion.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I think there is no argument about it. There is nothing in order except to vote on this motion to rise.

I will say that after the committee rises, the whole convention has to act on anything that has been done in committee, and there will be an opportunity at that time to accept or reject the progress made in the committee of the whole.

The question is on the motion that the committee of the whole do now rise. Those in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion does not prevail.

Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: There was a division requested, Mr. Chairman, and I would ask that you use the board for that purpose.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Is the demand supported? I have ruled that the vote was in the negative, that we did not decide to rise. If you want to still have another vote on it, that can be done.

Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: A point of order. I don't think, Mr. Chairman, a division is permissible under our rules.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The parliamentarian rules it can be demanded.

Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, Delegate Bentley asked for a division but I believe under rule 41, the yeas and nays shall not be called under the committee of the whole.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: That is correct. It is not a record roll call. I think if it is your desire to have the board used, that should be done to expedite it, but it would not be a record.

The question is now on the motion that the committee do rise. We will use the voting machine. All in favor will vote aye. Those opposed, vote no.

Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the question that the committee rise, the yeas are 49; the nays are 69.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The motion does not prevail.

I believe Mr. Nord had an amendment pending. The secretary will read the amendment as it is now before us.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Nord has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 17, after "law.", by striking out the balance of the line and all of lines 18 through 24 and all of lines 1 through 5 on page 2.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The question is on the amendment just read by the secretary.

Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct a question to Mr. Austin, if I may, with regard to the significance of this amendment. In particular, I had understood originally that it was the intent of the committee to permit the commingling of operating funds and that this permission would be expeditious in the administration and handling of state moneys. In other words, I am not sure that this statement was consistent with what Mr. Brake has said, that everything else might just as well be stricken out if Mr. Stafseth's amendment were adopted with regard to excepting earmarked funds.

Do you have my question now? I am a little confused, but I am trying. My original understanding was that there were operating funds that you intended to permit the state to commingle for administrative purposes that were not earmarked funds. Is that right?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: I am going to try to give a little history which may not be strictly accurate, but I think it will give you a pretty good idea what the problem is. I think most of you recall the payless paydays back in 1959 when there was money in the treasury. The treasurer was unable to meet payrolls simply because he was afraid to use some of the money that was available, some of the money that was in the treasury. The legislature, as I understand it, has been enacting temporary legislation, which expired at the end of each year, to authorize him to commingle funds. Should the legislature fail to renew this temporary legislation, the treasurer is in trouble. He is very much concerned that we do something to make permanent this right of his to commingle the money on a temporary basis to meet whatever bills are due. I don't know whether this completely answers your question, but does it, in essence, give you what you want?

MR. HIGGS: No. When you speak of the cash crisis in 1959 and the fact that there were moneys in the treasury, and that the legislature authorized the use of these moneys, were those particular moneys earmarked moneys or not?

MR. AUSTIN: Oh, yes.

MR. HIGGS: They were?

MR. AUSTIN: Earmarked moneys are used now on a temporary basis for all purposes. This should be made clear to everyone. All we are doing is legalizing what is being done now.

MR. HIGGS: Are we talking about the legislature authorizing the use of constitutionally earmarked moneys or legislatively earmarked moneys?

MR. AUSTIN: Well, let me put it this way. It is my understanding that all operating moneys that come into the treasury are available for general purposes on a temporary basis.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Higgs, the amendment proposed by Mr. Stafseth would prevent the intermingling of anything that is constitutionally earmarked. All that would leave of earmarked funds would be legislative earmarked funds, of which the principal item is the intangibles tax. But this is not self executing. This would not be effective until acted upon by the legislature and the legislature can act upon statutorily earmarked funds without our saying anything about it so that we can do everything that we could do with the amendment that was proposed without putting anything in the constitution at all. Therefore, if that is the wish of the committee, there is no need of all this extra language. We have everything that we would be able to do, and we could do it all right now. Have I made that clear to you?

MR. HIGGS: I believe you have, Mr. Brake.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. Chairman, I simply want to rise to oppose the proposed Nord amendment.

I have some doubts too and some fears about earmarked funds, particularly highway funds. If this proposed amendment is adopted it would not give this committee an opportunity at all to attempt to handle what we recognize as being a good bookkeeping practice, and that is the intermingling of funds. There isn't any question about that. It is standard bookkeeping practice throughout the land.

I wonder if we are not losing sight of something, Mr. Austin. I have heard a lot of terms used. You have used the term "management of money" and you have also used the term "management of a deficit." Now, I wonder if all this language that the Nord amendment would strike out isn't in fact put in there in an effort to manage a deficit.

MR. AUSTIN: I would agree with you but the one other point I want to make while I am on my feet is that we not confuse this subject with bookkeeping. We are not talking about the bookkeeping of this money. We are actually talking about the handling of the money. And I want to make sure that everyone understands that this is not an accounting problem that we are discussing now. This is the actual management of the money itself.

MR. FARNSWORTH: That's the point I'd like to clear up. You say it is the management and the handling of money. But my point is: isn't it actually to enable you to manage a deficit?

MR. AUSTIN: Oh, yes, I'll agree.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Where there is a deficit, there is no money. (laughter)

MR. AUSTIN: Deficit in the general fund means that moneys from elsewhere have been used. You see, it would be impossible to manage a deficit unless you were getting the money from somewhere. If you are not borrowing it from the bank, it may be someone else. It may be creditors; it may be some earmarked money; it may be any source. If you have a deficit and you are managing it, you are using money that belongs to someone other than the general fund.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: As a member of the committee looking into this matter, we considered very seriously this problem of commingling of funds, and I feel that Dr. Nord's amendment would completely destroy our intent and our study of the needs of our state government. Therefore, I would vigorously oppose his amendment. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Nord, as the sponsor of the pending amendment, I will recognize you again.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I would like to point out 2 things. As I said before, what we are doing here in one fell swoop is to impair all earmarked funds. Some are good; some are bad. We are not going to discriminate between them. We are going to injure every one of them.

Secondly, as to intermingling of funds, I have heard those words used many times here and the last time I heard them used, they were used in the sense that this is merely an accounting procedure. I would like to dissent extremely strongly from that.

As a teacher of criminal law, I would like to remind you that intermingling of trust funds is a crime. I might add that I defended somebody on that account and got them off, but that is beside the point. That is how I happen to know that intermingling of funds is a crime. And even if it were not a crime, it certainly would be extremely immoral. It is just not a bookkeeping procedure. I'll admit my client thought it was. But it was not. (laughter) It is a crime. It is a vicious thing to take somebody's money that is protected — not just like somebody else is considered a creditor of money, but that is earmarked specially for him. It is his money that you take and when you mingle that, even if you never spend it, it is a crime.

Now, it may not be a crime in this particular case, but the moral principle is identical. Let's not think that when we intermingle somebody else's funds with ours, that all we are doing is a little bookkeeping finagling. We are not. We are doing something wrong. Let's not do that.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Does that complete your question, Delegate Upton?

MR. UPTON: I would like to answer it, if I might.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Surely.

MR. UPTON: I believe Dr. Nord is worrying about earmarking of funds. In our committee we are most concerned about this. It was our thought that this would strengthen not only the highway department but the school system and guaranteeing moneys to them.

If schools had had to depend completely upon earmarked funds, they would not be operating today. Therefore, we feel that this is a stronger position than what is now in our constitution.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Nord amendment. As a member of the committee, I made a similar motion this morning, which was defeated in the committee. I think in hearing the discussion here, the same fears and questions have been raised as were raised and discussed in the committee. I feel the same, that on the earmarking, on the bonds, on all of these questions, there are real problems that will develop from this type of a proposal.

On the question of the bonds that Mr. Nord expressed — a question as to existing bonds — this is not the question that was raised in the committee or by the bonding attorneys. It was as to future financing by bonds. If this question is left open, dedicated funds can be diverted temporarily again under the present system or under this proposal without a time limit. This leaves prospective bondholders in a questionable situation as to what funds are going to be available to pay their bonds. As a result, this in turn is going to be reflected, in my opinion — and there is a difference of opinion on the committee — in higher interest rates, which will again mean the taxpayer paying more money to finance the bonds.

I will say that I think the original purpose, the flexibility in treasury management, is an admirable one, but I feel that the way and the approach that we have taken causes many more ills than the ill that it was designed to cure. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I'd like to ask Delegate Austin a question and then perhaps comment. Under the way things are going today, when the treasurer takes from another fund in order to pay a bill, doesn't he replace that money? It isn't a question of the fund actually losing anything. It's simply a question of meeting the financial obligation at that time. Is that correct?

MR. AUSTIN: That's correct. It is a temporary measure.

MR. FAXON: So that under your original amendment here, or the original proposal, none of the present dedicated funds are going to be diminished in terms of how much is going to be appropriated?

MR. AUSTIN: None whatever.

MR. FAXON: All this simply does is to permit a certain degree of flexibility in terms of the financial operation of the state.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Faxon, you put it so beautifully. (laughter)

MR. FAXON: Then I just want to go on record in support of the committee's original proposal.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Austin, before you sit down, would it be possible to accomplish the same thing by providing that the treasurer may borrow a restricted amount for a restricted time by placing tax anticipation notes, we'll say, in the school fund that had to be paid back within 90 days, and that if they paid the current going rate of interest, the school fund would be enhanced by this money? Would you accomplish the same financial management without the danger that the borrowing would continue or the spending of the actual cash would be continued indefinitely if the legislature failed to provide adequate revenue?

MR. AUSTIN: Delegate Hanna, I believe that a borrowing arrangement would accomplish the same end. In fact, temporary borrowing really is what we are talking about, but I think we are making it a little easier to do. I think we would get rather legalistically involved if you attempted to do it.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate John Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. Chairman, I feel the matter we have been discussing is of considerable importance. We have now devoted approximately 2½ hours to the subject. We are only a little more than half way through with our discussion and I know there are going to be questions raised with reference to those sections that have not yet been discussed. I suspect that some of our members are already beginning to leave and I am afraid that in an effort to dispose of this matter this afternoon we may make the wrong decision.

If it is in order, sir, I should like to move that this matter be rereferred to the committee from which it came, with a request that they put all of their amendments on one piece of paper and give the delegates that have questions an opportunity to raise the questions they want to raise with them, hoping that they will have part of them answered when it comes back to the floor.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The motion is in order. The question will be on the motion made by Delegate John Hannah —

MR. MAHINSKE: A point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Just let me state the question — that when the committee rises, it recommend that Committee Proposal 11 be rereferred to the committee on finance and taxation.

MR. MAHINSKE: That the committee rise and not that the proposal be rereferred to the committee, because under rule 41 —

CHAIRMAN POWELL: A more accurate statement would be when the committee does rise, it recommend that Committee Proposal 11 be rereferred to the committee on finance and taxation for printing and reproduction with the pending language.

MR. MAHINSKE: I don't know if that would be in order, Mr. Chairman, because under rule 41, the committee of the whole cannot refer any matter to any committee. We would have to move to rise.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I said with the recommendation that it be rereferred. The final vote would have to be taken by the convention following the rising of the committee of the whole.

The question is on the motion of Delegate John Hannah that when we rise, we report with the recommendation that Committee Proposal 11 be rereferred to the committee on finance and taxation. All in favor, signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails, and that completes the business pending here.

A motion that the committee do now rise would be in order.

Dr. Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Delegates, we have had a very fine discussion this afternoon, which I think is good. This is Christmas. We've had for and against. Therefore, to make everybody feel well, I think we should recall the experience of the good President Abraham Lincoln who wore a big stovepipe hat. He put it on a chair one day and a lady of some size came in and sat down on it. The good president said, "Madame, I could have told you before you sat down that it wouldn't fit." (laughter)

CHAIRMAN POWELL: When I was asked to preside today I remarked to the president that this might be a little controversial and somewhat prolonged. I think that was a mild understatement. (laughter)

What is the pleasure of the committee? Mr. Leppien.

MR. LEPPIEN: I move that the committee rise.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Leppien moves that the committee do now rise. All in favor, signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails and the committee has risen.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration certain proposals, has considered them briefly and the secretary will make a detailed report. (laughter)

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Exclusion Report 2003, A report recommending the exclusion of article X, section 20; and reports the exclusion report back to the convention without amendment and with the recommendation that it be adopted.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of Exclusion Report 2003. All those in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

Exclusion Report 2003 is adopted and referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. President, I don't know at what point of these meetings you make your motion to reconsider. I was out of order earlier before we rose. I want to ask now if I am in order to make a motion that we reconsider the action taken by the committee of the whole. I think we made a mistake. I think we acted too early and I want to know if this is the time to make a motion that we delay this matter until we come back here in 1962 for further consideration.

PRESIDENT NISBET: On what item, Mr. Cudlip?

MR. CUDLIP: Exclusion Report 2003, article X, section 20.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The one that we just adopted? (laughter)

MR. CUDLIP: I guess we did adopt it before I could be heard. I would make a motion then that we reconsider this last vote. Then if the convention decides to reconsider, I would tell my story.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, might I suggest to the Chair that perhaps under the circumstances, since everybody was aware of the fact that Mr. Cudlip wanted to make a motion with regard to this exclusion report as soon as the committee of the whole did rise, that perhaps the Chair was a little bit hasty putting the question before recognizing Mr. Cudlip and that really the question is still upon whether we should concur in the recommendation made by the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you very much, Mr. Hutchinson. I did not realize that Mr. Cudlip had asked this question. The question now then is on the adoption of Exclusion Report 2003.

Mr. Cudlip, now you may speak to the question.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. President, thank you. I don't blame you for this and I know I will be an unpopular fellow because I am delaying the proceedings here for a few minutes.

I wasn't aware until I checked, after hearing from Delegates Hutchinson and Higgs, that this article X, section 20, was only adopted in 1917 and there was no assurance given in response to a question by each of these gentlemen that there is no specially chartered railroad in Michigan at this time. And I can't answer that. We have some old railroads here and there may be some special charters under which they operate. If they do, we should consider this matter carefully, and I just want to point out the following reasons. Let us say back in the days of Governor Mason the state built a railroad. Ventures were failing throughout the middlewest and internal improvements were frowned upon. So the state, like other states, started to sell the railroads to private companies, under special charters — not under corporations that were formed under general laws — and in those charters, as I understand it, there were limitations as to the amount of taxes payable. But there was a reservation to the state that it had the right to buy the railroad. Now, this sounds archaic today, but it isn't. Bear with me. In 1850, after this 1837 panic and thereafter, the 1850 constitution provided that there could be no further internal improvements, meaning that Michigan could build no more canals and railroads. Now Michigan couldn't use its charter provision under which the particular railroad was sold, providing for its taxes, the amount thereof, and the option of the state to repurchase because the Constitution of 1850 said there could be no more internal improvements. Then the United States supreme court ruled that these charters were contracts and must be honored.

In the light of all that, if we have special chartered railroads today — we did have in 1917, because this provision wasn't in the constitution until 1917, and to me that does not seem very long ago — we should not follow the recommendation of the committee of the whole because we could seriously disturb the tax power of the state with respect to these railroads. I don't know the answer, and the purpose for my rising is to suggest that we delay a vote on this matter until we meet next as a committee of the whole, but not earlier than say January 5.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Cudlip, is your motion that this be rereferred to the committee of the whole?

MR. CUDLIP: No, Mr. President. If I am in order, I just suggest that we not vote on the recommendation of the committee of the whole until we get the answer to the question that I have raised, namely: are there any specially chartered railroads in Michigan today? I thought we could delay that vote until a day certain, and I suggest the next time we meet it would be as a committee of the whole, but not earlier than January 5. I'll put it that way.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Cudlip's motion then is that we —

MR. CUDLIP: —delay consideration of the recommendation of the committee of the whole, I'll say till January 5.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion is that we delay consideration of Exclusion Report 2003 until January 5. Is there any discussion?

Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I hesitate to raise any questions with my senior partner so close to the end of the year. (laughter) However, it occurs to me that there may be an easier solution to the problem. The only purpose of section 20 of article X of the present constitution is to get around a problem created by section 14 of article X of the present constitution.

Section 14, the one prohibiting works of internal improvement, is presently in the hands of the committee on legislative powers. I think it might be entirely appropriate for the committee on legislative powers to have this exclusion report in its hands at the same time it is considering what to do with the matter of internal improvements generally. Therefore, I would move the exclusion report be referred to the committee on legislative powers.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: I will withdraw my motion.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you, sir.

The question is on Mr. Van Dusen's motion that Exclusion Report 2003 be referred to the committee on legislative powers.

Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, I was simply going to rise in support of the views of the senior partner and to point out to the senior partner that as a matter of fact there seems to be a taxing power also involved here. If as a matter of fact the special charter of a railroad corporation limited the power of the state relative to taxing that railroad — and that may be in a special charter still outstanding — then this 1917 amendment had as one of its purposes the power of the state to get around that limitation of taxing power. So I think there is more involved than just this internal improvement section 14. However, I would rise in support of the motion to refer it to the committee for further study.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion to refer it to the committee on legislative powers. Is there any further discussion? All in favor, signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Exclusion Report 2003 is referred to the committee on legislative powers.

Mr. Chase.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 10, A proposal to amend article I, section 2 of the present constitution pertaining to the seat of government at Lansing; and reports the proposal back to the convention with the recommendation that it pass.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Pursuant to rule 57, Committee Proposal 10 is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Committee Proposal 10 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 416.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole, Mr. President, has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 11, A proposal to provide for care and control of state funds, accounting for public moneys, audits, and publication of reports, and covering the general subject matter found in sections 15, 16, 17, 18 and 13 of article X of the 1908 constitution; and reports it back to the convention with the recommendation that it be rereferred to the committee on finance and taxation.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The yeas and nays have been demanded. Those in favor, please rise. There is a sufficient number up. Secretary Chase, will you state that question again so everybody understands it?

SECRETARY CHASE: The question is on the recommendation of the committee of the whole that Committee Proposal 11 be rereferred to the committee on finance and taxation.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: I think it was being referred with amendments. I think Mr. Austin's amendments passed.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase, do you want to comment on it?

SECRETARY CHASE: We had a similar situation just a little while ago on another committee proposal.

A motion to recommit takes priority over the motion to amend. It was held, and stated in the journal at that time, that the amendment, even though it had been adopted, was not before the convention for consideration. The question was on the motion to recommit and the amendments and the proposal go back to the committee for their consideration.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the recommendation that Committee Proposal 11 be rereferred. The yeas and nays have been asked for. Those in favor, using the machine, will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted?

SECRETARY CHASE: The machine is now locked and the vote will be recorded.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

Yeas—84

Allen	Gover	Murphy
Andrus, Miss	Greene	Nord
Austin	Habermehl	Prettie
Balcer	Hanna, W. F.	Rajkovich
Barthwell	Hannah, J. A.	Richards, L. W.
Binkowski	Hart, Miss	Romney
Bledsoe	Hatcher, Mrs.	Rood
Bonisteel	Heideman	Rush
Brown, G. E.	Higgs	Shackleton
Brown, T.S.	Hodges	Shaffer
Buback	Hood	Shanahan
Cudlip	Howes	Sleder
Cushman, Mrs.	Hutchinson	Snyder
Dade	Iverson	Spitler
Danhof	Kelsey	Stafseth
DeVries	Kirk, S.	Staiger
Donnelly, Miss	Krolikowski	Sterrett
Doty, Dean	Kuhn	Stevens
Doty, Donald	Lawrence	Stopczynski
Douglas	Lesinski	Suzore
Downs	Liberato	Thomson
Elliott, Mrs. Daisy	Madar	Turner
Erickson	Mahinske	Tweedie
Farnsworth	Marshall	Upton
Faxon	Martin	Wanger
Follo	McAllister	Wilkowski
Ford	McCauley	Young
Garvin	McGowan, Miss	Youngblood

Nays—35

Anspach	Figy	Page
Baginski	Finch	Pollock
Beaman	Goebel	Powell
Bentley	Haskill	Radka
Blandford	Hatch	Richards, J. B.
Boothby	Hubbs	Seyferth
Brake	Karn	Sharpe
Conklin, Mrs.	King	Van Dusen
Davis	Leibrand	White
Durst	Leppien	Woolfenden
Elliott, A. G.	McLogan	Yeager
Everett	Millard

On the question of rereferring Committee Proposal 11, together with the amendments adopted by the committee of the whole, to the committee on finance and taxation, the yeas are 84; the nays, 35.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The recommendation is concurred in and Committee Proposal 11 is rereferred to the committee on finance and taxation.

SECRETARY CHASE: That completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. President, I had a committee meeting scheduled. I would like the committee on judical branch to meet briefly in committee room B for about 5 minutes at the close of the session.

SECRETARY CHASE: I have the following notices of committee meetings:

Subcommittee on amendment and revision will meet in room G, January 3, 1962, Wednesday evening, at 7:00 o'clock p.m. Don Habermehl, chairman.

Committee on Judicial Branch will meet in room B, Wednesday, January 3, 12:30 p.m. This is in addition to the committee meeting immediately following today's session.

It is requested that all members check their mail boxes before leaving convention hall today.

The committee on legislative powers, subcommittees 1 and 2, will meet in room H on Thursday, January 4, at 8:30 a.m. for a hearing on section 5.

There will be a meeting of the subcommittee on eminent domain on Friday, January 5, at 10:00 o'clock a.m. in room G. At this meeting all delegates who have proposals on this topic will be given an opportunity to be heard. Please notify the committee clerk of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule if you wish to appear. Paul Mahinske, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. President, I have 2 notices from the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections. Hearings for delegate proposals dealing with suffrage and elections will be held before our committee on January 3 and January 4 at the regular meeting time. If delegates wish to be heard, get in touch with the committee clerk for the exact time. Second, the proposed report of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections is now being distributed to the members of the judiciary committee and if any of the members of that committee have not received a copy of that report, will you put on the red button and the page will bring it to you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, the executive committee had scheduled a meeting this afternoon which obviously cannot be held. We will hold a meeting of the executive committee after the session on Wednesday afternoon, January 3 to hear delegate proposals which we planned to hear today. All delegates have been notified. If you expected to be heard today, will you please come up after the session on Wednesday, January 3.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. President, at this time I'd like to change the order a little bit. I don't know who was to make the motion, but at this time I would like to move that we adjourn until January 3 at 2:00 o'clock and I want to wish everybody a merry Christmas and a happy new year.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Will you withhold that just a moment until we get through. We don't want to go home yet. We have a lot of time. (laughter) Mr. Chase has an announcement.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Mahinske wishes to be excused from the meetings of January 3 and 4. He has been scheduled to conduct a trial that has been on the docket since prior to the election.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, he is excused. Mr. McAllister.

MR. McALLISTER: Fellow delegates, I notice that our president has been in a quandary for a considerable period of time and after this afternoon's session he seems in a very much disturbed state. So at this time I'd like to present to Stephen S. Nisbet, President of the Constitutional Convention of 1961-62 and -63 (laughter) to aid him in keeping the convention on the level, this little token. (laughter and applause)

[Whereupon, Mr. McAllister presented President Nisbet with an inscribed carpenter's level.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you, Mr. McAllister. I hope that it also says on there "Guaranteeing adjournment on April 1." (laughter) Thank you very much.

Mr. Madar has moved that we adjourn. Would you please make your motion just that we adjourn?

MR. MADAR: Mr. President, I want to make a motion that we adjourn until January 3 and I'm glad you had me defer it until after this presentation because you have been on the level. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Madar, just for a matter of the record, would you please make your motion just that we adjourn. (laughter)

MR. MADAR: I move we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you. The question is on adjournment. Those in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

We are adjourned until 2:00 o'clock January 3, 1962.

[Whereupon, and in pursuance of the order previously made, at 5:05 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned to January 3, 1962, at 2:00 o'clock p.m.]

FORTY-NINTH DAY

Wednesday, January 3, 1962, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The convention will come to order.

The invocation today will be delivered by the delegate from Saginaw, Mr. Leppien.

MR. LEPPIEN: Let us pray. O Lord, our God, if ever we needed Thy wisdom and Thy guidance, it is now—as this convention begins a new session, standing upon the threshold of a new year, fraught with so many dangerous opportunities. We pray that Thou wilt bless us, chosen by the people of this state, for Thou knowest us, our needs, our motives, our hopes, and our fears. Lord Jesus, put Thine arm around us to give us strength and speak to us to give us wisdom greater than our own. May we hear Thy voice and seek Thy guidance. May we remember that Thou art concerned with what is said and done here, and may we have a clear conscience before Thee, that we may fear no man. Bless each of us according to our deepest needs, and use us for Thy glory, we humbly ask in Jesus' name. Amen.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Thank you, Mr. Leppien.

The roll call will be taken by the secretary. All those present will vote aye. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will record the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave:

Mrs. Koeze and Mr. Marshall, from today's session.

Messrs. Page and Young, from the sessions of today and tomorrow.

Messrs. Pellow, Perlich and Wood, from the sessions of today and the balance of the week.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Mrs. Koeze, Messrs. Marshall, Page, Pellow, Perlich, Thomson, Wood and Young.

Absent without leave: None.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair would like to announce to the delegates that President Nisbet is on the floor of the convention, but states that he has difficulty in communicating. He is suffering from a type of laryngitis, or the flu, or whatever it is that has been going around lately, and he asked me to preside simply because he didn't want to trust his voice.

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bentley, for the committee on education, introduces Committee Proposal 13, A proposal respecting the physically, mentally or otherwise seriously handicapped. Amends article XI, section 15;

with the recommendation that it pass.

Alvin M. Bentley, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 13 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 462.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only standing committee report.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that order.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: General orders of the day.

The delegate from the seventeenth district, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, I move the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for consideration of items on the general orders calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the motion of Mr. Martin. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed?

The motion prevails, and Mr. Martin will preside over the committee.

[Whereupon, Mr. Martin assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The committee will be in order.

The convention is in committee of the whole for consideration of items on the general orders calendar which the secretary will report.

SECRETARY CHASE: The first item on the calendar, from the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 8, A proposal to provide that the governor may convene the legislature on extraordinary occasions. Amends article VI, section 7. It was considered in the committee of the whole on December 11 and referred to the committee on legislative powers. It has been reported by the committee on legislative powers without amendment.

For Committee Proposal 8 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see above, page 375.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, because when this matter was before the committee of the whole I raised some question about it, I think perhaps that it is proper that I make some further statement at this time, if for no other reason than I am aware of the fact that everything that is said in this hall is being taken verbatim, and will appear in the permanent record of the convention.

This proposal comes back to the committee of the whole at this time in the same form in which it was originally reported from the committee on executive branch. In other words, the actions of the previous sitting of the committee of the whole in this matter have been washed out by the committee on legislative powers.

I think, upon further reflection, that the traditional phraseology providing that "the governor may convene the legislature on extraordinary occasions" is the best decision. I raised the question before as to what an extraordinary occasion was, and it was pointed out that perhaps an extraordinary occasion was whatever the governor said it was. On the other hand, I dare say that this language as it appears in the constitution and has appeared for all these years is broader than the language which the previous committee of the whole recommended; that is, saying that he could convene the legislature in special session.

I am reminded of the situation back, I believe it was in 1950 or '51 or thereabouts, when there was a riot at Jackson prison. At that time the situation was that the legislature, although in regular session, had recessed itself for a month or 6 weeks, and at that time the legislature didn't have any provision in its rules for getting itself together until the time to which it adjourned had arrived. Later the legislature corrected that deficiency, and its joint rules now provide that the president of the senate and the speaker of the house, at any time when the legislature has adjourned for more than 3 days, are empowered by the joint rules of the legislature to reconvene the legislature if the occasion should warrant. Certainly back at the time of the riot, there was an occasion when it might have been well to have the legislature immediately back in session.

As the committee on legislative powers, listening to the views of some delegates, further considered this matter we suggested that it might have been legally possible, under the phraseology as it existed all these years, saying that the governor could convene the legislature on extraordinary occasions, it might have been legally possible for the governor to have asserted the constitutional power to get the 2 houses of the legislature back into actual session, even though it was in a regular session, and therefore the governor couldn't have called a special session on the matter. Even though he couldn't have called a special session, he might have had the legal power to have convened them, because there was an extraordinary occasion. The mere fact that that course of action wasn't followed at that time doesn't preclude the possibility that on another occasion it might be followed.

An so I would like to state to this committee that while I raised this matter before in committee of the whole, I am now of the opinion, upon further reflection, that the present language is the best solution, and I raise no further objection to it, and will happily support the proposal as it has come from the committee on legislative powers.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman, and members of the committee of the whole, representing the committee on legislative powers, I was present when Delegate Hutchinson appeared, and we argued it out, and he finally came to the conclusion which he has stated to this committee.

There are, however, some more reasons why the words "extraordinary occasion" should not be changed to "special session." I wish to refer to an attorney general's opinion a long time ago, 1898, under the Constitution of 1850, but the language in the 1850 constitution was set forth in the 1908 constitution, and I am quoting "By the constitution, section 7 of article V"—which is the section under the Constitution of 1850—> the executive is given the power to convene the legislature upon extraordinary occasions. It is contemplated by the constitution that an extra session of the legislature is to be convened only upon extraordinary occasions. The construction has made it a matter of executive discretion to determine when an occasion sufficiently extraordinary to warrant the special calling of the body exists.

There has been one case only upon this point, the case of Smith vs. Curran, 268 Michigan 366, decided in 1934. There being no Michigan cases, the court quotes with authority an excerpt from 59 Corpus Juris, on page 530, in this language:

> This constitutional provision contemplates that there shall first exist in the executive mind a definite conception of the public emergency which demands an extraordinary occasion.

Consequently, extraordinary occasion does have a different meaning than special session, and it has been interpreted all along, and acted upon for 100 years, that extraordinary occasions can be brought out in a special session called by the governor. I therefore concur in the conclusion reached by Delegate Hutchinson and the conclusion reached by the legislative powers committee, and move that this proposal be adopted.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you, Mr. Millard.

Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal?

Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I too would like to join Mr. Millard and Mr. Hutchinson in speaking in favor of the language as reported to the committee of the whole. This language, as I believe was pointed out, could in one sense mean the governor could call a legislature in session on extraordinary occasions whether the legislature had adjourned or whether the legislature was in session but was in a recess at that moment.

Now, certainly, for those who are concerned, this means that the legislature would still have the power to act or not act as it sees fit. I do think that in the committee hearings it was very properly pointed out that perhaps there needs to be some further definition of the words "special session" in section 22 of article V. However, that in my judgment could be better handled in that part of the constitution, and leave this part just as it is.

In conclusion, I wish to again state that I support the motion as made by Mr. Millard.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 8 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 2 on the calendar, from the committee on education, by Mr. Bentley, chairman, Exclusion Report 2004, A report recommending the exclusion of article XI, section 13.

Following is Exclusion Report 2004 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on education recommends that article XI, section 13 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Bentley, chairman of the committee on education, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2004:

The mention of the salt spring lands in the state constitution is obsolete. These lands have long since been disposed of and the money used by the State.

The education committee therefore recommends this section be deleted with the idea that these funds and other such funds should be consolidated into a single fund for educational purposes with the interest to be paid out as the legislature may direct.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, the committee's explanation for making this exclusion recommendation or proposal is deservedly very brief. The salt spring lands have now long since been sold, and the committee unanimously felt there was no further reason for their inclusion in the new constitution.

For those who are interested in researching the origin of this money, I would recommend that the interested members turn to volume 2 of the citizens research council preparative analysis, and under chapter 11, page 37, they will find 4½ pages of explanation tracing the origin of the salt spring lands and the money deriving from their use, and even after their sale. But I think the committee might be properly interested only in the comment which was made in the citizens research council analysis as follows:

> The mention of salt spring lands in the state constitution is obsolete, and does not need to be continued in any new version.
>
> As distinct from this, the question of the corpus of the funds established from the sale of these and other lands and of the disposition of the interest thereon poses a problem. The constitutional convention appears to have 3 basic alternatives respecting these funds:
>
> It can abolish them and provide for state support of education through regular or other forms of appropriation.
>
> It can retain the funds as a nostalgic nod to the past.
>
> It can consolidate the funds into a single fund for educational purposes, with interest to be paid out as the legislature or the constitution may direct.

As the committee will see, the committee on education has decided to adopt the last of these 3 recommendations by the citizens research council, which will provide for the entire exclusion of article XI, section 13, and the incorporation of the existing funds, along with the funds derived from other sources for this purpose, into a single fund for education.

I think that completes the explanation of this recommendation, Mr. Chairman. As I say, the action of the committee on education was unanimous, and it is our recommendation that the exclusion report be approved by the committee of the whole.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Are there any amendments to the exclusion report? If not, it will be passed.

Exclusion Report 2004 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 3 on the calendar, from the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Committee Proposal 12, A proposal pertaining to exemptions as a substitute for all of article XIV.

Following is Committee Proposal 12 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

THE LEGISLATURE SHALL PROVIDE BY LAW FOR THE EXEMPTION OF REAL PROPERTY IN THE AMOUNT OF NOT LESS THAN $3,500.00, AND PERSONAL PROPERTY IN THE AMOUNT OF NOT LESS THAN $750.00, AS DEFINED BY LAW, FROM FORCED SALE OR EXECUTION OR OTHER PROCESS OF THE COURT.

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 12:

The committee on legislative powers proposes the indicated language in lieu of all existing language in article XIV entitled "Exemptions" for the following reasons:

The original 1908 constitution of Michigan set forth an exemption of $500.00 for personal property and a homestead exemption of $1,500.00. Because of the change in value of property due to inflation and the subsequent decreased purchasing power of the dollar, this was amended in 1943 by raising the homestead exemption from the original $1,500.00 to $2,500.00. This change should have been allowed by legislation rather than through the necessity of a constitutional amendment. Furthermore, exemptions on real and personal property have always been provided for by law enacted by the legislature, and such laws recently have provided for greater exemptions than stated in the constitution. All exemptions, both real and personal, have been set forth in detail in act 236 of the public acts of 1961 which is a compilation of all judicial proceedings in all courts and takes effect January 1, 1963.

The committee believes, however, that minimum exemptions on both real and personal property should be placed in the constitution in order that the legislature shall not have the complete power of wiping out all exemptions in the future. Testimony was taken as to the minimum amounts thought advisable and the amounts mentioned above in the proposed section were those recommended by the state bar association of Michigan and other members of the legal profession who testified before the committee.

Fifteen states have no provision in their respective constitutions for exemptions. Twenty states have short provisions, as suggested by this committee in its proposal. The committee believes that specific exemptions should be set forth in the statutes and only a general expression of legislative power is necessary in the constitution, limited, however, to limited amounts as stated in the proposal.

It is therefore recommended that article XIV of the 1908 constitution entitled "Exemptions" be deleted from any proposed new constitution and that a section be added to the legislative powers article embodying the language in the committee proposal.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this particular article, article XIV, was referred to one of our subcommittees for study and research. The report that was just read is rather abbreviated, considering all the work that was done on it. Mr. Millard is chairman of this subcommittee, along with Mr. Downs, Mr. Wanger and Mrs. Koeze. I'm sure Mr. Millard or any other member of the committee has some further information on that particular article, if they would like to give it to us.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, the subcommittee referred to by Chairman Hoxie met quite early in the session of this convention. In order to get a proper background, we took the treatise prepared by Professor Robert E. Childs, professor of law of Wayne State University, which is entitled State Constitutional Provisions on Exemptions. It is a white pamphlet, of which each and every one of you, I presume, received a copy. We had Professor Childs appear as a witness and he confirmed all that he had stated in this treatise.

Also, Professor Kelly was present, and he came to the same conclusion, which was that a short statement of the power delegated to the legislature should be all that was necessary.

However, I think maybe I should go a little more into the history, and maybe also define what exemptions are. I know the lawyers present are all familiar with this, but maybe some of the laymen have not come in contact with it. "Exemptions" may be defined as a statutory freedom of the personal property of debtors from liability to seizure and sale under legal process for the the payment of their debts. "Homestead exemptions" may be defined as a statutory freedom of the real property of debtors from liability to seizure and sale under legal process for payment of their debts.

There were no personal property or homestead exemptions at common law, and going back into the history of our own state, there was no provision for exemptions in the first Constitution of 1835. However, the legislature, in its wisdom, saw that it was necessary to provide for relief of debtors who had, maybe through something not of their own making, gotten into financial difficulties. And so, in 1848, a statute was passed which provided for exemptions of $500 on personal property, and homestead exemptions of $1,500.

The constitutional convention which was convened in 1849 and produced the Constitution of 1850 thought so much of this provision in the statute that they adopted it practically in toto in the Constitution of 1850. And that was carried over with hardly any change into the Constitution of 1908. Now, the original provisions, as stated, set forth an exemption of $500 on personal property and $1,500 on real property, and those 2 figures were carried over into the 1908 constitutional convention. But we had a change in economic conditions, and it was found that those provisions were not enough.

I want, first, to call to your attention that in both the 1850 and the 1908 constitutions personal property was exempted to the amount of not less than $500—both of them the same wording—but that real property, the homestead exemption, is exempted not to exceed the value of $1,500. In other words, there was a floor put on the personal property, but a ceiling put on real property. So that when our economic conditions changed, it was found that $1,500 was not enough exemption for a homestead. Consequently, in 1943 an amendment was passed to the constitution in which that amount was raised to $2,500, as it now stands.

Now, there have been two or three attempts to get the constitution changed, and one of them was by a Michigan constitutional revision study commission of 1942. On this particular subject, I would like to read a quotation from that report. The following quotation was taken from the final report of the subcommittee on taxation and finance of the Michigan constitutional revision study commission of 1942. That report, submitted by the committee chairman, E. Blythe Stason, dean of the University of Michigan law school, was unanimously adopted by the commission and was deemed to be of such importance that it was appended to the commission's report in its entirety. I'm quoting:

Article XIV. Exemptions.

The provisions for exemptions were taken verbatim from the 1850 constitution, which for the most part simply adopted existing statutes. Apparently there was no need of writing them into the constitution, other than the fact that the constitutional convention mistrusted the legislature and felt inclined to place many limitations on the power of that body.

Perhaps an added factor was the novel character of the exemption statutes. They were first enacted in the late 1840s. It was said in the convention that Michigan was the first state to have any such legislation, and there may have been a desire to insure their continuance.

The committee feels that these sections do not constitute proper constitutional provision. Instead, they should be incorporated in statute law if found desirable by the state legislature.

The committee does not take exception to any of the specific provisions of article XIV, but it recognizes that there are probably more exemptions that might just as appropriately be included. The article, however, is of slight importance, and no recommendation is made.

That's what they thought about this article in 1942.

Now, just what has the legislature done in regard to exemptions for the protection of, might I say, legitimate debtors? I hope that they are. In the session of 1961 the legislature passed act 236, which was quoted in our report. It was an act to revise and consolidate the statutes relating to the organization and jurisdiction of the courts of this state, the powers and duties of such courts, and so forth. In this revision of the statutes and the compilation, the exemptions have been set forth, and I would like to call your attention to some of the exemptions. Chapter 53—and I'm reading on page 576 of the Compiled Laws of the Public Acts of 1961 — is Receivership for Wage Earners, and that has nearly 4 pages. Chapter 60, page 595, has Enforcement of Judgment, and that has, oh, 20 pages or more. In that particular chapter are included the provisions in the constitution, and I am now quoting from section 600.6022, on page 598 of the public acts of 1961, in which it says "Executions shall not issue," and then it goes on and it designates a lot of things that are not mentioned in the constitution, of course, such as family pictures; household goods; a seat, pew or slip occupied by the judgment debtor or his family in a house of worship; tools and implements; and so forth. But it raises the amount to $1,000. In other words, the legislature has increased the exemption on personal property from $500 to $1,000. And they could do that because it was only a floor in the constitution. Now, the homestead exemption is cut down a little bit from the verbiage in the constitution, but it is all there. Everything is there.

We have had the statutes and the exemptions checked—both real and personal property—by our research man, Professor Gay, and he says that every provision that is in the constitution is covered in the statutes, with a lot more, as I am pointing out.

We have other sections in this act 236. Chapter 62, Installment Judgments; and chapter 75, Garnishment in Justice Court; so that the debtors are very well taken care of by statute. In fact, members of the committee, if we were to give the debtors the benefit of all of the rights that they have and all of the exemptions that they have by statutes, we would have a constitution which would be twice as large as the one we have now.

Now, as I said, Professor Childs recommends that a clause be inserted in the article of the proposed constitution entitled Legislative Department, as follows "The legislature shall pass homestead and exemption laws." Your committee, after hearing the professors, referred it to research; and Professor Joiner, of the University of Michigan law school, prepared the provision which you have in front of you, with the exception of the floors on personal and real property.

After the committee had started its hearings, several proposals came in to raise the ceiling on real property. We had proposals all the way from $5,000 to $10,000. So we had a hearing last week, and had all the people in that were interested—representatives of the state bar, and so forth—and everybody talked about a ceiling, and finally we came to the conclusion that it would be better to put a floor under it than put a ceiling on it. If we said there would be a ceiling of $10,000 then people would expect the legislature to put in an exemption of $10,000. Your committee decided that inasmuch as the legislature had increased the personal exemption from $500 to $1,000, which was an increase of about 100 per cent, and whereas the original homestead exemption was $1,500, that we would increase that 100 per cent; so we put a floor in this proposal of $3,500 on real property, and $750 on personal property.

We feel that this is sufficient protection for the debtor; that he will always have some exemptions, but looking back over the history of our legislature, we find that the exemptions have always been higher than was in any constitution, and probably would have been higher if it had been allowable on real property after the 1908 convention. Your committee therefore feels that the question of amount is a legislative function; that protection has been amply given by statute; and therefore recommends that this proposal be passed as submitted.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if I might ask a question or 2 of Delegate Millard. First, I note that the suggested language states that "The legislature shall provide by law," and I wanted to ask the question as to why this was made less than constitutionally mandatory. In other words, you have the matter of moment of the homestead exemption resting upon the discretion of the legislature, and not a specific requirement by constitution, which is now being changed—or at least offered to be changed.

The second question is, I note that the words homestead exemption are not found in the suggested language, but what we have are the words "real property." I wondered what the thinking was of the committee in making that alteration.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Professor Norris, I will answer the second one first. The thinking of the committee—and this was proposed by Dr. Joiner—is that "homestead" is a limitation. Homestead has been defined by our supreme court in a great many cases, and it requires occupancy by the person claiming the homestead. Your committee felt that we could put a floor of $3,500 on real property, and leave it up to the legislature as to whether they wanted to make it a homestead or not. It is a homestead now in the statutes. However, this is really lifting a restriction. This is giving more power, so that they can lift it from the homestead provision and apply it to any real estate.

Now, on your first question, it has been told here many, many times that this convention has no power over the legislature except to express its intention, and by putting the word "shall" in we certainly mean what we say; that they shall do this. As has been pointed out, you can't mandamus the legislature. But, by putting the word "shall" in there, we think that that is showing enough of the intention of this convention that they would adopt it, as they already have for the last 100 years. Does that answer your question?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, I think the committee has shown a great deal of wisdom in setting floors. I think this is what we need. But I really question the $3,500 floor limit. Mr. Millard talks about a 100 per cent increase since 1908, but if we try to reflect on what the $1,500 meant in a homestead in 1908 and what $3,500 means today, there's a great discrepancy.

While I realize this is a floor, I think there always is the pressure on the legislature to maintain this floor. I'm not suggesting that we should set a reasonable figure today, but at least I think it should be more in line with what reasonably can be expected in the near and distant future. I think $3,500 certainly is very little protection for the average home owner and homesteader. This is actually what we are trying to protect. I have no set figure, but I would like to suggest that we set a much more realistic figure.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal?

Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I would speak against the passage of the committee proposal at this time. I believe there are 2 defects in it which ought to be rectified before it is reported out. These are not serious defects, and they could be rectified easily, but I don't think we could do it on the floor. I would like to point out anyway what I believe these defects are. They have both been alluded to briefly by Mr. Norris, and I would like to go a little further into them. I'm not satisfied that these are cured as well as they can be cured.

First of all, as to the compulsoriness of the exemption, it seems to me it would be very simple to make these exemptions absolutely compulsory by using language similar to the language presently in the constitution—not as detailed, perhaps, but language which says point blank that property of a certain type shall be exempt. If it says it shall be exempt, then it is exempt. But if it says the legislature shall provide laws, then if the legislature should happen not to provide laws, there is obviously no exemption.

Actually, there are 2 parts of the language which I object to in connection with the lack of compulsoriness of the exemptions. One is in the first line, where it says, "The legislature shall provide by law . . ." We have had a lot of experience with legislatures being required to do things by law which they have not done. I will just mention, for example, the apportionment problem, which has existed in 40 states, and legislatures as we know have not always done what has been required of them. Whereas, if it states in the constitution that a certain result shall exist, then it does exist.

The other language that I find objectionable on this point about compulsoriness is the last 4 lines, which are as follows: "as defined by law . . ." That is to say, the legislature shall provide by law for these exemptions on personal property and real property, and the type of exemption shall be as defined by law. Now, if the legislature fails to make such definitions, we won't know what kind of property is involved. For example, we won't know whether it is a homestead or not. So, obviously, the legislature must act. These are not self executing provisions as they now read. They could easily be made self executing, but they are not at the present time, and I believe they should be made self executing.

The other problem has to do with homesteads. Nearly all of the constitutions that have been referred to from other states mention the word homestead. If they mention exemptions at all, they almost always mention the word homestead. Now, of course, that doesn't mean that we must do so. We don't in this particular section. We do in the present constitution. The explanation that was offered doesn't convince me that it is an improvement. The language that is offered is this, "the exemption of real property . . ."

Now, the problem that I can foresee is this. The legislature might exempt real property other than homesteads, and not exempt homesteads. They might provide a broadened definition, as was suggested, which would include real property which we don't really wish to be exempted, but at the same time not provide an exemption against real property which we feel must be exempted; namely, homesteads. It seems to me it is very important that we mention that homesteads are the things that are to be exempted. We don't really care whether other real property is exempted or not. But if it is a homestead, it should be exempted. That is the big reason why we have exemption laws; so that nobody will be kicked out of their house.

Both of these, it seems to me, could easily be corrected. Instead of saying "real property," we could say "homestead." Instead of saying "the legislature shall provide" and "as defined by law," we could substitute some other language. I can't give the exact language myself at the moment, but it seems to me the best thing is to refer this back to the committee and ask it to bring it forward with other language.

I move that the proposal be rereferred to the committee for that purpose.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The motion to rerefer takes priority. The question is on the motion that when the committee rises, it recommend that Committee Proposal 12 be rereferred to the committee on legislative powers. All those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The Chair is in some doubt. Those in favor will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Forty-seven.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Those opposed will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Seventy-four.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The motion to rerefer does not prevail.

Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal?

Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I had recently placed on my desk a copy of my amendment which I placed with the secretary. I find that it is incorrect in monetary amounts, and I will ask the secretary to read it with these corrections:

In section 1, $750; in section 2, $5,000.

SECRETARY CHASE: Miss Donnelly offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1 by striking out all of lines 6 through 9, which is the present language of the proposal and inserting the following, which is the present 4 sections of article XIV, with the changes as just noted by Miss Donnelly:

"Sec. 1. The personal property of every resident of this state, to consist of such property only as shall be designated by law, shall be exempted to the amount of not less than $750.00 from sale on execution or other final process of any court.

Sec. 2. Every homestead of not exceeding 40 acres of land and the dwelling house thereon and the appurtenances to be selected by the owner thereof and not included in any town plat, city or village; or instead thereof, at the option of the owner, any lot in any city, village or recorded town plat, or such parts of lots as shall be equal thereto, and the dwelling house thereon and its appurtenances, owned and occupied by any resident of the state, not exceeding in value $5,000.00 shall be exempt from forced sale on execution or any other final process from a court. Such exemption shall not extend to any mortgage thereon lawfully obtained, but such mortgage or other alienation of such land by the owner thereof, if a married man, shall not be valid without the signature of his wife to the same: Provided, That notwithstanding anything in this section to the contrary, such mortgage or other alienation of such land shall be valid without the signature of said wife, after 25 years unless within said 25 years from the date of the recording thereof in the office of the register of deeds of the county or counties wherein the property is located, there is filed in said office notice of claim of the invalidity of such mortgage or alienation under this section, excepting that in case of every mortgage or alienation recorded prior to January 1, 1920, said notice of claim may be filed prior to January 1, 1950.

Sec. 3. The homestead of a family, after the death of the owner thereof, shall be exempt from the payment of his debts in all cases during the minority of his children.

Sec. 4. If the owner of a homestead dies, leaving a widow but no children, such homestead shall be exempt, and the rents and profits thereof shall accrue to her benefit during the time of her widowhood, unless she be the owner of a homestead in her own right.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: Mr. Chairman, briefly, my reason for offering the amendment to the report of the committee is that originally it does not include the exclusion report. I think they have spent a great deal of time discussing the amount of money that we are talking about. This to me is not the most substantive part. There is a basic, fundamental attitude that certain debtors shall be protected; that they shall have a right to go forward in the future and not be badgered forever, not only by their claims in bankruptcy, but also having a chance to reestablish themselves.

The intent of this constitutional provision at this time, in my opinion, is to protect not only the individual debtor, but his wife and children. Obviously, I'm not doing this for my own self, inasmuch as I don't have this problem. However, this statute, as taken care of by Mr. Millard, in my opinion—I haven't read it recently—but I do not think it includes the alienation of property on mortgaging; I do not think it excludes the mortgage value; it does not include the requirement that the wife must join, or in 25 years time to allow this dower interest to be barred. We've got a lot of statutes on real property law that have determined this. We have a lot of claims against title; we have instances of forgeries and fraud wherein someone other than the wife has signed to bar this dower. We also have provisions to allow a minor 18 years of age to join with her husband and mortgage the homestead in the case of certain mortgages, but not to convey the title to realty. We have many statutes to take care of certain aspects of this, but none prohibit this alienation, without this addition.

In addition, without this constitutional prohibition, they could be changed legislatively. In addition to this, the attitude of the committee in discussing real property, in my opinion, does not adequately take care of a land contract vendee's interest. They have not indicated whether they are going to consider this personalty or realty.

Generally, I feel that they are in haste to shorten this constitution, and will not necessarily benefit it by this change. Therefore, I speak in favor, naturally, of my amendment, which reinstates these provisions. I'm not particularly concerned about the monetary aspects, but I am concerned as to the approach. And I think that these provisions keep the approach—keep the protection to not only the individual debtor, but to his family.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the amendment.

Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: I would like to ask a question of Mr. Millard, because I think it would have a relationship to how I vote on the amendment. But I see under section 2, under the homestead exemption in the middle—and this is what Miss Donnelly spoke to—that it specifically exempts a mortgage. In other words, you can have a mortgage written so that it wouldn't guarantee a man who has an equity of $3,500 in his property when actually he may only pay $500.

Now, are there provisions in your original proposal, or the committee proposal, to take care of the situation that they can write a mortgage of a lesser down payment than $3,500 and not be in the position where they would have to guarantee that amount? Because this would have a very definite effect on the size of down payments in buying homes and might make it very difficult.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: I think that your question in regard to the mortgage is taken care of in the statute which I cited to you, being 600.6022 at page 598 of the public acts of 1961. And it says:

> But this exemption does not apply to any mortgage on the homestead lawfully obtained, except that such mortgage is not valid without the signature of a married judgment debtor's wife unless:
>
> A. The mortgage is given to secure the payment of the purchase money or portion thereof; or
>
> B. The mortgage is recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the county wherein the property is located for a period of 25 years, and notice of a claim of invalidity is filed in such office during the 25 years following the recording of the mortgage.

I think that answers your question.

MR. STAFSETH: According to your proposal, if you have a floor, if you set a definite floor, there shall be this limit. What provision have you in this that would allow the statutory provision to be exercised? This would take precedence, wouldn't it?

MR. MILLARD: This provision that we propose lodges the power in the legislature to make provision for the exemption. That is the reason for it. And we did that because the legislature has, in the past, and in this particular public act 236 of 1961, provided for all of the exemptions that are in the constitution plus a great, great many more.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the amendment.

Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: I have an amendment of my own, but I would first like to answer Miss Donnelly and Mr. Stafseth, and comment on what Mr. Millard said. I'm a member of the committee on legislative powers, and we were given to understand during our study of this problem that all of the exemptions and dates and times and amounts and everything that were matters of statutory detail were covered in house bill 3, which has been recently revised, and that in general most of the provisions that were in there were more than adequate and far exceeded what was already in the constitution.

My amendment, if I may proceed with it at this point, is this. I would amend the proposal—

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hubbs, maybe we should stay with the Donnelly amendment, and then let you offer your amendment; and then we can discuss that. Otherwise we will get confused as to which amendment we are talking about.

MR. HUBBS: With reference to Miss Donnelly's amendment and what has been said, I think Mr. Millard adequately covered the thing; that house bill 3 and the present statutory laws covering exemptions in all fields take care of the situation; and the amendment that I propose to offer is in a slightly different direction.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: We will come to your amendment in a moment.

The question is on the Donnelly amendment.

Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: I would like to speak to the Donnelly amendment. There is another party that probably hasn't been given too much consideration. That is the man to whom money might be owed. We are talking all the while about the man that owes money and what his exemptions and rights are.

In the Donnelly amendment we are restoring some sanity to it, I believe, by retaining this ceiling on the homestead exemption. I'm not in agreement with Miss Donnelly in the amount of that, but I agree with the principle that if you're going to have a floor, likewise you should have a ceiling. That is the only protection that the man has who has the money coming to him.

I would be quite willing to turn the entire matter over to the legislature, but I am not willing to have a floor that you cannot go under without having a ceiling that you cannot go above. So, Miss Donnelly, I like that very, very much.

I would like to offer an amendment to the Donnelly amendment, to amend $5,000 to $3,750.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Will you submit your amendment to the secretary, please, Mr. Farnsworth?

MR. FARNSWORTH: Yes.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Farnsworth offers the following amendment to Miss Donnelly's amendment:

1. Amend section 2 of the amendment by striking out "$5,000.00" and inserting "$3,750.00".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on Mr. Farnsworth's amendment to the Donnelly amendment.

Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I would just like to state I have no particular objection to his amendment. My whole point is that I think these constitutional provisions must be maintained so that the legislature cannot remove them eventually if it so chooses.

The fact that house bill 3 or public act 236 is going to cover it is fine. I had no intent to try to change that. I just feel that this is a statement of limit on power, which is a constitutional purpose in the first instance, and to remove it and entrust all this to the legislature is, I think, too hasty. Also, I want to restate that I certainly oppose "real property." If this would allow an individual who was not living there but was, for instance, collecting rent—he was living in an apartment; this is not his homestead, but it is just an investment—to keep this investment, and his creditors can't reach this investment, it isn't protecting him; it is acting against his creditors.

I think the purpose of this is to protect the individual and give him a chance for him and his family to live on this property as a homestead, and not just to protect real property.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on Mr. Farnsworth's amendment to the amendment.

Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, in order to vote intelligently upon the amendment, I would like to ask a question of Mr. Millard. If I read this correctly, is this not the way this reads, "shall provide by law for the exemption of real property and personal property as defined by law"?

I would understand that the legislature would have the power to define by law what is intended by real property and what is intended by personal property; is that correct?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: That is true, Mr. Higgs. At the present time the statute defines the homestead exemption for real property. That is defined in the law, and it will stay there until changed by the legislature. So you are absolutely correct.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, I would oppose the amendment then, inasmuch as the committee apparently has given consideration to the matter of defining real property, and I would feel confident that the legislature, in making that definition, would take into account such matters as the land contract vendee's interests; and with that assurance I think I would favor the proposal.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Farnsworth amendment to the amendment.

Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, speaking in opposition to the Farnsworth amendment to the amendment, our basic idea is to protect homesteaders. In 1908 we protected them to the extent of $1,500, which was a realistic figure in 1908. The figure proposed by Mr. Farnsworth—and I think any figure that you set as a ceiling is unrealistic, and what you need is a floor—just negates for all practical purposes the homestead protection. It is really not any protection at all.

I think what we need is a floor, and therefore I'm opposed to the Farnsworth amendment and to the Donnelly amendment also.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I have a point of information I would like to ask both Mr. Farnsworth and Miss Donnelly. Are you setting a floor on personal property and a ceiling on real property, or are you setting both floors and ceilings?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. Mahinske, if I understand the proposal correctly, it would set a ceiling on real property, or a homestead, but it would set only a floor on personal property.

Is that right, Miss Donnelly?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I would say that is the intent of the Constitution of 1908. The constitution, section 1, says, "not less than $500.00," and section 2 says, "every homestead of not exceeding 40 acres of land," and it goes forward to eventually pick up the monetary amount, "not exceeding in value $2,500.00."

MR. MAHINSKE: Then your amendment is a repeat of the 1908 provision, as revised in 1943, with just a change in the money figures?

MISS DONNELLY: Yes.

MR. MAHINSKE: And you are not going to bring up a 25 year change in your date figures from 1920—

MISS DONNELLY: Frankly, I intended to. Specifically, I was in a meeting of the committee on judicial branch all morning, and that's the reason why it came out incorrectly. In the first instance, I rather hurriedly gave instructions to research, and they apparently misunderstood me. And I do believe that if that last year were retained as it is, we would not necessarily have to go into alienation recorded prior to January 1, 1920. We are now at 1962. The 40 years would handle it. The 25 years would handle it. We don't need to go back to that, and it should really be removed.

MR. MAHINSKE: Wouldn't your mortgages and land contracts be covered by impairment of contracts in the federal constitution, at any rate, whether we put it in here or not?

MISS DONNELLY: Off hand, my answer, I think, is no. I think that is a very broad statement, and the impairment of mortgages is not the same as to the validity as to who may make. And I think at this moment that if we say who may mortgage this land—which I believe this could allow changes in, or who may make this mortgage—that that would be an impairment of contract, so we couldn't do it anyway, if I follow your logic.

MR. MAHINSKE: If you follow me, then we may as well throw out this whole section on land contracts and mortgages. It is statutory to begin with, and we couldn't statutorily impair any contract, and a land contract or a mortgage is a contract.

MISS DONNELLY: You're talking about in the past. I'm talking about going forward in the future, too. I think this constitution will act in future years if it's passed.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on Mr. Farnsworth's amendment to the Donnelly amendment.

Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I wish to speak to the entire matter.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Farnsworth amendment to the Donnelly amendment.

Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I just wish to repeat that in the committee, when this matter was considered, I believe Mr. Millard pointed out very well that the 1908 constitution had set a floor on personal property and a ceiling on the homestead or real property. Now, with the changes that we all anticipate in the price index, I think it is very hard for us to set a maximum amount; and that was the thinking on putting in the floor. Now, there was the original recommendation that no particular amount be put in. This was the recommendation, I believe, of Professor Childs.

However, from a very practical viewpoint, and I'm thinking not only of the convention, but when some of us are out, I presume, selling the new document that we have, I think it will be much easier to sell if we can say that the protection we had in the 1908 constitution is still in there and, if anything, it has been slightly improved. I don't pretend to get into a discussion as to just what the amounts should be. I think that is subject to legitimate discussion and difference. But I do think that if a reasonable floor is set on both, it does make it much easier for us to get the support for the document when we are completed. I do think that really what we were looking at in the committee was not only draftsmanship, but also the problem of selling the document. And I hope this gives some of the background of the discussions that were had in the committee.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. Chairman, in defense of the amount that I am suggesting as an amendment to the Donnelly amendment, it is exactly 50 per cent higher than what is now in the constitution. I note that the committee, in setting an amount on personal property, used that exact ratio in their proposal. They proposed from $500 to $750. So it is an exact ratio that I have stated. That is why the $3,750. I take it that you are going to vote on that quite soon now.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Farnsworth amendment to the Donnelly amendment.

Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: I would like to ask Miss Donnelly a question, in view of the fact that I may not have heard the amendment read correctly. But is it the intent of the amendment to prohibit the complete collection of a mortgage not signed by a wife if it is a purchase money mortgage?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: It certainly is not. If it is a purchase money mortgage in the first instance, dower would not have attached, and you would not have had any interest anyway. So I'm going to real property, and not to this language.

The whole intent of my amendment is—contrary to what Mr. Downs said—to guarantee that we have not interfered with these guarantees. If we change it and take the committee's report, we have not made a constitutional guarantee of this. We have allowed the legislature to do what it will.

Now, certainly in the past the legislature has acted, I think, very properly in increasing it. But that doesn't mean that it won't go in the other direction, and I think that there should be a guarantee of an exemption, and certain rights that cannot be changed by legislative action. That is the whole purpose of my amendment. I am not particularly concerned with the monetary amounts; but it certainly has nothing to do with the purchase money mortgage.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Certainly some time has gone by since this amendment has been read, and it is a little bit technical. I would like to have it read again, because, as I heard it, it specifically precluded the taking of property if it was not signed by a wife in certain instances, and I didn't hear the exception of a purchase money mortgage not signed by the wife. It was later brought out, I believe, by Mr. Millard in the statutory language.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The secretary will read the amendment.

Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Maybe we can save some time. I followed this in the book, and you got a little bit ahead of me. Is the language of your amendment the same as sections 1 through 4 of the present article XIV?

MISS DONNELLY: Yes, it is. But it shouldn't be exactly the same, because the amount of money and the dates are incorrect. Frankly, I just had them throw it in so I could have it technically in writing. I think this "alienation recorded prior to January 1, 1920," is unnecessary. But I want the intent of the protections, and the requirement of the wife joining in the mortgage or alienation of the land.

Now, back to your purchase money mortgage, Mr. Lawrence, I think the fact that the statute is spelled out on a purchase money mortgage is merely reiterating the common law. Certainly the title does not vest in the husband in the purchase money mortgage. The dower could not have attached, because he couldn't have been seized of both the equitable and the legal at the same time—or am I being too argumentative on real property?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: I still would like to hear the amendment read.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment offered by Miss Donnelly is:

[The Donnelly amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 437.]

To section 2 Mr. Farnsworth has offered an amendment to strike out the sum of $5,000 and insert $3,750.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Farnsworth amendment to the Donnelly amendment. All those in favor of the amendment proposed will say aye. All those opposed will say no. The nays have it.

The amendment to the amendment is not adopted.

The question is now on Miss Donnelly's amendment.

Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I think the entire issue in this amendment which is before us is whether or not on the matter of exemptions we can trust the legislature at this time in our history and in the foreseeable future. I suggest that there's no question whatsoever but that based on the present and past legislative history the legislature can be fully trusted with this matter of exemptions. As pointed out by Mr. Millard, the law most recently passed compiles previous laws in this area which go far beyond the constitutional minimum which was established in the document of 1908.

Furthermore, as you will note from looking at your copy of the constitution, the homestead exemption was increased by constitutional amendment in 1943 to the figure of over $2,000. That constitutional amendment was put on the ballot pursuant to a proposal not initiated by the people, but rather proposed by the legislature itself, by a vote of 2/3 of both of the houses.

I think it is further very well known that today we live in what has been variously described as a credit economy, with many, many people who owe money. Those people also possess votes, and to suggest for a moment that the legislature would pull the rug out from underneath honest debtors in this society is to ignore political reality and to suggest that it would do something to the people of Michigan which the entire legislative history of this subject is against.

Therefore, I urge you to vote no on this particular amendment, and vote yes on the proposal as recommended by the committee.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Donnelly amendment.

Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I, too, would join in urging a no vote on the amendment. As it now stands, it would appear that the majority of us who dwell in the cities are being discriminated against. It is perfectly obvious that in 1908 it was thought that 40 acres of land and $1,500 were approximately equal. I submit that it seems to be a pretty poor farm if 40 acres of land would not be worth whatever amount we have now, $2,500. I see no reason that there should be any distinguishment when we talk of acreage in one sense and value in another. That is one of the reasons that I think these particular sections should be revised.

So far as the mortgage requirement is concerned, I agree with Mr. Wanger. I think that this is statutory, and can be handled by statute as we now have it.

I have some reservations regarding the committee proposal, and I think that they were brought out by Mr. Stafseth, and I think they were valid. I think perhaps when we get to that particular portion of our discussion, if we do, we should consider it. I think what Mr. Stafseth was bringing out was the question of assuming a mortgage which is in default under which the owner has a $2,500 equity, and a mortgagee forecloses. He then points to this specific section and says, "I am entitled to an exemption of at least $3,500. Why can't I have it?" Because as the committee proposal now reads it says that the legislature shall provide for the exemption of real property in the amount of not less than $3,500 from any forced sale, execution or other process of the court, which would include a decree and a mortgage foreclosure.

I think that the exemption which we now have as it relates to mortgages is one that we should consider, because with the idea of low down payments that we have now, and practically nothing down, and 30 or 40 year mortgages, this gets to be a particular problem; and I see no exemption for mortgages as we now have in the present section 2.

As to the remaining sections, I submit that under the present system of welfare programs that we have on the local, state and federal levels, that widows and orphans are usually well taken care of and normally are protected by the legislature; everybody wanting to be on the side of widows and orphans. Consequently, I would urge that we vote no on the amendment; but that we give consideration to an exemption of which I understand an amendment will be filed to allow for the exemption of mortgages. I understand there is one on the secretary's desk at this time. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Donnelly amendment.

Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I believe the best argument against Miss Donnelly's amendment was the one made by Mr. Wanger, and therefore I would like to attack that on several grounds and speak against his argument.

His argument is that we don't trust the legislature if we adopt the constitution as it is now written. That's what it boils down to. When you look at it that way, you can see a number of glaring defects in that type of argument. In the first place, if you follow that argument all the way down the line, we might as well get rid of almost everything in the constitution.

It is true that we don't trust the legislature in the abstract. That's why we have a constitution limiting the legislature. We don't distrust the individual people. We just have a history in the United States of distrusting legislatures to the extent that we must have a constitution, and we still want to have a constitution. Therefore, let's not get worried about the fact that we distrust the legislature. That's quite typical in America.

Secondly, we have already had this in the constitution. We are not adding anything. We are not increasing our distrust of the legislature. We are simply continuing our distrust of the legislature, if you want to call it distrust.

Thirdly, I think this misses the whole point, in any event, when you say that all Miss Donnelly is trying to do is show distrust of the legislature. That's not so. It isn't the only thing that is involved. Another thing that is involved is, taking up the original argument of Mr. Millard that a floor should be provided, some sort of security should be provided for such exemptions in the constitution.

Now, if we take it for granted that some sort of floor should be in the constitution, and then we look at the provision that has been proposed and we see that it does not provide any floor, then we know that there's something wrong with the original proposal. Therefore, it is clear that we do have to have some sort of a floor; some sort of a provision in the constitution which absolutely guarantees, with no ifs, ands or buts, that there will be some sort of exemptions.

The committee proposal does not do that. Miss Donnelly's does do that. As between the 2, therefore, it seems to me, if we really want to guarantee exemptions, we must go to Miss Donnelly's. I urge that you do.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, just a comment upon Delegate Nord's answer to the argument of trusting the legislature. I think we all agree that there are certain things that we don't trust the legislature with. After all, we have a bill of rights which is a restriction on the power of the legislature and the rest of the government.

But that's not the question. That ignores the entire question of what we should be considering on this particular amendment that is before us. That is, simply, should we trust the legislature on this particular subject at this time in our history and in the foreseeable future? That's the question. And, as I pointed out, there's no question but that we can. This is a subject which was put into law in Michigan—as Mr. Millard pointed out citing Dean Stason's report—back in the 1840s, when these exemptions were passed. They were something new at that time in the history of American government. Therefore, in the upsurge of great distrust of the legislature in 1850, this was frozen into the constitution. Now, whether it should have been put in or should not have been put in back then is one question. But whether it should be kept in at this time is entirely different. And for the reasons which I gave when I previously spoke, I think it is quite clear that any need to have this in the constitution as a protection against abuse of legislative power has now long passed.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Donnelly amendment. All those in favor will say aye. All those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

Now, are there any other amendments to the body of the proposal?

Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment with the secretary.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hubbs has the following amendments:

1. Amend line 7, after "property" by striking out "in the amount of not less than $3,500.00,".

2. Amend line 8, after "property" by striking out "in the amount of not less than $750.00".

The language will then read:

The legislature shall provide by law for the exemption of real property and personal property, as defined by law, from forced sale or execution or other process of the court.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman and my fellow delegates, I have been very patiently awaiting my opportunity to explain my position on this point. As you can see, I feel that there should be no dollar amount specified in the constitution, floors or ceilings. We are writing a constitution here; we are not writing a bankruptcy law, with all kinds of dates, stipulations, times, places and things of that sort, and having to do with acres and homesteads and things like that. In the committee on legislative powers I have been assured that house bill 3 covers every single detail that has been brought up here today, to the advantage of all debtors and people in dire circumstances.

Now, I think that what we need to do, as Mr. Wanger so admirably stated, is trust the legislature to implement a constitution which is sound in its basic principles, and not be sticking in a lot of dollar amounts, which Mr. Farnsworth, like myself, being an automobile dealer, would tend to haggle on to begin with. We had no sooner started then we were going from $3,500 to $5,000 to $3,750 and in the committee we were as high as $7,500. It is ridiculous to put dollar amounts into a constitution.

I feel that neither floors nor ceilings should be put in; that the legislature, which has served us admirably in the past, will serve us in the future, and that we can depend on it through statute to take care of all of the details which need to be taken care of. I thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Hubbs amendments.

Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. Chairman, I would like to support the Hubbs amendments—believe it or not. My objection to this whole process as the committee proposed it was that it set only a floor, and did not set a ceiling. If they want to remove both, I'm for it. But I don't want to have a floor and not a ceiling.

The Hubbs amendments would leave it all up to the legislature, and I'm for it. I will support that.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I have a substitute amendment with the secretary. It is very similar to Mr. Hubbs', and I would like either to amend his amendments in accordance with the language of mine, or ask him to withdraw his and substitute mine. (laughter) I think for the benefit of both of us, if the secretary would read it, conceivably either Mr. Hubbs would withdraw his, or mine could be substituted.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Without objection, the secretary will read the substitute amendment of Mr. Brown.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. G. E. Brown has offered the following substitute amendment:

1. Amend page 1 by striking out all of lines 6 through 9 and inserting:

"Real and personal property shall be exempt from forced sale on execution or process of any court in such amounts and under such provisions and conditions as the legislature shall provide by law.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, if I may speak on that—. First I would ask Mr. Hubbs if he would withdraw his amendments in favor of my substitute.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: At the moment, I would like to hear what Mr. Brown has to say before I withdraw.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Without objection, Mr. Brown may proceed.

MR. G. E. BROWN: For the sake of brevity, I have outlined a couple of points, Mr. Chairman. First of all, it seems to me that the legislature has periodically increased the exemptions by law, and once having done so, has not reduced these exemptions; second, the committee report as presented by Mr. Millard admits that most of the present language of this article is statutory in nature and should be excluded from the new constitution; and, third, the present statutory enactments could and would remain in full force under this proposal, there being no conflict with such enactments. Judicial interpretation of present laws would apply. For example, where the exemption now applies to proceeds of sales where there has been a homestead sold, the proceeds are clothed with the same exemption.

If it is our purpose and intent to write a good fundamental law—leaving to the legislature those things which are legislative in nature—amounts, such as amounts of exemptions, should not be included in the constitution.

I would like to add further that in view of some of the comments made today, I'm awfully glad to see that the Republican party does not have a corner on the status quo proponents.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Brown, I would say that the proposal, with my amendment, is basically what the committee came forth with; and in effect your substitute wording doesn't radically change it. Since, however, our words were suggested to us by some eminent legal authorities—of course, I know you are also an eminent legal authority (laughter)—but these gentlemen are classified as egghead advisers, and I kind of like the words that they have come up with, and I'll stand with my committee's wording with my amendments, for the time being. I think that either one of them will accomplish the thing that we are trying to accomplish.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brown, then, do you wish to offer your amendment as a substitute amendment?

MR. G. E. BROWN: In effect, wouldn't this be a substitute for his amendments? Mr. Chairman, if I might, I would like to point out to Mr. Hubbs there are a couple of things that I think are different than the committee's language. First of all, I think the committee should have used the words "forced sale on execution" instead of "forced sale or execution." There are forced sales presently which are not subject to the exemption, such as tax sales, mortgage foreclosures, and so forth. Furthermore, it says "as defined by law" in the committee proposal, whereas in mine it says "in such amounts and under such provisions and conditions as the legislature shall provide by law."

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brown, Mr. Hubbs has offered amendments to the committee proposal. I think that your amendment is essentially a substitute for the committee proposal. I think, therefore, that we should vote on the Hubbs amendments to the committee proposal, and then let you offer your substitute to the committee proposal, if you wish to do so.

The question is on Mr. Hubbs' amendments.

Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: I wish to speak in support of the Hubbs amendments. As a member of the committee on legislative powers, we discussed this subject at great length. Professor Kelly came in and spoke to us, and we told him of our thoughts on the question, and he did not agree with us. He thought we should put a floor in this section as far as exemptions went. We asked him to think about it and talk to some other authorities and report back, which Professor Kelly did; and when he reported back, he said he had now changed his mind, that he had talked to Professor Kauper, and the language that Mr. Hubbs had proposed was agreeable with Professor Kauper, and they thought this was the best language. I understand that Professor Kauper is an authority on constitutional law, being the author of one of the books which is used in the law schools in this state.

We do believe that this is a legislative function. To be absolutely honest with you, this is the original way it passed the subcommittee; that is, the Hubbs amendments. But after some reflection on the part of certain members, they decided that we should have a floor, because this would be possibly the only way we could get the constitution accepted. As Tom Downs has said, he thought it was a practical way. In other words, it is the belief—and an honest belief—of several members that the people would not accept it unless it had a floor. All agree that a floor was not necessary, because house bill 3 covers the subject matter perfectly.

Therefore, I am in support of Mr. Hubbs' amendments, and I would like to report to you that some other states—notably, Colorado, Illinois, Maryland, Mississippi and Montana—have substantially the same language. And this was a very close vote in our committee. In fact, I believe it was 7 to 6. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Hubbs amendments.

Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: I think that the Hubbs amendments and the one that Garry Brown suggested both seem to miss the point of the committee proposal.

Neither—and I'll speak specifically to the Hubbs amendments—gives the legislature any more power than the legislature has now. The committee proposal would, in fact, limit the legislative power to a certain extent. It would say in effect that the legislature has this power, but subject to certain limits. That any exemption that might be granted could not be less than $3,500 in the case of real estate and $750 in the case of personal property. In other words, we will trust the legislature, but not quite completely. We will still put a floor there so that the figures as set by the legislature could not be reduced to a merely nominal figure, such as a dollar.

From the standpoint of selling it, as has been mentioned, I believe that the people would look for that sort of assurance; that the legislative power would not be wholly unrestricted in this field, but would be limited to the amounts as set in the committee proposal. For that purpose I believe that the committee proposal is a reasonable compromise between the power of the legislature and the wish, I believe, of the people to assure themselves that the legislature could not in effect abolish the exemptions.

For that reason, I would oppose the Hubbs amendments and support the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Hubbs amendments.

Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, to make it clear from the outset, I want to oppose both the Hubbs and Brown amendments, because they are worse than the committee proposal when we look at the basic issue here, and this is the question of whether or not we are going to continue in the constitution some sort of a minimum guarantee of a homestead exemption.

The act, incidentally, that Frank Millard is talking about, act 236 of 1961, is the new judicature act. It has been before the legislature in every session for a number of years, and it finally squeaked by the last session with the entire bar association, through its various committees, pushing for one section or another of that act.

In the course of examining what the legislature might do if we don't have a floor and say they shall provide at least a minimum, as the committee proposal does—and to that extent we have to agree—I call your attention to article VII, section 5, which says—and this is in the 1908 constitution; it is not an amendment thereto—that the legislature shall abolish the distinction between law and equity proceedings in the courts in this state.

The act that Frank Millard is talking about finally did that in 1961. And that's what the Michigan legislature has done historically when you say to it you shall do thus and so.

After brief conference with eminent counsel over here, I voted against Miss Donnelly's amendment because it was pointed out that there was discrimination in the present provisions between platted and unplatted land, and if we went back to the committee and brought this to their attention, perhaps they could clean up the language a little bit. But I certainly would oppose either of the amendments that would permit us to go out of here and permit the people of the state of Michigan, examining the document that we present to them, to observe the possibility that the homestead exemption in Michigan could come to an end. I fear that this is the sort of thing that the people are not going to accept.

It is all very well to say that the legislature has gone along. But let's ask the question: what really has the legislature done? It hasn't done a thing that the constitution hasn't guaranteed to the people in this act. And to correct eminent counsel Brown, the legislature has never raised the amount of the exemption on real property. It was raised by a vote of the people in 1943 by way of a constitutional amendment.

The one advantage that the committee report has over the amendments that are now being considered by us is that it does put a floor which says that if there is a homestead exemption, it will be something more than a dollar; it would be at least the amount of money that they set forth. To that extent we have some protection left. But any of these amendments opens the door for the death of the homestead exemption in Michigan.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I wish, too, to point out that if we simply adopt the language saying the legislature shall provide for exemptions, etc., we might as well leave that out. Because I think there is agreement that the legislature has that inherent power unless there is constitutional language to the contrary.

Now, we have talked about drawing up a sound document and a document that is acceptable. I think the two statements are not inconsistent.

But I do think that we need to distinguish between the statutory right and a constitutional right. I, for one, feel there is good argument for continuing the historic practice of saying there is a certain amount of property that the individual can keep regardless of any unfortunate debt situation he shall fall into.

We have been talking a lot about the rights of individuals. It would seem to me that this is one very good right of the individual to keep, though I do think there is a very logical question on what is a reasonable amount. And certainly none of us can anticipate exactly what is going to happen for the life of the ensuing document.

While in committee discussions I was not in complete agreement—as I don't believe anybody was—with the exact figures, this concept that there should be a floor did come out as a consensus feeling; and it would seem to me that having this protection that the committee recommended as a floor does have considerable merit.

There is a point that is raised when we say, "The legislature shall . . ." — and I'm sure there are people more familiar with constitutional law than I am. I think the fact that we now have the personal exemption in excess of this amount would, in my offhand judgment, mean that the legislature could not eliminate that, because that would be in the constitution. Now, if there were nothing in the statute, then I agree there would be the problem of getting the legislature to do anything where there wasn't an already existing statute. But it would seem to me that when we do have basic exemption statutes, this saying, "The legislature shall . . ." would mean the legislature could not go below the floor set here. That's one reason why I think the floor is of a low nature in the dollar figures, and so perhaps there is not the need for a comparable ceiling figure which has been brought up. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: In further support of the Hubbs amendments, without any amounts, there seems to have been a fear expressed by a couple of delegates that people might not be inclined to vote for the constitution if there are not floor amounts in there.

I just want to tell you it has been my observation over a great many years that the great multitude of people are strictly honest. When they are going into debt, they invariably have no thought whatsoever of ever making use of any kind of an exemption that is ever granted to them by statutory or constitutional provision. I think that when people are looking at the constitution and are going to decide whether they are going to vote for or against it, they are not going to be looking at whether there is a floor in there or not. This little provision saying that the legislature shall provide for it, I think, is plenty adequate. People just do not look for those things. The average person, the great majority of them—I don't know what the percentage is, but the great majority of them—are strictly honest. They are not looking for those loopholes.

It is not going to be something that people are going to vote against when you leave those amounts out.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the support of Mr. Farnsworth and the others who have agreed with me in removing the floor from the proposal and entirely eliminating dollar amounts. However, I detect the note in the argument that there should be some floor amount in there which will give people some degree of protection and persuade them to say yes when we vote on the constitution.

However, I would like to make this argument against dollar amounts. As far as I am concerned, I entered into a contract not long ago which based something on the bureau of labor statistics' consumer price index, and my contract hadn't been in force one month before they decided to change the base year and to change the consumer price index from 128.6, where it now stands, to probably 103 after the first of the year. Now, this is done to keep people thinking that things aren't changing, and it is ridiculous.

Now, a dollar today is not a dollar tomorrow; it wasn't a dollar yesterday. I don't think in any case that we should put a dollar amount into the constitution. If you must have a floor —and I submit that I trust the legislature to do what is right by the people; I don't think we need it—but if you must have a floor, let's change it to this kind of situation, where we express the minimum in terms of so many times a day's pay, as currently being paid in a particular labor market, or something of that sort.

If you use a standard that will change with the times, and not be variable from one day to the next, then this constitution will last. It won't be out of date 2 or 3 weeks from now. So I'm against putting dollar amounts in. I don't think we need them in this instance. But if we do have to put minimums in, let's do it by means of a rule which will produce an equitable settlement at any given time in the future, based on what a man earns when he goes to work at an 8 hour day or a 40 hour week, or whatever it may be.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Hubbs amendments.

Will the secretary read the amendments again?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hubbs has offered the following amendments to Committee Proposal 12:

1. Amend line 7, after "property" by striking out "in the amount of not less than $3,500.00,".

2. Amend line 8, after "property" by striking out "in the amount of not less than $750.00"; so that the language will then read:

> The legislature shall provide by law for the exemption of real property and personal property, as defined by law, from forced sale or execution or other process of the court.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Hubbs amendments. As many of those as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The amendments are not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. G. E. Brown has offered the following amendment to the committee proposal:

1. Amend page 1 by striking out all of lines 6 through 9 and inserting:

"Real and personal property shall be exempt from forced sale on execution or process of any court in such amounts and under such provisions and conditions as the legislature shall provide by law.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Brown amendment.

Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I will be very brief, having already explained my position on this matter. I think that this language is a little better, because of the few little areas—which are drafting matters—that eliminate some question that I think exists in the committee proposal which was used by Mr. Hubbs in his amendments.

I think, on the matter of exemptions, that the legislature has taken care of this in the past, and will continue to do so; that this is not something that needs to be put in the constitution as far as amounts are concerned.

Mr. Childs, of course, in his manual, suggested a proposal or language that would not include dollar amounts. Other states do not do so. It has worked out elsewhere very well. I think this is a good area to make a change for the better and show that we do have some confidence in the legislature, which is the duly elected body to pass the laws that we will be guided by, whether a dollar is worth 10 cents today or worth $4 tomorrow. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Brown amendment. Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that I would go along pretty much with Mr. Brown's amendment except for the fact that in his amendment he has not got any reference to a floor, and it seems to me as though the committee has just now decided that it is going to have a floor in there. Consequently, I just want to serve notice on the committee that if Mr. Brown's amendment is voted down, I have still another amendment up there which does include the stated floors, but is worded more consistently, I think, with the expression on the floor here than is the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Brown amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hodges has offered the following amendment to the committee proposal:

1. Amend page 1 by striking out all of lines 6 through 9 and inserting:

"Real property shall be exempt in the amount of not less than $3,500.00 and personal property in the amount of not less than $750.00 from forced sale or execution or other process of the court.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Hodges amendment.

Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Just to explain the amendment, I think this might meet the criticism of Dr. Nord that we refer it to the legislature. What this does is set a floor as a statement of policy, without reference to the legislature. Although I think it is within the langauge, it is clear that the legislature would have the power to increase the amount.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I would like to point out, in this connection, that I also have an amendment before the secretary, and it is almost identical with that read by Mr. Hodges, except there are a few differences. But the main one is that instead of saying "real property," mine says "homestead property." On that basis, it would seem to me that if we said, "homestead property shall be exempt," and so on, there's no question then that we have a floor on homestead property, and also on the basis of the Hodges amendment we would have a floor on personal property reasonably well established; and I wonder whether Mr. Hodges would accede to changing the word from "real" to "homestead"?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: I don't believe so. I am a little concerned. I think that possibly the legislature in its wisdom, with this floor set, might conceivably set a different rate for homesteads than it would for other real property. But, in the absence of a homestead, there may be circumstances and times where real property should not be executed against. I think that this rate of $3,500 is not an unreasonable one. I think it is certainly inclusive of homesteads. Therefore, I think I would stay with my language.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Hodges amendment. Will you read it again, please, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hodges has offered an amendment to the committee proposal:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: Again, speaking on the Hodges amendment, the original provision made an exception that such exemption should not extend to any mortgage thereon lawfully obtained. The Hodges amendment would not make this exception. This, in effect, would mean that it wouldn't be the banks or the loaning institutions that would be harmed by this; it would, in effect, mean that the bank just wouldn't loan money unless they had a $3,500 down payment on it. I think it is going far beyond what we want to do, unless there is some exception made for mortgage payments. I think that that will have to be provided for at this or at some point in here before we are going to have the clear intent of the convention.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to support Mr. Staiger in this point. Let's get ourselves reoriented here, ladies and gentlemen, if we can, as to just exactly what we do in a constitution. At least it is my theory—and I think it is a very sound one—that it is the function of a state constitution to limit the power of the legislature. It is not a matter of granting power; it is a matter of limiting power.

Consequently, every word in this particular section that we are working on now, every word of this proposal, is to be construed as a limitation upon legislative power. And when you say that real property shall be exempt in the amount of not less than $3,500 and personal property shall be exempt in the amount of not less than $500, there is a limitation upon the legislature from which it cannot depart. It cannot make any conditions; it cannot make any exclusions from the exemption. It could not say that a mortgage could be lawfully obtained against property which otherwise would be exempt, because the constitution itself takes precedence; and the constitutional provision as the Hodges wording would have it would so far restrict the legislature in this field that it would be impossible to mortgage a homestead or any other real property that was of less than $3,500 in value.

Therefore, I respectfully oppose Mr. Hodges' proposition, and if we ever get to it, I have a substitute up there which takes care of the mortgage matter and takes care of the homestead matter, and I will discuss it when we get to it.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, I would like to offer an amendment to the Hodges amendment, which I have given to Mr. Chase.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The secretary will read it.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Everett has filed the following amendment to the amendment offered by Mr. Hodges:

1. Amend the amendment after "court.", by inserting "Such exemption shall not extend to any mortgage lawfully obtained on said real or personal property.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Everett?

MR. EVERETT: I think the amendment speaks for itself.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, it occurs to me that in view of the self implementing language that we are suggesting for this constitution at the present time, and others that will be suggested later on, that very conceivably, taking a page from Dr. Nord's book, this should be referred back to the committee on legislative powers. Because very conceivably we won't have a legislature, and therefore there will be no necessity for this committee to be handling this proposal.

I therefore would move that when the committee rises, that we refer this back to the committee on legislative powers.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order under rule 47 against that motion.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The secretary, as parliamentarian, advises me that there has been intervening business, and that though this is the same motion that was previously made, because there has been intervening business it is in order, and it takes precedence over other matters.

The question is now on Mr. Brown's motion that when the committee do rise, it recommend that Committee Proposal 12 be referred back to the committee on legislative powers. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The motion does not prevail.

Now, the question is on Mr. Everett's amendment to the Hodges amendment. Will the secretary read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Everett has offered the following amendment to Mr. Hodges' amendment, adding at the end thereof, after "court.", the following language "Such exemption shall not extend to any mortgage lawfully obtained on said real or personal property.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the amendment to the amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The amendment to the amendment is not adopted.

Now, the question is on Mr. Hodges' amendment. Mr. Secretary, will you read that, just so we don't get confused here.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hodges has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, by striking out all of lines 6 through 9 and inserting:

"Real property shall be exempt in the amount of not less than $3,500.00 and personal property in the amount of not less than $750.00 from forced sale or execution or other process of the court.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: As many as are in favor of the Hodges amendment will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Prettie has filed the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1 by striking out all of lines 6 through 9 and inserting:

"A homestead in the amount of not less than $3,500.00 and personal property in the amount of not less than $750.00 shall be exempt from forced sale or execution or other final process of any court. Such exemption shall not extend to any mortgage lawfully obtained on said real or personal property.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: This is an attempt, Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, to shorten the article. I think the work of the committee on legislative powers in that direction has been commendable. Its sole purpose is to establish a floor, which is what we have been talking about here for the last hour and a half. It does provide a definite floor, whereas the committee proposal leaves it to the legislature to establish such floor.

If this proposal has any place in the constitution whatsoever, I believe it is to assure the people of this state that there is a minimum amount of real and personal property that they may own and which shall not be subject to forced sale on execution or other legal process.

I fully recognize that the problem of a mortgage exists, and hence the amendment that I offer. I feel that the present provision of the constitution, which extends an exemption to personal property, has created no problem to the loan companies, who have loaned millions of dollars on the security of chattel mortgages covering household property which under the terms of article XIV, section 1, is presently exempt.

I don't think it raises any question, but to avoid any possibility of that question I have included in the amendment that I propose the clear language that the exemption does not apply to a mortgage validly obtained against either real or personal property so exempted.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Prettie amendment. The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Prettie has offered the following amendment:

1. Strike out the language of the committee proposal and insert:

"A homestead in the amount of not less than $3,500.00 and personal property in the amount of not less than $750.00 shall be exempt from forced sale or execution or other final process of any court. Such exemption shall not extend to any mortgage lawfully obtained on said real or personal property.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the amendment. Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Prettie a couple of questions, if he would care to answer. The first question I want to ask you about is where you use the language of the committee proposal—and I think it is definitely different than the present language—where you say "exempt from forced sale or execution or other final process," don't you think that that really should read, "forced sale on execution or other final process"?

MR. PRETTIE: I do not, sir.

MR. HUTCHINSON: You do not?

MR. PRETTIE: The reason for that answer: a forced sale may arise through the foreclosure of a mortgage by advertisement, which does not contemplate legal process. A forced sale may arise through property taken upon a writ of replevin or upon a foreclosure of a chattel mortgage by constable sale. No legal process is necessary.

MR. HUTCHINSON: I understand that. That's why I said I understood that there was a difference in meaning there. I just wonder whether what you are doing is further restricting the legislative discretion in the matter. You want to further restrict the legislature on this matter?

MR. PRETTIE: I don't think it is restricting it any further than it is presently, Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: I submit to you that at the present time under the constitution the only thing that the legislature has to recognize is that there should be an exemption from a forced sale on execution. The legislature may go further. You and I will both agree that the legislature may go further than the constitution provides, because the constitution is not a grant of authority, but a limitation upon the legislature.

Consequently, at the present time all the constitution requires is that the legislature provide for an exemption upon forced sale on execution. Now, then, when you say "or execution," you are further limiting the power of the legislature.

MR. PRETTIE: Well, that may be your opinion. It doesn't happen to be in accord with mine, sir.

MR. HUTCHINSON: All right. Reasonable men may differ. But, on that point, you and I do differ, and that's one reason why I guess I can't support your amendment.

The other question I would like to ask of you is this. I think that your amendment pretty much follows the language of the first section of the present article, when you add to it the concept of homestead, except in that first section of the present article, "The personal property and homestead of every resident of this state . . . shall be exempted." In your amendment here that we are now debating, you do not refer to this matter of "resident of this state." Therefore, I submit that you are further restricting the power of the legislature, in that under your amendment the legislature could not limit this exemption to residents of the state.

Do you think that it is important—constitutionally, at least—that the power of the legislature should be limited only insofar as residents of this state are concerned?

MR. PRETTIE: I think your point is well taken, sir, and I would be happy to agree to any amendment that you might propose that would limit the personal property exemption to residents of the state. The homestead exemption, of course, would necessarily be restricted to residents of the state.

MR. HUTCHINSON: That's right. Now, Mr. Chairman, I would like to point out this situation. Of course, I have had no time to prepare any such amendment in writing. You see, I wanted to first discuss it with Mr. Prettie and get his reaction. We are right here on the question of voting for Mr. Prettie's amendment. Is it the ruling of the Chair that I have no power to offer from the floor orally an amendment to accomplish those purposes?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The Chair would rule that an amendment can be offered. I would indulge the delegate with sufficient time to write it out, if he would care to do so.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Of course, I can't write it out until I have the text of Mr. Prettie's amendment before me, which I do not have. I don't like to embarrass the progress of the committee by asking for an informal recess of the committee solely to accommodate me; but, on the other hand, we seem to be doing things here differently than we do in the senate. In the senate Mr. Chase was willing to accept an amendment made by me or any other senator from the floor without the necessity of putting it in writing, and therefore the progress could go on.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hutchinson, without objection, the Chair will rule that you may offer such an amendment from the floor, if we can get it in proper order here.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Will you then read the Prettie amendment?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Prettie's language is as follows:

A homestead in the amount of not less than $3,500 and personal property in the amount of not less than $750 shall be exempt—

MR. HUTCHINSON: At which point I would add "of every resident of this state".

[Following is Mr. Hutchinson's amendment:

1. Amend the first sentence of the amendment after "property" by inserting "of every resident of this state".]

MR. PRETTIE: I rise to accept the amendment, sir.

SECRETARY CHASE: May the secretary ask Mr. Hutchinson just where you wish this inserted? After the sum $750.00?

MR. HUTCHINSON: Yes, because, as Mr. Prettie points out, a homestead necessarily would be of a resident of the state, and it couldn't be a homestead unless they lived on it.

SECRETARY CHASE: The only question in the secretary's mind, Mr. Hutchinson, is whether the language should be inserted after the words "personal property"—

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, I think we are dealing with an awfully important subject when we are dealing with the exemptions that people are entitled to. The committee on legislative powers has done considerable work. We don't mean to say that we are infallible at all. Certainly we welcome any suggestions that perhaps will improve the particular proposal before you.

I do not wish to delay your consideration of this matter. There is only one way that it can be done at this time, and that would be with a motion for the committee to rise to give Mr. Hutchinson or any other member adequate time in which to consider any amendment judiciously before it is presented to this committee; and I so move, Mr. Chairman, that the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the motion that the committee do now rise. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

I believe the nays have it. A division is called for. Those who are in favor will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Fifty-nine.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Those who are opposed will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Fifty-seven.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN. The motion prevails. The committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, Vice President Hutchinson resumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The convention will be in order.

The delegate from the seventeenth senatorial district, Mr. Martin, is recognized.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration several items regarding which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 8, A proposal to provide that the governor may convene the legislature on extraordinary occasions. It reports this proposal back to the convention without amendment, and with the recommendation that it do pass.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Pursuant to rule 57, Committee Proposal 8 is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Committee Proposal 8, as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 375.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole has also had under consideration Exclusion Report 2004, A report recommending the exclusion of article XI, section 13. It reports this exclusion report back to the convention without amendment and with the recommendation that it be adopted.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon agreeing to the recommendation made by the committee of the whole that this exclusion report be adopted. All those in favor will say aye.

Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. President, I would like to make a parliamentary inquiry. Are we now considering both items simultaneously?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: No, Mr. Ford. The question is upon the recommendation of the committee of the whole relative to this exclusion report as to section 13 of article XI. That's the salt spring lands matter.

MR. FORD: And this is the only thing before it?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: I asked the secretary, as a matter of procedure, whether it might not be a good practice to have these exclusion reports actually voted upon by the convention when the committee rises.

This for the reason that these exclusion reports going to the committee on style and drafting represent a final action of the convention upon the matter; and it does seem as though there should be a convention action as well as a committee of the whole action on these exclusion reports.

Therefore, I put the question this way. As many as are in favor of the adoption of the exclusion report will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

Exclusion Report 2004 is adopted and is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Exclusion Report 2004 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 434.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 12, and has come to no final resolution thereon.

This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. President, another inquiry, if I may. As I understood what happened when we got through here, there was almost a meeting of the minds on some language here. Is it my understanding that we would have to pass on this matter now, or at tomorrow's session, unless it is tabled?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: It is the opinion of the Chair that when the committee of the whole next meets, this matter which was last under consideration will be up for further debate.

Announcements?

Mr. Leppien.

MR. LEPPIEN: Mr. President, I think our administrative committee has done a splendid job in all of its work. However, I think there is one suggestion I would like to make. Now that the Chair has ruled that this convention is going to vote on exclusion matters by a vote of this convention, I wonder if I could dare suggest that the powers that be bring those committee exclusion reports back to us on different colored paper, one item on a sheet, for the record.

I don't think a motion is necessary, Mr. President. However, I would make it if you do so rule.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Yes, I think the secretary can find another color.

Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, while the hour is very late, there will be a very short meeting of the committee on finance and taxation starting about 10 minutes after we adjourn.

SECRETARY CHASE: I have the following announcements of committee meetings other than those enumerated in the composite calendar:

The committee on administration will meet in the conference room tomorrow, Thursday, at 11:15 p.m. Walter De Vries, chairman.

A note of change of time of the meeting of the subcommittee on eminent domain, which will meet Friday, January 5, at 9:00 o'clock a.m. in room G. At this meeting all delegates who have proposals on this topic will be given an opportunity to be heard. Please notify the committee clerk of the miscellaneous provisions and schedule committee if you will appear. Paul R. Mahinske, chairman of the subcommittee.

The committee on legislative organization will meet in room D tomorrow, Thursday, at 8:30 a.m. John Hannah, chairman.

The subcommittee on metropolitan government of the local government committee will hold hearings on delegate proposals at 7:30 p.m. today, this evening, in committee room A. Also, hearings on proposals will again be held tomorrow at 3:00 o'clock or as soon as possible after the convention session adjourns; and again on Friday, January 5, at 8:30 a.m. You will be notified later as to the room where the Thursday and Friday meetings will be held. Glenn S. Allen, Jr., chairman of the subcommittee. The subcommittee on annexation and consolidation of the local government committee will meet at 7:30 p.m. January 3, today, in room 133 of the Lewis Cass building. Said subcommittee will meet again at 8:30 a.m. tomorrow. You will be notified as to what room has been assigned for the Thursday meeting. Delegate Charles Follo, chairman.

The committee on rules and resolutions is scheduled to meet next Monday, after the session, in room I.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, I have just been informed that the Democratic delegation has a caucus tomorrow afternoon. Lest I be accused of interfering with the democratic process, the committee on administration will not meet tomorrow noon.

SECRETARY CHASE: The secretary has been requested to read the following announcement. The cigars and candy that are being furnished today are in honor of the arrival of Miss Ann Marie Bentley on December 30, 1961, at Owosso. (applause)

The apples today are from Mr. J. B. Richards. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, the committee on executive branch had scheduled a special meeting this afternoon, which will not be held. It will meet tomorrow afternoon at its usual time immediately after the session to hear delegate proposals, and on Friday morning at 8:30.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President, I would like to call to the attention of the members of the legislative powers committee that all 4 subcommittees will meet tomorrow morning at 8:30. I urge everyone to be present.

SECRETARY CHASE: With regard to the announcement made previously concerning the subcommittee on metropolitan government meeting on Thursday at 3:00 o'clock and Friday at 8:30, these committee meetings will be in room A. Delegate Allen is chairman of the subcommittee.

The mileage and salary checks which have not yet been picked up by delegates are available in the office of the secretary.

We have the following requests for leave of absence:

Delegate Gover would like to be excused from tomorrow's session.

Delegate John Hannah is asking leave of the convention from the sessions of January 4 and 5, Thursday and Friday. On January 4 he is making a speech in Washington at a conference on Equal Opportunities for Higher Education, which is a keynote speech on the morning of the fourth.

The Ford foundation and Carnegie corporation have jointly set up a new fund of $2,500,000.00 to be handled by a new group to explore the possibilities and appropriate roles for American colleges and universities in international affairs. I have been made one of the directors of this group, and they are holding their first meeting in New York on January 5. I feel that this meeting is of such importance that I should be in attendance.

Sincerely, John A. Hannah.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, Mr. Hannah and Mr. Gover will be excused as requested. The Chair hears no objection, and the requests are granted.

Mr. Follo.

MR. FOLLO: Mr. President, word has arrived here this afternoon of the sudden death of Senator William Miron, of the thirtieth senatorial district, of a heart attack shortly after noon today.

I would move that this convention send its condolences to his family.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, it will be so ordered.

The Chair is grieved to learn of the death of Senator Miron. It was my pleasure to serve with him in the senate for several terms, and he was highly respected in that body. Will the delegates please rise for a moment of silent tribute to the memory of Senator Miron.

[Whereupon, for one minute the delegates stood in silent tribute.]

Thank you.

Mr. Karn.

MR. KARN: Mr. President, Mr. James Thomson has been ill all during the holiday week, and has asked that I enter an excuse for him covering Thursday and Friday of this week. He is out today, but unable to come over for the last part of the week.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, Mr. Thomson will be excused due to illness. The Chair hears no objection, and the excuse is granted.

Are there any further announcements? If not, what is the pleasure of the convention?

The delegate from Wayne, Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, I move we adjourn.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the motion that the convention do now adjourn. All those in favor will say aye. Those opposed?

The motion prevails, and the convention stands adjourned until tomorrow at 2:00 p.m.

[Whereupon, at 4:30 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned to Thursday, January 4, 1962, at 2:00 o'clock p.m.]

FIFTIETH DAY

Thursday, January 4, 1962, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation today is to be given by the Reverend M. Schuurmans of the Delta Center Methodist Church of Lansing.

REVEREND SCHUURMANS: Shall we stand, please. Let us pray. We bow before Thee, our heavenly Father, as the creator and sustainer of the universe, to whom we as Thy children are responsible and obligated.

We thank Thee for the revelation that Thou art concerned and interested in the concerns of men and that through Thy holy spirit Thou canst help us in our need. We thank Thee for our blessed country and pray Thy blessing and guidance upon President Kennedy, the congress, and all those who lead us during these trying and difficult times. We thank Thee, too, for our great state of Michigan with all its beauty and its unexcelled opportunities for attaining the good life. Bless our governor, the legislature, and all those officials who direct the affairs of this state. Above all we thank Thee that we are free men who live in a democracy where we establish our own government, where the best interest of the majority is our ideal, but also where the rights of the individual are held sacred.

We thank Thee for this constitutional convention and we invoke Thy blessing and guidance upon each of its members. We pray for inspiration and vision and wisdom that the deliberations now under way may provide for our people a state constitution that will promote the public welfare for many, many years to come. May posterity be able to look back upon this body and call it blessed because of what it has accomplished.. Keep us in Thy favor and look upon us in Thy mercy. Forgive us, Lord, wherein we fail Thee and fall short of Thine expectations of us. We pray, Lord, in our Master's name and for His sake. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is now locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave:

Mr. G. E. Brown, from today's session to be a pallbearer at a funeral in Kalamazoo; and Mr. Van Dusen from today's session as he must attend a board of directors meeting.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. G. E. Brown, J. A. Hannah, Pellow, Perlich, Thomson, Van Dusen, Wood and Young.

Absent without leave: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, reports back to the convention Delegate Proposal 1018, A proposal to clarify legislator's immunity from arrest; with the recommendation that the proposal be referred to the committee on legislative powers.

James K. Pollock, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection it will be so referred. Hearing none, it is referred to the committee on legislative powers.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, reports back to the convention Delegate Proposal 1022, A proposal to provide 4 year terms for members of the legislature; with the recommendation that the proposal be referred to the committee on legislative powers.

James K. Pollock, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection the recommendation will be approved. Hearing none, it is referred to the committee on legislative powers.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, reports back Delegate Proposal 1047, A proposal to provide a 4 year term of office for legislators, the governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, state treasurer, auditor general, and attorney general, and to fix the time of such elections; with the recommendation that this proposal be referred to the committee on legislative powers.

James K. Pollock, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection the report will be accepted and the proposal referred. Hearing none, it is referred to the committee on legislative powers.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, also reports back Delegate Proposal 1067, A proposal to divide the state into 8 territorial districts for nonpartisan election of certain state officials; with the recommendation that the proposal be referred concurrently to the committees on education and judicial branch.

James K. Pollock, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection the referral will be made as recommended. Hearing none, it is concurrently referred to the committees on education and judicial branch.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, also reports back Delegate Proposal 1232, A proposal to guarantee to every citizen of Michigan an equal opportunity to vote and to have his vote counted equally, regardless of race, creed, color, national origin, or geographical location; with the recommendation that the proposal be referred to the committee on legislative organization.

James K. Pollock, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the report of the committee will be accepted and it will be so referred. Hearing none, it is referred to the committee on legislative organization.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Erickson, for the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, introduces Committee Proposal 14, A proposal pertaining to the preamble to the constitution;
with the recommendation that it pass.

Claud Erickson, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 14 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 464.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Pollock, for the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, introduces Committee Proposal 15, A proposal to amend article II pertaining to the declaration of rights;
with the recommendation that it pass.

James K. Pollock, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 15 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 464.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the standing committee reports.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no motions or resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders of the day.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for consideration of the items on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Martin that we resolve ourselves into committee of the whole. All in favor say aye; opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

Mr. Martin, will you take the Chair.

[Whereupon, Mr. Martin assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The committee will be in order.

The secretary will read the matter now pending before the committee of the whole.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Committee Proposal 12, A proposal pertaining to exemptions as a substitute for all of article XIV.

When the committee of the whole rose on yesterday afternoon, there was pending an amendment offered by Mr. Prettie to which an amendment had been offered by Mr. Hutchinson.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 12, see above, page 435.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The Chair recognizes Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, in the hope that we may unwind ourselves from the parliamentary snarl in which we found ourselves yesterday and expedite our procedure, I wish to withdraw the amendment submitted yesterday.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The amendment is withdrawn. There was an amendment to that amendment, Mr. Chase, and the amendment to the amendment falls automatically.

Is that satisfactory, Mr. Hutchinson?

MR. HUTCHINSON: Yes, we have another. (laughter)

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hutchinson had previously filed another amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the amendment that I offered.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The amendment is withdrawn.

SECRETARY CHASE: Dr. Nord had filed an amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I have already withdrawn that, too.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: All right, Dr. Nord's amendment is withdrawn.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hoxie, for the committee on legislative powers, offers the following sustitute for Committee Proposal 12:

> A proposal pertaining to exemptions as a substitute for all of article XIV.
>
> The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:
>
> A homestead in the amount of not less than $3,500.00 and personal property of every resident of this state in the amount of not less than $750.00, as defined by law, shall be exempt from forced sale on execution or other process of the court. Such exemptions shall not extend to any mortgage or other lien thereon lawfully obtained.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Are there any amendments to the body of the substitute?

Mr. Hoxie, do you wish to discuss this? Or Mr. Millard?

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, Mr. Millard will carry on in the discussion that the membership feels advisable. You will note that we had delivered to the desk of each delegate a copy of the substitute proposal. If there are any questions, I am sure Mr. Millard will be happy to answer them.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, yesterday we saw the legislative process in one of its active moments. I think that everybody learned a lot from the matters as they emerged. That seems to be a new word around this convention, "emerging."

At the time of the adjournment, we were in the process of hammering out what I thought would be an acceptable proposal. After the session I got together with Mr. Hutchinson, who had an amendment in, and Mr. Prettie and with the research director, Dr. Joiner, and we have a substitute proposal on your desk which I think covers all of the objections that were made yesterday. I might add that I think the proposal, the original proposal of the committee, was satisfactory; however, I realize there were certain objections and we have tried to take care of them.

You all have the substitute proposal in front of you. You will note that instead of "real estate" we substituted the word "homestead" for which there was some sentiment yesterday. Then we made it self executing rather than having it left to the will of the legislature. As I said yesterday, the word "shall" in there made it practically mandatory because the legislature does do what is in the constitution, but nevertheless, we made this a self executing provision. Now, this was not new, because this same provision was self executing as far as personal property was concerned in section 1 of the old article. So all we did was make it self executing as far as the real property or the homestead property was concerned.

I think the reason that there was a distinction made in the 1908 constitution was the fact that there was a floor on personal property and a ceiling on real property. Now we have put a floor under both of them. We have made this a self executing clause in both of them, so that it will read:

> A homestead in the amount of not less than $3,500.00 and personal property of every resident of this state . . .

We added those words which were in the old section.

> . . . every resident of this state in the amount of not less than $750.00, as defined by law, ...

There has been a definition of homestead law in the statutes since 1848 — that was the original statute — and it has gone right down through the years and is still the law. So we put in there

> . . . as defined by law, shall be exempt from forced sale on execution or other process of the court. Such exemptions shall not extend to any mortgage or other lien thereon lawfully obtained.

We added that clause, that sentence, because some of the lawyers had raised the question. However, I wish to state that there has been that provision since 1848; before there was any constitutional provision there was this exemption. The exemption did not extend to mortgages, and that has been carried down, right down to the present time. If any of the lawyers present want to take the citation, I have it here. It is section 27.1573, Michigan Statutes Annotated, and this was amended after the amendment of 1943. It was amended by the legislature in 1945, containing the same language that was in that amendment; so that I think we have taken care of all of the objections of yesterday and, therefore, I move the adoption of the substitute proposal as presented.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Are there any amendments to the body of the substitute proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Mahinske and Erickson offer the following amendment to the substitute:

1. Amend the first sentence after "process of" by striking out "the" and inserting "any"; so the language will then read: ". . . shall be exempt from forced sale on execution or other process of any court."

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. Chairman, under the wording of the committee proposal, I am not so sure that the phrase "the court" may not be strictly construed to exclude some courts.

I notice under the 1908 constitution in section 1, the reference is made to "final process of any court," and in section 2, the reference is made to "final process from a court." I interpret both of these words as being inclusive of all courts that we now have or may have in this state, and I do not know that the phrase "the court" includes all courts. Now if we would interpret this as "the court," I immediately think of the supreme court and, at the same time, this conflicts with what has been said prior to this, that is, "the court" may not necessarily be interpreted to exclude, say, justice courts or municipal courts.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman, I have no objection to that.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the amendment of Messrs. Mahinske and Erickson.

Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Millard one question for purposes of clarity. The expression "as defined by law" should that follow the words "personal property" or does it refer to every resident of the state? Is there going to be any conflict because of the way "as defined by law" is put there?

MR. MILLARD: We discussed that in the committee this morning. There was a comma after "$3,500." At one time I was at a meeting of the style and drafting committee and they talked about loose commas and tight commas, so we considered this was a loose comma and we unloosed it and took it out; so that now "defined by law" refers to everything ahead of that comma after "$750" and includes both the "homestead" and the "personal property" and includes that whole section.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on Messrs. Mahinske and Erickson's amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The amendment to the substitute is adopted.

Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Mr. Chairman, I have another amendment to suggest which I have submitted to the secretary.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Woolfenden offers the following amendment to the substitute:

1. Amend the second sentence after "extend to" by inserting "property subject to"; so that the language will then read "Such exemptions shall not extend to property subject to any mortgage or other lien thereon lawfully obtained."

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: I believe the amendment is self explanatory. As I read the sentence without the amendment, it is ambiguous and it would appear that the "mortgage or other lien thereon" would be on the exemptions, and I believe this clarifies the intent of the sentence.

I move adoption of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Woolfenden.

Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: I think we all have trouble trying to understand things without having them before us. I wonder if I could ask the maker of the amendment for a little further explanation. For example, if, say, a home worth $15,000 had a $5,000 mortgage on it, would the person still get the exemption for the $10,000 value? I just wanted to have that point cleared up by the proposed language.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: I don't think that the language I suggested changes the intent of the sentence, but the sentence as it comes back from the committee is not intelligible to me. Maybe I am the only delegate who does not understand it, but it seems to me that is is merely a matter of grammar.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, this matter that Mr. Woolfenden now brings up was mentioned to me yesterday by Mr. Joiner, and I pointed out to Mr. Joiner that the phrase as it is now here, "Such exemption shall not extend to any mortgage . . .", is the phraseology exactly as it is in the present constitution and as it always has been.

What I fear if you add the words "property subject to" is that it might then be construed, if you had a $5,000 mortgage on your homestead, that you would lose the entire exemption. I don't think that was the intent.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: May I ask Delegate Hutchinson a question? I think the thing that perplexes me is the word "thereon." I believe that what I have in mind might be accomplished if the word "thereon" were eliminated. To what does the word "thereon" refer in this sentence?

MR. HUTCHINSON: I see your point, Mr. Woolfenden. I would hope that it would refer to a homestead or to the personal property which is exempt.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: I think that was the intent, but I don't think that is the way it reads.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Well, I see your point. On the other hand, I trust you see my problem here that if you just put in that "property subject to," you might be wiping out the entire exemption and not just to the extent of the mortgage or lien.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Perhaps if the period after the words "process of the court" were changed to a semicolon, it would accomplish what we are after, but as the language now stands the word "thereon" in an independent sentence, I think, refers to nothing unless it refers to exemptions.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: I would like to suggest that Mr. Hutchinson's view on this is correct. It would be preferable to take a risk that the grammar is not perfect, especially in connection with the word "thereon," but it would not be safe to take the risk and add the words as Mr. Woolfenden has suggested because that, I believe, is absolutely unambiguous and means what we do not wish it to mean.

It says, "Such exemptions shall not extend to property subject to" a mortgage. That obviously means property interests which are bigger than the mortgage debt, the entire property. So, therefore, as was pointed out by Mr. Hutchinson and, I believe, Mr. Downs as well, if property which is homestead property, for example, has any mortgage no matter how small, the entire exemption on the homestead is lost according to this. Of course, it is true, the legislature could put it back again, but the point is that the guarantee is lost.

I see no reason to risk wiping out the exemption just on account of grammar. It seems to me that although there may be some possible grammatical objection to the language here, it is not a serious objection and we would be better off leaving the language as it is. I would also like to add, while I am on my feet, that I believe the language as we now have it satisfies all the objections I raised and everyone raised yesterday, and we ought to decide to adopt the language as we have it now.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Millard a question with respect to the language. Now the present constitution reads:

> . . . shall be exempt from forced sale on execution or any other final process from a court. Such exemption shall not extend to any mortgage thereon lawfully obtained, but such mortgage or other alienation of such land. . . .

and it is very clear in the present constitution that the only way you can waive this exemption and create a lien that would have priority over the exemption is by a deliberate act, either a mortgage or some other form of alienation that would divest you of the right to title.

Now I don't know what "or any other lien thereon lawfully obtained" might be construed to mean, and it is conceivable that the legislature might say that a lien obtained for a tort judgment, for example, is a lien "lawfully obtained" within the meaning of this, and we get back to where we started yesterday. So I have this question, does this language express the intent of what you are trying to do?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: There have been court decisions that mechanics' liens are excepted and these exemptions are not extended to them when the contract is signed by both the wife and the husband on the homestead property, and we made that to go also. We say "such exemptions." Now that "s" refers both to the exemptions of personal property and to homestead property, so that it goes to chattel mortgages as well as encumbrances on land, and liens, land contracts, and conditional sales contracts which are properly recorded that are lawful.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: You see, this is where the problem arises. The present language of the constitution makes it eminently clear that they intended the exception from this to be only where the people voluntarily placed their property outside of the protection of this lien and, as Mr. Millard points out, where the husband and wife sign a contract for improvements to the property, it has been held that a mechanics' lien based on that contract is not within the purview of the present language. But the question here is why put in "or other lien"? Why don't we use the language that has been good since 1850 and has been interpreted by the courts and play safe?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct a question to Mr. Woolfenden. I would like to ask him if he would have any objection to adding the following words after the conclusion of the last sentence, after the word "obtained," adding the words "to the extent of the mortgage or lien"?

MR. WOOLFENDEN: I would have no objection to that. I am persuaded by Delegates Hutchinson and Nord that the language submitted in my amendment is subject to abuse and I would like to withdraw the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The amendment is withdrawn.

MR. BOOTHBY: I would like to redirect the question to Mr. Woolfenden and ask him whether he feels this abuse would be present if the sentence did in fact read, "Such exemptions shall not extend to property subject to any mortgage or other lien thereon lawfully obtained to the extent of the mortgage or lien." Would then the objection of Mr. Hutchinson be present? Maybe I should address that question, also, to Mr. Hutchinson.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask again — Mr. Boothby, would you tell me how this sentence would read if your amendment were adopted?

MR. BOOTHBY: Well, I do not have an amendment in. I only raised the question. The wording would be "Such exemptions shall not extend to property subject to any mortgage or other lien thereon lawfully obtained to the extent of the mortgage or lien."

MR. HUTCHINSON: Well, Mr. Chairman, in answer to the inquiry, I would like to invite the attention of everybody to the fact that the present language of the constitution has to do — and I refer to the section 2 — and the language there is, and has been for over 100 years, "Such exemption shall not extend to any mortgage thereon lawfully obtained . . ."

Now that is the phraseology as it has been interpreted for 100 years, ". . . any mortgage thereon lawfully obtained."

The courts have not construed that that applied to the mortgage and not to the property. That is a separate sentence just as it is in this proposal. In other words, this language, "Such exemption shall not extend to any mortgage thereon lawfully obtained . . ." is the same context independent of any other statement in this proposal and just as it is in the present constitution. The only thing is that they have added "or other lien". I don't think that would change it at all.

I do not see, in view of the long history of this, that we have got anything substantive to argue about, and I prefer to have the language continue just as it has been for 100 years. I might suggest to you that if upon further reflection there did appear to be an inconsistency which genuinely does concern the attenders of commas, periods and question marks in the style and drafting committee of which I am a member, we could perhaps fix it up there or send it back and ask the convention to consider it further, rather than try to hammer out some language here on the floor at this present time which has not been thoroughly thought out and agreed upon.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: I agree to that.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, my question was somewhat along the lines of Mr. Boothby's. I thought that perhaps the wording, "Such exemptions shall not extend to the amount of any mortgage or other lien thereon lawfully obtained" would solve the problem, but I am somewhat persuaded by Mr. Hutchinson's remarks that in view of the long standing court interpretation of the present language we might be all right, but I am not satisfied that the wording "or other lien thereon lawfully obtained" does not present a new problem in line with what Mr. Ford had suggested. I think we ought to discuss that, so I will withdraw my suggestion and would like to hear more from Mr. Ford with regard to these other liens "lawfully obtained."

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak in support of Mr. Hutchinson's suggestion in view of the long standing wording and the fact that this has been interpreted. I would be concerned — and I think you should give some thought to this — that if you added the words "to the extent of the mortgage or lien," it might be construed not to cover taxes, insurance premiums, and expenses that would be incurred by a mortgagee or a lien holder in the foreclosing or closing of that lien. In other words, "to the extent of the mortgage or lien" might be construed to be words of limitation rather than as words of permission.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you, Mr. Lawrence.

Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Hutchinson and I, I think, are in agreement and, as I say, I would like to retain the present language. Now the present language says, ". . . shall not extend to any mortgage thereon lawfully obtained," and the only thing new we are putting in is "or other lien," and I am fearful that people are going to seize upon this as a reason for imposing other forms of lien than those which are deliberately placed upon the homestead by the parties who benefit by the protection we are trying to put into the constitution, and I would ask him if he might consider deleting those 3 words so that we would go back to the original language.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman and fellow members of the committee, I think that language is of some importance. I can conceive of a possibility of a husband and wife obtaining title to a piece of property and a court later finding that they obtained that title through misrepresentation or fraud, and in that case the decree would provide that the opposite party is entitled to a rescission and a lien on the property, and including this language would eliminate any room for argument on that. Also, in a divorce decree the title might be given to the husband and the wife might be given a lien on it, and then the question could be raised.

If we strike out this language — it was the intent of this convention not to — how should it apply to that kind of lien? Those are merely 2 illustrations of others that might be found.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you.

Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman, this last sentence, I think, is bothersome. I think what Delegate Ford is getting at is this, and he made himself clear. Liens arise in 2 ways: by operation of law or by contract, and by voluntary act of the parties. Those that arise by operation of law are those such as mechanics' liens, tax liens, liens that are imposed by law despite your wishes. Now we speak of mortgages. We really mean mortgage indebtedness, I suppose, that pertains to real estate and that is there because of the constitutional history.

Personal property, of course, can be mortgaged by chattel mortgage, but it can also be subject to other liens such as pledges, et cetera, and I am just making these observations because I am not clear as to whether "or other lien" is intended to cover liens arising by operation of law as well as those that are contracted for, such as pledges of security with a bank, and I am not sure that if you throw this into the lap of another committee that we will have an idea of the full meaning, because if we are going to exempt, as planned here, real and personal property liens, we ought to make it clear that we mean only voluntary liens, or voluntary liens plus those imposed by operation of law, and mechanics' liens were cited as one illustration in the case of real property, and there are many other types of such liens. I am just making an observation.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you. Are there any other amendments to the body of the substitute proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Ford offers the following amendment:

1. Amend the substitute following the last line by inserting 2 paragraphs to read as follows:

"The homestead of a family, after the death of the owner thereof, shall be exempt from the payment of his debts in all cases during the minority of his children.

If the owner of a homestead dies, leaving a widow but no children, such homestead shall be exempt, and the rents and profits thereof shall accrue to her benefit during the time of her widowhood unless she be the owner of a homestead in her own right.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I came to Lansing expecting to be one of the last delegates to be pleading for something because we have had it for 100 years and that makes it good, but this is merely what Miss Donnelly had yesterday, adding sections 3 and 4 of the present constitution in that. They are very short sections. We have now condensed this section — 1 and 2 — into a single paragraph, a simple paragraph that is contained in the committee report, and all this would do would be to continue the tradition of extending the homestead benefits to the immediate family.

Now if you take a quick look at the statutes that have implemented this exemption, you find that if the family is very clearly defined, the conditions under which they can continue to claim the exemption are clearly defined, and, as was pointed out by Mr. Millard, the judicature act will continue this provision starting in 1963, assuming that we adopt this constitution without putting it in; but I think that a careful examination of the statutes will indicate that what the statute actually does is not create the right but define the right that is created by the constitution.

I am fearful that if we do not continue the protection for the widow and the children in the tradition that it has been continued that the legislature standing alone is not going to be sufficient. I do not want to precipitate a discussion of whether we can trust the legislature to take care of widows and children. This is not my fear. My fear is that we are departing from a tradition, that we have a body of law including a new statute that has a lot of work in it that contemplates this language that is in the present constitution and I do not think that it does violence to the principles that we are trying to espouse and the object we are trying to accomplish here. That is the reason for my amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you. The question is on the Ford amendment.

Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman, your committee has gone over that very carefully. It is covered very fully in the statutes, and it is unnecessary and I hope you will vote the amendment down.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Ford amendment. All those in favor —

Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I must naturally rise to support this and also to recall to people that the statute that we are relying on is not effective yet, and it could be changed.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Miss Donnelly, I would like to say that this is a compilation of the present statutes. They are all in effect right now. This is a compilation that only goes into effect in 1963. The exemptions are still in the statute operative today.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: However, the judicature act is not in effect yet and can still be changed; is that not true?

MR. MILLARD: The so called compilation which is called the judicature act goes into effect January 1, 1963. That judicature act is a compilation that embodies all of the exemptions which are now in existence. They are still in existence until this act goes into effect. It is the same thing that was taken out by our research man, Professor Gay.

MISS DONNELLY: You have not answered my second question, Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: What is that?

MISS DONNELLY: Could it not be changed between now and then?

MR. MILLARD: Well, any act can be changed at any time.

MISS DONNELLY: For that reason I support Mr. Ford's amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: I would like to direct a question to Mr. Ford. Does the Ford amendment, where it mentions homestead, mean $3,500 exemption or would that be a $25,000 homestead, Mr. Ford?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I think that since it is contained in the same section, it's homestead as defined by the statute that Mr. Millard describes—both the present law and the laws that will be — and by the decisions of our courts over a long period of time, and it is complementary. Paragraphs 2 and 3 of this section would be complementary to the first paragraph and would draw their meaning from the first paragraph.

MR. FARNSWORTH: That is a typical reply from an attorney. Would it be $3,500?

MR. FORD: My interpretation would be that it would be an exemption of not less than $3,500, in such sum as the legislature from time to time establishes but not less than $3,500, and that a homestead would be as defined by our courts over a period of time and by the legislature.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Thank you very much.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Farnsworth, if you reflect on the attorneys, we are going to have a lot of people claiming personal privilege around here. (laughter)

The question is on the Ford amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

Any further amendments to the body of the substitute proposal?

Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to amend the proposal, but I do wish to ask a question of Mr. Millard. I would like to know how the dollar amounts stated were determined and are they related to any basic factors of minimum cost of shelter and basic necessities for survival?

MR. MILLARD: The answer is no.

MR. HUBBS: You mean somebody just sat down and fished them out of the air?

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Hubbs, if you will notice the original exemption was $500. The legislature has put it up to $1,000, and we have put a floor of $750. In other words, it increased it 100 per cent. The original exemption was $1,500 in 1908; it moved up to $2,500 in 1943, and we have moved the floor — that was the ceiling — we have moved the floor to $3,500 which we think is in proportion with that which we have recommended for personal property.

MR. HUBBS: Your last statement intrigues me. You say you think it is in proportion to what you think is right for personal property, but it is between homesteads and personal property. But there was no statistical method used in determining what minimum factor — dollar amount — should be considered.

MR. MILLARD: I do not think there was an accountant upon our committee. I do not think we went into the gross national income or anything like that to make a determination of it. I think that we all used our common sense and we felt that $3,500 as a floor was reasonable.

MR. HUBBS: Well, I would like to ask the committee to use further common sense and consider the suggestion that the committee on emerging problems set up a method of providing a measured value for use in the constitution which does not express measures of value in terms of dollars but relates them to some basic economic factor and that this study be done by the research department and we, therefore, translate all dollar amounts into multipliers of this basic factor. Thank you. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I am somewhat apprehensive about the 3 words "or other lien" in the formulation which we have before us. I realize the good and cogent reasons that have been advanced by Judge Dehnke and some of the other delegates and there may be an argument with regard to it. However, the absence of such language for some 100 years and the fact that, as Mr. Cudlip indicated, by operation of law potential future liens may become operative in such fashion as to jeopardize the purpose of the homestead exemption, I feel somewhat moved to offer an amendment that we strike the words "or other lien" and I so move, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Norris, would you care to submit that in writing? Oh, you have it in writing.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Norris submits the following amendment to the substitute:

1. Amend the second sentence after "mortgage" by striking out "or other lien"; so the language will then read, "Such exemption shall not extend to any mortgage thereon lawfully obtained."

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Norris amendment to the substitue proposal.

Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: I would like to speak in support of the amendment of Mr. Norris and of Mr. Cudlip, just to point out 2 situations. Then we come to the matter of the use of the words and their being construed as limiting. Liens could lawfully be obtained by a lis pendens and by an execution levy, both of which would defeat the purpose of what we are trying to do.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I have an amendment which perhaps Mr. Norris would agree to. Otherwise, it would be a substitute to his, I would presume, by my verbiage. It is on the secretary's desk. I agree with him in theory; that is, I have some other language.

SECRETARY CHASE: Miss Donnelly has filed an amendment to add after the word "obtained" at the end of the second sentence, the words "by voluntary alienation."

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: I think we had better consider things one at a time.

Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, my position is somewhat similar to Miss Donnelly's. I have an amendment on the secretary's desk which inserts "contract or tax" after the words "or other" and before the word "lien." I don't think that Miss Donnelly's amendment considers tax liens, which I believe are not included.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Norris amendment.

Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, would it not be proper to offer my amendment as a substitute amendment for that of Mr. Norris?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: We are voting on an amendment to a substitute proposal now. I think we had better do this one at a time or the delegates will become confused, Mr. King.

The question is on the Norris amendment. Will you read it again, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Norris has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend the second sentence after "mortgage" by striking out "or other lien"; so the language will then read, "Such exemptions shall not extend to any mortgage thereon lawfully obtained."

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman, again adverting to my previous remarks — and I am not doing other than observing — if we accomplish what Delegate Norris desires, I understand that then a chattel mortgage — and a chattel mortgage only — will be involved as respects personal property in this exemption process, and a real estate mortgage — and a real estate mortgage only — will be involved in connection with the real estate. All other types of voluntarily contracted liens — and there are many others, as the lawyers at least know — and all liens arising by operation of law and there accomplished would not be involved in this provision, and I just again make the observation.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Much of which I wished to say has been covered by Mr. Cudlip, Mr. Chairman, but while some advertence has been made to land contracts, I wish to point out that a mortgage is not a land contract, that this was a method of financing not widely in acceptance at the time of the Constitution of 1908, that it is now probably a much more common means of financing than the mortgage, and, certainly, in order to encompass the subjugation of homestead rights to the equities of a contract vendor, some language such as "or other lien" must be retained in this section.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: I rise to support the amendment of Mr. Norris and on further reflection, I believe these 3 words could be better removed. The reasons are first of all, that they are not in the present constitutional provision and, therefore, I believe it is clear that the language that we would have is the language that we now have on the subject of mortgages. That language does not cause any difficulty in the subject of exemptions. The language that is about to be added, could—we have seen how—could cause trouble, because on certain liens we probably would want the exemptions and on others we would not. That is a matter that should be left to the legislature. I would like to point out that by taking out these words "or other lien", we do not preclude the legislature from passing other laws relating to exemptions and those laws might relate to exemptions in connection with liens or not in connection with liens, and they might distinguish between one kind of lien and another kind of lien, and it may have no effect on that law.

For example, Judge Dehnke's remark as to equitable liens — they would not be affected one way or another by the constitutional provision, because all that is provided in these sections as it would read with these 3 words removed is that there are certain guaranteed exemptions. Additional exemptions can be provided by the legislature. As a result, it seems to me that we would be better off to take out the words "or other lien" and go back to the language that we now have in the constitution.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Miss Hart.

MISS HART: Mr. Chairman, this is a field day for the attorneys and I am sympathetic with them. I think they should have their questions answered. I think this kind of thing should be thrashed out, but I wonder for the benefit of those of us who are not attorneys if, after a proposal is placed on the general orders, the people who have this type of question about it might not appear before that committee, if time could not be given and people appear before that committee, thrash out the legalities, and then let the rest of us vote on the merits of the proposal. (applause)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The suggestion seems to be a popular one. I do not know whether it is practical or not, but the delegates can certainly give it consideration.

Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: To continue the field day, if I may, I would like to take exception to the analysis that Mr. Cudlip has made because, really, the present proposal of the committee incorporates some key words from the present constitution that save us from the problem that we were talking about, Mel, and these words are "as defined by law," which follow the figure of $750.

Now this makes it clear that the legislature can specify such property, and I call attention of the lawyers particularly to the fact that again we have a long history of necessities versus television sets and the arguments about whether a sewing machine — I think we went to the supreme court on that one — about whether a sewing machine is included as part of household goods, and the legislature has limited this and I believe that the legislature in various statutes protects people's rights in things such as title retaining contracts and other pledges of property, even leasing arrangements, and they do not find themselves coming under this protection of the constitution because of these words that leave it to the legislature with respect to personal property. This section is only specific, self executing, and limiting as to the word "homestead" and not with respect to "personal property."

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman, I have submitted a substitute amendment to the Norris amendment, which the secretary now has.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The secretary will read it.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Habermehl offers a substitute amendment for the amendment to the substitute that is pending:

1. Amend the amendment by striking out the entire last sentence which reads as follows:

"Such exemptions shall not extend to any mortgage or other lien thereon lawfully obtained.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: I am inclined, Mr. Chairman, to agree with Miss Hart. The discussion for the past 30 minutes has resembled a lawsuit far more than it has the work of the convention. I think, generally, attorneys will agree that the importance of that last sentence is very debatable. The existence or the priority of a voluntarily incurred mortgage or lien would certainly be greater than that of the homestead exemption. In other words, if people want to create a lien against property they can do so voluntarily. It is certainly going to come ahead of the homestead exemption.

In committee we agreed that there was no point to the last sentence. It was added there only for the purpose of satisfying some objections that had been made on the floor yesterday. It adds nothing to the constitutional provision that we propose and to spend a great deal of time on something that has no actual effect seems to me to be a waste of this committee's time. I have moved that we strike the entire last sentence.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Habermehl amendment.

Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, could I ask Mr. Habermehl a question? We have in the first sentence the term "as defined by law." Would that take care of the mortgage situation? In other words, in defining a homestead, if there has been a voluntary mortgage or debt, would the law which defines a homestead give consideration to a mortgage? This is a non-lawyer getting involved in a legal fight.

MR. HABERMEHL: No, I don't believe, Mr. Austin, that that language takes care of it. I believe that the nature of a mortgage or a lien that is created takes care of it. The fact that people have voluntarily incurred this lien certainly is a waiver of their homestead or their personal property exemption. That is really all there is to it. It is a waiver of it when they incur these liens.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, I would say in my opinion that this is not so, that there would not be any waiver; I mean, any contractual arrangement of an individual is not going to do away with the constitution of the state of Michigan. I think that last sentence is necessary.

I would like at this time to once again move my substitute amendment because I think it clarifies it.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: I do not think we can have a substitute on a substitute.

MR. KING: You just entertained one, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hutchinson, can you clarify this, or are you going to—

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I was not going to clarify the matter procedurally. I was going to debate on the merits of Mr. Habermehl's amendment. If the Chair rules it is not now in order, I will wait until it is in order.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: I am going to rule that Mr. King's substitute amendment is out of order for the time being and hold that the question is on the Habermehl substitute amendment.

Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to make this observation. In listening to Mr. Habermehl's argument, I was reminded of the provision in the Constitution of the United States that no state shall impair the obligation of a contract. If it is a matter of contract — and a mortgage or any other kind of a voluntary lien based upon a contract is contractual — although, of course, even the constitution of Michigan could not by an exemption provision impair the obligation of that contract. Is that what I understand you to say, Mr. Habermehl?

MR. HABERMEHL: That's right, Mr. Hutchinson, plus the fact that any constitutional right, for that matter, can be waived and when people sign an obligation that in effect waives it, it is waived.

MR. HUTCHINSON: I think that Mr. Habermehl has a very sound point there, and while I was one yesterday who was of the opinion that some reference to a mortgage might be necessary in here, I am inclined to believe perhaps that if we went along with this amendment now offered, it would be all right. I would be interested to hear some other observations on the matter.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the —

Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Now that Mr. Hutchinson has asked for another observation, I would like to make one. Being a layman, I am a member of this group of 88 people in the convention who are not lawyers; I understand we have 56 of them here. You can readily see that they have quite a time agreeing.

Now I would like to believe what I can see here on paper, and this tells the man loaning the money that he has a certain amount of protection if he makes the loan, and I think it is essential that you have it in there. But look at the time we are taking now. I might make a mortgage loan and I might end up in court finding out whether it was good or not, with this $3,500 exemption in it. I would like very much to see that remain in the language of the proposal.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: I would just like to observe, Mr. Farnsworth, that neither he nor anybody else would look up the constitution of Michigan to see what it says whenever he decides whether he was going to loan money or not. If there is any question about it, he can go to a lawyer and the lawyer would undoubtedly look to the statutes first. They ordinarily do. The matter is covered in the statute. The matter is covered by principles of law, and I doubt very much whether Mr. Farnsworth would hunt up the provisions of the constitution of Michigan in that regard whenever he was going to take a chattel mortgage on an automobile.

MR. FARNSWORTH: I just want to say that that opinion of Mr. Hutchinson has changed slightly since yesterday. Suppose I go to that lawyer and I get that advice and it changes the next day. That is exactly — (laughter) that is exactly the point that I am trying to make. I like to believe what I can read, and this proposal has my protection in it. I would like to see it stay in.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: You have scored, Mr. Farnsworth. Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, following the invitation of Mr. Hutchinson for observations, I have a further observation. Speaking as a lawyer — hesitantly — and being in agreement, actually, with Mr. Habermehl in substance, I think part of our difficulty in either including or in excluding this last sentence lies in the area outlined by Mr. Cudlip.

I think, unquestionably, if we exclude the whole sentence we leave open the voluntary contract to the intrepretation that he has given, but we still do not resolve the question of the tax lien, which does not fit nicely into a voluntary contract situation. I do not think we want to extend this exemption to exclude the tax lien. Of course, I do not believe that is the interpretation of the language as presently written, either, and I am wondering, however, whether or not this is not a responsibility of style and drafting to examine this language. I do not think there is too much difference of opinion as to what we are trying to do. We are trying to seek language to cover it, and I think that style and drafting could do that.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: Mr. Chairman, after 2 days of deliberation on this proposal, I would like to make a motion that when the committee rises, it recommend that this be sent back to committee and I would suggest that all the proposers of amendments to this proposal be made honorary members of this committee and thrash it out with them and save the time of all of us.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: I would like to support the Perras motion, and I would also like to support Delegate Hart in her suggestion and Delegate Farnsworth. As far as I can sense the attitude of the delegates at this time, we are ready to act on this matter and, really, there is sense to dealing with these questions of language either before the committee or in the style and drafting; but, furthermore, there is plenty of opportunity for the lawyers in this body to run for the legislature and engage in such debate in that body, which is appropriate.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The secretary points out that the provision of rule 47 provides that whenever a proposal is up for consideration at any stage of procedure and a motion is made to postpone indefinitely or to recommit, amendments to the proposal shall be in order before taking a vote on any such motion. So I think if your motion were made in earnest, Mr. Perras, I think we should dispose of the amendments before we can vote on that.

Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the motion of Mr. Perras, because I feel that we are not recognizing as much as we ought the deliberative process that this convention must go through. There is an unseemly undercurrent here with regard to the fact that when we probe deeply into the meaning of words and contingencies which such words are going to cover, that we are getting into a lawyers' discussion.

I think we ought to get the record straight that for this convention from this point forward we are going to be getting into minutiae in the question of what a constitution is and how it is going to apply to the many circumstances that 8 million people live in in the state of Michigan.

The lawyers have a certain discipline of perhaps a more probing nature with regard to some of the matters that come before us, and I do not think it is a question of lawyer versus nonlawyer; it is a question of depth perception here as to just what is involved in the particular matter that is before us. I do not think that we ought to say that when we get to a certain stage in our deliberations the only appropriate action is to revert back to committee. We are getting through a certain process. We are working out the will of this committee. It reaches a certain stage. We are now at a dispositive stage with regard to this proposal and we ought to get together and dispose of it, rather than to say that every time we get to this dispositive stage we ought to send it back.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak to Mr. Norris' opposition. I personally do not care to be here a year from now, but I would like to support Mr. Perras' motion to send it back to committee. I feel that if this is reported back out of the committee with the adequate report, the report will go in the journal. If there is any question in any court of law, the intent can be discovered within the verbatim journal of this convention. Therefore, I would like to support Mr. Perras' motion.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: I would like to know what the meaning of the word "minutiae" is. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: I would like to answer Mr. Norris, too. I happen to be a member of the legislative powers committee. It seemed we hired research assistants here. We have men that are on the style and drafting that are supposed to put these things in order; so if we are going to have to fight everything on the floor, we might as well dispose of our research assistants and all these other things and let the floor take care of everything.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the amendments which we have on file.

Do you wish to speak to any of those, Miss Donnelly?

MISS DONNELLY: Yes, I wish to oppose Mr. Habermehl's substitute to the Norris substitute which, in effect, is my substitute. Is that what you want me to speak to, or do you want me to defend the lawyers, which I think we need at this moment?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on Mr. Habermehl's amendment.

MISS DONNELLY: I am opposed to it because I feel that the clarity of the intent of voluntary exemptions — voluntary alienation — should not deprive the creditor from collection against this, and I feel that this intent should be clear and, speaking as a lawyer, what a lawyer should do, the lawyer also has a duty to look at the constitution besides the statute.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Walker.

MR. WALKER: We have had considerable conversation about Mr. Perras' motion. May I voice one alternate along that same line that I think would possibly be of great benefit to the committee?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Providing we are talking about the Habermehl amendment.

MR. WALKER: There has been, Mr. Chairman, considerable comment one way or the other on Mr. Perras' motion that we refer it to the committee again. Would it be, as a suggestion, reasonable to presume that, so that we might possibly reach our April first deadline imposed by the majority of the delegates here, would it be sensible to take a 30 minute recess for the committee to consider this thing with the amenders and one thing or another, then come back and fight this thing out, thrash it out and be done with it today?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The committee of the whole does not recess, Mr. Walker. The committee can rise but it does not recess.

MR. WALKER: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, I think we have a solution to this. Vote down this amendment, all other amendments, pass the proposal as submitted by the committee and leave it to style and drafting to come up with something, if it can. If it cannot, it can again return to the committee, which is what you want to do now. There seems to be no question about the intent. The question of wording would be one, I think, for the style and drafting committee. I assure you they will spend much more than 30 minutes on it if it goes there.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Habermehl amendment.

Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, there have been a number of remarks on this subject which, I think, are extremely inappropriate, and I want to go on record as opposing them. There have been a number of remarks that somebody else ought to figure this thing out. I do not think somebody else is going to figure this out. We are going to figure this out. Now, let us not get nervous or impatient. We are going to figure this out and we are going to get through by March 31; I have no doubt about it. What we are doing now is simply going through the initial phases of teaching our committees that they have got to do their homework and get it out on the floor right the first time. I believe they will learn the lesson sooner or later and it will come out right the first time. I also believe that we are going to learn our lesson. We have not learned ours either. We have not learned that we should make our objections to the committee before we get on the floor, and I believe we are going to do that, too.

But I do not like the idea that lawyers should be quiet just because they see a problem. After their convention role is over and when the law comes out backwards, opposite to what we want, they are going to say why did we not object. So we are objecting, and I do not believe we can leave it to the original committee. We have left it to the committee twice. Yesterday I wanted to give this back to the committee. That would have been an appropriate time but after we spend 2 days on it, that is not an appropriate time to put it back to the committee. Now is the appropriate time for us to act. The argument that we have people paid to do research and drafting and, therefore, we do not need to do our work does not impress me either. I think we have got to buckle down and do the job and, if we are not satisfied with something when it comes on the floor, we should send it back immediately. But after we have had it for 2 days, we should make up our mind that we are going to decide it. We are very close to deciding this now and let us not put it off. Let us decide it.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: I agree with Delegate Stevens that we should vote down all the amendments and pass this as it was reported out of the committee by unanimous vote.

I want to say that even Delegate Nord agreed to this language when he first spoke today, and I think your first thoughts are your best thoughts.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, I am not going to take exception to Dr. Nord's remarks which could be interpreted as criticism for the many hours of work that we in the legislative powers committee have spent in trying to bring something that we felt would be realistic to the floor of the convention. All I will say is let us wait until some proposals come out of his committee. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I believe that the committee in adopting this substitute proposed today did not hold a particularly strong brief for this last sentence, as Delegate Millard indicated.

I would like to suggest that we can solve this thing very appropriately by adopting Mr. Habermehl's amendment to strike that sentence, and I do not think there is any danger in striking it for the reason that the legislature has protected the mortgagor, as Mr. Habermehl himself points out. There are questions under the United States constitution which would protect mortgagors and, finally, from a matter of simple, practical politics, should the legislature remove the protection from the mortgagor, the mortgagors would stop loaning money to mortgagees and no one would be able to put up their property as security except under, perhaps, very unusual circumstances, and this would create a very difficult situation for all concerned.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Habermehl amendment.

Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: Mr. Chairman, I rise to speak against the amendments. I feel that the committee has offered a substitute proposal that has curtailed some of the objections that some of us had yesterday. I think that there is something more than just a legal interpretation of this and there seem to be questions on both sides of this. I support Mr. Farnsworth in his observation that certainly this is something that shows a person that is going to obtain a mortgage or a person that is going to give a mortgage what the intent of this body is.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Habermehl substitute amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

Now the question is on the Norris amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Norris has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend the second sentence after "mortgage" by striking out "or other lien".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Norris amendment.

Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: I am in sympathy with the Norris amendment. Since it was proposed, Delegate Ford spoke about some language up in front which I do not interpret as he does. "As defined by law" relates to the property, not to the exemption. Mr. Nord, before he spoke the last time, made some wise remarks about what the legislature could do by statute.

All I was trying to find out earlier is whether the committee intended in the case of these exemptions to have the exemptions relate to liens created by operation of law as well as contractually, or whether just the plain, old, contractually created mortgage in the case of both types of property. If they want to cover every kind of lien, I think it will be covered if we leave the language as it is. If we take it out, as I see it, it only relates to mortgages covering both types of property. The rest will be up to the legislature. That is to say that the legislature, then, will decide what other types of contractual liens — and there are many more than mortgages, I emphasize — and what types of liens arising by operation of law — and they have been mentioned here before — are intended. That would be a legislative matter.

Again, this is just an observation that that will be the effect if you adopt the Norris amendment, which I favor.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I believe that perhaps these 3 words got in here yesterday after the session because I mentioned to Dr. Joiner that there were some delegates who raised the point that other liens should be included. I, however, think that in the spirit of drawing this thing to a conclusion, keeping in mind the fact that we have got committee meetings set up this afternoon and also keeping in mind the fact that this language "Such exemptions shall not extend to any mortgage thereon lawfully obtained" is the wording that has been in the constitution for 100 years and it caused no embarrassment. It has been interpreted. The legislature has statutorily recognized that it could go beyond what the constitution provided. The legislature will undoubtedly continue to go on beyond what the constitution provides. The legislature will take care of this "or other lien" problem in the future as it has in the past. So, if we just adopt Mr. Norris' amendment and strike out "or other lien", we will be left with the language that we have had for 100 years and, as I say, it has been proved adequate, and there is not any reason to believe that it will not be adequate in the future.

So I support Mr. Norris' amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Norris amendment.

Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, I, too, feel that if we go along with the present language which has been proven over the years that we will not be in any trouble. We do leave the door open to the legislature to add on to it. My amendment concerns the inclusion of the words "or other liens" and if those words are not in there then I do not have any reservations about the Norris amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Then you would withdraw your pending amendment? Is that it?

MR. KING: Well, I will wait and see how this vote goes.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: All right. The question is on the Norris amendment to the substitute. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The amendment is adopted.

Mr. King has an amendment pending. Mr. King, do you wish to withdraw that?

MR. KING: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I wish to withdraw my amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: All right, the amendment is withdrawn. Do we have any other amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Miss Donnelly has the following amendment:

1. Amend the second sentence after "obtained" by inserting "by voluntary alienation"; so the language will then read, "Such exemptions shall not extend to any mortgage thereon lawfully obtained by voluntary alienation."

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: Originally I intended, and I still would like to make it, because I am now disturbed by equitable mortgages; and I know that people don't like to hear lawyers talk at this stage of the game, but I do think it is a point. I do think that the language has been clear in the constitution for umpteen years according to Mr. Hutchinson, and what have you, because of the alienation provision therein having been voluntary alienation. This clarifies what they meant. If you strike the voluntary alienation by requiring how it should be done, we can still have involuntary or equitable mortgages. The court could appoint.

Now I think we have got to make up our minds — some way or another — whether we mean voluntary or involuntary. This is the language — the reason why I added these words is to indicate that we mean voluntary, willful acts of the individual debtors to pledge their property and nothing that the court would construe, and I had intended any other lien would be, also.

That is the reason I meant it as a substitute to the Norris amendment, and I thought it should have been first, so that it would include that sentence, too; but I still believe that the voluntary aspect of it should be clearly set forth in this constitution.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Donnelly amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

Are there any other amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no other amendments on file.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: If there are no other amendments on file, the question is on the substitute committee proposal, as amended, and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The substitute, as amended, is as follows:

> A homestead in the amount of not less than $3,500.00 and personal property of every resident of this state in the amount of not less than $750.00, as defined by law, shall be exempt from forced sale on execution or other process of any court. Such exemptions shall not extend to any mortgage thereon lawfully obtained.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the substitute, as amended. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The substitute, as amended, is adopted.

Any further amendments?

If not, I recognize Mr. Perras on his motion to rerefer.

MR. PERRAS: I will withdraw the motion, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: If there is no further discussion, the proposal will pass.

Committee Proposal 12, as substituted, is passed.

Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if, before we rise, I might say a word in defense of the lawyers here. Now we have been pounded on the back to get things before the convention and we have not done it with any great haste and then when things come out the lawyers get criticized. It seems to me that the words — so that these laymen will understand what is going to come from the lawyers — are well summed up in a poem which is very short. It goes:

> Catsup's in a funny bottle;
> At first none comes
> And then a lottle. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: I have a couple of observations to make while observations are being made. I am sympathetic toward the attitude expressed by Miss Hart. I have been wondering whether this idea I am about to suggest would be practicable. Once a committee proposal is presented, it is a little more difficult for an individual member to make his thought, his objections, his questions known; at least, it makes it much more complicated if the questions are not raised until the proposal comes before us in committee of the whole.

If it could be arranged that the convention could be notified 2 or 3 days in advance, at least, of the broad outlines of the committee proposal that seems to be near the completion stage, then we would have an opportunity to talk to the chairman of the committee and if he is impressed, he might call a meeting of the committee to discuss it before it gets to the stage of being before the committee of the whole.

I think the other point I would like to suggest is we have had ample opportunity now to learn that in our discussions it makes a great deal of difference as to the definitions we attach — the meanings we attach — to the phrases and expressions we use. We sometimes use the same word and then find out afterward we have been talking about two different things.

In that connection I found a little illustration in The Lion's Magazine a few days ago:

> A peasant in a Russian village went to the polls on election day and was handed a sealed envelope to drop in the ballot box. He began to tear the envelope open when a Soviet official shouted, "What do you think you are doing?" The peasant said he wanted to see for whom he was voting. "Are you crazy?" exclaimed the official, "This is a secret ballot!" (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I move the committee now rise.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the motion that the committee do now rise. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will come to order. Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration several items on which the secretary will give a detailed report.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Secretary.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 12, A proposal pertaining to exemptions as a substitute for all of article XIV. It reports the same back to the convention with a substitute therefor, recommending that the substitute be agreed to and that the committee proposal, as substituted, do pass.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on our agreement to the substitute for Committee Proposal 12. Those in favor say aye; those opposed, no.

The substitute is agreed to and Committee Proposal 12, as substituted, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 12 as substituted and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

A homestead in the amount of not less than $3,500.00 and personal property of every resident of this state in the amount of not less than $750.00, as defined by law, shall be exempt from forced sale on execution or other process of any court. Such exemptions shall not extend to any mortgage thereon lawfully obtained.

Dr. Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Mr. President, Judge Dehnke made part of my speech. However, for the encouragement of all the delegates after this long session, I heard one the other day that I think that we would profit by, the story of the 2 fellows who had been places and had seen things and they got back in the hotel late at night. One chap said to the hotel clerk, "What we want is 2 rooms with one bed." The clerk said, "You don't mean 2 rooms with one bed; you mean one room with 2 beds." And they said, "All right." Both drunks got into the same bed. After awhile Bill said, "There's somebody in bed with me and I don't like it." And Jim said, There's somebody in bed with me. Let's kick them out." So they started to roughhouse and after awhile Jim landed on the floor with a thud. He said, "How did you come out, Bill? I got kicked out of bed." "Well," Bill said, "I got along all right. I kicked a fellow out of bed." "Well, Bill," Jim said, "I'm out of bed." Bill said, "That's all right. Get in bed with me." (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: I might say that after this experience this afternoon, we will need more of Charlie's stories and comments during our sessions.

I hope you will not be disturbed, however, because, after all, we only have been meeting for an hour and a half and starting next week as our committee reports get in, we are going to be very fortunate if we can meet in less than 3 or 4 hours a session, and after the first month we will be meeting morning and afternoon; so I think we might as well accomplish this and at the same time have a good time, enjoying ourselves and in the meantime doing our work. And let us not get too disturbed about it, because we are just going to have to put the time in. It is a very interesting time.

[Without objection, the convention returned to the order of motions and resolutions.]

Did you have a motion you wanted to make, Mr. Downs?

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, Miss Hart and I have filed a motion with the secretary. It is along the line of what Judge Dehnke said. He said he would like to cosponsor the motion. We would be glad to have him do it. I wonder if we could ask the secretary to read the motion.

SECRETARY CHASE: Miss Hart and Mr. Downs have filed the following motion:

> Miss Hart and Mr. Downs move that committees hold a meeting of their full committee or a subcommittee after a committee proposal is printed in the journal and before it is on general orders, at which committee meeting any delegate may appear.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase, would you mind reading that motion again?

SECRETARY CHASE: That committees hold a meeting of their full committee or a subcommittee after a committee proposal is printed in the journal and before it is on general orders, at which committee meeting any delegate may appear.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, the purpose of this motion is to provide what some of the other delegates have mentioned. That is, mainly, that after a proposal is printed in the journal that there be an additional opportunity for delegates to appear before a committee in the hope that some of the problems could be cleared up there and prevent the whole discussion being had before the committee of the whole.

I realize this is something different in parliamentary procedure and, certainly, if the Chair wishes to refer this to the committee on rules and resolutions to get their additional thinking, there is no attempt to try to get immediate action on it; but I think as long sessions will develop, this might be a means of screening out some questions so that we can confine our committee of the whole to the basic issues.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, I move that the motion be referred to the committee on rules and resolutions. I make this motion in the same spirit that Mr. Downs suggested that he would not oppose it.

It does introduce something different in the parliamentary procedure. As a technical matter, of course, once the committee has reported its proposal to the floor and it is printed in the journal, it has no technical jurisdiction over it. I think there are several avenues to be explored. Also I think that the attitude of the committee chairmen on the matter should be ascertained and, for that reason, would move that the matter be referred to the committee on rules and resolutions.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, I will support the motion of Mr. Hutchinson.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: Mr. President, I would like to support the motion, but I would like to suggest that when the motion is considered by the committee on rules and resolutions they consider adding the language which may appear for the purpose of improving the wording used to express the intent of the committee. In other words, it does not seem to me that we should set up another hearing at which the substance of the matter dealt with by the committee should be reopened, but it does seem to me that there should certainly be an opportunity for the thing we have been talking about today, which is an opportunity to express technical viewpoints on the adequacy of the language being used, and it is for that reason that I make this suggestion.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Erickson.

MR. ERICKSON: I would just like to add that when the committee on rules and resolutions considers this, they also add "on application of any member," so that it does not have to sit there for awhile, after all, if nobody wants to come and talk.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Heideman.

MR. HEIDEMAN: Mr. President, I simply wish to ask what is the function of the committee of the whole?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase, would you like to give a definition of the committee of the whole?

SECRETARY CHASE: No, I don't want to.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would like to remark that Mr. Romney has made a statement here that if the committee makes a report and then delegates can appear in front of this additional hearing of the committee to change the wording of the report, then the committee report is no longer the report as such and it may change from time to time as delegates appearing in front of that committee report.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Leppien.

MR. LEPPIEN: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I think we have missed the point of the procedure concerning committee proposals. According to my understanding, a committee proposal is brought in, is debated to some degree, and then is sent to style and drafting. Now it seems to me that if this convention would resolve that when a committee proposal comes in, we would merely adopt it and then, if we have any objections, take it to the style and drafting committee and let them hear the complaint, and then they would be in position to either bring it back to this convention for action or recommend it be sent back to the committee from whence it came.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. President, I do not oppose the idea of having an opportunity for the delegates to express their ideas, but I do oppose the idea of a proposal being printed and laying over for the required 3 days and then when we come back to consider it, the first thing that happens is that the committee offers a substitute proposal without having the opportunity of the 3 days. Now this has happened once. I would not want it to happen on a regular basis, and I would hope that the rules and resolutions committee would take that under consideration when they think about this particular problem.

PRESIDENT NISBET: We have committee meetings this afternoon — Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: On this same question, it seems to me that we are going to get into a lot of confusion if, after the committees have reported out their proposals they then have to hold a hearing on these proposals, and it seems entirely in order, if a delegate has some change that he thinks should be made, to have him submit that in writing to the committee, so that if the committee wants to consider it and to offer it as a committee substitute or as a committee amendment, that is all right; but if these committees, in addition to all the meetings they have been holding, now begin to hold hearings on the proposals that they have already reported out, we will have chaos compounded.

PRESIDENT NISBET: In the interest of time and economy of time and in the interest of all the committees that are planning on meeting, would you give me the personal privilege of referring this to the committee on rules and resolutions and ask them to make some statement on this at some future time? Would that take care of your problem? Thank you very much. It is so referred.

SECRETARY CHASE: The following committee meeting announcements in addition to the ones on the composite calendar:

The subcommittee on annexation and consolidation of the local government committee will meet Friday, tomorrow, at 9:00 o'clock a.m. in room A. Mr. Follo, chairman.

The committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E at 8:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The committee on legislative powers, subcommittee 1, will meet in room H after the session today and from 8:30 until 9:45 tomorrow morning. There are a number of delegate proposals to be considered.

The committee on administration will meet in the conference room Tuesday, January 9, at 1:15 p.m. Walter De Vries, chairman.

The committee on judicial branch will meet immediately after the session today for a hearing on delegate proposals.

The secretary, in response to the inquiries from several delegates, has this announcement to make: your W-2 forms will be available during the week of January 22 to 27.

We have the following requests for leaves of absence:

I request to be excused from the session of Friday, January 5. The probate judge's association has requested I meet with them at their annual meeting at the Kellogg Center. Mr. Danhof.

Please excuse me from the session of Friday, January 5. Prior commitments. Mr. Garvin.

Mr. Haskill asks to be excused from tomorrow's session because of illness; Mr. McAllister requests leave of absence from the session of tomorrow because of a legal matter which originated more than a year ago; Mr. Douglas, to attend a convention on Friday; and Mr. Baginski requests leave to be excused from tomorrow's session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they will be excused.

Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. President, I would like to advise the delegates that anyone that has a delegate proposal before the committee on legislative powers to please check in room H. We are going to have hearings right after the session all afternoon and tomorrow, from 8:00 to 9:45, and that will be the end of it.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: I move that we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion is that we adjourn. Those in favor say aye; opposed, no.

We are adjourned until 10:00 tomorrow morning.

[Whereupon, at 3:45 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned to Friday, January 5, 1962, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.]

FIFTY-FIRST DAY

Friday, January 5, 1962, 10:00 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Convention will please come to order.

The invocation this morning will be given by one of our own delegates, Mr. Gover. Please rise.

MR. GOVER: Let us pray. Our gracious heavenly Father, we thank Thee for the help Thou hast given us in our lives. Thy guiding hand has directed us more than we realize in our lives. Be with us during our deliberations that we may take Thee into our council, and that we may come out of this convention with a constitution that will be good for the people of Michigan. In Thy name we ask these things. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you.

The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present, please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave: Messrs. Follo, Gadola, Habermehl, Pugsley and Radka from today's session, due to inclement weather and for other reasons.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Danhof, Douglas, Follo, Gadola, Garvin, Habermehl, J. A. Hannah, Haskill, McAllister, Pellow, Perlich, Pugsley, Radka, Thomson and Wood.

Absent without leave: Messrs. Bledsoe and Marshall.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the delegates are excused.

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no reports on file, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: The items on the general orders calendar are not in order for consideration until Monday.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Cudlip gives notice of a meeting of the committee on style and drafting on Monday, January 8 at 5:00 o'clock p.m.

Mr. Brake gives notice of a meeting of the committee on finance and taxation in room E on January 8 at 6:00 o'clock p.m.

The committee on education, subcommittee on higher education, will meet January 10 at 6:00 o'clock p.m. at the Kellogg center.

The subcommittee on county government of the committee on local government will hold hearings on delegate proposals Tuesday, January 9, and Wednesday, January 10, from 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 in room 337 in the Mason building. Mrs. Judd, chairman.

The committee on public information will meet in the conference room Monday following the session. Ink White, chairman.

The other committee meetings are on the composite calendar.

The following announcement has been requested to be made: will the owner of a green and white Oldsmobile, license number LB-7972 please contact Delegate Garry Brown. (laughter)

The owner of the cafeteria in the Mason building wishes it known that he will stay open until 8:00 o'clock p.m. weekdays. Formerly he has been closing at 6:00. This is for the convenience of the delegates.

I have the following requests for leave of absence: Mr. Lawrence requests to be excused from the session of Monday, January 8; and Delegates Garry Brown and Judge Mosier desire to be excused from the session of Monday, January 8, because of speaking engagements in Sturgis.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they will be excused.

Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. President, I am heartened by the fact that the report submitted by our chairman, Professor Pollock, is reproduced in its entirety in the journal this morning. I understand we are going to be getting to this matter on Monday evening and from that point forward I wondered if it would be amiss to make the suggestion that perhaps the delegates might take this report home with them and read it. This might facilitate debate on Monday and from that point forward.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you, Mr. Norris.

Any further announcements? Inasmuch as the weather is rather inclement outside and driving a little hazardous, maybe some committees might like to meet that have not been scheduled. (laughter)

Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President and fellow delegates, the committee on legislative powers would like to report to the convention that with the adoption of the matter of yesterday, we have completed 1/17 of the constitution. There are 17 articles. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you very much, Mr. Hoxie.

Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Mr. President, I move we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. We are adjourned until 8:00 o'clock p.m. Monday, January 8.

[Whereupon, at 10:10 o'clock a.m., the convention adjourned to Monday, January 8, 1962, at 8:00 o'clock p.m.]

FIFTY-SECOND DAY

Monday, January 8, 1962, 8:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

The invocation this evening will be given by one of our own delegates, Mr. Claud Erickson, delegate from the Ingham county first representative district, Lansing.

Will you please rise.

MR. ERICKSON: Let us all pray. O, Creator of the universe, we pray for guidance and wisdom in this great undertaking, that our actions will be in keeping with Thy will, and will be in accordance with Thy infinite wisdom. Realizing that any efforts by Thy children are short of perfect, we beseech Thee to enlighten us with intelligence so that we can observe the absolute truths so necessary for a perfect document that will endure.

Let not our diversity of opinions regarding religion, government and other interests lead us toward enmities, but with Thy help give us proper motivation so that in the days to come our work will be good in Thy sight. We pray that Thou wilt grant us tolerance and wisdom to weigh and foresee the consequence of our daily actions here and elsewhere so we may properly grasp the import of our actions for ourselves, the future generations, our state, our country and Thy entire universe. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The machine is now locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave of absence from this evening's session: Mr. Ford wishes to be excused to attend a county township board meeting; Mr. Hutchinson because of the inclement weather was unable to get here; and

Mr. Beaman requests that Mr. Thomson be excused because of illness.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. G. E. Brown, Ford, Hutchinson and Thomson.

Absent without leave: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no standing committee reports, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I rise to a point of personal and professional privilege. Last Wednesday and Thursday, this convention considered in depth, and for several hours debated, the subject of exemptions from forced sale and execution now contained in article XIV of our constitution.

Certain newspapers referred to this as a "field day for lawyers." A delegate evoked applause on the floor of this convention by criticizing the differences of opinion between lawyers. And one delegate commented that if his staff of engineers disagreed and changed their opinions as frequently as did certain lawyers, he would fire the whole lot.

Some delegates have become impatient at the time consumed in considering the meaning of the words we use. The public press and some delegates have implied that actions taken in committee and proposals already submitted to this convention are for the purpose of furthering a monopoly for the legal profession. These are but a few examples of many I might give which impugn the integrity of a profession of which I have proudly been a member for 37 years.

We are now about to enter upon a consideration of the bill of rights, an area sensitive to all who hold liberty dear. There will be differences of opinion between the delegates on these matters, both those who are lawyers, and those who are not.

I submit that before we enter upon this debate, and apart from the controversies that may develop over certain specific provisions, we should pause at this moment to consider some basic and fundamental facts.

First, whether we like it or not, we are engaged in writing a legal document; a most important and fundamental law. If our work is well done and the people approve of it, this constitution will become the framework within which our legislature must act in considering the laws of this state for years to come. It will lay down the guide lines which must be considered by our courts in passing upon the laws thus enacted. It will be a basic law controlling the conduct of our millions of citizens. Yes, and it will be one of the instruments used daily by 9,000 lawyers in this state in advising our citizens in their personal and property rights. That this too be well designed and built to meet the task it must perform should ever be our paramount consideration. This must override the element of time and convenience of the delegates who are, after all, but the makers of this tool.

Second, whether we like it or not, the voters of this state chose as their craftsmen in this task, 56 lawyers—40 per cent of all those so chosen. This is in accord with the historic pattern of constitutional conventions in this country ever since 1787. I submit that this points up the fact that the electors of this state feel that those with legal training possess some special competence in framing legal instruments.

Third, many of this profession, so chosen, combine with their legal training decades of experience on the bench of our courts; distinguished public service as state officials and members of the legislature; and government service at the county and local level. The practiced knowledge of government represented by this accumulated experience gives these delegates a more than average competence for the task at hand.

Fourth, the law admittedly is not a precise science. We have no legal micrometer that will measure the meaning of a word to 1/10,000 of an inch. We have no legal caliper of girth sufficient to span the rights of citizens in a free society. Because of this lack of precision, there is room for difference of opinion. The resolution of these differences and the spelling out of our exact intent requires time and patience. But it is better that this document be accurately drawn than that it be quickly finished. No one has ever claimed that the democratic process is rapid or efficient. If those attributes are what we seek, let us turn to dictatorship. But we are here as the elected representatives of the free citizens of this state. Let us devote to this task such time, patience and effort as may be required by our system of government.

Fifth, the law is not static. It must evolve to meet the changing conditions of a changing society. I learned in law school that the state and its subdivisions were protected from suit by the cloak of governmental immunity. Within 15 years this state created in 1939 its court of claims and shed its cloak of immunity, but as to lesser governmental units this doctrine persisted until it was struck down for the future by a decision of our supreme court only last year. In less than 2 decades a complete reversal of the law has come about.

In like manner, the declaration of rights, which we are about to consider, in our Constitution of 1908 was no doubt sufficient unto the times in which it was written. Intervening amendments, particularly in section 10, have down dated its provisions and we are now about to review its protections in the light of present knowledge and, hopefully, with a long view to the years ahead.

Finally, fellow delegates, you have my assurance—and in this I am certain I can speak for fellow members of my profession—that no action suggested or taken here is motivated by a desire of this profession for selfish advantage.

Let me illustrate. Our Constitution of 1908 made no requirement for legal training of those who judged their fellow men. As recently as 1955, section 17 of the judicial article was amended by a vote of about 2½ to 1, 590,000 to 230,000, to require that justices of the supreme court and judges of our circuit courts be licensed to practice law. Whether this requirement be extended to other courts is for you and the citizens of this state to decide.

Of more immediate concern, and soon to come before you in considering section 12 of the bill of rights, is whether you wish to require that citizens coming before our courts may represent themselves or be represented by a trained spokesman. In this age of specialized knowledge, I would want a dentist to fill my teeth; a medical doctor to protect my health; a veterinarian to attend my dog; and a pharmacist to fill my prescriptions. Learned as they are, I would not choose one of these men to perform a service for which he was not trained —nor to speak for me in court. It is my concern as a lawyer that the rights of free men before our courts be protected at the bar and on the bench by persons trained and experienced in this work, who are officers of the court, and whose conduct can be controlled by disciplinary power of the supreme court of this state. To me it is vital that this constitution provide that if a citizen chooses not to speak for himself, he shall have the right to competent representation. It is of this right that I speak. It is for this right that I shall vote. (applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Any unfinished business, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: None, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. President, I merely wish to heartily second those wonderful remarks of Mr. Prettie on behalf of the members of our profession. I do realize how difficult it is for laymen to follow the technical discourses that are bound to come about.

I am reminded of the story of the Baptist preacher who was having some difficulty keeping his congregation awake. There was one grandfather who used to attend church regularly with his young grandson. The grandfather had the habit of dozing off and so the preacher went up to the little boy, the grandson, and said "I will give you 10 cents a week if you will keep your grandfather awake during service." And surely this worked because for the next 3 weeks the grandfather sat there very attentively and each week the preacher would give the dime to the little boy. But the fourth week he noticed that the grandfather had reverted to his old habit of sleeping during service. The preacher went up to the little boy after the sermon and said, "I'm sorry, but I cannot give you the dime this week." And the little boy said, "I know. My grandfather gave me a quarter to leave him alone." (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of discussing the proposals on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion is that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole. The question is on the motion of Mr. Baginski. All those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

Mr. Baginski, will you preside?

[Whereupon, Mr. Baginski assumed the Chair to preside over the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The committee of the whole will be in order.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Before reading, the secretary would like to call to your attention the fact that there are on your desks forms for offering amendments and also the carbon paper necessary to make extra copies. If you do not have enough amendment forms or carbon paper on your desks, please call a page. Please submit to us at the desk 3 copies of amendments.

Item 1 on the calendar, from the committee on education, by Mr. Bentley, chairman, Committee Proposal 13, A proposal respecting the physically, mentally or otherwise seriously handicapped. Amends article XI, section 15.

Following is Committee Proposal 13 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Institutions, [for the benefit of those inhabitants who are deaf, dumb, blind, feeble-minded or insane] PROGRAMS, AND SERVICES FOR THE CARE, TREATMENT, EDUCATION AND/OR REHABILITATION OF THOSE INHABITANTS WHO ARE PHYSICALLY, MENTALLY, OR OTHERWISE SERIOUSLY HANDICAPPED shall aways be fostered and supported.

Mr. Bentley, chairman of the committee on education, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 13:

The committee on education felt that the words, "deaf, dumb, blind, feeble minded and insane" are not only too restrictive in scope but in certain cases have been outmoded by recent developments in the field of physical and mental rehabilitation. Further, it was felt that public responsibility for all unfortunate persons who may be handicapped through physical, mental and other causes and who can respond to care, treatment and rehabilitation should be set forth in the new constitution. Finally, it was strongly felt that the new constitution should contain language which was not confined to institutional treatment as in the present document.

There was little argument within the committee upon the inclusion of physically and mentally handicapped persons. There was considerable discussion, however, on the use of the words, "otherwise seriously handicapped". It was the general feeling of the committee that this latter category might reasonably be construed to include those persons suffering disorders of an emotional or psychological nature (but not necessarily approaching the stage of mental illness), disorders which in many cases might be aggravated by an unfortunate and even discriminatory social environment. It was not the intention of the committee to include purely welfare cases under the term, "seriously handicapped".

Some discussion arose within the committee over the use of the word inhabitant as possibly denoting an unfortunate connotation of institutionalized inmates. The committee's final adoption of the term which appears in the present constitution was supported by legal opinion which favored the retention of the word "inhabitant" in preference to either, "citizens", "residents", or "persons".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to Committee Proposal 13?

Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, and members of the committee of the whole, I would like to explain very briefly the procedure which the committee on education would like to follow at this particular point.

As chairman, I would like to make a few brief remarks about the committee proposal and then while retaining the floor I would like to yield to one or two of the other members of the education committee to make supplementary remarks. Following that, and still retaining the floor, if the committee sees no objection, I would like to invite questions, if any, from the delegates. And then I intend to yield the floor for further remarks or amendments as the case may be. We hope this method of presenting our proposal will meet with your approval.

Mr. Chairman, I would like, for the guidance of the members of the committee of the whole, to point out that, unfortunately, we must have run out of capital letters when we were preparing this proposal, but if you will take your pencils and on the green copy that is before you underline all of line 7, beginning with "programs", all of line 8, and the word "handicapped" in line 9, you will see the language that has been added to the existing language in the constitution by the committee on education.

Very briefly, Mr. Chairman, the words as contained in the present constitution, "institutions for the benefit of those inhabitants who are deaf, dumb, blind, feeble minded or insane shall always be fostered and supported," go back to the 1850 constitution with the exception of the words "feeble minded" which were added in the Constitutional Convention of 1908.

As explained in the committee's report, submitted January 3, the committee on education felt that the terms "deaf, dumb, blind, feeble minded or insane" were somewhat restrictive, and in some cases even outmoded by the latest developments in the field of physical and mental rehabilitation. Therefore we decided to strike those words and to add the words "physically, mentally or otherwise seriously handicapped" as indicating those types of unfortunates for whom we desire to indicate an area of public responsibility.

I should like to point out, Mr. Chairman, that according to the citizens research council, the provision, even if eliminated, would not thereby relieve public responsibility. I am referring to chapter 11, page 50, volume 2. It reads, "If the provision were eliminated, the state would still be able to support these institutions and programs." In other words, this, Mr. Chairman, is not a grant of power to the legislature that the legislature does not already have to take care of these unfortunate persons. It is merely, in the feeling of the education committee, an extension and a broadening of the area of general responsibilities which we felt were worthy of retention and broadening, and even inclusion, in our new constitutional section relating to this subject. I may say that both the subcommittee and the committee adopted the new language by unanimous vote and I hope very much that it will receive similar approval on behalf of the committee of the whole.

At this time, Mr. Chairman, I would like to yield to the lady from Port Huron, the chairman of the subcommittee which handled this proposal, Miss Vera Andrus, to make a few supplemental remarks.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Miss Andrus.

MISS ANDRUS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to explain a little of the work done in our subcommittee and in our education committee in this respect. I think that Mr. Bentley has made it very clear. Michigan was one of the first states to establish a provision for a charitable institution in our state constitution. In 1848 we had our first. It was called an asylum. The legislature established it in Pontiac. It was for the deaf, dumb, blind and insane. Then, when the 1850 constitutional convention met, they were very proud of our institution and our interest in our unfortunate inhabitants, and it was put in the constitution at that time. Now, in 1879, the training school at Lapeer was established, and so in the 1908 constitution they added the words "feeble minded", as Mr. Bentley said. Our 1908 constitution provides for institutions for the deaf, dumb, blind, insane and feeble minded.

As Dr. Pollock and Mr. Hutchinson brought out so very clearly at the beginning of this convention, the state legislature can provide institutions and care without our saying anything in the constitution about it. But Michigan has been very proud of the fact that we were among the first to provide such institutions and in both the conventions of 1850 and 1908 members of the convention on the floor spoke of their pride in this, and mentioned their desire to have this provision retained in the constitution.

---

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

Our subcommittee considered this question. We had many witnesses. Much evidence was brought in. We don't talk about "dumb" any more and we don't talk about "feeble minded". And there is also a tendency on the part of the courts, if you enumerate something in the constitution, it can be interpreted to mean that that is all we wish the state to do. And among some of the witnesses we had were people who said there are groups who have no provision made for them. It seems difficult to take care of some of our young people who are not physically or mentally handicapped in an extreme sense but who are apt to become delinquents and who eventually may be our lifelong guests in some institution for crimes committed. There are also elderly people who do not come under the term "insane", and some judges told us about cases like this.

So, as we talked this over, we decided on this wording which is now before you, to have the physically handicapped, which is quite obvious, but is not enumerative, so it takes care of whatever the legislature, representing us, the people of Michigan, would wish to do. Reference is also made to the mentally handicapped, and then provision is also made for these other people. The one class that was spoken of in one of our hearings was people who are let out from prison who have had a record of that sort. We do have provision, but probably there could be more or it could be broadened.

There are various classes that do not come under "physically or mentally handicapped." And since we are mentioning those, let me say this. We had a rather lengthy discussion in this regard. The term that is used by the psychologists is "socially" handicapped. But there was quite a roar of laughter when we reported that. We also thought about the term "psychologically" handicapped, the term "emotionally" handicapped, and we finally came upon this term which can be interpreted by our legislature as needs come up.

I think that is all I need speak of. We tried to get our report all on one page, and so our committee did not say as much about the word "inhabitant" as we might have. We did not like that term; we did not like the sound of the word "inhabitant". Some people thought it might mean an inmate of an institution. So we talked over the terms "person" and "citizen" and "resident". Resident was the term we seemed to like best. We asked Mr. Bolton, one of our legal advisers, about this, and he felt that the term "inhabitant" included just the people we wanted. It includes people who are not citizens, people who need care. It would not include people such as transients; people who might come here to get care. He devotes a whole page to this subject in his brief, but this is his final sentence,

It is suggested that since Michigan law now uses the word "inhabitant," under article XI, section 13, that it be retained.

I believe that is all I need speak of. Miss Adelaide Hart who has had much experience in the Detroit area with some of these handicapped people is, I think, going to explain a little more about classes and groups that might be included.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: At this time I would like, Mr. Chairman, to yield to the distinguished vice chairman of the education committee, the lady from Detroit, Miss Adelaide Hart, for some further remarks.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Miss Hart.

MISS HART: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the term "otherwise seriously handicapped" has meant a great deal to many of us because it might well make possible for those of us who work with children to anticipate emotional disturbance among the young, and perhaps prevent that very serious illness.

We adopted a slogan in Michigan back in 1955 in relation to our mental health program. It is a good slogan and it would be a great blessing if we took it seriously and supported it as it deserves. It goes like this, "Brains, not bricks". It suggests that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, and that we might better keep people out of hospitals than to play the losing game of building institutions in which to lock them up. An adequate program of prevention, properly administered, could save this state millions of dollars within the not too distant future. More than this, it could save precious human life for constructive purposes, instead of institutionalization for life.

Classroom teachers in the state of Michigan can tell stories by the hour of children they have observed in the early stages of emotional disturbance or mental breakdown. They will tell, also, of their helplessness in saving these children for productive lives because there is too little help and it comes, all too frequently, far too late.

What are some of these symptoms these teachers have observed? Well, there is the boy, for example, who, although he has a superior mentality, sits hour after hour in the classroom gazing intently into space. He doesn't listen, he doesn't read, he doesn't write. He just sits. The chances are that he is remembering the drunken brawl through which he shivered under the covers last night, the night before that and the night before that. He lives in terror that one parent may exterminate the other. Or, he may be facing up to eviction from his home. He knows it is coming today, as it has come all too often in the past. He may have gone to 26 schools before he had reached the seventh grade. His father is always the last one hired, and the first one fired. The family is constantly on the move, and life is a frustrating experience.

And then, there is the little girl who hates the world and the adults who live in it. Her mother has been prematurely dismissed from a mental institution and the child is kept a virtual prisoner during her hours out of school. She has an uncontrollable desire to hurt other human beings. She not only disrupts a classroom; she disrupts the school. This child sings like an angel. She loves to read. She writes very well, but cannot adjust to living peaceably with other people. She desperately needs help and every teacher knows it all too well. The alternatives are undoubtedly immediate help or institutionalization for the better part of an unhappy life. And an expense to the state of Michigan that is a formidable item to consider.

There is the child, also, who never keeps still. He talks incessantly. He marches up and down the aisle or crawls under the seats, determined to be the center of attention. He has to go to the lavatory at least 3 times during the hour. He has an assortment of severe pains that will guarantee a trip to the office or to the school nurse. He is, of course, starved for affection and he refuses to grow up. He is a problem today, but he may be a menace tomorrow unless someone takes time out to do intensive work with this boy.

One city has undertaken a project encompassing 14 elementary schools. Its purposes are to one, identify as early as possible elementary school children who exhibit antisocial behavior; and two, do everything possible to bring about better attitudes and adjustment among these small children. In these schools, when signs of emotional disturbance evidence themselves, a team of workers sets about the business of determining the cause. Home, school and neighborhood are all involved. Something happens. If it is humanly possible, the child whose future is threatened is quickly set to right. That the experiment has proved effective is evidenced by the fact that in a recent sampling of some 124 cases, it was found that the children who benefited by early help showed an 82 per cent improvement in citizenship, a 55 per cent improvement in scholarship and a 64 per cent improvement in effort. These children, instead of ending up in the detention home, the vocational schools, or the mental institutions of our state, may well be on their way to constructive lives as productive citizens who will be a credit to our state.

It is not surprising that the discouraged boy or girl, the ill adjusted child, or the "problem child" as they are often characterized, is the "drop out" at school. The United States government reports that out of 10.8 million students in grades 9 to 12 in public and parochial schools, 2.5 million will quit before graduation. The appalling fact is that unemployment among the nongraduates is 8.5 million. Among graduates the number of unemployed is about ½ of that number.

What the education committee asks is that this convention make it possible for the state of Michigan to invest in the future, in the lives of our most important possession, the future citizens of our state.

MR. BENTLEY: Thank you, Miss Andrus, Miss Hart. I will be glad to yield to any questions from any member of the committee of the whole at this time. If there are no questions, I shall be glad to yield the floor for any possible amendments.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any questions of Mr. Bentley?

Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: Mr. Chairman, I wanted to ask a question of Mr. Bentley. I should like to know what word you said, first, to underline. I did not fully understand what you said in that regard.

MR. BENTLEY: For the information of the lady from Houghton, if you will start on line 7, Mrs. Butler, with the word "programs"—the first word that is not stricken— and go down to the word "handicapped" on line 9, those are all the new words added by the committee on education.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments?

Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. Chairman, I have no amendment but I do have a question to put to Mr. Bentley or Miss Hart.

MR. BENTLEY: I will gladly yield, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do you care to answer it?

MR. BENTLEY: Surely.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. Bentley, Miss Hart, is it your idea that this will pretty much put the state in the business of completely supporting the child guidance clinics and the schools for mentally retarded children who are trainable?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do you care to answer, Miss Hart?

MISS HART: I would hope it would have this effect.

MR. FARNSWORTH: That answers my question. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any further questions? Are there any amendments to the proposal?

If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 13 is passed.

Committee Proposal 14. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 2 on the calendar, from the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, by Mr. Erickson, chairman, Committee Proposal 14, A proposal pertaining to the preamble to the constitution.

Following is Committee Proposal 14 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

We, the people of the state of Michigan, grateful to Almighty God for the blessings of freedom, and earnestly desiring to secure these blessings undiminished to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this constitution.

Mr. Erickson, chairman of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 14:

After consideration of the various delegate proposals and hearing of witnesses, the committee recommends the following:

That the preamble in the present constitution is fitting and proper and is sufficient for all purposes.

The preamble should be retained without change.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to Committee Proposal 14?

Mr. Erickson.

MR. ERICKSON: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee of the whole, the work on this preamble, although it is suggested and recommended that it be the same as in our present constitution, was done by Mr. Leppien as subcommittee chairman, Mr. Bledsoe as vice chairman, Mr. Durst, Mr. Seyferth and Mr. Binkowski.

Of course, we see that this preamble is part of the constitution and it is not part of the constitution, and perhaps we should take a moment in which to explain that seemingly contradictory statement. In Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U.S. 11, 1905, the Supreme Court of the United States said of the preamble of the United States constitution that it was, strictly speaking, not a part of the constitution at all, but "walks before" it. The court held further that it, the preamble, can support, by itself alone, no basis of a claim either of governmental power or of private right. Rather it is declamatory of the great ends for which the constitution was written, and in addition it indicates the contractual character of the constitution. The language "We the people of the United States, . . . do ordain and establish this constitution for the United States . . . ." is quite clearly a reflection of the Lockeian concept of the compact theory of the state, under which all American governments, since the time of the revolution, both state and federal, are derived from the compact of the people setting up the government. By analogy, sound certainly in this instance, these ideas would apply to the preamble of the Constitution of the State of Michigan. That is, it is declaratory of general intent, but it is not law in the sense that it can establish any basis for a claim, right, title, privilege, immunity, et cetera, in a court of law.

The language of the Michigan preamble, as standing in the Constitution of 1908, clearly reflects the Lockeian compact theory of the state. It employs this language, "We, the people of the state of Michigan . . ." and it ends up with, "do ordain and establish this constitution." Its concluding words are "do ordain and establish this constitution."

On the other hand, the preamble of the 1850 constitution said simply, "The people of the state of Michigan do ordain this constitution." That is ample. At that time the change was made to give recognition in the constitution to the Supreme Being. Similar recognition is found in many other constitutions.

This committee did considerable work and they have asked me to make this report. The United States and 48 state constitutions have a preamble as a matter of form. The constitutions of the states of Vermont and West Virginia do not have a preamble. Presently the preambles of the constitutions of the states of New Hampshire, Oregon and Tennessee do not mention God. The preambles of 31 states give recognition to Almighty God. The references vary. Six states refer to God, 3 states refer to the Supreme Ruler of the Universe. Others refer to the Creator, the Supreme Being, Divine Guidance, Great Legislator of the Universe or Sovereign Ruler of the Universe. The wording in each case is similar.

The other principal reference in preambles is to either liberty or freedom. Twenty-nine states use the term "liberty" and 8 use the term "freedom". Michigan uses the word "freedom". Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to the proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 14 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, Committee Proposal 15, A proposal to amend article II pertaining to the declaration of rights.

Following is Committee Proposal 15 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Article I [II]

Declaration of rights

Political power

Sec. 1. All political power is inherent in the people. Government is instituted for their equal benefit, security and protection.

Right of assembly and petition

Sec. 2. The people have the right peaceably to assemble, to consult for the common good, to instruct their representatives and to petition the [legislature] GOVERNMENT for redress of grievances.

Freedom of worship; disabilities

Sec. 3. Every person shall be at liberty to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience. No person shall be compelled to attend, or, against his consent, to contribute to the erection or support of any place of religious worship, or to pay tithes, taxes or other rates for the support of any minister of the gospel or teacher of religion. No money shall be appropriated or drawn from the treasury for the benefit of any religious sect or society, theological or religious seminary; nor shall property belonging to the state be appropriated for any such purpose. The civil and political rights, privileges and capacities of no person shall be diminished on account of his religious belief.

Liberty of speech and press

Sec. 4. Every person may freely speak, write, EXPRESS, and publish his [sentiments] VIEWS on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of such right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press.

Right to bear arms

Sec. 5. Every person has a right to bear arms for the defense of himself and the state.

Civil power supreme

Sec. 6. The military shall in all cases and at all times be in strict subordination to the civil power.

Quartering of soldiers

Sec. 7. No soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner or occupant, nor in time of war, except in a manner prescribed by law.

Slavery prohibited

Sec. 8. Neither slavery, nor involuntary servitude[,] unless for the punishment of crime, shall ever be tolerated in this state.

Attainder; ex post facto laws; impairment of contracts

Sec. 9. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law or law impairing the obligation of contracts shall be passed.

Searches and seizures

Sec. 10. The person, houses, papers and possessions of every person shall be secure from unreasonable searches and seizures. No warrant to search any place or to seize any person or things shall issue without describing them, nor without probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation[: Provided, however, That the provisions of this section shall not be construed to bar from evidence in any court of criminal jurisdiction, or in any criminal proceeding held before any magistrate or justice of the peace, any narcotic drug or drugs, any firearm, rifle, pistol, revolver, automatic pistol, machine gun, bomb, shell, explosive, blackjack, slungshot, billy, metallic knuckles, gas ejecting device, or any other dangerous weapon or thing, seized by any peace officer outside the curtilage of any dwelling house in this state]. EVIDENCE OBTAINED IN VIOLATION OF THIS SECTION SHALL NOT BE USED EXCEPT AS AUTHORIZED BY LAW.

Habeas corpus

Sec. 11. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless in case of rebellion, INSURRECTION or invasion the public safety may require it.

Appearance in person or by counsel

Sec. 12. Any suitor in any court of this state shall have the right to prosecute or defend his suit, either in his own proper person or by an attorney [or agent of his choice].

Jury trial

Sec. 13. The right of trial by jury shall remain, but shall be deemed to be waived in all civil cases unless demanded by one of the parties in such manner as shall be prescribed by law.

Former jeopardy; bailable offenses

Sec. 14. [No person, after acquittal upon the merits, shall be tried for the same offense] NO PERSON SHALL BE SUBJECT FOR THE SAME OFFENSE TO BE TWICE PUT IN JEOPARDY. All persons shall, before conviction, be bailable by sufficient sureties, except for murder and treason when the proof is evident or the presumption great.

Bail, fines; punishment; detention of witnesses

Sec. 15. Excessive bail shall not be required; excessive fines shall not be imposed; cruel or unusual punishment shall not be inflicted; nor shall witnesses be unreasonably detained.

Self incrimination; due process of law

Sec. 16. No person shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law. THE RIGHT OF ALL PERSONS TO FAIR AND JUST TREATMENT IN THE COURSE OF LEGISLATIVE AND EXECUTIVE PROCEEDINGS, INVESTIGATIONS, AND HEARINGS SHALL NOT BE INFRINGED.

Competency of witnesses

Sec. 17. No person shall be rendered incompetent to be a witness on account of his opinions on matters of religious belief.

Libels; truth as defense

Sec. 18. In all prosecutions for libels the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and, if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous is true and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the accused shall be acquitted.

Rights of accused

Sec. 19. In every criminal prosecution, the accused shall have the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury, which may consist of less than 12 [men] JURORS in all courts not of record; to be informed of the nature of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor; to have the assistance of counsel for his defense; TO HAVE AN APPEAL AS A MATTER OF RIGHT; and in courts of record, when the trial court shall so order, to have such reasonable assistance as may be necessary to perfect and prosecute an appeal.

Imprisonment for debt or military fine

Sec. 20. No person shall be imprisoned for debt arising out of, or founded on a TORT OR A contract, express or implied, except in cases of fraud or breach of trust, or of moneys collected by public officers or in any professional employment. [No person shall be imprisoned for military fine in time of peace.]

Treason; definition, evidence

Sec. 21. Treason against the state shall consist only in levying war against it or in adhering to its enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless upon the testimony of 2 witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.

[Subversion; definition, penalty; rights not valid as defense.]

[Sec. 22. Subversion shall consist of any act, or advocacy of any act, intended to overthrow the form of government of the United States or the form of government of this state, as established by this constitution and as guaranteed by section 4 of article 4 of the Constitution of the United States of America, by force or violence or by any unlawful means.]

[Subversion is declared to be a crime against the state, punishable by any penalty provided by law.]

[Subversion shall constitute an abuse of the rights secured by section 4 of this article, and the rights secured

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

thereby shall not be valid as a defense in any trial for subversion.]

SEC. — THE ENUMERATION IN THIS CONSTITUTION OF CERTAIN RIGHTS SHALL NOT BE CONSTRUED TO DENY OR DISPARAGE OTHERS RETAINED BY THE PEOPLE.

Mr. Pollock, chairman of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 15:

Article II—Proposed Article I

The committee recommends herewith to the convention that the declaration of rights, which is now article II of the present constitution, become article I of the new constitution. In the committee's opinion the liberties of the people are so fundamental to the Michigan constitution and to free representative government generally that the declaration of rights which establishes the fundamental principles of liberty and sets up the basic legal guideposts for their implementation and enforcement, should appear as the first article in the new constitution. In retaining or altering any present provisions, the committee has carefully considered the exact language in question, as well as committee intent, with the purpose of reducing as far as possible the necessity of judicial construction.

Sec. 1. "All political power is inherent in the people. Government is instituted for their equal benefit, security and protection."

Comment: This section is declaratory of the basic idea of free government. The committee recommends that it be retained without change. Delegate Proposal 1408, submitted by Mr. Wanger, would add to this "The enumeration in this constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people." The committee, it will be observed from the report, believes this section, which is modeled upon the ninth amendment of the federal constitution, is appropriate to a declaration of rights, but it recommends its inclusion in the constitution as a separate section.

Sec. 2. "The people have the right peaceably to assemble, to consult for the common good, to instruct their representatives and to petition the [legislature] GOVERNMENT for redress of grievances."

Comment: This section embodying the historic rights of freedom of assembly and petition has been retained intact except for the substitution in the text of the word "government" for "legislature." This change reflects recognition by the committee that whether one likes it or not other agencies of the government than merely the legislature today exercise actual policy making functions and so ought to be subject to the right of petition. This is undoubtedly true, for example, of the governor and the executive establishment. The committee considered various possible formulas for expanding the right of petition but came to the conclusion that the word "government" was best calculated to accomplish its intention and that the attempt at more precise definition encountered some difficulties. The word "government," it may be observed, has good precedent for it occurs in this usage in the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Sec. 3. "Every person shall be at liberty to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience. No person shall be compelled to attend, or, against his consent, to contribute to the erection or support of any place of religious worship, or to pay tithes, taxes or other rates for the support of any minister of the gospel or teacher of religion. No money shall be appropriated or drawn from the treasury for the benefit of any religious sect or society, theological or religious seminary; nor shall property belonging to the state be appropriated for any such purpose. The civil and political rights, privileges and capacities of no person shall be diminished or enlarged on account of his religious belief."

Comment: This section incorporates in some detail the traditional American guarantees of individual religious liberty and the separation of church and state. From one point of view, this section may now be unnecessary, in that the supreme court of the United States beginning with the New Jersey Bus Case (1946) has gone to great lengths to incorporate a like series of guarantees against the states within the content of the fourteenth amendment. However, the committee has acted consistently on the basis of the belief that long established and traditional guarantees within the Michigan constitution ought to be retained intact. The committee also believes that it is good constitutional practice for the Michigan constitution to continue the incorporation of the fundamental guarantees of liberty in our declaration of rights even when the federal government appears to have gone very far in guaranteeing the rights in question against state action.

The committee also has considered carefully Mr. Nord's proposal, Delegate Proposal 1092, which would have added to the section the words "nor shall sectarian instruction be allowed in any school supported by the state." Though there was some sentiment for the amendment, the majority in the committee voted not to include it, principally on the ground that it was unnecessary.

The committee on education concurs in the language of the section as submitted.

Sec. 4. "Every person may freely speak, write, EXPRESS, and publish his [sentiments] VIEWS on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of such rights; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press."

Comment: Here again is a traditional guarantee of American liberty, now covered largely by the extension of federal constitutional guarantees against the states, which the committee nonetheless believes it wise to continue to incorporate in Michigan's fundamental law.

The incorporation of the word "express" and the substitution of the word "views" for "sentiments" both taken from an amendment submitted in committee by Mr. Norris were done on the unanimous vote of the committee. The committee believes that the multiplicity of contemporary means of expression (as over and against the traditional means of speaking and writing) justifies the first change, while the word "views" seems to have a sharper and more specific meaning than the former word "sentiments."

The committee carefully considered but unanimously decided against the incorporation, after the phrase "liberty of speech," additional wordage which would have read "by whatever means communicated." The committee believes that this phrase raises potential difficulty with respect to the federal government's exclusive sovereignty in the area of radio and television communication particularly in the light of certain concepts in the federal communications act of 1934, as amended, which make it clear that radio and television communication are subject to a wide sweep of control in the public interest.

Sec. 5. "Every person has a right to bear arms for the defense of himself and the state."

Sec. 6. "The military shall in all cases and at all times be in strict subordination to the civil power."

Sec. 7. "No soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner or occupant, nor in time of war, except in a manner prescribed by law."

Sec. 8. "Neither slavery, nor involuntary servitude unless for the punishment of crime, shall ever be tolerated in this state."

Sec. 9. "No bill of attainder, ex post facto law or law impairing the obligation of contracts shall be passed."

Comment: These sections all incorporate traditional guarantees of American liberty. In part they may be obsolete (for example, the guarantee against quartering of soldiers in time of peace), and in part they may have become so self evident that their affirmation may appear to be superfluous; i.e., the guarantee against slavery and involuntary servitude. In addition, several of the guarantees in question (the prohibition upon slavery, and those against bills of attainder, ex post facto laws and the impairment of the obligations of contracts) appear in the federal constitution as against the states so that their inclusion in the state constitution as guarantees of liberty is in a certain technical sense superfluous. However, the committee believes strongly that the preservation of liberty and its affirmation is as much a function of the several states and their respective governments as it is of the federal government. Accordingly, it believes that the retention of the enumeration of the liberties in question in a state constitution is proper in all the aforementioned instances.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

The delegates will observe that one very minor substantive change has been made in section 8. The comma which formerly appeared after the word "servitude" has been eliminated and a new comma inserted after the word "slavery." The old punctuation conceivably made slavery permissible as a punishment for crime. The new punctuation forbids slavery categorically and makes involuntary servitude alone permissible as a punishment for crime.

Sec. 10. "The person, houses, papers and possessions of every person shall be secure from unreasonable searches and seizures. No warrant to search any place or to seize any person or things shall issue without describing them, nor without probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation[: Provided, however, That the provisions of this section shall not be construed to bar from evidence in any court of criminal jurisdiction, or in any criminal proceeding held before any magistrate or justice of the peace, any narcotic drug or drugs, any firearm, rifle, pistol, revolver, automatic pistol, machine gun, bomb, bomb shell, explosive, blackjack, slungshot, billy, metallic knuckles, gas ejecting device, or any other dangerous weapon or thing, seized by any peace officer outside the curtilage of any dwelling house in this state]. EVIDENCE OBTAINED IN VIOLATION OF THIS SECTION SHALL NOT BE USED EXCEPT AS AUTHORIZED BY LAW."

Comment: As the foregoing text makes evident, the committee after very careful consideration decided to drop the proviso with respect to the admissibility into evidence of certain weapons, arms, narcotics and other articles, which had been adopted by constitutional referendum in 1952. The committee's decision rests principally upon its recognition of the apparent sweeping impact of the opinion of the United States supreme court in Mapp v. Ohio (June, 1961) in which the court, in a 5 to 3 opinion, appears to have asserted categorically in very broad language that hereafter evidence obtained in violation of the guarantees of the fourth amendment to the federal constitution will be inadmissible in both state and federal courts.

There was some considerable difference of opinion among the legal experts in the committee as to the force of the Mapp case for Michigan constitutional law. Certain of the judges and lawyers on the committee believed that the impact of the Mapp case on state law is so categorical that it leaves no possible constitutional grounds whatsoever for the inclusion of the 1952 proviso, which according to this interpretation now is null and void under the doctrine of federal supremacy.

Other legal experts on the committee pointed out, however, that the Mapp case may very well be construed more narrowly than the foregoing argument implies. In the first place, the Mapp case dealt with a seizure within the curtilage, whereas the 1952 proviso specifically is limited to seizures outside the curtilage. In addition, the Mapp case dealt also with the seizure of printed materials and it thus has first amendment implications about which the supreme court of the United States has traditionally entertained a specially tender regard. In short, this argument runs, the Mapp case may very well be limited in the future by the process of redefinition, exclusion, and limitation so as to establish the constitutionality of state provisions similar to that in the 1952 Michigan proviso.

It should be observed, also, that there was a genuine difference in the committee with respect to the wisdom of the policy incorporated in the 1952 proviso. Certain members of the committee believed that the proviso incorporated legal guarantees essential to the maintenance of public order and safety and that it did not infringe in any fundamental way upon the traditional constitutional limits against arbitrary search and seizure. The opposite point of view also found expression: that the proviso constituted a serious impairment of the traditional guarantees of American liberty and, as such, ought to be eliminated.

The committee finally resolved these differences of opinion both with respect to constitutional law and good constitutional policy by the adoption of a new provision stipulating that "evidence obtained in violation of this section shall not be used except as authorized by law." This language, in the committee's belief, will have the following constitutional and legal consequences: first, it recognizes the supremacy of federal constitutional law with respect to search and seizure as defined in the Mapp case and other opinions. This is the implication in part of the new phrase, "as authorized by law." Thus, if the Mapp case turns out to have the all inclusive sweep that some observers believe it will, the wording of the Michigan constitution will remain consistent with supreme federal law.

At the same time, the new provision recognizes that the sweep of the Mapp case ultimately may not be as all inclusive as it now appears to some to be. Should the definition of the federal limits imposed on the states with respect to the admissibility of evidence change in the future, the Michigan legislature and the Michigan courts could incorporate, in statute and court decisions, those rules with respect to the admissibility of evidence which reflect the opinion of the legislature and the Michigan courts as to what ought to constitute sound practice in this state, subject only to the continuing recognition of the limits set by federal constitutional supremacy.

The new provision also obviously has the effect of restoring to the legislature of the state of Michigan a very large degree of discretion in what constitutes good policy on rules of evidence in relation to search and seizure. The committee believes that the restoration of legislative flexibility in this matter is consistent with generally sound constitutional practice.

Sec. 11. "The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless in case of rebellion, INSURRECTION or invasion the public safety may require it."

Comment: This section has been carried over intact from the old declaration of rights with the important addition of the word "insurrection." On a roll call vote, the committee voted 13 to 2 in favor of the addition of this word. It was the belief of the committee that there have been historical situations in which uprisings against the government so wide spread, well organized and effective as to close the civil courts and require suppression by military force which nonetheless cannot properly be described technically as rebellion. Technically in law "rebellion" implies a state of belligerency and public war such as that alluded to by the supreme court in the Prize Cases (1863) and in Texas v. White (1866). Disturbances which close the courts and require suppression by military force may require suspension of the writ of habeas corpus and yet not be rebellion in the sense that the confederacy constituted such. See, for example, ex parte Merryman, 9 Fed. Cases, 487 (1861).

Sec. 12. "Any suitor in any court of this state shall have the right to prosecute or defend his suit, either in his own proper person or by an attorney [or agent of his choice].

Comment: This section as now worded deletes the word "agent" to clarify the meaning and reconcile its provisions with current practice, so that no one may contend that a litigant is empowered by constitutional law to engage a person to represent him in a court of record unless said person is licensed to practice law. This is consistent with a supreme court decision which holds that the word "agent" as used in the 1908 constitution was in substance synonymous with "attorney." Thus this change is in conformity with the court's recognition that the public interest is best protected by those who are subject to the superintending power of the courts. This, of course, does not preclude any person from arguing his own case in court if he so desires. The new wording also allows the legislature, at its discretion, to broaden the right of persons to representation in court by counsel or persons not attorneys.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

Sec. 13. "The right of trial by jury shall remain, but shall be deemed to be waived in all civil cases unless demanded by one of the parties in such manner as shall be prescribed by law."

Comment: This provision guarantees the right to a jury trial but requires that the right is deemed to be waived in a civil suit unless one of the parties demands it, whereas, in a criminal case a jury must be affirmatively waived by the defendant (in practice in writing).

The committee recommends the retention of this section.

Sec. 14. "[No person, after acquittal upon the merits, shall be tried for the same offense] NO PERSON SHALL BE SUBJECT FOR THE SAME OFFENSE TO BE TWICE PUT IN JEOPARDY. All persons shall, before conviction, be bailable by sufficient sureties, except for murder and treason, when the proof is evident or the presumption great."

[The comment regarding section 14 immediately following is the comment as originally submitted by the committee. This was ordered revised on January 11 (see below, page 544). The revised comment appears following this original comment.]

Comment: The foregoing change in section 14 involves the substitution of the double jeopardy provision from the Constitution of the United States (except for the deletion of the obsolete words of "life or limb") in place of the original provision which merely prohibits retrial after "acquittal upon the merits." The former language, the committee points out, has been consistently construed by the Michigan supreme court to mean something quite different than the words on the surface appear to connote. Taken literally, the words appear to say that there is no double jeopardy until a trial has run its course complete to acquittal. In fact, however, the Michigan courts have followed the federal rule on double jeopardy and have construed the provision to mean that an accused person is put in jeopardy as soon as a jury is empanelled. This is the same rule with respect to jeopardy as is followed by the federal courts. The new language thus appears to be more consistent with the actual practice of the courts in Michigan.

The committee also believes that the new provision will permit the courts an appropriate degree of latitude in defining and restricting the concept of jeopardy so as to permit retrial of a defendant in certain instances in which some minor mechanical legal flaw in indictment or procedure permits a guilty person to escape without punishment.

Following is the comment regarding section 14 as revised on January 12 (see below, page 559) by the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections:

Comment: The foregoing change in section 14 involves the substitution of the double jeopardy provision from the Constitution of the United States (except for the deletion of the obsolete words of "life or limb") in place of the original provision which merely prohibits retrial after "acquittal upon the merits." The former language, the committee points out, has been consistently construed by the Michigan supreme court to mean something quite different than the words on the surface appear to connote. Taken literally, the words appear to say that there is no double jeopardy until a trial has run its course complete to acquittal. In fact, however, the Michigan courts have followed the federal rule on double jeopardy. The new language thus appears to be consistent with the actual practice of the courts in Michigan.

Sec. 15. "Excessive bail shall not be required; excessive fines shall not be imposed; cruel or unusual punishment shall not be inflicted; nor shall witnesses be unreasonably detained."

Comment: The committee believes that these guarantees against a requirement of excessive bail, excessive fines, cruel or unusual punishment, and the unreasonable detention of witnesses are satisfactory as now stated and require no change from the present constitution.

Sec. 16. "No person shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law. THE RIGHT OF ALL PERSONS TO FAIR AND JUST TREATMENT IN THE COURSE OF LEGISLATIVE AND EXECUTIVE PROCEEDINGS, INVESTIGATIONS, AND HEARINGS SHALL NOT BE INFRINGED."

Comment: This section, as amended, incorporates a new guarantee of fair and just treatment in legislative and executive investigations. This recognizes the extent to which legislative and executive investigations, both on the state and federal level, lately have tended to assume a quasi judicial character. The language proposed is similar to that contained in a comparable section of the recent Constitution of the state of Alaska. The language proposed by the committee does not in any sense impose categorically the guarantees of procedural due process upon such investigations. Instead, it leaves to the legislature, the executive and finally to the courts, the task of developing fair rules of procedure appropriate to such investigations and hearings. It may be observed that a considerable body of federal constitutional law with respect to federal investigations both by executive bodies and by congress has evolved in the last 10 years. This section as drafted by the committee would make Michigan practice consistent with this development.

Sec. 17. "No person shall be rendered incompetent to be a witness on account of his opinions on matters of religious belief."

Comment: The committee believes this provision should be retained intact. At first glance it might be supposed that it should be incorporated in section 3, which guarantees freedom of worship and religious liberty. Actually, however, section 17 deals with court procedure rather than with religious liberty as such, and for this reason the committee has suggested retaining it intact, as a separate section.

Sec. 18. "In all prosecutions for libels the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and, if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous is true and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the accused shall be acquitted."

Comment: The committee recommends the continuation unchanged of this provision in the present constitution. It considered carefully an amendment which would have modified the section to eliminate criminal prosecutions for malicious libel against private individuals. But it believes that the defenses of truth, good motives and justifiable ends constitute an adequate protection, both for individuals and for the press, and that the provision accordingly ought to remain unchanged.

The language of the section also apparently deals with the traditional right of the state to prosecute the offense originally known as seditious libel, which today probably could be comprised merely within the phrase "sedition"; i.e., language intended to damage or destroy the government or to overthrow it by unlawful means. Again, the guarantees of the section with respect to defenses of truth, motives and justifiable ends appear to be adequate for this purpose also.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

Sec. 19. "In every criminal prosecution the accused shall have the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury, which may consist of less than 12 [men] JURORS in all courts not of record; to be informed of the nature of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor; to have the assistance of counsel for his defense; TO HAVE AN APPEAL AS A MATTER OF RIGHT; and in courts of record, when the trial court shall so order, to have such reasonable assistance as may be necessary to perfect and prosecute an appeal."

Comment: This section deals with the traditional guarantees of a fair trial for an accused person in criminal cases. It needs little change. The substitution of the word "jurors" for "men" in the 12 person jury guarantee takes recognition of the modern fact that women as well as men now are electors and eligible to serve on juries.

The guarantee of a categorical right of appeal in criminal cases the committee believes to be consistent with the recent trend of opinion in the federal courts and, in any event, to be sound and fair procedural practice. As one of the members of the committee said, "It is not merely the consequence or inconsequence of the punishment which may be imposed upon a defendant upon conviction; there is also the fact that a conviction for any offense, no matter how trivial it may be, nowadays constitutes a blot upon an individual's record which may be of subsequent significance with respect to employment, government service, or merely a person's standing and reputation in the community at large." We desire to grant the status of a categorical constitutional right to at least one appeal in a criminal case. We do not intend to restrict the legislature in its power to provide by law for additional appeals.

Sec. 20. "No person shall be imprisoned for debt arising out of, or founded on a TORT OR A contract, express or implied, except in cases of fraud or breach of trust, or of moneys collected by public officers or in any professional employment. [No person shall be imprisoned for military fine in time of peace.]"

Comment: The addition of a prohibition on imprisonment for debt for torts where there is no fraud or breach of trust is intended to eliminate a practice still moderately common in the Michigan courts, whereby a plaintiff who gets a judgment in a tort case may under some circumstances secure an order for the imprisonment of a defendant where the judgment remains unsatisfied. The committee believes that this remnant of imprisonment for debt is inconsistent with modern conceptions of liberty and ought to be eliminated. It points out that imprisonment as a remedy for the nonpayment of alimony is not affected by the new language, since imprisonment in alimony cases is technically in pursuance of a finding that a defendant is in contempt of court.

The committee recommends striking the language guaranteeing against imprisonment for military fine in time of peace. The language in question appears in part to be too narrow a guarantee against the abuse of military authority in peace time. (If a guarantee of this kind were to be incorporated it ought to prohibit categorically the jurisdiction of military courts over civil persons except in cases of rebellion, insurrection, or invasion.) The provision is also apparently unnecessary, since the more general guarantees in the constitution with respect to the supremacy of the civil over the military power and the writ of habeas corpus appear adequate to take care of the matter of the jurisdiction of military courts.

Sec. 21. "Treason against the state shall consist only in levying war against it or in adhering to its enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless upon the testimony of 2 witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court."

Comment: The committee recommends the retention of this section intact from the present constitution. It may well be that the federal government's virtually complete preemption of the subject of treason and sedition has made this section so much surplusage, see Pennsylvania vs. Nelson (1956). However, it is quite conceivable that congress and the federal courts may, at least in part, in the future return jurisdiction over treason to the states, in which case the Michigan treason provision would take on renewed meaning as a guarantee against broad prosecutions for this offense. Conceivably, also, the state of Michigan, in a modern war, might find itself isolated from control by the central government; again, the treason provision would become significant.

"[Sec. 22. Subversion shall consist of any act, or advocacy of any act, intended to overthrow the form of government of the United States or the form of government of this state, as established by this constitution and as guaranteed by section 4 of article 4 of the Constitution of the United States of America, by force or violence or by any unlawful means.]

[Subversion is declared to be a crime against the state, punishable by any penalty provided by law.]

[Subversion shall constitute an abuse of the rights secured by section 4 of this article, and the rights secured thereby shall not be valid as a defense in any trial for subversion.]"

Comment: The committee recommends the deletion of section 22 of the present constitution. This section as at present constituted deals with the crime of subversion which it defines as "any act, or advocacy of any act, intended to overthrow the form of government of the United States or the form of government of this state, as established by this constitution and as guaranteed by section 4 of article 4 of the Constitution of the United States of America, by force or violence or by any unlawful means." This section in its second paragraph declares subversion "to be a crime against the state, punishable by any penalty provided by law." And in the third paragraph it declares that subversion "shall constitute an abuse of the rights secured by section 4 of this article, and the rights secured thereby shall not be valid as a defense in any trial for subversion."

After considering section 22 with very great care and after inquiring carefully into the section's origins, the committee believes it has no place in a declaration of rights; its reasoning may be briefly summarized as follows:

1. In the first place, bills of rights historically guarantee the rights of the people by imposing limits upon the power of the state whereas this section defines and provides for the punishment of a new crime. Its provisions thus are at odds with the historic function of a declaration of rights in that they restrict liberty rather than guarantee it.

It is true that certain criminal acts traditionally have been recognized in bills of rights. For example, section 21 of the present constitution deals with treason, while section 18 deals with libel prosecutions. But in both of these cases the language of the section is couched as a limitation on the power of the state to prosecute the crime in question and not as an affirmation of the right of the state to punish. Section 22, on the contrary, as at present constituted, defines a new crime hitherto unknown to common law or constitutional law. It thus appears to place new limits upon the liberties of the people rather than to guarantee the liberties of the people against their abuse by the power of the state. It is therefore technically at odds with the proper subject matter of a bill of rights and ought to be eliminated from the Michigan declaration of rights for this reason, if for no other.

2. A second serious objection to the section is to be found in the vague and confusing language of paragraph 3. This paragraph, if read literally, seems to be radically at odds with the guarantee of freedom of speech set forth in section 4 of the declaration of rights. Read in this fashion, it constitutes an outright denial of the right of freedom of speech and of press as a defense whenever the state might choose to undertake a prosecution for the crime in question. Such a construction, if correct, renders the paragraph radically unconstitutional as a violation of the elementary guarantees of freedom of speech and freedom of the press as incorporated in the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and imposed upon the states through the inclusion of first amendment guarantees in the content of the first section of the fourteenth amendment.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

3. Finally, the committee believes that this section was added to the constitution at a time when the people of the state of Michigan, very properly concerned with the threat to freedom and liberty posed by the communist menace, were momentarily diverted from their historic recognition of the necessity of preserving constitutional rights even for those persons who may be accused quite properly of the most despicable crimes against the public security and safety.

In recommending the elimination of section 22 in the present constitution, the committee wishes to make clear that it is in no sense advocating any diminution of the power of the state, the courts and the legislature, to define and punish, within proper constitutional limits, the crime of subversion or like offenses against the public safety and security of the state (acts of criminal syndicalism, sedition, and the like). To emphasize this point, it submits herewith, in an accompanying report, the text of a proposed resolution memorializing the legislature to this effect so that its position with respect to the elimination of section 22 shall be completely clear.

"SEC. ——. THE ENUMERATION IN THIS CONSTITUTION OF CERTAIN RIGHTS SHALL NOT BE CONSTRUED TO DENY OR DISPARAGE OTHERS RETAINED BY THE PEOPLE."

Comment: This language is taken from the ninth amendment to the Constitution of the United States. The committee believes that its incorporation in the Michigan constitution will set up a sound state parallel. The language recognizes that no bill of rights can ever enumerate or guarantee all the rights of the people and that liberty under law is an ever growing and ever changing conception of a living society developing in a system of ordered liberty.

Footnote: The committee report, as presented, comprises only the portions of the declaration of rights which appear in the 1908 constitution, together with such changes, deletions, and additions as the committee has deemed it advisable to make. The committee has under consideration a number of proposals, the substance of which in the opinion of the committee may properly be dealt within separate additional sections.

Appendix

The following are the recommendations and decisions of the committee on judicial branch with reference to sections 11 through 19 of article II:

Sec. 11. That this section should remain as it is now constituted in the 1908 constitution and that the word "INSURRECTION" not be included.

Sec. 12. That a period be inserted after the word "attorney", and that all language appearing thereafter in the present section be deleted and the additions made by the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections not be included.

Sec. 13. Concurs unanimously with the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

Sec. 14. That the first sentence of the section be changed so as to read, "NO PERSON SHALL BE PUT IN JEOPARDY TWICE FOR THE SAME OFFENSE." It is pointed out that this is a change from the present section and is a change in the wording of the recommendation of the committee on declaration of rights but is, in essence, only the deletion of the words "life or limb", as found in the U.S. constitution, which this committee believes to be obsolete. This committee concurs in the intent expressed by the committee on declaration of rights in the change made from the present section. This committee concurs unanimously in the recommendation of the declaration of rights committee in the remaining portion of this section.

Sec. 15. Concurs unanimously with recommendation of the declaration of rights committee.

[The statement regarding section 16 immediately following is in the form originally submitted. This was ordered revised on January 12 (see below, page 560). The revised statement appears following this original statement.]

Sec. 16. Concurs in principle with declaration of rights committee recommendation; words "proceedings" and "hearings" added at judiciary's recommendation.

Following is the statement as revised on January 12 (see below, page 560) by the committee on judicial branch:

Sec. 16. This committee concurs with the recommendation of the rights committee as they are contained in sentence 1 of said section.

The judicial committee concurs, in principle, with the recommendations set forth in the second sentence of this section but recommends that, in addition to the word "INVESTIGATIONS", there should be included the words "proceedings and hearings". The committee was of the opinion, also, that the word "persons" might be expanded to include corporations and business entities in addition to natural persons.

Sec. 17. Concurs unanimously with recommendations of the declaration of rights committee.

Sec. 18. Concurs with recommendations of the declaration of rights committee.

[The statement regarding section 19 immediately following is in the form originally submitted. This was ordered revised on January 12 (see below, page 560). The revised statement and a motion appears following this original statement.]

Sec. 19. Concurs with the recommendation of declaration of rights committee, but not necessarily for the reasons given in that committee's report.

Following is the statement as revised on January 12 (see below, page 560) by the committee on judicial branch and a motion of that committee:

Sec. 19. This committee concurs in the recommendations contained in this section and approves of the word "JURORS" in place of the word "CITIZENS" which latter word was the original choice of the committee on rights prior to consultation with the committee on judicial branch. It was the considered opinion of the committee that this would eliminate any confusion and would leave to the legislature the manner of determining the qualifications of jurors.

The following motion was likewise passed by the committee on judicial branch:

That, by approving or concurring in the recommendations, or any part thereof, of the committee on rights, suffrage and elections, the committee on judicial branch does not necessarily concur in, or agree to, all of the reasons and grounds contained in the report of the committee on rights, suffrage and elections.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

[The following is the resolution, in its corrected form, referred to in the above supporting reasons submitted by the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections. This became Resolution 64.]

A resolution to memorialize the legislature in the matter of the deletion of section 22 of article II of the 1908 constitution.

Resolved, That the legislature be informed that the deletion of section 22 of article II is not to be construed as opposing the definition of subversion by the legislature, or providing a statutory crime of subversion; and be it further

Resolved, That the last paragraph is held to be of extremely doubtful constitutionality as a denial of due process of law and that such a provision would not, in any case, be within the powers of the legislature; and be it further

Resolved, That the provision is held to be so poorly drafted that its exact meaning cannot be determined; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the legislature.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The committee will be in order. It is very difficult to read or to be heard.

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, on behalf of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, I am now pleased to present to you article II of the present constitution as we have proposed to amend it.

Because of my earlier remarks on the declaration of rights, dated December 15, I think it is not necessary for me to emphasize again this evening the basic importance of the matters dealt with in the declaration of rights. This is the keystone in our governmental arch. And if ever we deserve wisdom, or rather if ever we deserve to use wisdom, we deserve to use it in connection with this article of the constitution. Organs of government may change. Procedures may change. These inalienable rights must be very carefully weighed and understood. I say, therefore, that I welcome not only the criticisms but the careful analyses of all the delegates in the discussion of these some 23 sections of the constitution which we have proposed for your consideration.

Since the matter involves so many questions of law, court decision and practice, being a mere political scientist and not a lawyer, I yield now to my colleague, the first vice chairman of my committee, Mr. Harold Stevens, of Detroit, who will present the matters as they come along, with the assistance of the second vice chairman, Mr. Norris, and Judge Gadola, a distinguished member of our committee. May I say that we had the benefit of lawyers both inside, therefore, as well as outside the committee. And now we hope to have the benefit of discussion on the floor.

I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that this is a matter of great importance, and perhaps will require considerable discussion. I hope, therefore, that you will permit me to move that the committee rise when I think the moment for termination has come, so that we can carry over to another session this matter if we are not able to finish it this evening. I now yield to my colleague, Mr. Stevens, and I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that we take this matter up section by section.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, taking this section by section, section 1 reads:

[Section 1 was read by Mr. Stevens. For text, see above, page 464.]

If you have done your homework, I am sure you understand this quite well. This section is declaratory of the basic idea of free government. The committee recommends that it be retained without change.

Delegate Proposal 1408, submitted by Mr. Wanger, would add to this, "The enumeration in this constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people." The committee, it will be observed from the report, believes this section which is modeled upon the ninth amendment of the federal constitution is appropriate to a declaration of rights, but it recommends its inclusion in the constitution as a separate section. This will be suggested later. The purpose of this, of course, is to indicate that the government stems from the people. The government is the government of the people. The people are sovereign in the government. Beyond that, there is little more to say.

Mr. Chairman, are you going to take these up one at a time?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair wishes to advise, unless there is objection, that we go through this proposal by sections and that, as we pass each section, the secretary will read the next section, and then the proponents will take the floor.

Is there any further discussion on section 1? If not, it will pass.

Section 1 is passed.

The secretary will read section 2.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 2 reads:

[Section 2 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

MR. STEVENS: That section, Mr. Chairman, it will be noticed, is changed in only one respect. I should like to yield to Second Vice Chairman Norris to explain the change in the wording.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I am very happy to represent the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections with regard to this and some of the other matters which will come before the convention. I want to, if I may, express a personal debt of gratitude to the members of this committee who have deliberated with great intensity and with great quality to bring before you the changes which we now recommend. I wish personally to acknowledge a debt of gratitude to Dr. Alfred Kelly who was with us during the entire proceedings to this date and we look forward to his recommendations and thinking in the future. I also wish to name for you the members of this committee. I have not been asked to do so, but I feel moved to do so because they have worked hard and long and I think they have produced a set of constructive recommendations for this convention. In addition to the chairman, Dr. Pollock, and first vice chairman, Mr. Harold Stevens, of Detroit, and myself, there are on this committee Mr. Beaman, Mr. Buback, Mrs. Butler, Father Dade, Judge Gadola, Mrs. Lillian Hatcher, Mr. Robert Hodges, Mr. Hubbs, Mr. Leppien, Mr. Shaffer, Mr. Shanahan and Mr. White. I personally have been much moved by the conscientious spirit which has animated this group of men and women and I wanted to say that on the record of this convention.

Secondly, I should like to say that there is a bit of human interest involved in that some time back in the early '30s, Mr. Harold Stevens taught my wife and me civics and economics as high school students in the city of Detroit, and so it is with a great deal of pleasure and inspiration that I now find myself as a vice chairman of this committee working with him and Dr. Pollock and members of this committee, some 30 years later. This, it seems to me, is some kind of true sentiment which ought to be recognized and I wish to recognize it.

With regard to the very fundamental matter that is now before us, the question of to whom the right of petition might be addressed, I think the committee wishes to incorporate in the record of this convention the comment which has been stated before you in the journal of January 4. In addition to that, I should like to make these observations. Under the United States constitution, the people have the right to petition the government for the redress of grievances, not merely the legislature. This is in article I, section 1 of the federal constitution. Similar wording is recommended by the model state constitution of the national municipal league. The New York constitution adopted in 1938 contains a formulation that includes, "government or any department thereof." The opinion prepared for the citizens research council and published in their A Comparative Analysis of the Michigan Constitution, volume 1, comments as follows:

> The general language of the present provision would appear to include the protection afforded by the more specific sanctions in other state constitutions; e.g., the guarantee against abridgement by legislative action and the right to present views to all departments of government. Specific inclusion of such guarantees would, however, remove any doubt.

Since the adoption of the Michigan Constitution of 1908, substantial changes have occurred in the powers of all departments and subdivisions of government. The governor has much greater leadership and policy power and is, indeed, expected to be the chief policymaker of state government. A large number of departments, agencies and independent commissions, both responsible to the governor and independent of him, have been created. To some degree, comparable parallel developments have occurred in cities and counties at the local level throughout the state. Numerous echelons of officialdom and bureaucracy have proliferated. As a partial result a gap between officials and people has developed. Accordingly the wording herein suggested—suggested in my memorandum in support of Delegate Proposal 1244—is intended to help narrow this gap and bring government closer to people. A more specific right of assembly and petition can help create greater opportunity for officials in every department and unit of government at both state and local levels to possess more directly the thinking of people to the end that such officials may discharge their constitutional and statutory duties with greater effectiveness and fairness.

The suggested language makes more specific the right to assemble and to present, and the duty on the part of the official to accept, though not necessarily to act upon, the petition. Increasing the possibility of presenting a petition to officials is perhaps one way of increasing citizen responsibility by making citizen participaton more effective. Officials and representatives in every unit of government may thus become more sensitive and responsive to changing needs and problems. This sense of responsiveness and fairness helps to instill faith and confidence of people in themselves and in their government and, as a result, makes democratic government more secure.

Strengthening the right of assembly and petition also strengthens the public purpose of the great freedoms of speech and press. These rights are described as "cognate and related" by the United States supreme court. Justice Rutledge, speaking for the high court, declared:

> It is, therefore, in our tradition to allow the widest room for discussion, the narrowest range for restriction, particularly when this right is exercised in conjunction with peaceable assembly. It was not by accident or coincidence that the rights of freedom of speech and press were coupled in a single guarantee with the rights of people to peaceably assemble and to petition for redress of grievances. All these, though not identical, are inseparable . . . and are therefore united in the first article's assurance.

The recommendation of the citizen's research council that "specific inclusion of such guarantees would, however, remove any doubt," is reinforced by taking into account the great constitutional policy in favor of assembly and petition stated by Chief Justice Waite in the United States v. Cruikshank, a leading case:

> The very idea of government republican in form implies a right on the part of its citizens to meet peaceably for consultation in respect to public affairs and to petition for a redress of grievances . . . it derives its source from those laws whose authority is acknowledged by civilized man throughout the world. It is found wherever civilization exists.

For the reasons that were stated in the previous comment, and this elucidation of it, Mr. Chairman, we urge a favorable consideration of the recommendation by the members of this body.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I think Mr. Norris is to be complimented on his scholarly background material on this subject, but I do wish to ask him one question. I believe that a redress of grievance would actually constitute an act of the legislature, or an act of law. Since we have separation of the legislature which enacts the law, and the executive which carries out the law, was there intent here to imply that the executive has law making power through executive or administrative order?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do you care to answer, Mr. Norris?

MR. NORRIS: Well, Mr. Chairman, I think it is contemplated by the changing of the word "legislature" to "government" to indicate that there are 3 coordinate branches of government, each of which has certain powers delegated by the people through the constitution.

Now, it has so happened that over a period of years, the governor has had expanded powers and expanded policy influence. It is also true to say that if people may petition the government, including the executive departments and particularly the governor, that the governor might be more sensitive to certain things which may be, in essence, a grievance, and can, within his own executive power, rectify the grievance. It does not necessarily mean that he has the power to pass a law. That is restricted to the legislature. But he does have the power to act as an executive over his various departments, and if his departments are conducting themselves in a manner in which the citizens have a legitimate grievance, it is possible for him to take the action which would be prompted by constructive petition. That is what is contemplated by this language, as I understand it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 2?

Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I should simply like to repeat that the word "government" as used here was taken bodily from the United States constitution, so it is not an innovation.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 2? If not, it will pass.

Section 2 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 3 reads:

[Section 3 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 3? Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, we made no change in this section, although we did consider some suggested changes. The section incorporates in some detail the traditional American guarantees of individual religious liberty and the separation of church and state. You have the explanation here, carefully written. From the point of view of the committee, there was no essential reason for adding to it or subtracting from it. It is very difficult to find words, sometimes, which mean exactly what somebody wants to express, and we have found that any addition or subtraction from this might lead only to confusion. These words have been construed by the courts. They seem to have been satisfactory. The committee believes we would do well to stay with what we have.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I rise only to comment that I was following the reading word for word in my Comparative Analysis of the Michigan Constitution, and I find that your copy, line 23, says, "shall be diminished on account of," and so on. It does not contain the words "diminished or enlarged." My copy says "or enlarged on account," and I think this should be corrected in the green copy.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do you care to answer, Mr. Stevens?

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, this must be a typographical error. I move the correction so that it reads as it now stands in the 1908 constitution.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Can you do that without an amendment coming up? Is that possible, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Stevens offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 23, after "diminished" by inserting "or enlarged".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment. The Chair recognizes Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Are you going to put the amendment, Mr. Chairman? It is simply the correction of a typographical error.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Martin, do you care to comment on the amendment?

MR. MARTIN: Simply as a matter of clarification, Mr. Chairman, and perhaps it is not necessary, but it is important that the record be quite clear in respect to this matter. The committee states that Mr. Nord's Delegate Proposal 1092 was not included by the committee because, although there was some sentiment for the amendment, the majority in the committee voted not to include it, principally on the ground that it was unnecessary. Just as a matter of inquiry, I understand this to mean that the committee believes that sectarian instruction under the present constitutional provision cannot be allowed in any school supported by the state. May I inquire for a specific statement on that point, Mr. Chairman?

MR. STEVENS: I take it it is the opinion of the committee that public funds may not be used for instruction in religion—in any particular religion. Is that the answer to your question?

MR. MARTIN: Yes, that is the answer to my question. I just wanted to be clear that that is exactly what we were talking about.

MR. STEVENS: A point of information, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Yes, Mr. Stevens?

MR. STEVENS: Did the amendment pass?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: No, the amendment has not been put, as yet.

MR. STEVENS: It is not now in order?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is now on the amendment of Mr. Stevens. Do you care to speak to the amendment, Dr. Nord?

Dr. De Vries, do you wish to speak to the amendment? If not, those in favor will signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

Mr. McCauley, you were up; do you wish to speak?

Dr. De Vries.

MR. De VRIES: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I rise to support the recommendation of the committee on the declaration of rights. Article II, section 3, is part of our heritage as an organized people. The historians tell us that the substance of the proposal was adopted by the people of this state when they enacted their first constitution in 1837. Each time other delegates like us have met to consider reframing the basic law of our state the substance of article II, section 3, has been reenacted as it was in 1850 and in 1908. This section has stood the test of time. It has served Michigan well. The language is meaningful. It has been reviewed by the highest court of our state. Its meaning is definite and certain. It would be unrealistic to pretend that we are confronted here with a matter devoid of feeling or emotion. We are a people possessed of many beliefs and creeds. Article II, section 3 of the Michigan constitution has aided us in living together in harmony. To amend or question this committee proposal without good cause is to open a controversy that is divisive and unnecessary. Let us keep that which is good, is certain and is necessary. This section as reported by the committee meets all of these tests.

The constitutional preparatory commission in analyzing section 3 of article II said this, and I quote:

> . . . any attempt to refine, expand or contract the language of the present text might be construed as having the effect of a further limitation, maybe an unwitting abridgement of a basic right.

I hope the committee will retain article II, section 3, in its present form.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a comment on the committee's comment, and also on the question asked by Mr. Martin and the answer given by the vice chairman of the committee. I note in the comment that the delegate proposal which I introduced relating to sectarian instruction in public schools is referred to, and it was mentioned that it was not intended to include it, principally on the ground that it was unnecessary.

I should like to thank the committee for its very, very careful consideration of this particular subject. I should like to add that I have examined the question myself very thoroughly since I have spoken to the committee on it. I have also consulted attorney general's opinions—that is, printed opinions—and I find that there are 2 attorney general's opinions which have held that, in essence, the language which now appears, "no money shall be appropriated or drawn from the treasury for the benefit of any religious sect," clearly implies that as a result no religious sectarian instruction can be given in the public schools because they are supported by public funds. And, therefore, I conclude that the committee is correct in saying that nothing would be added by using the words "nor shall sectarian instruction be allowed", because that is already included by attorney general's opinions. Also, that is apparently the conclusion of the committee.

I would simply like again to ask—for the record, and only for the record—of Mr. Stevens, whether I am correct in understanding that that is the conclusion of the committee, that the language I suggested is not needed because it is impliedly present. Is that correct, sir?

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and delegates, it is my opinion that the committee so held. Certainly that is the way it voted.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Thank you, Mr. Stevens. I should like to make one further remark, if I may, in support of the language which we have here, and not just in support of the language, but of the content and the subject matter.

This, in my opinion, is a very crucial subject or rather a very crucial section, or I never would have entertained any idea of working hard on the language. It is a very, very important subject probably, to all Americans because almost every American has a history of coming from another country, if not everyone. Nearly all have a history of coming from another country and in many cases, if not in most, they did so to avoid religious persecution. Certainly my people came here for that reason, and I believe most other people did, too. And the language of this section, therefore, is important to everyone, and the language that "the civil and political rights, privileges and capacities of no person shall be diminished or enlarged on account of his religious belief" appears to me as the thing which has made this country possible.

I do not want anyone to think there is any doubt in my mind, after having considered this thoroughly, that there is any question but that the language does do what it is supposed to do. As I say, I think this is one of the most important principles we have, the freedom of religion. I certainly support the section, and I thank the committee for its very careful attention to this subject. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Reverend Dade.

MR. DADE: Mr. Chairman, I was going to say before Delegate Nord spoke that I recognize, as we all do, that he is a man of integrity, and his remarks in sustaining the committee's report show that he is.

I wish to say, in support of our work on the committee, that we recognized that in this state there are multiple religious groups and this expression in this section of the constitution really stands for a generous freedom of worship, the kind of freedom of worship that those of us who are believers and those of us who are nonbelievers can give adherence to. We also felt that this had stood the test of time. We felt, with great respect to Dr. Nord, that inserting this particular provision, rather than being an enlargement, would be an abridgement, and for that reason we did not vote to sustain his particular insertion.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, considering the amount of legal counsel we have here, I should like to pose a question with regard to this section. Is it the opinion of the attorneys here present that this section would preclude the acceptance of federal aid to education in Michigan?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hubbs, this question was addressed to 57 attorneys. Who is going to answer it?

Mr. Stevens? Who is going to speak up for this? Mr. Stevens?

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Hubbs, I do not feel competent to answer this question on a curbstone opinion. I would be glad to yield to anyone who does.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Is there any attorney here who cares to answer the question? Let's don't get into a hassle over this. (laughter)

Do you wish to answer, Mr. Mahinske?

MR. MAHINSKE: At this time, Mr. Chairman, I should like to give you the benefit of a saying that we have in the legal profession. If you want the $10 answer, you can have it today. If you want the $200 answer, you can have it next week —and you can rely on it. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: Mr. Chairman, I am not a lawyer nor the son of a lawyer, but the subcommittee, of which I am chairman, of the education committee has been dealing extensively with this language and with the related language in article XI. Now, the facts are that under this language, at the present time, the state of Michigan will not permit the state to transport surplus food to private religious schools, and this is because of the restrictions of this language. I mention that because it does place restrictions on the use of federal aid and federal assistance to education, and is thus somewhat more restrictive than the language in the federal constitution.

Now, while I am on my feet, let me express gratification at the fact that Dr. Nord has evidenced a high degree of consensus on the article. Like Dr. Nord, members of our subcommittee in the education committee have had a series of sessions on article II, section 3. We have had the benefit not only of the expert advice of eminent counsel to this convention, Dr. Joiner and Dr. Kelly, but we also asked Dr. Kauper of the University of Michigan, who has made this particular subject his specialty, to give the committee the benefit of his judgment. And it was his expert judgment that we could not materially strengthen the present language of the constitution as it relates to religious freedom and separation of church and state.

Certainly those 2 things have played a fundamental part, as Dr. Nord has indicated, in the origin of our country and in the growth of our country, and it is highly desirable to retain them in a strong form, and I am pleased to see this degree of unanimity developing on the fact that this language does this. Our subcommittee has been unanimous in this viewpoint.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Hubbs, while I am an attorney, I will not answer your question as an attorney. However, I will answer it as a delegate. I support the language of this proposal, and in supporting it, I would like, in answer to your question, to emphasize the last sentence, "The civil and political rights, privileges and capacities of no person shall be diminished or enlarged on account of his religious belief." Therefore, if the federal government should decide to render federal aid to education on the basis of students, then I hope that that aid will not be denied to him because he does have religious beliefs.

In other words, I think we can use the analogy of the G.I. bill of rights under which so many of you here have received your education, as I have.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: Mr. Chairman, I am quite concerned over the interpretation given this particular section by one of the previous speakers. It was not my understanding that the acceptance of this particular section, as such, would prohibit us from accepting the federal aid should it become available. I feel that this is a separate question and certainly I must arise to differ with the interpretation of the previous speaker, because I would not, based on a hasty decision, commit this convention, or its interpretation thereof, to the proposition that we did give tacit approval to this interpretation.

Therefore, I should like to go on record that I do not agree with the interpretation, that I feel these are separate decisions that we should make individually.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Dr. De Vries.

MR. De VRIES: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I want to agree with Mr. Snyder. Certainly it is not my intent to vote for this based on the premise that all future federal grants in aid programs, and those in the past, are unconstitutional based on what we said on this floor today. I do not think we can make that interpretation and if we are I am on record against it.

With respect to secular programs provided by the federal government now and in the future, if private schools can qualify for those, I am all for it, and I do not think we should try to write into the record at this point that this is our interpretation of this section of the constitution.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I just think it should be pointed out that there are a great many federal programs that are now available to private schools in the state of Michigan and elsewhere. It is my understanding that because of the language of the present constitution, which we are recommending be retained, the grants in those particular cases go directly from the federal government to the parochial or private institution involved, and do not pass through the state department of public instruction, or any other branch of state government because of this particular provision. But if we retain the language, I see no reason why any federal program that should encompass private or parochial institutions in its grants cannot continue as in the past if the language is retained unchanged.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: Mr. Chairman, I should like to subscribe to what Mr. Bentley has just stated, and I was not endeavoring to indicate an interpretation of this section. I was simply reporting the fact that he has just reported, and that was my only intent, namely that at the present time some of these federal aid programs, such as the food program, go directly to the public schools rather than through the state, because of this language. It was purely a question of reporting, and not a question of interpretation.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, I do not think we should, as attorneys or as delegates, try to speculate on proposed legislation of the federal government, and how it is going to affect this constitution.

We have the language here. It is for us to look at it and see if it is the best we can do. It is for the courts later on, or somebody else, when they are given the specific language of a statute or of a proposal to review it at that time and decide. I think we are getting on dangerous ground when we try to speculate.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, with regard to the specific question which was posed by Mr. Hubbs which, as I understand it, was: what would be the effect of this article, article II, section 3, regarding federal aid to education? Now, standing on its face, the question seems to suggest that there is something inimical between the wording of article II, section 3, and any program of federal aid to education as such. I would venture the judgment that there is nothing that is inconsistent between the two.

I should like, however, to make one observation with regard to the section that is before us. Mr. Romney made the point that there are 2 propositions: freedom of religion, and separation of church and state. These are not 2 inconsistent propositions, as well. The general theory upon which the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States rests, and article II, section 3, that we have before us, is that only when there is separation of church and state do you have freedom of religion, of conscience and of worship. The 2 are related, and one is an indispensable prerequisite of the other. I think we ought to remember that in answering any question with regard not only to the question of federal aid to education, but federal aid to what education or to what institution—I think we ought to leave that matter where it is now.

I think the answer has been given, as far as any official statement has been given, by Mr. Stevens, or as far as any official statement could be made. That is a matter of interpretation. But I do think we have gone as far as we ought to go in this particular segment of our deliberations on this particular question.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask Mr. Bentley to go a little further with his explanation as to federal aid funds, in view of what Mr. Romney has said about surplus food. Now, you mentioned that direct funds would not be curtailed in any degree by this. If the federal government is going to allocate funds that are to be used for private and public schools, but the state has the distribution powers of these funds, would the private religious schools, under your interpretation of this section, be excluded from those funds simply because the state is administering the funds?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, evidently I did not make myself clear to the gentleman the first time. There are several programs, the national defense education act, the surplus food program, the school lunch program, the school milk program, and I believe several other programs about which I cannot be exact at the moment which are administered by the federal government. In the case of private and parochial schools or institutions in the state of Michigan these have—in the past, under the present language and if the present language is retained presumably they would continue—been administered by the federal government and would be allocated directly by the federal government to the private or parochial institution concerned. In other words, Mr. Mahinske, if we adopt the present language, there would be no change in the present method of federal distribution directed to the private institutions, as there has not been in the past.

MR. MAHINSKE: But you are talking now about direct programs on the federal level. These programs are not administered at the state level.

MR. BENTLEY: That is right.

MR. MAHINSKE: In other words, a fund is not turned over to the state to distribute.

MR. BENTLEY: That is right.

MR. MAHINSKE: So, would you say—or would you be willing to say—what the effect of this would be on the religious schools if the funds were turned over to the state to administer, because there would be a certain amount of administrative cost to the state?

MR. BENTLEY: My understanding is that the interpretation of the present language has held that if the federal money were turned over to the state, the present language would prohibit the state from making these funds available to private or parochial institutions.

MR. MAHINSKE: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: It seems rather simple. First, we have no control here over the federal government. If it wants to grant loans or if it wants to grant aid directly, there is no question but that it may do so. This has to do with the expenditure of state money, and of course, if the expenditure of state money is involved, undoubtedly it applies.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 3? If not, it will pass and it—

Mr. Brown.

MR. T. S. BROWN: If you will give me the benefit of about 5 seconds, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Brown.

MR. T. S. BROWN: I think I had my hand up before you uttered that last sentence. I would like to ask a question of Mr. Stevens. I do not mean to be obtuse in this particular matter, but the question is this, does the present terminology of section 3 that we are now considering preclude reimbursement type payments by the state of Michigan to private families for expenditures incurred by those families in sending their children to parochial schools? And if the answer is in the affirmative, I should like some legal validation of such.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do you care to answer, Mr. Stevens?

MR. STEVENS: Well, I would be glad to tell him, in my opinion, as a curbstone opinion, it would. However, I have not particularly studied this matter, and the committee did not particularly study this matter, so I do not know what would be held in the matter if it should go to court, and I do not think anybody else does.

MR. T. S. BROWN: It would seem to me, Mr. Stevens—I have asked several people on our research staff, including Dr. Joiner, the same question, and their answer was as yours—that we do not know as to whether this would preclude reimbursement. Now, the question I am asking is, specifically, this. If we were to have a test case in the state of Michigan where a private family is sending its children to a parochial school, and on the basis of double taxation and several other bases which has been used in similar suits throughout the country, they were to ask the state for reimbursement, and the state were to grant such reimbursement, would not this particular act, if carried to its logical extreme, absolutely destroy the wall of separation between church and state?

As I indicated before I began to speak, Mr. Chairman, I do not mean to make an amendment. I just mean to point up a problem which I do not think we have sufficiently considered.

MR. STEVENS: Well, may I have your question? I do not know what part of that is a question. Are you assuming that it would violate this constitutional provision? Is that your assumption in this question?

MR. T. S. BROWN: Yes.

MR. STEVENS: If you assume that, then what do you want to know?

MR. T. S. BROWN: Has the committee given it any serious consideration, or are we patting ourselves on the back a little prematurely in this particular matter?

MR. STEVENS: Well, I do not think there is any question but that if the state paid the tuition of children in school, that it would be a violation. Now, I am not talking about scholarships which might be based on the unusual ability or capacity of the student.

MR. T. S. BROWN: No, this is a reimbursement, Mr. Stevens, for moneys laid out for tuition.

MR. STEVENS: Well, I think it is quite clear it would violate it. However, that is just my immediate curbstone opinion. I think that is the opinion of the committee, that the state should not spend money for support of parochial schools.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do you care to help with this answer, Mr. Romney?

MR. ROMNEY: Mr. Chairman, I should just like to say for Mr. Brown's information, it was the opinion of Dr. Kauper, who as we understood it was as fine an expert in this field as we could bring in, that this language did preclude such reimbursement. Now, that was his legal opinion, for whatever it is worth.

MR. T. S. BROWN: Well, then, I should just like to conclude and not take further of the committee's time. I would like to conclude by some indication of the intention of the committee in this particular regard. I certainly am in agreement with you in what you say about Dr. Kauper, Mr. Romney, and I would just like to ask any member of the committee if he feels other than what has been indicated about this particular matter? Are we agreed, for the sake of the record, that the terminology we are approving here would preclude reimbursement type payments to individual families for moneys laid out for parochial education?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. De Vries?

MR. De VRIES: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I am at a loss to understand where you get this authority, Mr. Stevens. The section says "No money shall be appropriated or drawn from the treasury for the benefit of any religious sect or society, theological or religious seminary. . . ." Now, upon this, you are basing your opinion that in the future rebates cannot be given to the parents who send their children to private schools. I do not understand how you can arrive at an opinion like this, based on this section.

MR. STEVENS: Well, Dr. De Vries, I did not write any such opinion. I was simply asked to give my personal curbstone opinion on the matter. The committee presumed that the state would not spend money to support parochial schools under this provision.

MR. De VRIES: Yes, but your personal curbstone opinion is written in the proceedings of the constitutional convention and may be used as the basis for interpretation by the supreme court, and if there is no correction of this . . .

MR. STEVENS: It is quite clear, Dr. De Vries, that I stated it as a personal, immediate, curbstone opinion. It is not based on any prolonged research, I can assure you of that.

MR. De VRIES: Well, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Brown wanted to know if anybody objected to this, and I do.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any further amendments? Any amendments to section 3? If not, it will pass.

Section 3, as amended, is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 4 reads:

[Section 4 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 4? Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I should like to yield the floor to Delegate Norris on this matter. One word was changed and one word was added in the existing provision.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do you care to comment, Mr. Norris?

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, we have before us a very fundamental article of the Constitution of the State of Michigan, and the words, of course, resemble the first article of our constitutional faith in the federal constitution. I wish to make 3 brief points in addition to the words which are used by the committee in its comment on this section.

First, with regard to the word "express" and the adding of that word. It is the intendment of that word to encompass new forms of personal communication since the 1908 constitution; to encompass the new forms that have developed in the intervening years. We now have a vast popularization of photography, of painting, of sculpture, of the song and of the theater, and it is intended that these forms of communication be protected by adding the word "express". Up to now, you have had the words "speaking, writing and publishing". The word "express" comprehends more than speaking, writing or publishing, and the word "express" is intended to carry forward the concept which has more and more frequently been used by our courts and by our people, namely the concept of freedom of expression as more than freedom of speech and of the press; so we felt that in terms of the experience of the state and the nation, much would be gained and Michigan would be taking a forward step in advancing the concept of freedom of expression by using the word "express".

Further, we add here the word "view" instead of the word "sentiment". We believe that it comprehends more than perhaps the romantic or "belles lettres" type of concept which the word "sentiment" seems to connote. By this, we mean a "view" in the sense of an interpretation or comment or criticism or evaluation or judgment or idea or concept or proposal. In this language we intend to carry forward the function of freedom of speech and press.

There is a two fold function, as Professor Zachariah Chaffey, in his classic book Free Speech in the United States, indicated. There is, first of all, the personal right of expression, the personal view; and second, and more important, perhaps, is the public's right to know, the right to receive information, the right to listen, the right to hear views, so that people may understand these views and exercise personal judgments and electoral judgments in expressing themselves at the polls, and in other forms, by which people express themselves.

The third point I wish to make is with regard to the proposal which was advanced in our committee about which the comment deals briefly, namely that there should have been added at the end of this particular section the language, "by whatever means communicated". This was urged by those who felt that the new forms of communication, particularly radio and television, ought to be comprehended on an equal status with the liberty of speech and of the press. However, when you examine this concept, you get a recognition that there is, in fact, already, regulation which, in a sense, constitutes restriction or abridgement in the sense that the very medium by which radio and television is communicated is the subject of license, and is the property of all the people. That is not the case with the printed word, and that is not the case with reference to any publishing or speaking. And it was felt that the inclusion of the words "by whatever means communicated" would get us into an area of the margin of a frontier in which more problems would be raised than solved.

However, when you use the word "express" you are protecting personal communication and personal expression of views when used over these media which have arrived upon the scene since 1908, and the words "express" and "view" would also in the future be contemplated to comprehend any form of new electronic device which we may only suspect at this time. So, we felt that an advancement of the fundamental rights of communication and expression would be accomplished by the recommended language, the insertion of the new word "express" and the changing of the word "sentiment" to "view".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mrs. Cushman.

MRS. CUSHMAN: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I notice that both the citizens research council and the preparatory commission to this constitutional convention remarked that while this section provided against the abridgement of the right of free speech by legislative action, there was nothing in the section about possible abridgement by executive action. I wonder whether any member of the committee would care to comment on that?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Does anyone from the committee care to comment on it?

Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I would suggest that from my reading of the court decisions dealing with this matter, the question of what constitutes a restriction or abridgement also comprehends executive action and the word "law" has been used in that direction, as well.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Plank.

MR. PLANK: Mr. Chairman, the secretary has an amendment I would like to have him read at this time, if it is in order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Plank offers the following amendment to section 4:

1. Amend page 2, line 6, after "press" by inserting a comma and "radio television, or other means of communication"; so that the language will then read:

> . . . no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press, radio or television or other means of communication.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Plank.

Mr. Plank.

MR. PLANK: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a few remarks at this time. Fellow delegates, I am sure a great deal of discussion has taken place in the committee about this particular section and also, perhaps, the language that I am submitting at this time. However, I would like to point out to you that I may be a little closer to the field than perhaps some of the members of the committee. I would, therefore, like to make a few remarks for their edification.

In my research, I have not found any other constitution which uses words such as we have in our constitution or as are suggested here today. This does not preclude our having them, of course. Justice Douglas says the first amendment draws no distinction between the various methods of communicating ideas. I think I would stand by that.

I would like to point out further that Delegate Norris has said that we have a licensing by the federal government which precludes any problem we might have. I want to point out a few things about licensing which are perhaps not generally known. The F.C.C., of course, does license broadcast media. However, they have no control over some actions, certain actions, of the broadcasters. For instance, no creature of congress, such as the federal communications commission, can do any of the things which the constitution forbids congress to do specifically under the present constitution. They can do nothing which abridges freedom of the press or of speech, within the limitations imposed by the first amendment. This, of course, we have been discussing, and we are agreed upon.

Freedom of speech, as guaranteed by the first amendment, includes not only speech broadcast directly by the vocal organs and the mouth, but also speech amplified by a megaphone, telephone, a public address system or by a radio transmitter. The same reasoning which makes radio broadcasting subject to control under the commerce clause makes it subject also to the protection of the first amendment. The fact that it may not have been in the actual contemplation of the constitution makers does not prevent the language of the first amendment from extending to cover anything which comes legitimately within the meaning of the constitutional language in the same manner as the word "press" has been expanded. This we will agree upon. The only thing we must now agree upon is that of recognition, and I submit to you that in the language I am presenting here in my amendment such recognition is given.

With respect to freedom of the press, several cases have arisen in connection with the granting or refusing to grant the privilege of second class mail privileges. This might appear irrelevant to you. You might wonder what that has to do with this question. All I am trying to prove to you is that the press, too, has its regulations. The F.C.C. has the same type of regulation over the broadcast media as it has over the printing media. This, too, then, would make us equal in that manner.

I would point out that it even covers magazines. In the case of Esquire and the postmaster general—some of the attorneys may want to look it up—it is Hannigan v. Esquire, Incorporated, 327 U.S. 146. In the Esquire case, the postmaster general revoked the permit of the Esquire publishing company to use the second class mail privilege on the theory that so called Petty girl pictures and smoking room humor published in the magazine did not constitute literature within the meaning of the regulations set up for the administration of the second class mail privilege and, of course, it won that case.

Most of the delegates will be familiar with the Wall Street Journal. Mr. Kilgore made a statement in the Wall Street Journal in which he said the idea of a free press would become "dangerously obscured if we try to stretch it to fit radio and television;" and, "in a medium licensed by the government we have no argument against a licensed press." That statement was made by Bernard Kilgore, Wall Street Journal president. Governor Collins immediately countered the arguments at a news conference in Boston that was covered and reported by radio and T.V. stations, the wire services, the trade press and local newspapers. His rebuttal also was given wide distribution by N.A.B., the national association of broadcasters.

I read now from a newsletter entitled Highlights, dated November 20, 1961, published for members of the N.A.B.. It reads—here's the N.A.B. president's complete statement on Mr. Kilgore's remarks:

> This is a preposterous suggestion. In the first place, to suggest that broadcasting does not now have the legal right to freedom of expression that is guaranteed to the printed word betrays a lack of knowledge about the whole subject of constitutional liberties. There is no question about whether broadcasting should or should not be given such freedom, for it already has such freedom—as the United States supreme court has already ruled. To suggest otherwise would be to try to overrule the supreme court.
>
> While it is true that broadcasting stations are licensed by the government due to technological necessity — and this, I will point out again, is the important fact — the supreme court has held that the government can no more impinge upon the freedom of the broadcaster's right of expression in its programming than it can impinge upon the publisher's right of expression. The free speech amendment in the bill of rights, the supreme court has said, applies to broadcasting as well as to printing.
>
> In a democracy, you do not secure the liberty of one form of expression by strangling it in another. If broadcasting's freedom of expression were curtailed, the way would be opened to the loss of that freedom by publishers.

In conclusion, I would just like to point out that it may be said programs specifically prohibited by statute such as lotteries and broadcasts of an indecent and obscene character are contrary to the public interest and must be avoided. But more than this, the F.C.C. holds that the licensee has a positive responsibility to provide a program service designed to meet the varied needs of the particular community in which the station is located. The primary responsibility for determining what this program service will be vests in the licensee.

Therefore, I maintain that to give the proper recognition to all media, and maintain the constitution up to date, we should include the words of my amendment. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any further questions on the amendment offered by Mr. Plank?

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr Chairman, fellow delegates, Mr. Plank has made the issue very clear for you. He has indicated that it is a matter of recognition he is asking for.

We are discussing a declaration of rights. He has admitted that the declaration of rights covers, under freedom of speech, everything in the spoken media. Therefore it is a sheer question of recognition, and whether this is a proper place to recognize these media is something for you to decide. It would seem to me that the committee having given this matter consideration, and having decided that it was not necessary, that is all we need to say.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Gover.

MR. GOVER: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Plank a question with regard to this. I am very much in favor of allowing recognition, except that there is one thing that bothers me, and that is these public address systems that go up and down the streets in mobile form making all kinds of blaring noises. Would they be considered "other media"? If so, this is something to which we would have to give consideration in this case.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do you wish to answer, Mr. Plank?

MR. PLANK: It was not my intention that they be considered "other media", but you could do that. The contention, really—or rather, the problem—that Mr. Gover is presenting is usually taken care of in a local ordinance, and I would believe it would continue to be handled in that way.

In answer to Dr. Pollock, I would say that recognition is given to the press and, therefore, I believe if you keep this up to date, or desire to do so, you should give recognition to other media as well.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I should like to remark that I am somewhat sympathetic to the objective of the amendment but I also foresee a problem. I might say it is very similar to the problem I ran into when I tried to add language to another section. It is not easy to add language to another section without getting by-products, and I would like to suggest one which I believe might militate against adding this language.

Of course, it has been pointed out that the subject matter of freedom of speech on radio and television is really covered already, so we could not really improve the law of radio and television freedom of speech. What concerns me is that it is possible that we might narrow the freedom of the press. It is conceivable that we might. The reason for that is this. If we put "press" and "radio" alongside of it—radio, television and other media of communication—we tend to put them on somewhat of a parity. We tend to make it appear as though the type of freedom would be the same or could be the same for press and radio.

Now, we notice that there is some difference in the type of freedom that exists. There is certainly more control over radio and television than there is over the press, even though there is no actual impairment of freedom of speech. But radio and television are regulated with much greater rigidity, to a much greater extent, than the press, and it has been pointed out that the reason is a sort of a mechanical reason. But I feel it is not solely a mechanical reason, that it is because there is a limitation on the amount of media available. The air is limited. Therefore, every channel and every radio station or television station has a monopoly over some frequency. Because it has a monopoly over a frequency, therefore, the government regulates it in some degree or to some extent.

Now, the reason for bringing this up is this. It seems to me, and frequently, especially in the last few days, when I hear about more and more newspapers disappearing—I understand 2 more are disappearing from Los Angeles. We know, also, that in Michigan we have had a number of them disappear. Therefore, it concerns me, if we should ever have the situation arise wherein, in one or more areas of the state, we have only one newspaper or even 2, someone may raise the argument that we have a rather monopolistic control of the news media of the press, somewhat analogous to radio and television. It seems to me that is likely to occur to someone. It has already occurred to me, in fact. But I have dismissed it, because it is the easiest thing in the world to think of it, but as you think of it more and more you know it does not appear logical, that that cannot be the way we control the press. We cannot control them in a way similar to radio and television. There must be freedom in the classical way.

I would fear that if we put press, radio and television in the same sentence, side by side, we will tend to obliterate the fact that there is a distinction and has been historically in the way we grant that freedom. For that reason I believe it is safer, again, to leave the language as it is.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I agree with Dr. Nord's sentiments on this question. We did broaden it by adding the word "express", and I think that to the extent that radio and television can be given freedom, this is done.

We realize that most of this is preempted by the federal government. There are such things as the provision that equal time must be given to political candidates, as such, and we know that even if we could put this in jeopardy, which we cannot do because of federal preemption, it would be unwise to do so. That is my opinion.

I think we have broadened it to a state which brings it up to date and yet preserves the concept we are trying to keep.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, I rise to support the Plank amendment, and when the vote is taken, I request a division of the committee by the use of the board.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment.

Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: What I have requested, Mr. Chairman, is not a recorded roll call vote. It is just a division.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Brown.

MR. T. S. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak against Mr. Plank's amendment for an additional reason, and that is somewhat of an aesthetic one. It is simply this, that the terminology which he suggested is not necessarily in the classic vein. I think that to speak of television and certain technological anachronisms in a constitution when you are dealing with the classical terminology of freedom of the press would not be fitting of this convention. I do not feel that should be done. After all, in my opinion, the essential element is the thought in the writing out of thoughts and the reporting of events, and this occurs on the basic level in the traditional freedom of the press. A newscaster, whether he be on the air or on television, must necessarily still do the same thing. I suggest that all media that derive from this particular series of actions are therefore covered by our present terminology.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the amendment offered by Mr. Plank.

Dr. De Vries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I do not think the term "press" is generic enough to cover this, Mr. Brown, and I would support the amendment.

In our own rules we refer to the press, radio and television, and other news media. I do not think the term is generic enough to cover the point.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any further comments?

Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I wonder whether Delegate Plank would care to comment on the remarks of Delegate Nord with regard to the aspect of radio and television being subject to some legal regulation.

I note in reading this section, section 4, that we are speaking in the first part, that is, preceding the semicolon, with regard to a freedom of the person in his expression and views, and in that part of the sentence appearing after the semicolon we are speaking about the passing of laws with regard to regulation, in essence. I am somewhat concerned about this particular division of this section, and somewhat persuaded by Delegate Nord's argument, although I would like to favor the Plank amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Does Delegate Plank care to comment?

MR. PLANK: I do not have the same problem, Mr. Higgs. But thank you for bringing it up.

I feel that there are certain regulations on the broadcasting industry which are necessary by virtue of the fact that we have only one spectrum and this spectrum belongs to the people and, therefore, you have certain technological regulations. Now there are others, as has been mentioned here. We have a regulation providing that both sides of the case are heard, as far as politics is concerned.

We do not think this is bad. We think this is good. In fact, I don't think it would be too bad if the same regulation were applied to the newspapers. But I fail to see how it could be. And so I feel that Dr. Nord's remarks are just not in line with the decision to be made here, at all, and as far as I am concerned I think the amendment, as I have presented it, is all encompassing, does a good job of covering the situation, brings our constitution up to date as far as the communications media are concerned, and keeps it up to date, in my estimation, for the next 50 years.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Erickson.

MR. ERICKSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak in favor of the Plank amendment. I notice in the last part of this section that this language is used, ". . . no law shall be passed to restrain . . .". We are dealing here with limitations on the legislature. We put the limitations that they cannot pass it against the press, so I think we should also put it on radio and T.V.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the amendment by Mr. Plank. A division was asked for. Is it supported?

Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, I rise to present a parliamentary inquiry. I question whether or not it is proper, in the committee of the whole, to make any use of the board before a voice vote has been taken?

I raise this question at this time because I think this matter is relatively noncontroversial. I wonder if, perhaps, the use of the board would be more appropriately reserved for use in the committee of the whole, if ever, at such time as it is impossible to tell by a voice vote or by a rising vote, conveniently, which side shall prevail.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair's answer to Mr. Wanger would be that in order to expedite the matters before us this evening we will use the board, just for that purpose.

Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Well, Mr. Chairman, I recall early in the convention that we did the same thing. Someone called for the yeas and nays in the committee of the whole, and the chairman at that time went ahead and called for them. But this is a direct violation of rule 41. The question was raised at that time that in the committee of the whole you shall not call for the yeas and nays. I think we only delay things by getting involved in these discussions.

A question might be raised after you take the voice vote, if the Chair is in doubt. Because when the committee of the whole rises, then you get your recorded roll call vote.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair might advise Mr. Marshall that this is not a recorded roll call that we are going to use the board for; it is just as a matter of expediting the work of the committee of the whole.

MR. MARSHALL: Well, as I understood Mr. Yeager, he called for a division of the house. That seems to me to call for the yeas and nays.

Now, I would have to appeal to the Chair to take into consideration rule 41 and also rule 55. This happened once before and the question was raised and I still think that I am right in regard to this particular subject.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the traditional procedure, at least in the legislature, on the request, or in committee of the whole, with respect to a request for a division, is simply the raising of hands. I think Mr. Marshall has a point. It is true that this is not, technically, a roll call vote but it is essentially the same thing. I do not think we should stand on technicalities. I think we should follow the usual pattern. If you wish a roll call vote you can take it when you come out of the committee of the whole.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, I should like to take exception to my friend, Mr. Martin. I believe that the demand is supported. Under the rules, we have a division that is in order.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. Chairman, the support lends nothing to this. Under rules 41 and 55, a division of the house is not in order. If we are going to suspend the rules we need a 2/3 vote at this stage of the game. And I do not think that even in the committee of the whole we can suspend the rules.

I think a simple voice vote is in order. If there is doubt on the part of the Chair, then we can use the board, but the vote cannot be recorded.

If we are going to call for a division of the house, we might as well institute the whole rule and have the sergeant at arms lock the doors, we'll call the roll, find out who is absent, instruct the sergeant at arms to bring these people in, and then take our vote.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair did not anticipate this situation. (laughter) I was going to ask Mr. Wanger if he will withdraw his inquiry, and we will go back to the rules of the committee of the whole.

Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I beg your pardon, Mr. Chairman. I did not raise a point of order. I merely asked a question by way of parliamentary inquiry. If there is any reason why it should be withdrawn, I shall be glad to do so. Is that what the Chair requested?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Would you do that, please?

MR. WANGER: Yes, I will.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Thank you, the inquiry is withdrawn.

The question now is on the amendment to section 4 offered by Mr. Plank. A division of the house was asked for. Is it supported?

Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, on a point of information. could we ask that the secretary read the amendment again before we vote on it?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Plank's amendment is as follows:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 476.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: Mr. Chairman, I have sent to the secretary an amendment to the present amendment. Is it in order for that to be read at this time?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Yes, it is.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Upton offers the following amendment to the amendment offered by Mr. Plank:

1. Amend the amendment after "television,", by striking out "or other means of communication" and inserting "or other news media"; so the language will then read, ". . . no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press, radio, television, or other means of communication or other news media."

MR. UPTON: No, Mr. Secretary. You are supposed to omit "or other means of communication", and insert the wording I proposed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Pardon me, Mr. Upton, I misinterpreted your amendment. Mr. Upton offers the amendment to the amendment to strike out "or other means of communication" and insert in lieu thereof "or other news media"; so the language will then read, ". . . no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press, radio, television, or other news media."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on Mr. Upton's amendment to the Plank amendment.

MR. UPTON: Mr. Chairman, may I explain why I offer this amendment?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Proceed.

MR. UPTON: It is offered, Mr. Chairman, mainly as a result of my thinking about Mr. Gover's comments. I would think that this might open up the way by which it would be impossible for local ordinance control of such things as sound trucks if we allow any other means of communication to be granted by the constitution.

With respect to Dr. De Vries' comment that we have recognized in our own rules other news media, I thought this might be appropriate to consider in relation to the problem now before us.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I feel there is another problem added in this new language, for this reason. The language as proposed is "or other news media". That implies that what goes before will be "news media". That is obvious. But unfortunately it is not so, because some of the words that appear before may relate to news media but others certainly do not. For example, speech. Liberty of speech is one of the things that is included in this list. And if you say liberty of speech "or other news media", I believe you are beginning to decrease the liberty of speech.

It seems to me the first amendment will limit or tend to limit the freedom the press. And the second one, I think, will tend to limit freedom of speech. I fear that if we have any other amendments we may limit some other freedoms—we do not even know what they are. The best thing, I still think, is to leave it as it is.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: Mr. Chairman, I look at this in the following way. The word "or" after speech defines speech or other news media. Press is a news medium, as are radio and T.V. My interpretation of the word "or" separates that problem about which Dr. Nord has spoken.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Upton.

Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask Dr. Pollock a question if I may. Dr. Pollock, as the chairman of the committee, I imagine that this matter must have been brought to your attention at the time the deliberations were going on in the committee. Is this true?

MR. POLLOCK: I thought I had already explained that it was considered by the committee and we felt that it was not necessary.

MR. FAXON: And was this the unanimous approval of the committee? Was the feeling of the committee unanimous in this respect?

MR. POLLOCK: It was.

MR. FAXON: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, in speaking in opposition to the Upton amendment, I would just point out to Mr. Upton that everything that is on radio and T.V. is not news, either. It is a much broader concept than this. I think Dr. Nord is right in saying that this would be restrictive.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Upton to the Plank amendment. As many as are in favor of the amendment to the amendment will signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment to the amendment is not adopted.

The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Plank.

Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to have a ruling of the Chair, with the cooperation of our able secretary, as to the right of this body, in the committee of the whole, upon proper demand, to have a division.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, while you are considering this ruling, might I simply call to your attention rule 64.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Van Dusen, I wish you would read rule 64.

MR. VAN DUSEN: The portion of it, Mr. Chairman, that I consider pertinent is the second paragraph which reads as follows:

> A division of the convention may be had on the demand of 10 delegates, or a roll call of the convention may be demanded by a vote of 1/5 of the delegates present on any pending question. When a division of the convention is ordered, a rising vote shall be taken or the voting machine may be used if provided, and the president shall declare the result.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That is when in convention but not in committee of the whole.

MR. VAN DUSEN: The rules of the convention, Mr. Chairman, apply in the committee of the whole except as otherwise specifically provided.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair still rules that on the amendment of Mr. Plank, a division of the house was asked for, and the Chair was about to ask for support, if there were 10 or more members who would support it, then it would be taken by a rising vote.

Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, are you using rule 64?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: No.

MR. MARSHALL: Well, you said if 10 people supported it, then a roll call would be ordered.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Oh, I'm sorry.

MR. MARSHALL: I just want to get the rules clear. It took me too long to get them and now that I have them I want to get them straight.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Is the demand for the division supported?

Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: Mr. Chairman, I am sorry, but I am still in doubt. Rule 41 does say that:

> The rules of the convention shall be observed in the committee of the whole, so far as they may be applicable, except that it cannot adjourn the convention, the previous question shall not be ordered, the yeas and nays shall not be called. . . .

To me, that is a division of the house.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair wishes to advise that no roll call is being taken here. All we are asking for is the yeas and nays, the number of yeas and nays. There will be no record made of this vote in committee of the whole.

Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I would merely like to point out to the Chair that on December 21, when we were in committee of the whole, and a vote was taken on the amendment then before us, I raised a point of order against the use of the machine on the ground that other people are now questioning, and the then occupant of the Chair ruled against the point of order.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, let me rise in order to make myself clear. I am not trying to bog down the progress of this committee, nor to belabor this issue. The only thing is this. There are some things we do not want to get into. I think the rule is clear. I disagreed with the chairman at the time refered to by Mr. Bentley.

I do not think we should get in a position of having recorded roll call votes in the committee of the whole on top of unlimited debate, when you get your recorded roll call vote when the committee of the whole rises. That is the only point I am trying to make.

I think rule 41 is clear. Now, if the Chair wants to overrule it, I am not going to say another word. But this is twice that the question has been raised. You can have it now, and you also can have it—a recorded roll call vote—when the committee of the whole rises.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair wishes to advise, with the advice and consent of the secretary, that when the committee rises, unless we take a vote on this amendment, unless the amendment is adopted, the amendment cannot be up for consideration then for adoption, when the committee rises.

Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Mr. Chairman, is it not the intention of the Chair, in using the machine, not to record the vote, but merely to count the tally?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That is right.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: And this is allowable under rule 64?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That is right.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: The only thing that I can understand is that it is not allowed under rule 41 to have a recorded tally of votes. So that if we use the machine as you have so ruled, and do not record the vote, but merely count it and then erase it, we will be complying with the rules of the convention as they are set out in the provisions of rule 64.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That is right.

Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Mr. Chairman, I want to rise on a technical question. If you are going to use the machine simply for the purpose of counting the tally, I want to suggest to the Chair that you lock the machine and everyone vote, and then that you turn the machine on and the votes will show.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That was the intention. It will be done unless there are objections.

Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Have you made a ruling, Mr. Chairman? If you have, I wish under another rule to appeal the ruling of the Chair, because the matter is of serious concern to me.

The only reason that I raise this question is this. Under rule 41, you call for the yeas and nays. Now, if the Chair is in doubt you can have a show of hands. And the only thing I am trying to avoid is this. I hope the other delegates will listen to this. I wish to avoid our getting involved in having recorded roll call votes in the committee of the whole, as I stated earlier, and then having them again after the committee of the whole rises. This is the only question before us. Now, what I would like to ask is this. What is the decision of the Chair? That is all I wish to have at this time.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Marshall, the point here was this. On the amendment offered by Mr. Plank someone demanded a division. I believe it was Mr. Yeager. A division of the house was requested, a division of the committee. Do you feel that is proper?

MR. MARSHALL: I do not think it is proper in the committee of the whole, under rule 41.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Marshall was implying here that by taking a vote on the board we would be taking a recorded roll call vote. As I see it, we are are not taking a recorded roll call vote. We are simply taking a division.

Now, some of us are situated in the house in such a way that it is difficult to see how everyone votes, and if we use the board it is easier to exchange information on how other people are voting. (laughter) There will be no record made of it . . .

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The committee will be in order.

MR. MARSHALL: In answer to Delegate Yeager, I do not think . . .

MR. YEAGER: I am not quite finished, Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I'm sorry.

MR. YEAGER: As I understand it, Mr. Chairman, the machine simply runs a complete tally, and we can get some idea of what other people are doing in this committee. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, the only question that I raise, and let me repeat it for the last time, is this. And then I want a ruling from the Chair. It is not a question of knowing how we vote; but when the committee of the whole rises, you can have a roll call vote and everyone will know how everyone else votes. My only purpose in raising this question is that I just happen to think that rule 41 means what it says. If it does not mean what it says—and I want to know; I want a ruling from the Chair—I would hope we will not be getting bogged down and find ourselves in the position of using the machine, in addition to unlimited debate, in the committee of the whole.

Now, my interpretation of rule 41, and I think it is the interpretation of others, or was when it was raised before as a question, is that a division of the house cannot be called. You call for the yeas and nays. And I should like a ruling from the Chair.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Marshall and members of the committee, Mr. Chase has been asked to make a few brief remarks.

SECRETARY CHASE: I think perhaps some of the difficulty, Mr. Marshall, comes from the fact that some of the delegates are acquainted with the use of the voting machine in the house of representatives here in Lansing, where, in the committee of the whole, repeatedly, the voting machine is used for the ascertainment of the number of votes in a division. The tally is not recorded other than the number that is given "yes" and the number that is given "no".

Now, the secretary would like to add that in this machine we will put only one copy of the roll call. In order to get a record vote we must have 2 copies of the roll call here, and the machine records on the second copy, by carbon, the yeas and nays by name. When we use only one copy, there will be no record, and the only thing we will have when we are finished is the number of "yes's" and the number of "no's" and the number not voting.

MR. MARSHALL: Well, up until now, Mr. Chase, and that was the time that Mr. Bentley and I objected, the Chair has put the question on a voice vote and if there was any doubt a show of hands was called for. Now, if we are going to get into the habit of using the machine, I think we are going to be bogged down, and I think every time you have an issue come to the floor you will be using the machine. It is not a question of my not wanting to have a roll call vote.

Is this the ruling of the Chair, then?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: It is not. The Chair did not rule that we should use the board. It was suggested. A demand was made for a division. Is the demand for the division seconded? Those in favor will rise.

The demand is supported.

Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. Chairman, under rule 64 it specifically says "a division of the convention". We are not the convention at the present time. We are the committee of the whole. Under rule 41 it specifically says, "The rules of the convention shall be observed in the committee of the whole, so far as they may be applicable," and it goes on and on and on.

At page 48, on the third line, it says, talking about motions that are not in order, rule 41 provides, ". . . or for a call of the convention. . . ." and it says it shall not be in order. Now, if we are going to start disregarding our rules, we might as well start right now and throw this book right out the window.

If we are going to start calling for divisions and using the board when a voice vote may obviously vote this thing down or in, why start using the board when it can be determined one way or the other by a voice vote whether or not the Chair is in doubt.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair did not say that we would use the board.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, I am just arguing against using the board at this point. We would be only opening the door to using the board on every vote in committee of the whole.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: We have had a request for a division of the committee and it was supported.

MR. MAHINSKE: I do not believe that is in order. I do not believe a division is in order.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: A division is in order.

Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: The request, Mr. Chairman, was for using the board.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Well, the Chair will rule that the board will not be used.

Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I have sat here rather quietly and I think I have been accused, by implication, with respect to the ruling that I made on the Thursday prior to Christmas, when I did rule that the use of the board was in order in committee of the whole. I still feel that I was right at that time. This business of asking for a record roll call vote has nothing to do with the use of the machine.

Now, Mr. Marshall has said over and over that we would bog down the proceedings if we developed the habit of using the machine to count the vote. I think it is just the contrary. I think the use of this mechanical tabulator is to expedite our proceedings, not to slow them up.

Mr. Mahinske talks about a call of the house and so on. That is not involved here. That is an elaborate procedure that is used only in the convention and not in committee of the whole.

I believe that the use of the voting machine as a means of finding out the relative number of yes and no votes on any given proposition is entirely within the rules. It is not a record roll call. It is not a roll call of any sort. It is just a speedy way to count.

I do not know just where we stand at the moment. The Chair made a ruling once comparable to the ruling that I made a few weeks ago and now I understand he has sort of withdrawn that ruling and has said that we will go to a show of hands. But I think if we want to get out of here on March 31, it would be to our advantage to get to using this equipment that has been supplied here. Nobody is going to take a picture of it. Nobody is going to use it later. It is just a way to speed things along.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I should like to support all that Delegate Powell has said. Customarily, when you ask for a division, it refers to a tally on the board, not a record roll call.

It has been customary through the years, so far as legislative procedure is concerned, if at any time the chairman of the committee of the whole is in doubt, he asks for this division tallied on the board. And, if necessary, I am going to move that the division be on the board.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: In response to what was said by Mr. Powell, may I say this. I believe the call was for yeas and nays. And to me this is a matter of putting your voting button in a position to show a red light or a green one.

You say it is not a roll call vote, but everybody knows and will be able to tell which way you voted, including the press. I am not objecting to a roll call vote in the convention, but I do not believe that this is in order in committee of the whole. Therefore, I object to using the board, or even to calling for a roll call vote or a division of the house before you, Mr. Chairman, determine there is a question.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: A division has been demanded and it has been seconded. The question is on the amendment by Mr. Plank. As many as are in favor of the amendment will please signify by saying aye. Opposed, no. The Chair is in doubt. (laughter) Those in favor of the amendment of Mr. Plank will please rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Seventy-three.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The majority of the members-elect having voted for the amendment, the amendment is adopted.

I might suggest at this time a little chore for Mr. Van Dusen —to straighten out this situation. (laughter)

Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, I think in defense of these rules, with which I do have some familiarity, both your ruling that a rising vote would be taken on the question of the division, and Mr. Powell's ruling that the machine would be used, a division having been called for, were correct because rule 64 states, "When a division of the convention is ordered, a rising vote shall be taken or the voting machine may be used, if provided. . . ." Now, that leaves it, I think, in the discretion of the Chair as to which device he chooses to employ in taking the division of the committee of the whole, and there is no question whatever but that a division of the committee of the whole is appropriate under the rules.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I believe you have not put the question on the section, as amended.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Upton's amendment was voted down on a voice vote.

MR. POLLOCK: Yes, Mr. Chairman, but Mr. Plank's amendment was adopted.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Yes, adopted.

MR. POLLOCK: All right, now how about the section.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Well, that is coming next. (laughter) Are there any further amendments to section 4?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Wanger offers the following amendment to section 4:

1. Amend page 2, line 6, after "press,", by inserting "which liberty shall include"; so that the language would then read: "no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press, which liberty shall include radio, television, or other means of communication."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, this amendment is submitted to clear up a problem which might otherwise arise under the amendment which has just been adopted by the committee.

The words "liberty of speech" and "liberty of press" have unique historical and legal meaning. Literally construed, Mr. Plank's amendment would also create the liberty of radio, the liberty of television, the liberty of other means of communication. This, I am sure, was not the literal intent, and I think it would be possible to forestall this merely by the inclusion of the words which I offer as an amendment at this time, in other words, "which liberty shall include" the media which have just been added.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Wanger. In response to a request that the amendment be reread, the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Wanger's amendment is as follows:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Brown.

MR. T. S. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I should just like to highlight my prior objection to the amendment we passed—Mr. Plank's amendment—by asking Mr. Wanger if, according to his amendment, this would include subliminal communication and nonverbal communication? There are things of this nature and if we can answer these questions satisfactorily, I would be very happy.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, my amendment was presented merely to perfect the one which this committee already adopted. I shared some of the concern that was expressed about the potential problem which was just raised, and this amendment is not directed at that problem whatsoever. It is, rather, directed to the problem which I stated, that of perfecting the form of the amendment to make it clear that we are not here creating liberties hitherto unknown to the law, but are merely including in the present liberties communication media which have developed since the time of the adoption of the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. Since the language of the Wanger amendment does not include the language of the Plank amendment which we have adopted, would the passage of the Wanger amendment cancel out the Plank amendment?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: No, not at all, I am advised.

MR. BENTLEY: Then would the Wanger amendment not have to be amended to include the Plank amendment?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: No.

MR. BENTLEY: I wonder, Mr. Chairman, whether the secretary would read the Wanger amendment with the language of the Plank amendment included so we can understand it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The secretary just did so, but he will do so again.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Wanger's amendment is as follows:

Bearing in mind the adoption of the Plank amendment which has already been agreed to, the amendment reads:

1. Amend page 2, line 6, after the word "press" and between that and the language of the Plank amendment, by inserting "which liberty shall include"; so that the language will read, ". . . and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press, which liberty shall include radio, television, or other means of communication."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, so that we do not become confused, I wonder whether you would have read the proposed Wanger amendment with the Plank amendment that has already been adopted.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The secretary just read it, Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Well, there is other language there that is rather confusing to me. Is he amending the Plank amendment, or is Mr. Wanger amending the proposal as it came before us from the committee?

SECRETARY CHASE: May the secretary clarify the situation. Mr. Plank's amendment to add at the end of the line the words "radio, television, or other means of communication" was adopted.

Mr. Wanger now moves to insert between the word "press" and the language of the Plank amendment the words "which liberty shall include"; so that the language will then read, ". . . and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press, which liberty shall include radio, television, or other means of communication."

MR. HOXIE: In other words, Mr. Chairman, as I understand it, if the Wanger amendment is adopted, the other language pertaining to the Plank amendment is deleted, is that correct?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: No, it is not deleted. It is just added to it.

Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Hoxie, perhaps I can clarify this matter by saying that I would not have offered my amendment if Mr. Plank's amendment had not passed. This is merely to further perfect the Plank amendment which this body indicated it was in favor of previously.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I should like to speak in favor of the Wanger amendment. I believe it satisfies the objection that I made before, and I believe it is very advantageous to do so. As a matter of fact, it seems to me it is an admirable solution to the problem that has been raised in that it will satisfy the desire of Mr. Plank which I believe all of us feel is the right thing to do if we can do it. At the same time, it will make it absolutely crystal clear that we are not inventing new types of liberty which are on an exact par, or parity, I should say, with the classical types of liberty.

I think it is important that we do make this kind of distinction, because as Mr. Wanger pointed out, these words "no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press" are extremely crucial legal words. They don't just mean what they say, as such. They have been construed for hundreds of years and they have a lot, if not everything, to do with the law of defamation. They have to do with the rule that you cannot get an injunction to restrain in advance libel or slander. And "speech" is the slander part, and "press" is the libel part. There aren't any other parts, according to the common law of the subject.

And, therefore, since every single word in that final clause has a technical interpretation that is not obvious on the face of it, it is important that if we do add these words, "by radio, television" and so on, to put them in a somewhat different form and it seems to me that the form suggested by Mr. Wanger is admirably adapted to do what it seeks to do.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I was going to ask Dr. Nord a question, but he has already answered it. Therefore, I would simply like to speak in favor of Mr. Wanger's amendment since, if I understand this correctly, Dr. Nord, this will maintain our historic definition of the liberty of speech and of the press, and also make it clear that we wish to include the radio, T.V. and other means of communication, without jeopardizing, in any way, our established and historic interpretations. Is that correct?

MR. NORD: Mr. Downs, that is my interpretation.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, I somewhat hesitate to ask this question, but I would like to ask Dr. Pollock if the committee considered putting a period after the word "speech".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: No, the committee did not.

MR. HIGGS: I wonder whether, in view of the fact that the first section includes the words "Every person may freely speak, write,"—and we inserted the word "express"—whether what we are really driving at, in the last clause, is that "no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge such liberty of speech" as is defined in the first part of the section. This would treat all means of communication equally. I do not propose that as an amendment. I just throw it out for thought.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger. As many as are in favor of the amendment will signify by saying aye. Opposed?

The amendment is adopted.

Are there any further amendments?

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee now rise and report to the convention.

I retract that motion, Mr. Chairman, until you have put the final question.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any further amendments to section 4?

Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. Chairman, our debate this evening has been on such a high level that I hesitate to bring anything trivial into the discussion, but I think it should be settled now, and the question I raise is with regard to the use of the term "section 1, section 2, section 3," and so forth. It happens that I am on the committee on style and drafting. The latest word that I heard was that no committee proposal was to contain that designation.

Now, I can see that with a whole detailed article like this with some, I believe, 22 sections, maybe it does expedite our work here tonight if we have them enumerated or labeled. But I understand that somewhere along the line we are to divest ourselves of all this nomenclature and then, after the committee on style and drafting has received these various sections the second time, they will arrange them in proper sequence. There has been a point made here that this should be article I instead of article II. I think that is one of the decisions that should first be made by the committee on style and drafting after second consideration.

I do not know who should rule on this, whether we should have a suggestion from the secretary or wait until we are back in convention and have the president say a word to us, or what. But I thought if the reference to sections should be stricken out in committee of the whole, I had better bring this up now before the committee rises.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, may I suggest that the practical solution is that these section numbers be construed for identification facility, knowing that the committee on style and drafting has the right to change them and that we can call upon the Chair to make a further ruling at our session tomorrow. I believe the question was properly raised, but I think it could be solved that way very practically.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Will the Chair put the final question?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Before you do that, Mr. Chairman, if I may delay the committee for a moment, let me say that I subscribe to what Delegate Downs has said. When there are multiple sections, for convenience sake, we would like to have the numbering go back to the committee on style and drafting in the early stages through second reading. It will help us and it will help the convention. I think, if the secretary agrees with the Chair, that that could be just an understanding.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any further amendments to section 4?

If not, it will—

Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Now, Mr. Chairman, my colleague tells me one thing and I thought it was another. Is Mr. Pollock's motion that the committee now rise put aside? Was that motion put aside until we have acted upon this?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Yes. Are there any further amendments?

MR. FAXON: I just wish to ask this question, Mr. Chairman. I am a little bit disturbed at the haste at which we are changing one of these sections of the constitution which has been included in that document for so long a time.

We heard testimony this afternoon from somebody who pointed out that these little sections have a great deal of interpretation behind them. And now we are proceeding to add language, and there have been certain doubts expressed. Certain of the delegates have asked questions about the validity of this language, about its effectiveness in accomplishing what we hope it will accomplish.

We are now being asked to pass this on to the committee on style and drafting after the declaration of rights committee unanimously approved the report as it was originally put before us.

Now, I would at least like the opportunity to have the question on this put over until tomorrow, at the very least, so that the people in the research department and other people could give us some advice as to what further interpretations might be made as far as this section is concerned.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair might advise that we will be on general orders on this again tomorrow, so any further action can be taken on changing these numbers, if the committee so desires.

MR. FAXON: Well, will this be the last action on this, Mr. Chairman, or will we have another opportunity?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: No.

MR. FAXON: I mean just in terms of the committee of the whole?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: We have all these sections to go through.

MR. FAXON: My question is this, Mr. Chairman. If we act upon this now, will we be able to consider this again tomorrow?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Surely. Are there any further amendments?

Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to appeal from your decision in this instance. I do not think we will reconsider these tomorrow, the first sections set out here numbered 1 to 4.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Was that your question, Mr. Faxon?

MR. FAXON: Yes, that is what I asked.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: I'm sorry; I misunderstood you. The Chair wishes to advise that tomorrow, if you care to reconsider anything that was done here, that can be done.

MR. FAXON: Now, that means that we will not take action on this now?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Will the committee be in order, please. Mr. Faxon, I wish to advise that when we are through with this proposal—we have been going through here with amendments to sections—when we are through with the entire proposal the question then will be, are there any amendments to the body of the proposal, and at that time you will have an opportunity to offer your amendment.

MR. FAXON: Now, would that be on all of the amendments?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Yes. After we have completed all the sections, then the question will be: are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? And at that time you can offer some changes.

Are there any further amendments to section 4?

Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would like to ask some questions of Dr. Pollock, before you put the revised section, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do you care to answer them, Dr. Pollock?

MR. POLLOCK: Surely.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Proceed, Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Dr. Pollock, obviously from your statement you have considered these items before in the committee and rejected them and they were not included in your committee report. Now, are you satisfied, in view of the hasty action we have taken here tonight, with the changes we have had with respect to the end of this sentence, especially with reference to the last 3 words, the last phrase here, "or other means of communication"—"means" being an all inclusive word?

MR. POLLOCK: No, I am not satisfied. I am not satisfied, but I bow to the will of this committee, of course.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any further amendments to section 4? If not, it will pass.

Section 4, as amended, is passed.

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report to the convention.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Before I put the motion, the Chair would like to express gratitude for your cooperation in a matter of such great importance as that before us this evening. Thank you very much.

The question is on the motion that the committee of the whole rise and report to the convention. As many as are in favor signify by saying aye. Opposed?

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration several proposals. The secretary will make a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 13, A proposal respecting the physically, mentally or otherwise seriously handicapped; Committee Proposal 14, A proposal pertaining to the preamble to the constitution; and reports these 2 committee proposals back to the convention without amendment and with the recommendation that they do pass.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Pursuant to rule 57, Committee Proposal 13 and Committee Proposal 14 are referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Committee Proposal 13 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 462.

For Committee Proposal 14 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 464.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 15, A proposal to amend article II pertaining to the declaration of rights; has adopted certain amendments to this proposal; and has come to no final resolution thereon.

This completes the report of the committee of the whole, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. DeVries.

MR. De VRIES: Mr. President, I rise to a question of personal privilege. In the committee of the whole Mr. Stevens was asked for an interpretation by Mr. T. S. Brown of article II, section 3 of this constitution. Mr. Bentley further added to this interpretation, which was that the state could not administer federal grant in aid programs and also an interpretation was made regarding rebates to parents sending children to parochial schools.

Mr. Brown then asked what seemed to be a rhetorical question. Paraphrased, it went something like this, are there any objections or disagreements with this interpretation of this section of the constitution? I objected. So, the record can be interpreted as follows: 143 people have given tacit approval to these interpretations and one has objected. I do not know if I disagree with the interpretation rendered by Mr. Stevens. All I know is that I strongly object to this procedure.

The committee report and the recommendations will appear in the record of the debates of this convention for future interpretations. I approve article II, section 3, but I do not approve of off the cuff interpretations. We are not supreme court justices. We are not interpreting our own committee proposals. And we are not making tacit votes in answer to questions on which we do not really have a chance to vote.

As I understand what happened, Delegate Brown, in effect, has cast 143 silent votes on the interpretation of article II, section 3, and to this procedure I strongly object.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Brown.

MR. T. S. BROWN: Mr. President, the procedural analysis given by Dr. DeVries in relation to what I did when I was on the floor is absolutely 100 per cent correct. But I think, however, in order to preclude any hostile feelings, if this particular problem arises again—and I think it shall—that we should request our rules and resolutions committee to set up some certain format for those occasions wherein, from a legal point of view, it may seem logical in fact necessary for an expression of sentiment on the part of the delegates concerning a particular proposition, the exact terminology of which does not appear in the constitution.

I think this is a rather serious problem, and although we certainly do not mean to usurp the prerogatives of our supreme court, I think the lawyers among us will agree that on many occasions the supreme court will look back to our verbatim testimony and the debates on the floor of this convention in order to give them guide lines in borderline cases.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. President, Delegate DeVries, if I had been asked the simple question: would this preclude, and so forth, I would have answered, "I don't know." But since Mr. Brown asked me to state my opinion, it seemed only polite that I should tell him what it was, although I do not think it has any significance or importance.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. President, for the record but not to take up the time of the convention, I should like to state that I agree wholeheartedly with Dr. DeVries.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: Mr. President, I think that the record will also show the count was not 143. I also stated my feelings in opposition to the interpretation previously made.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. President, regardless of what the record shows, one way or another, I think it is a healthy thing that the delegates ask the convention committee chairmen, and so forth, for their opinions concerning what they think various things mean, so that we can use this as a guide line in voting one way or another, and at the same time we should keep under consideration the fact that in borderline cases the supreme court will look to our deliberations and will look to the record containing our voiced intent or expression of intent as to what these sections mean.

I can draw only one conclusion from what Mr. Bentley said and that is, that under the wording of this provision, that if federal funds are given to the state for administration, they cannot be used for private schools and must be used for public schools only. I do not see how I can draw any other conclusion from a statement like that. It is on the record as to what his intent, at least, is, as to what this section means, his understanding and interpretation of it.

I do not think that holding these things back from each other is going to do any good, and I say that because if I had not known that, I would have voted yes for this, and knowing it, I will vote no on it.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, when Mr. Mahinske asked me for my opinion, I gave him what I understood was the practice and has been the practice up to this time. I wonder whether Dr. DeVries was objecting to my interpretation or only to the interpretation of other delegates to the question of tax rebate.

I did not understand that he was objecting to the question that federal funds, if given to the state, could not be used for parochial or private institutions.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Dr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Further to the comment of Delegate Bentley, Mr. President, I am not objecting to asking questions. I am objecting to the procedure when Mr. Brown says, "Are there any objections to this interpretation?" and, in effect, saying, "I hear none, therefore it passes." That is what I object to. I do not object to Mr. Stevens giving an opinion, or Mr. Bentley, but I do not want rhetorical questions asked and then, because there is no objection, this convention is on record as approving that interpretation.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President, I wish to raise a question as a point of information. Under article II, declaration of rights, section 4, relating to liberty of speech and press, to which an amendment was adopted by the committee of the whole, it appears that in our proceedings when the president took the Chair and the report of the chairman of the committee of the whole was made, we did not adopt the amendment which was endorsed by the committee of the whole. It is my belief that we did not comply with the proper action by adopting the report of the committee of the whole, which would be the amendment to section 4.

Now, it is true that on the balance of the article, that we asked for leave to sit again. The committee rose, but as far as the amendment is concerned, we did adopt it in committee of the whole and it should have been the question before this body, when the president took the Chair, whether we concur in the amendment adopted by the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: It is my understanding, Mr. Hoxie, that the report of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections includes 22 sections and one unnumbered of article II. The committee of the whole proceeded to discuss 4 sections of that article, the fifth section of which will be taken up in the committee of the whole tomorrow. When the complete article is debated and is disposed of by the committee of the whole, then the convention will be called upon to accept the amendments as they were offered to the various sections of this article.

At the present time there has been an amendment to section 3 and there has been an amendment to section 4. They will be acted upon when the entire article is passed by the committee of the whole. Are there any further questions?

Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The meeting of the committee on public information scheduled for following the session this evening has been postponed until further notice. Ink White, chairman.

The committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E tomorrow morning at 8:30. D. Hale Brake, chairman.

The subcommittee on higher education of the committee on education will meet in room K tomorrow, Tuesday, at 9:00 o'clock a.m. Mr. Bonisteel, chairman.

The committee on judicial branch will meet in room B tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. Mr. Robert J. Danhof, chairman.

Will you please note the following. The committee on local government, the subcommittee on metropolitan government, has given notice of a meeting scheduled for tomorrow at 10:30. That meeting will be held in room I. Notice of this meeting appears on the composite calendar.

The committee on administration, scheduled to meet tomorrow, has advanced the time of meeting from 1:15 to 12:45 tomorrow. The committee on administration meets tomorrow at 12:45. Walter DeVries, chairman.

The committee on education will meet Thursday at 10:30 a.m. in room K.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, the committee on rules and resolutions will meet as scheduled, immediately following the session, in room I. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, the committee on executive branch will hold its usual meetings at 10:30 a.m. on Tuesday, tomorrow, and at 8:30 on Wednesday.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mrs. Elliott.

MRS. DAISY ELLIOTT: Mr. President, I move that the convention do now adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion for adjournment. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

We are adjourned until 2:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

[Whereupon at 10:45 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 2:00 o'clock p.m. Tuesday, January 9, 1962.]

FIFTY-THIRD DAY

Tuesday, January 9, 1962, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation today will be given by the Reverend E. W. Martin, District Superintendent of the Churches of the Nazarene of Eastern District, Pontiac.

Will you please rise.

REVEREND MARTIN: Eternal God, our Father, we are grateful for the providences that allow us to come together in this convention. We are grateful to Thee for Thy mercies and for the prosperity that Thou hast given, for these freedoms that we have inherited and preserved.

We are keenly aware, as we gather here, that not all are so favored. We are reminded of the third of the earth under the domination — the slavery — of communism. We are reminded, again, that a third of the people of the world are presently in revolution. We are grateful that we are included in that third enjoying freedom. We recognize that there is a price to pay for this freedom, that there is maintenance required. Grant that as those assembled here meet together in this convention, they may be guided by Thy eternal wisdom and that we may make provision not just for the immediate present but for generations to come. Thy holy word encourages us to ask for wisdom, and so we come in confidence and faith, believing that Thou wilt grant it.

Grant that all personal considerations may be submerged for the greater good, and grant that we may be willing to give ourselves in the dedication that is required in this day of darkness, this day when some have doubted.

Give us faith to carry on believing that God will prosper those who labor unselfishly and sincerely. This we ask for the sake of freedom in Thy holy name. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present will please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is now locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave:

Mr. Thomson has been ordered by his physician to remain at home for the balance of this week and requests to be excused for the remainder of this week's sessions.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the request is granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Mr. Thomson.

Absent without leave: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: There is a wonderful attendance today. Thank you very much.

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, reports back to the convention Delegate Proposal 1396, A proposal to require all administrative regulations to be submitted to the legislature; with the recommendation that the proposal be referred to the committee on legislative powers.

John B. Martin, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, it will be referred.

Hearing none, Delegate Proposal 1396 is referred to the committee on legislative powers.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only standing committee report, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees. The Chair recognizes Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President and members of the convention, since the formation of the committee on emerging problems, many of the delegates have asked just what the duties of this committee are. In order to better understand the function of the committee, it might be well to review the history of its formation.

In one of the early sessions of the convention, Dr. Pollock introduced a resolution [Resolution 30] that a select committee should be appointed in order to take jurisdiction over any problems that might emerge out of delegate proposals which were not covered by particular assignments.

As each delegate knows, the present constitution has been divided into areas and assigned to 9 substantive committees, and the basis of their work so far has been a revision of the 1908 constitution. As delegate proposals came in, it was evident that there were new problems being introduced which did not fall within the framework of the present constitution, and thus did not have any particular basis of assignment to a substantive committee.

However, the president has made assignments of these new emerging problems to various substantive committees, but most of the committees were engrossed in making a revision of the present articles and sections of the constitution, and have not fully investigated some of these emerging problems.

This committee was finally formed the last of December. Since that time some problems have been turned over to the committee for their investigation. In order that the convention might know some of these areas and to better understand the functions of the committee, the following are some of the matters now being investigated by the committee:

1. Pensions——Mr. Claud Erickson, who is a member of this committee, has suggested that pension funds are rapidly becoming one of the main problems of our economy because of the large sums of money which are being accumulated and the number of people being covered by pensions. It is estimated that there are more than 90 million workers and their dependents presently covered by employee benefit plans and that the amount of money in the various plans is nearly $100 billion. In 1958 congress passed an antifraud act for policing these funds, but it has not proven adequate. It is felt that the matter of pension funds, both public and private, which are regulated solely within the state of Michigan, would be a proper subject for investigation by this committee.

2. Intergovernmental relations — This problem has been looked into to some extent by the committee on local government, but only in a limited way, and their investigation did not go beyond local government. Mrs. Dorothy Judd, a member of the committee on local government, has obtained information on intergovernmental relations which goes beyond local government into state, national and international relations. She has given the material to this committee for investigation.

3. Natural resources, particularly water resources — Mrs. Judd was also interested in this area and has obtained a great deal of information in regard to the preservation of our water resources in the state of Michigan. She has obtained a lot of material and has turned this over to the committee for investigation.

4. Public health — There is nothing in the present constitution about public health for it has always been considered a part of the police power, and it might be questionable whether any mention should be made in the new constitution. However, medical sources have suggested that this matter be investigated and Mrs. Judd also has obtained some information on this subject which she has turned over to the committee.

5. Administrative procedures — This is an area in which administrative agencies have taken over a great many functions of the courts, and it is felt that this matter should be investigated to see whether or not any constitutional provision is necessary for the regulation and jurisdiction of such agencies.

6. Atomic energy — This is a problem which is bound to arise in the future because of radioactive fallout and other dangers to the people of Michigan. It is felt that this area should be investigated to find out if it is necessary to make provision for protection of the people from this danger.

7. States rights — It has been suggested that this committee make an investigation of the possibility of returning to the state of Michigan some of the services and responsibilities which have now been usurped by the federal government.

8. Separation of legislative from constitutional matters — As all of the delegates know, there have been many delegate proposals introduced in the convention which are purely legislative in substance and should not be given the dignity of constitutional mention. It has been suggested that this committee could act as a coordinating agency between the convention and the legislature and could inform the legislature on matters to which it is felt their attention should be directed.

A letter has been sent to all the committee chairmen calling their attention to the formation of this committee and requesting that if they have any problems which they do not deem to be within their jurisdiction or for some other reason are not receiving proper attention, that they can be referred to the committee on emerging problems.

These statements are being made to the convention as a whole so that any delegate may have the opportunity to express any problem which he might think should be investigated by this committee, and we welcome such information and suggestions.

The members of the committee are listed in the journal of December 21, and any member of the committee will be glad to accept such information. The committee room is room I on the third floor and someone will always be available to receive and give information in regard to these matters.

This committee has been divided into 4 subcommittees, and the problems just listed above have been assigned to them. A list of the members of the subcommittee are attached to this report. I would request that this statement and the list of the subcommittees be printed in the journal.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they will be printed in the journal.

MR. MILLARD: Thank you, Mr. President.

The following are the subcommittee assignments for the committee on emerging problems:

Frank G. Millard, chairman
Roscoe Bonisteel, first vice chairman
Theodore S. Brown, second vice chairman

Subcommittee 1 — Pensions
Claud R. Erickson, chairman
Richard H. Austin
Charles L. Anspach

This subcommittee will also investigate the problem of separation of legislative from constitutional matters.

Subcommittee 2 — Natural resources
Charles Figy, chairman
Tom Downs
Hazen van den Berg Hatch

This subcommittee will also investigate the problem of public health.

Subcommittee 3 — Administrative procedures
Earl C. Pugsley, chairman
Melvin Nord
Raymond L. King

This subcommittee will also investigate the problem of states rights.

Subcommittee 4 — Intergovernmental relations
Paul G. Goebel, chairman
Mrs. Daisy Elliott
Weldon O. Yeager

This subcommittee will also investigate the problem of atomic energy.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, we have had referred to the committee on finance and taxation a very considerable number of delegate proposals dealing with retirement systems. The assignment of primary and concurrent jurisdiction of matters has been made by the rules committee. Before we spend any time on the proposals, I think we would very much like a ruling from the officers of the convention or from the rules committee as to whether they are our troubles or whether Mr. Millard should have them.

PRESIDENT NISBET: May I suggest, Mr. Brake, that you and Mr. Millard and Mr. Van Dusen sit down and discuss this matter and then if you need some help on it after that we can talk about it.

MR. BRAKE: Thank you very much.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Father Dade?

MR. DADE: Mr. President, I have a parliamentary inquiry which I trust is on the secretary's desk to be read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Father Dade submits the following parliamentary inquiry:

> As a delegate speaking on the constitutional convention in my district in the city of Detroit, I have been asked many times this question concerning the life and the work of the constitutional convention.
>
> There seems to be a consensus of opinion among delegates as to the answer, but no official statement is on record as to the position of the constitutional convention in the matter.
>
> The question which I am asked by my constituents is this, upon the completion of the revision by the 1961-62 constitutional convention, will this document be submitted to the electorate of the state of Michigan in its entirety for ratification, or article by article?
>
> Would you be good enough to address yourself in a statement to this inquiry?
>
> Malcolm G. Dade.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Off the cuff, Father Dade, I would say that that is a matter that might better —

MR. DADE: Mr. President, I am somewhat afraid of these off the cuff opinions, and would respectfully request an answer later.

PRESIDENT NISBET: In that case, would you let me make a statement about this a little later?

MR. DADE: I will let you be the best judge of that, sir.

PRESIDENT NISBET: I will make a statement tomorrow, then.

MR. DADE: Thank you, sir.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of taking up several proposals.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Baginski. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

May I, in answer to an inquiry yesterday, make the following statement of interpretation as to voting in the committee of the whole. I wish to do so before Mr. Baginski assumes the Chair.

The ordinary method of voting in committee of the whole is by voice vote. This will be used, with 2 exceptions. One, when the Chair is in doubt, he may order a division; and two, when a delegate asks for a division, and his demand is seconded by 10 or more delegates, the Chair will order a division.

A division is not a recorded roll call vote. When a division is ordered, the Chair will specify whether it will be taken by a rising vote (show of hands) or by use of the voting machine. If the machine is used, no record will be made of individual votes, but only of totals.

There has been some confusion as a result of the provision of rule 41, that in committee of the whole the yeas and nays shall not be called. What this means is that there shall be no recorded roll call vote. It does not mean that a division may not be ordered, either by rising vote or by machine vote.

This statement will be printed in the journal, and unless there is objection, it will be followed.

Mr. Baginski, will you please take the Chair?

[Whereupon, Mr. Baginski assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The committee of the whole will be in order. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, Mr. Pollock, chairman, Committee Proposal 15, A proposal to amend Article II pertaining to the declaration of rights.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 15, see above, page 464.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, the committee on rights will continue today its discussion here in presenting the various sections of the bill of rights.

At our last session we discussed the first 4 sections as they are numbered now in the present bill of rights and today, therefore, we will begin by taking up section 5. May I say that sections 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 to which we have proposed no amendments will be explained by the vice chairman of the committee, Mr. Stevens. Section 10 will be explained by Judge Gadola.

Mr. Stevens, I yield to you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman—

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, a point of order. Dr. Pollock yielded to me. He had the floor.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Oh, I am sorry.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: I'm sorry. Would you yield, Mr. Stevens?

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, I wish to raise a matter for clarification on committee procedure and I think it would be in order at this junction before the committee resumes consideration of the report.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: What is the point, Mr. Krolikowski?

MR. STEVENS: All right, Mr. Chairman, I will yield. (laughter)

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Thank you. Mr. Chairman, I should like to have this one matter clarified for at least one bewildered mind. Now, when the committee is reporting its recommendation, and in the course of that report a delegate propounds a question to the committee chairman or to the committee vice chairman, and that committee chairman or vice chairman clearly indicates that the answer to that question is a personal answer, I should like to know whether it is then incumbent upon a delegate who disagrees with that personal answer to raise his dissent at that point in order to avoid the imputation of that answer to him.

Up until yesterday there was no doubt in my mind that a personal opinion, be it made by a chairman or a vice chairman, meant just that—that it had no more significant implication. Yesterday, however, after the committee rose, a delegate stated that by reason of the fact that no individual dissent had been made to the answer made by a vice chairman to a question raised by a delegate, that, in effect, indicated a passive, tacit acceptance of the answer of the vice chairman. I am bewildered whether a delegate must rise and take issue with the personal construction at that point or is he given an opportunity to dissent after the committee rises?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Krolikowski and delegates, this is a very difficult question to answer. It would seem that if someone did make a dissent yesterday or if some question was raised, and if no one cared to answer this on a personal basis, that was their privilege. I do not think the Chair can properly answer this question.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, I should like to have a clear understanding as to whether, when a chairman or a vice chairman is expressing his personal opinion in an answer, that opinion is restricted to his own individual interpretation and goes no further than that.

Now, I should think that great mischief might be performed here by someone reading this record 10 or 20 or 50 years from today and attempting to reach a construction of what was intended.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair cannot answer. I will not try to. I will say this. This is the committee of the whole and we attempt to be as informal as we possibly can here.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Well, there is no question that the answer of a committee chairman or vice chairman does not extend beyond his own personal view, is that correct?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: I would say so.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Particularly if he so states.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, I think we still have the floor.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Yes.

MR. STEVENS: Sections 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 which follow, are, as near as can be estimated, probably noncontroversial. (laughter) They are old, established, traditional rights of Americans and citizens and residents of Michigan. We saw no reason to take them out because someone might say it is not necessary. We realize that slavery is prohibited by the federal constitution in every state but we think that Michigan ought to protect its own citizens.

We do not wish to give the federal government the idea that we turn always to them for all these things. We believe if we are going to have a declaration of rights we should have these traditional things in it, so without further comment, I think we are ready to proceed with section 5.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The secretary will read section 5.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 5.

[Sec. 5 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 5? If not, it will pass.

Section 5 is passed.

Section 6; the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 6.

[Sec. 6 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 6? If not, it will pass.

Section 6 is passed.

Section 7; the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 7.

[Sec. 7 was read by the secretary. Fox text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 7? If not, it will pass.

Section 7 is passed.

Section 8; the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 8.

[Sec. 8 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 8? If not, it will pass.

Section 8 is passed.

Section 9; the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 9.

[Sec. 9 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 9? If not, it will pass.

Section 9 is passed.

Section 10; the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 10.

[Sec. 10 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Now, Mr. Chairman, we come to a consideration of an entirely different proposition. In section 10, the search and seizure provision of our state constitution contains 2 provisos, at the present time, which take from the jurisdiction of the courts, as we see it, the right to exclude certain specified evidence. On this, the committee was very much divided and worked a long time and was still divided.

I am going to yield to Judge Gadola who will explain the committee's report on this proposal.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Judge Gadola.

MR. GADOLA: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee of the whole, I shall talk as briefly as possible because I do not know how long I will be able to talk. My voice and throat are in such condition that I am not certain how long they will hold out.

However, this matter that is coming up before us now for consideration, I believe, is the most important matter to come before us for consideration to date, and probably it will be one of the most important subjects we will have to discuss in this entire convention.

Of course, we think so much about taxation. We think so much about reapportionment, about representation, and all of these things. But we must ask ourselves this question, what is a constitution? A constitution is ordained as a limitation on government. That is what we have it for. Then, the other angle of the constitution is the protection of the rights of every individual who lives under that constitution.

This section, section 10, is one of those great rights that has been ordained by the Constitution of the United States and has been continued in the Constitution of the State of Michigan. There have been 2 amendments made to that because of supreme court decisions. One of them came about through the hysteria concerning a certain case. An amendment was submitted allowing an unreasonable search to be made of a car, or outside the curtilage of the person. If that unreasonable search was made and narcotic drugs were found, then they could be offered in evidence.

That was the first amendment to that part of the constitution. What did it do? It authorized the police, under any circumstance, to search any car you please upon the road and, if they found contraband, then they could proceed to prosecute and the person would have no defense against an unreasonable search. That was the first one.

Then it went on under that phase until 1951 and then another case arose. They stopped a car and searched it. One related to firearms, and I think it was the other way around—'36 and '51. But anyway, then the supreme court again said that it was an unreasonable search and the articles could not be received in evidence. Immediately they submitted to a vote of the people of the state of Michigan an amendment to that article in the constitution to allow the articles to be offered in evidence if the search was illegal — unreasonable — and that went through. And so, at the present time, we have in the Constitution of the State of Michigan a proviso that if an unreasonable search is made of the person or of anything under his command or control, outside the curtilage, and they find contraband, he cannot raise the question of unreasonable search, because of the fact that the articles can be offered in evidence against him.

Now, this is not absolutely new. We have had this question coming through the federal courts for 50 years. The Weeks case was the original, the first case on that point, which prohibited anything to be offered in evidence that was seized in violation of the search and seizure laws of the United States constitution. It went on. It was followed on down through. Then we came to the Wolf case. The Wolf case, by a 5 to 3 decision, upheld the search. However, for the people of the state of Michigan, we had a man who was considered quite a great fellow, a great governor, a great justice of the supreme court. I refer to Justice Murphy. He dissented and said it should not be allowed. But anyway it went on down through and it came on down through until this last decision in the so called Mapp case which is in great controversy here.

Now, on this search and seizure question, do we want a police state? That is the first thing. Is the right of the individual supreme? Is it paramount? Am I to be subjected to a search any time a police officer thinks that he wants to search me? Is my car upon the road to be stopped and searched any time a police officer thinks that it should be searched? These are questions to which we should direct our attention.

Let me now refer to the last decision of the Supreme Court of Michigan passing on this question. I refer to the Gonzales case. They held in that that the search was unreasonable and that the search was illegal but, because of this provision in the constitution, it was found that the evidence could be used.

We all drive cars. I will give you a definition later on of the Supreme Court of Michigan relative to the driving of cars upon the highway. However, I want to call your attention to a few little known facts.

A few years ago the conservation department of the state of Michigan decided that they were going to make a lot of money, I guess, in seizing violators of the game laws. Therefore, during the hunting season, they posted conservation officials and state police upon the highways. They stopped every car and searched it for contraband. At Standish, officials were posted and the cars were lined up for a mile waiting to be searched on an illegal — absolutely illegal — premise. But the state police were doing it.

It happened that I was coming down from Tawas and I had in my car my wife, my 3 children and one other passenger that I wish I had let loose — my dog. (laughter). The state police stopped me. I said, "Why are you stopping me?" "Well," I was told, "you just go through there." "Why should I go through there?" I asked. "Oh well, never mind; just go through there," he said. I said, "No, you have no right to stop me. I don't have to go through there." He said, "Well, to avoid trouble just drive around through there anyway." So I said, "All right, I'll do that." And I drove around through and didn't stop. No one said anything about it. But there were dozens and dozens of cars stopped there being searched at that time. That was an illegal search, an absolutely illegal search. It violated every right that the individual has.

Now, the matter arises here in this convention in relation to this constitution. Are we going to delete the individual right of a citizen to go over our highways, the right of the individual to the sacredness and sanctity of his person, and make a police state where any police officer may stop you and search you? Well, I don't know.

Some say that this is probably a political question; unless something is done about it, it is going to reflect in the next election. Maybe so. I don't know. But I will tell you this, that it just did reflect in an election. Down in Detroit they had an election a little while ago and an unknown was elected mayor of Detroit by a vote of 5 to 1 on the sole basis of the police stopping and searching people without right. I don't know whether they did it or whether it was right but anyway that was the outcome of the election. So you do have these things and if this is a political question let us look at it that way. I don't know.

But the whole question that arises now is whether we desire to turn over to police officers the right to stop us, to search us. Perhaps if we can get it in this far, maybe they will put it through so they will get in on the curtilage too. I don't know. If they can do it in one thing they can do it in another thing. If they amend it one way they can amend it in another way. I have no way of knowing.

But I believe in the protection of the individual. The constitution is the individual's guarantee of rights. It is his guarantee of liberty. The first 10 amendments to the U. S. constitution represent the sacred rights of every man and woman in this country. And this article is the sacred right in our constitution. It is the guarantee of rights. This preserves what every individual in this state of Michigan values as sacred, his rights.

There has been some very high authority passing upon this question, perhaps much greater than my own. I say that because I have been ruled wrong. I decided the search in the Gonzales case was illegal and the supreme court said, "Well, it was an unreasonable search, an illegal search." But that part of the constitution takes your rights and pitches them right out the window. And there they went.

I wish now to direct your attention to some comments with respect to section 10, relating to searches and seizures. It is the proviso clause added by the amendment which creates the difficulty.

Page, may I have a drink of water? I said water. (laughter) I add that because I may have some constituents sitting in the gallery. (laughter)

Now, with respect to section 10, searches and seizures, no question is raised about the general provision presently found in section 10 in regard to unreasonable searches and seizures. It is the proviso clause which was added by amendment which creates the difficulty. It expressly authorizes the use in evidence of certain items even though obtained by unlawful search and seizure by peace officers outside the curtilage of any dwelling house in this state. In short, this provision recognizes a general rule that evidence obtained by illegal search and seizure cannot be used but then states express exceptions in regard to the enumerated items if seized by a peace officer outside the area of any dwelling house.

The United States supreme court has recently held in the Mapp case that under the fourteenth amendment's due process clause, which is deemed to incorporate the fourth amendment of the bill of rights, evidence obtained by an unreasonable search and seizure cannot be used in a state court. This case had to do with evidence taken by illegal search and seizure of a home, and it does not necessarily follow that the provisions of the Michigan constitution relating to evidence obtained by an illegal search outside of the home would also be unconstitutional or that a provision of a state constitution expressly authorizing use in a court proceeding of certain types of evidence obtained by an unconstitutional search would be invalid.

If the present policy of the proviso clause is thought to be desirable, one possibility is to keep the present language and leave it for a matter of future judicial determination whether or not it is valid so far as the federal constitutional restriction is concerned.

Another possibility is to delete this proviso either on the theory that to authorize the use of this evidence violates the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment on the assumption that this is required by the Mapp case or on the basis of a policy determination that it is wise to prohibit the use of all evidence obtained by unconstitutional search and seizure. Indeed, if this is deemed to be the wise policy, section 10 could be amended to substitute in place of the proviso the express provision barring the use of evidence obtained in violation of this section.

Another possibility — and one which, in my opinion, has much merit — is to delete the proviso clause and substitute in its place a provision that evidence acquired in violation of this section shall not be used in any proceeding except as authorized by law. This would keep open the possibility of use of much evidence to the extent authorized by legislation which, of course, would be subject to fourteenth amendment limitations.

A further question arises in regard to unreasonable search and seizure and that is whether a proviso should be expressly added to section 10 regarding the interception of any telephone and telegraph messages. That is not involved now because it is not before us.

Now, those comments which I have just placed before you were from a man for whom we have a great deal of respect here in this convention. I refer to Paul G. Kauper of the University of Michigan. That is his summation of this proviso.

Now, going into the legal aspects and the background of the question here involved, let me say this, this question is not so new. This question arose years and years ago when they were battling between the north and the south on tariffs. The question then arose as to what was the power of a state to overrule any act of the federal government. And a representative in congress made what is claimed to be the outstanding speech any congressman ever made, saying that no state has the right to overrule or outlaw any activity of the federal government. There it stands. That was reiterated in the decision of the Supreme Court of Michigan in the Gonzales case.

Now, with respect to the provisions of the United States constitution, article XIV, may I say here that article XIV and article IV of the federal constitution were under consideration by this committee on civil rights almost every day because the question arose — and it arose in other committees, I think, or so I am given to understand — whether it is necessary for us to put a lot of these things in our constitution because today they are ruled and governed by the fourteenth and fourth amendments of the Constitution of the United States. Then we decided in our committee that it would do no harm, even though they were protected, to put them in and so they were included. But every one of these rights of the individual, these civil rights that have been put in, have been examined in the light of the fourteenth and fourth amendments of the Constitution of the United States. They were scrutinized in that light.

Let me now place these facts before you. The original provision of Michigan's constitution, 1908, was the same as the federal constitution. However, in accordance with the desire of the police prosecution departments, 1952, there was enacted the present provision governing illegal search and seizure. I shall not read that because you all have it before you and are familiar with it. To continue, the enactment cited supra has, by insidious contravention, nullified to the citizens of Michigan their inherent and federal constitutional right to immunity of illegal search and seizure.

Under the provisions of the United States constitution, article XIV, or more commonly known as the fourteenth amendment, is found the following, "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of the citizens of the United States; . . . ."

Illegal search and seizure lying 4 square within the gambit of "privileges or immunities," the federal constitution granted or guaranteed an inalienable right to all citizens and also to the citizens of Michigan, the privilege and immunity of illegal search and seizure. Inasmuch as many of the states have in the past, as did Michigan, made an attempt to contravene the federal constitution, the United States supreme court in many of its historical decisions under due process of law made the provision of the bill of rights, article IV, and article XIV, of the United States constitution, applicable against all the states by the fourteenth amendment, illegal search and seizure.

In a little known case, Weeks v. United States, 232 U.S. 383

(1914), the supreme court made illegal search and seizure applicable against the states. The rule or doctrine in Wolf v. Colorado, 338 U.S. 25 (1949), reaffirmed the Weeks holding. Justice Frankfurter, speaking for the court, said:

> The security of one's privacy against arbitrary intrusion by the police which is at the core of the fourth amendment is basic to a free society. It is therefore implicit in the concept of ordered liberty and as such enforceable against the states through the due process clause. . . .

At page 28, Justice Frankfurter stated further:

> We have no hestitation in saying that where the state affirmatively sanctions such police intrusion into privacy, it would run counter to the guarantee of the fourteenth amendment . . . .

Again, as in the past, the import of this decision was missed — ignored — by many of the states. Subsequently, in order to adequately enforce the theory of illegal search and seizure being applicable against the individual states through the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment and to protect the rights of the citizens, the court — in multiple cases — again ruled to the same import as held in the Weeks and Wolf cases. Among the latest cases will be found Stefanni v. Minard, (1951) 343 U.S. 117; Rios v. United States, 364 U.S. 253 (1959), and Elkins v. United States, 364 U.S. 206 (1959). Each enumerated the doctrine that the fourteenth amendment made the fourth amendment applicable against the states and illegal search and seizure inadmissible.

At the time of the Elkins v. United States decision, 24 states held that evidence seized illegally was admissible, 20 states holding to rigid exclusion of such evidence and 4 holding that such evidence could be excluded under special provision. Michigan being one. Alaska and Hawaii both hold illegally obtained evidence to be excludable.

Inasmuch as some states steadfastly refused to adhere to the doctrine of illegal search and seizure, the United States supreme court, in conformity with its previous decisions in the now famous Dollree Mapp v. Ohio (docket 236, United States Supreme Court, June 19, 1961) definitely laid the issue to rest for all time henceforth.

Justice Clark, speaking for the majority of the court, said:

> Today we once again examine Wolf's constitutional documentation of the right to privacy free from unreasonable state intrusion and, after its dozen years on our books, are led by it to close the only courtroom door remaining open to evidence secured by official lawlessness in flagrant abuse of that basic right, reserved to all persons as a specific guarantee against that very same unlawful conduct. We hold that all evidence obtained by searches and seizures in violation of the constitution is, by that same authority, inadmissible in a state court.

Now, no matter what you say about how the Mapp case arose, that does not say anything about how it arises. It says it is inadmissible in all state courts. I continue:

> Having once recognized that the right to be secure against rude invasions of privacy by state officers is, therefore, constitutional in origin, we can no longer permit that right to remain an empty promise. Because it is enforceable in the same manner and to like effect as other basic rights secured by the due process clause, we can no longer permit it to be revocable at the whim of any police officer who, in the name of law enforcement itself, chooses to suspend its enjoyment.
>
> Our decision, founded on reason and truth, gives to the individual no more than that which the constitution guarantees him, to the police officer no less than that to which honest law enforcement is entitled, and, to the courts, that judicial integrity so necessary in the true administration of justice.

And again, there exists a manifest doctrine of the law, little known except but to members of the judicial profession, "Decisions of the United States supreme court control state court decisions in matters of due process." Michigan also acknowledges this doctrine, to wit, Scholle v. Secretary of State, 360 Mich. 1. I think that case was rejected for consideration by the Supreme Court of the United States, if I remember it correctly.

I continue:

> Headnote 1. Constitutional law; Interpretations of the Constitution of the United States —
>
> Interpretations of the Constitution of the United States by the Supreme Court of the United States are final authority and constitute exclusive guidance for a state supreme court.

In addition to that I want to call your attention to a comment made by a very fine gentleman who addressed this convention a few days back. There was one outstanding thing he said when he was talking about the authority of government. He wasn't a lawyer — although he had something or other to do with law at one time or another — but nevertheless in his discourse he said, "Remember this, when the supreme court has decided, that is final." That was the statement made by our retired president.

Mr. Perry A. Maynard, assistant attorney general of Michigan, in his thesis Post Conviction Problems and Procedure, published in the Michigan state bar journal (Vol. 38, No. 7, July 1959) in speaking of decisions of the United States supreme court controlling state court decisions, said at page 10:

> . . . The United States supreme court has preempted the field of construction and interpretation as to due process and its decisions are supersessive of state court holdings . . .

I'm sorry, and I hope I am not boring you, but I just can't help it; I am so imbued with this idea that I cannot quit. Let me deal now with some conclusions. In matters affecting due process of law, decisions of the United States supreme court control.

Under existing decisions (case law) —case law is known as "stare decisis", which may be of interest to all of you people who are stargazers but who do not know anything about the law, although you said yesterday you know more than the lawyers know (laughter) — under existing decisions (case law), the right and immunity against illegal search and seizure is made applicable against the states by the fourteenth amendment.

The fourteenth amendment specifies that "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States."

The amendment to the Constitution of Michigan, article II, section 10, being an abridgment — a contravention — of the initial inalienable right of a citizen, it is by the past, present and future decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States invalid, null and void.

Subsequently, if the citizens shall enjoy the immunities and rights of the U.S. constitution, then any enactment as to abridgment contravenes same and is automatically unconstitutional.

As conclusive argument, the wording of the federal constitution speaks for itself in no uncertain terms. "This constitution and the laws of the United States, which shall be made . . . shall be the supreme law of the land. . . ."

I wish now to place on the record some excerpts from the New York Times relating to the famous Mapp case. The articles state, "The striking outcome of the Weeks case —"

That was the first one that originated in which it was held that they could not accept illegally seized articles. I continue:

> The striking outcome of the Weeks case and those which followed it was the sweeping decision that the fourth amendment, although not referring to or limiting the use of evidence in courts, really forbade its introduction if obtained by government officers through a violation of the amendment.

Of course, that was a federal case.

In McNab v. United States, 318 U.S. 332 (1943) we note this statement:

> (a) Conviction in the federal courts "the foundation of which is evidence obtained in disregard of liberties deemed fundamental by the constitution, cannot stand" (Boyd v. United States and Weeks v. United States) and this court has, on constitutional grounds, set aside convictions both in the federal and state courts—

Remember that, both in the federal and state courts.

—which were based upon confessions secured by protracted and repeated questioning of ignorant and untutored persons in whose minds the power of officers was greatly magnified . . . or "who have been unlawfully held incommunicado without advice of friends or counsel".

That is just another angle of the right of the individual, another aspect of it. I am reading from the decision in the Mapp case; just remember that.

Some 5 years after the Wolf case in answer to a plea made here term after term that we overturn its doctrine on applicability of the Weeks exclusionary rule, this court indicated that such should not be done until the states had adequate opportunity to adopt or reject the rule.

That is, the Weeks rule. There again it was said:

Never until June of 1949 did this court hold the basic search and seizure prohibition in any way applicable to the states under the fourteenth amendment.

And only last term, after again carefully reaffirming the Wolf doctrine in Elkins v. United States the court pointed out that the controlling principles as to the search and seizure and the problem of admissibility seemed clear until the announcement in Wolf that the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment does not itself require state courts to adopt the exclusionary rule of the Weeks case.

At the same time the court pointed out the underlying constitutional doctrine which Wolf establishes . . . that the federal constitution . . . prohibits unreasonable searches and seizures by state officers had undermined the foundation upon which the admissibility of state seized evidence in a federal trial originally rested. . . . The court concluded that it was therefore obliged to hold, although it chose the narrower ground on which to do so, that all evidence obtained by an unconstitutional search and seizure was inadmissible in a federal court, regardless of its source.

Since the fourth amendment's right of privacy has been declared enforceable against the state through the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment, it is enforceable against them by the same sanction of exclusion as is used against the federal government.

Were is otherwise, then just as without the Weeks case rule the assurance against unreasonable federal searches and seizures would be a form of words, valueless and undeserving of mention in a perpetual charter of inestimable human liberties, so too, without that rule the freedom from state invasions of privacy would be so ephemeral as to neatly sever from its conceptual nexus with the freedom from all brutish means of coercing evidence as not to merit this court's high regard as a freedom implicit in the concept of ordered liberty.

At the time that the court held in Wolf that the amendment was applicable to the states through the due process clause, the cases of this court, as we have seen, had steadfastly held that as to federal officers the fourth amendment included the exclusion of the evidence seized in violation of its provisions. Even Wolf stoutly adhered to that proposition.

The right to privacy, when available against the states, was not susceptible of destruction by avulsion of the sanction upon which its protection and enjoyment had always been deemed dependent under the Boyd, Weeks and Silverthorne cases.

The federal courts themselves have operated under the exclusionary rule of Weeks for almost half a century; yet it has not been suggested either that the federal bureau of investigation has thereby been rendered ineffective, or that the administration of criminal justice in the federal courts has thereby been disrupted. Moreover, the experience of the states is impressive. . . . The movement toward the rule of exclusion has been halting but seemingly inexorable.

The ignoble shortcut to conviction left open to the state tends to destroy the entire system of constitutional restraints on which the liberties of the people rest.

Having once recognized that the right to privacy embodied in the fourth amendment is enforceable against the states, and that the right to be secure against rude invasions of privacy by state officers is, therefore, constitutional in origin, we can no longer permit that right to remain an empty promise.

Because it is enforceable in the same manner and to like effect as other basic rights secured by the due process clause, we can no longer permit it to be revocable at the whim of any police officer who, in the name of law enforcement itself, chooses to suspend its enjoyment.

Our decision, founded on reason and truth, gives to the individual no more than that which the constitution guarantees him; to the police officer no less than that to which honest law enforcement is entitled; and to the courts, that judicial integrity so necessary in the true administration of justice.

The judgment of the supreme court of Ohio is reversed and the cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

I believe I already placed on the record some of those quotations, but they are of extreme importance, in my opinion.

Now, that is the final case, the final case in Michigan. I am not going to take too much more of your time.

I arose because it so happens that I am the culprit in this case. I held that the search was illegal and that the evidence could not be used. It went to the supreme court twice. Peculiarly, it went up in the first place after I had ruled to exclude the evidence. But for some reason or other, in making out the record, it had been stipulated and agreed what the facts were, by the prosecutor and the defense attorney, and so I suppose it was there, but evidently in making out the record they left out this stipulation so the fact was not ascertained and it was sent back for the purpose of ascertaining the fact whether the search was reasonable or unreasonable. It came back and we reheard the matter and at that time this police officer stated that it was made a practice to search every car on the road late at night. And that the supreme court didn't like, either.

But in going over this decision of the supreme court of Michigan, in that case they themselves thought it was so important that they asked the attorney general to come in and file his brief in the case, and then they asked the state bar of Michigan, the civil liberties committee, to come in as amicus curiae.

There is a gentleman over here who has been trying to get me to interpret some Latin for him. "Amicus curiae" is the only Latin phrase I know. It means "friend of the court." They don't have many, so they put it in Latin. (laughter)

Now, the facts in the Gonzales case were these, there was a car stopped. It was 4:00 o'clock in the morning. It had only one headlight burning. The state police stopped the car, went over, took the driver of the car out of his vehicle, took him over to their car, and gave him a ticket for having defective lights. He went back to his car and proceeded to drive away. And then the officers got a new idea. So they stopped him again. They went over and said, "Here, get out of the car." Well, there was a passenger in the car and the passenger was Gonzales. They got the men out of the car and then they proceeded to search the car. Well, they found under the seat an unloaded revolver. And it was an unregistered revolver. And, unluckily for Gonzales, he had one cartridge in his pocket that fitted the gun. I guess Gonzales admitted that it was his gun. But anyway they immediately arrested him.

It was that search which the supreme court of Michigan said was absolutely unwarranted and unreasonable. But they had to consider another point. The question was raised that Gonzales was not the operator of the car and had nothing to do with the car when the police stopped it, and therefore he could not question the constitutionality of the stopping and the searching of the car. But the supreme court got around that in a very neat little way—just like a boy going around the end when they expect a forward pass.

Anyway, they said, "Well, here, he was a passenger in the car, and just as soon as they told him to get out of the car then he was under police surveillance and therefore he has a right to question the constitutionality of the search of the car." And that ended it; or rather, that ended that aspect of it; and that was it.

Their greatest concern was whether the fourth amendment and the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States overruled their decision. And there is a very, very lengthy decision here.

I have already talked too long and bothered you too much. There is more to come from people who are better able to describe this than I am. But there are some portions of this I do want to read to you, just certain little parts of it.

I am referring now throughout the course of my remarks to the case of the People v. Gonzales [356 Michigan 254]. I shall read portions—if I can find it. (laughter)

> As of the time this search was commenced, we are unable to ascertain any justification therefor which would not freely allow any officer to search an automobile . . .

That is found at page 255 of 356 Michigan Reports. And they lay down a rule there how a search can be made, how a legal search can be made, of a car.

But there has to be grounds for that search. And here is the rule:

> In general, the courts have recognized that officers who, as an incident to a lawful arrest, make a reasonable search of the premises of the person arrested for the means or instruments of the crime committed, may seize the instruments or means of committing another crime which that incidental search uncovers; at least that is true where the articles seized were of a contraband nature, the possession of which was illegal per se, or where another crime is discovered being committed in the presence of the officers.

I have read from page 254 of Gonzales, in 356 Michigan Reports.

So they don't have to make these illegal searches, you know. If they have proper grounds, they can search any car. But they don't want to do that. They just want to search every car.

I am not against police officers. Do not entertain that thought for one moment. Because, after all, you must recognize —and I'm not bragging about it in any sense—but 34 years of my life have been spent in law enforcement, so you cannot ever make the claim that I am against it; not in any manner.

Let me refer again to the decision in the Gonzales case:

> We believe that what we have said to this point requires our holding the search and seizure in the instant case as being unreasonable in a constitutional sense.
>
> We believe also that our views of the constitutional guarantee involved as applied to a modern situation is in basic accord with applicable precedents in this and other jurisdictions.

And then they go on and quote, relative to the fourth and fourteenth amendments. With respect to Wolf v. Colorado they say:

> . . . Wolf v. Colorado also held the fourth amendment's prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures to be among the essential ingredients of due process and, hence, enforceable against the states through the fourteenth amendment.

Now that is what the supreme court of the United States says. It says it is enforceable against the states. But I notice that they don't follow it.

Then reference is made to Justice Frankfurter's statement about the fourth amendment. I have read that quotation before but it might be good to read it again:

> The security of one's privacy against arbitrary intrusion by the police—which is at the core of the fourth amendment—is basic to a free society. It is therefore implicit in the concept of ordered liberty and as such enforceable against the states through the due process clause.

I am not going to become involved in a discussion of the fourth and fourteenth amendments, to any great extent. Another member of our committee will explain for you their application. But I do want to read a paragraph from the Michigan supreme court in the People v. Roache—this is one of those cases back in the days, you know, when everybody had a bathtub that was used for more than taking a bath; (laughter) the prohibition era, as it were—and they make this definition:

> While we may take judicial notice of the fact that rum runners and bandits ride in automobiles, and use them to commit crimes and effect their escape, may we not also take judicial notice of the fact that where there is one bandit or rum runner passing over a public highway, there are thousands of respectable, law abiding citizens who are doing likewise? The protection afforded by the constitution to such persons must be regarded as paramount to any right to be given a police officer to enable him to verify his ungrounded suspicion that a law is being violated.

I have read from page 263 of the People v. Gonzales, 356 Michigan Reports.

I shall not continue to bother you or harass you longer. I am firmly convinced that this provision in our constitution is unconstitutional under the federal constitution and will be so declared.

I was the one who first proposed that last clause as a saving clause. I don't know whether I got it from Professor Kauper or whether he got it from me, but anyway I was the one who proposed it, and I worked it out with the brains we have in our law staff here in this convention. We have come up with this saving clause so that if anything should happen, if there should be a change in the decision in the Mapp case, then it would leave the door open and give the legislature permission to enact laws to care for the situation. And that is the saving clause that is there.

I thank you for your consideration and I hope I have not bored you too much. No matter what you do, I know it will be right so far as you are concerned. Although perhaps it may not be right so far as someone else is concerned. But no matter what you do, remember this: my head may be bloody, but it will be unbowed.

Thank you. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, like the Judge I have had a cold too, during the course of this convention, and this cold has reminded me, as a matter of fact, of this convention, in that sometimes the "ayes" have it, and sometimes the "no's". (laughter)

Turning now to a more searching subject, we have before us a very serious matter, and I believe Judge Gadola, in typical judicial fashion, has laid before us the pertinent issues which we will, I am certain, elucidate during the course of our deliberations. The fundamental interest which we seek to protect by the prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures is what Justice Brandeis has called the right to privacy. That is the most comprehensive right known to civilized man, the right to be left alone.

Now, we have had before us in our declaration of independence an admonition to government as to its purpose. To secure these rights, governments are instituted among men. In other words, it is the function of the government of the United States and of the state of Michigan to secure these rights, and by securing these rights they are securing them in 2 senses. First, to secure them in the sense of obtaining them, of arriving at them. And, second, once having obtained them, to actually give them performance; that is, to make them genuinely secure. And that is what we do by the fourth amendment to the constitution of the United States and by article II, section 10, without the proviso, in the state of Michigan.

Now, under this particular provision of the prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures, the anglo saxon world has had a tremendous history. I do not propose to go into that history except to say that there was a period when we had what was known as the general warrant. That is, a piece of paper by authority which did not name any specific articles, did not require any probable cause, and a home, a person, or any other accouterment, could be searched and seized, by virtue of it. And so, when the founding fathers got together, they decided to make this provision in the constitution as one which government is essentially aimed to secure, namely a prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures.

Now, it is a prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures; it is not a prohibition against all searches and seizures, only those which are unreasonable are prohibited by the fourth amendment and through the fourteenth amendment against the states by the Mapp case. Now, we can have a reasonable search when there is probable cause, and that has been defined by the courts over a period of time, but I think we ought to get that before us, because, as some people have reminded us, not all of us at this convention are lawyers.

The court has said—if you will bear with me for just one moment—that > there is probable cause when the officer making it (the search or seizure) from the exercise of his own senses, and acting upon information received from sources apparently reliable, a prudent and careful person, having due regard for the rights of others, would be induced to the honest belief that a felony was committed in such automobile.

That refers the matter to an automobile.

In other words, there has to be more than mere suspicion, and there cannot be a search just for investigatory purposes. There has to be probable cause in order that there might be a reasonable search. Now, this has stood in the United States and this has stood in the state of Michigan for a considerable number of years, until the amendments were passed by the people of this state, putting in what we have now, known as a proviso, which states that it is not an essential ingredient of the right against unreasonable searches and seizures to admit into evidence certain objects which are obtained as a result of an unreasonable search.

In other words, here there is a question of policy, whether or not, in fact, you have the lawless enforcement of the law. If you have an object which is obtained by an unreasonable search and seizure admitted in evidence, you are saying that even though the constitution is flouted by an overzealous officer, nevertheless the object which is obtained by that search can be admitted in evidence.

I assert that what the Mapp case says—the recent case which Judge Gadola was adverting to—indicates that it is now an essential ingredient of the right against unreasonable searches and seizures that the object which is obtained by an unreasonable search may not be admitted in evidence, in order that we might have, if you will, constitutional law enforcement.

Those of us who argue for the committee position in this matter indicate to you that that is the principle—the protection of the right of privacy and the promotion of constitutional law enforcement—as the most effective law enforcement.

The argument has been made, and probably will be made during the course of this deliberation, that if people have nothing to hide, then they ought not to be too sensitive about having their person searched or their car searched.

But there is more to this than the proposition merely that there is nothing to hide. In that proposition we have, if you will, the concept of a democratic state or an authoritarian state at issue. I say that because, as long as you say there is nothing to hide, then you are granting to authority, to government, the right to invade a person's privacy or property—in this case, the property being a car. To be sure, we still protect the home under this proviso. But I submit to you that it is just as logical to protect a person in his car or in his person himself, if you are going to have full protection against unreasonable searches and seizures.

And when you say "nothing to hide" you are saying that the state is supreme over the individual. As I understand it, in the past 25 years of world history, we have had a little experience with governments throughout the world with regard to a concept such as that.

If you want total security against crime, if you want total security for the state, you have it in a police state. But if you are going to have democratic government, a democratic spirit, and the protection of rights of the individual in terms of his person and property, then you are going to protect the fourth amendment to the constitution and the provision in the Michigan constitution, without the proviso, in order that we might have constitutional law enforcement and a lawful enforcement of the law, and not unlawful enforcement of the law.

Why is that in the public interest? Not only because it protects the right of privacy, when government is fair, when government proceeds to operate constitutionally, it is more effective because it secures from the people the wholehearted response and cooperation necessary to foster lawful enforcement of the law.

In other words, people are more apt and more disposed and more sensitive and respond with greater alacrity to assisting officers and to assisting the lawful police authority when they feel that the government is fair and that it is proceeding with circumspection, and with due respect for the constitutional rights of all the citizens.

That is what is behind, I think, the thinking of the committee in urging upon this body, and upon the committee of the whole, consideration for the proposal that we delete the proviso and substitute the one which the Judge has indicated.

While I do not have a preference for the language, nevertheless I feel that the substituted language does enact before us the federal rule, the federal exclusionary rule, which says that the rule in the Mapp case is the rule of the state of Michigan. That is the constitutional boundary within which the state must act. It also opens the door—in the event that the United States supreme court does change its view—for the state, through its legislature, to deal with this problem.

It constitutes a sort of saving clause, as the Judge characterized it. But it does mean to those of us who are in favor of the exclusionary rule as being in the public interest, as being in the interest of the promotion of constitutional law enforcement, as the rule for the state of Michigan.

I can only say to you, Mr. Chairman, that the committee gave deliberation to this particular matter with great sensitivity and preciseness and I think that the thing was represented as being a majority report—I understood, and Professor Pollock could correct me if I am wrong—that this was a unanimous report of the committee and I think it ought to be appraised by this body as such.

I think we do have here one of the basic individual rights that was first a right of Englishmen, a right of Americans, and we at this constitutional convention, sworn to uphold the federal constitution in its deliberations, ought to give full force and effect to the committee recommendation in this case.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair would like to ask Dr. Pollock if he has any further presentations?

MR. POLLOCK: No, Mr. Chairman, that is the only presentation we have from the committee.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair wishes to advise that we have 5 amendments, and they will be called in the order in which they were placed upon the secretary's desk.

The question now is on the amendment to section 10.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Prettie has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 28, after "affirmation" by striking out the period and on page 3, line 6, by striking out "Evidence obtained in violation of this section shall not be used except as authorized by law.", and inserting a colon and "Provided however, That the provisions of this section shall not be construed to bar from evidence in any court of criminal jurisdiction, in any criminal proceeding or preliminary examination any narcotic drug or drugs, any firearm, bomb, explosive, or any other dangerous weapon or thing, seized by any peace officer outside the curtilage of any dwelling house in this state.".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Prettie has prepared a memorandum in support of his amendment. He thought that perhaps we would reach it last night which we did not do. He therefore asked me if I would convey to the convention his statement in support of it, because he was forced to leave, although he was here earlier. I am therefore prepared to present a memorandum in support of his amendment which has just been read by the secretary.

I have gone over the memo and subscribe to it, but the authorship and the investigation were conducted by Mr. Prettie, the background material was prepared by him, and the memorandum was written by him. This is a memorandum re: declaration of rights, section 10, article II, Constitution of 1908. It reads:

> Mr. Chairman, we are considering the proviso of article II, section 10, of the Constitution of 1908, which the report of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections proposes that we eliminate because of its "doubtful constitutionality" under article IV of the amendments to the federal constitution as interpreted by the supreme court of the United States in Mapp v. Ohio.
>
> The first sentence of this section has been in the declaration of rights in the constitution of this state for 110 years. In 1935 the proviso was added permitting the introduction in evidence of certain weapons seized outside the curtilage of any dwelling house.
>
> It is this proviso with which we are concerned. The question is whether it should be continued in or eliminated from our constitution.
>
> The meaning of this proviso was so clear that it was not until 1943 that it was called in question before the supreme court of this state in the People v. Orlando, 305 Michigan 686.
>
> In this case the supreme court sustained the admission in evidence of stench bombs found in the automobile of the defendants and their conviction was sustained by unanimous decision.
>
> This remained the law in Michigan without question in the supreme court of this state, and in 1952 by the overwhelming vote of 5 to 1, the people amended the proviso to this section so as to include narcotic drugs as items admissible in evidence when seized outside the curtilage.
>
> The next case coming before our court of last resort was the People v. Gonzales, 356 Michigan 247, decided as recently as 1959. Judge Gadola, the trial judge in this case, is a delegate to this convention and could speak with great knowledge concerning this decision.
>
> I would, however, presume to invite the attention of this convention to some of the language contained in this lengthy decision, which I believe is pertinent to our deliberations. The court said:
>
> > The supreme law of this state, its constitution, thus directs the admission of evidence of the character with which we are concerned in this case even if the evidence was produced by an unconstitutional search and seizure.
> >
> > Our remaining question is whether or not such state constitutional sanction of the admission of illegally seized evidence is barred by the federal constitution. . . .
> >
> > We hold article II, section 10, as last amended in 1952, not offensive to the United States constitution, amendments four and fourteen, on the grounds stated.
>
> The answer to this second question is, of course, decisive as to this defendant. But we do not logically reach the attack upon the 1936 amendment until we have decided that this search itself was unreasonable. And the issue is important to millions of our citizens other than defendant. In People v. Roache, supra (pp 224, 225), this court said:
>
> > While we may take judicial notice of the fact that rum runners and bandits ride in automobiles, and use them to commit crimes and effect their escape, may we not also take judicial notice of the fact that where there is one bandit or rum runner passing over a public highway, there are thousands of respectable, law abiding citizens who are doing likewise? The protection afforded by the constitution to such persons must be regarded as paramount to any right to be given a police officer to enable him to verify his ungrounded suspicion that a law is being violated.
>
> It should be noted that the language that I have quoted was concurred in by 4 members of the court, one of them now the chief law enforcement officer of the city of Detroit.
>
> The 3 remaining members of the court who considered this case, concurred in the result reached in the majority opinion, but for somewhat different reasons. In their concurring opinion, these 3 members of the court subscribed to the following significant statements:
>
> > Smith, J. (concurring). When we conclude that article II, section 10, of the Michigan constitution (1908), as amended in 1952, is not repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, we have disposed of the case before us.
> >
> > With this holding, my concurrence ends. The balance of what is written concerns the concept of liberty under our constitutional guarantees. More specifically, whether the search of an automobile after the arrest of the driver for a minor offense against the traffic laws violates our basic freedoms.
> >
> > The constitution does not define liberty nor do we. In an absolute sense it does not exist. A myriad of commands we follow daily. But not every intrusion upon our person or property is an encroachment so gross that the spirit becomes hostage to the act and we are no longer free. Much will depend upon the circumstances attendant. The car search itself, in the vicinity of a prison break, may be more an act of mercy than an act of oppression. The concept of freedom, then, has no fixed content. Always there is the problem of balance. The freedom of one man necessarily involves the correlative restraint of his brother. Specifically, and with reference to the criminal law, we are sensitive to the constitutional rights of alleged or convicted criminals. . . . But equally sensitive are we to the demands of our people that they be as secure as may be from violence and pillage. All too often, as we know judicially, the automobile is handmaiden to the assassin. Learned Hand put the problem we will some day reach in these words:
> >
> > > The protection of the individual from oppression and abuse by the police and other enforcing officers is indeed a major interest in a free society; but so is the effective prosecution of crime, an interest which at times seems to be forgotten. Perfection is impossible; like other human institutions criminal proceedings must be a compromise.
> >
> > The day for that problem, however, is not this day. The case before us is governed by a specific and valid constitutional enactment . . .
>
> So stated and held the supreme court of this state 2½ years ago.
>
> The most recent case reaching our supreme court in 1960 is People v. Winkle. In this case the defendant was arrested for a traffic violation and a search of his car disclosed that he was in possession of a .38 caliber revolver and a quantity of burglar tools. It should be noted that the revolver was within the proviso which we are considering and the burglar tools were not.
>
> The defendant was charged, tried, and convicted of both the offense of carrying concealed weapons and with the crime of possessing burglar tools.
>
> His conviction was sustained with 2 separate opinions, each joined in by 4 members of the court.
>
> One of these opinions contained a strong admonition to the law enforcement officers of this state and the following language in particular, should be of assistance to us in our deliberations here:

Since our decision in Gonzales it appears that once it has been determined that the search and seizure has occurred, in the words of the amendment, "outside the curtilage of any dwelling house in this state" and once it has further been determined that the articles seized and offered in evidence in a criminal proceeding are among those enumerated in that amendment (both of which are so here), then the circumstances of the arrest and of any search or seizure, or the frequently prickly question of whether or not the search and seizure was unreasonable, appear to become totally irrelevant in any phase of the criminal case. . . .

Before prosecutors and police go dance in the streets, a word or 2 of warning is in order. The question nevertheless still persists whether there are no possible situations in these or similar circumstances where the legality of the search might become relevant or even crucial. We think there may be and that this very case suggests, if it does not present, some of them. We have here a situation where on the face of it part of the results of the search appear admissible regardless of the validity of the search (the nitroglycerin and the detonator caps), since they are embraced both within the amendment and the burglar tools statute, and again in the same case a situation where the admissibility of another part of the results of the same search (the bulk of the burglar tool articles here seized) in turn depends upon the reasonableness of the search. The trial judge admitted all of them, evidently on the theory that the search was not unreasonable. If the search was good, then all the articles were admissible and his decision was correct, amendment or no amendment. . . .

We note that the 2 state police officers who made the search and testified below, candidly admitted at the trial that searches of this kind made here, at the hour this one was made (around 2:00 a.m.) are routine with their department, once a car is legally stopped for a minor traffic offense. This is the second time in a few months that questioned searches of this kind have come before us. Gonzales was the other. We do not understand that either the noted amendment or our decision in Gonzales authorized the police to become motorized inquisitors or to make indiscriminate searches of persons or cars following their legally being stopped for minor traffic offenses. If this is indeed the settled policy of the state police or others, we suggest that it forthwith be reviewed and that the practice cease.

I have previously pointed to the fact that law and legal doctrine are not static. They must evolve to meet changing conditions. The historic guarantees against unreasonable search and seizure are basic to our concept of liberty, but the sanctity of one's home is quite a different thing from the question of admitting in evidence weapons and narcotics found in an automobile on a public highway.

I would further suggest that in a free society, liberty must not be confused with license. As Justice Smith stated,

The concept of freedom, then, has no fixed content. Always there is the problem of balance. The freedom of one man necessarily involves the correlative restraint of his brother.

The freedom of 8 million law abiding citizens of this state may require the admission in evidence against alleged criminals lawfully arrested of weapons and narcotics found in their possession outside their dwelling.

After careful reading of Mapp v. Ohio, it is my considered opinion that it is not in point. It involved a seizure in a dwelling of pornographic literature, not of weapons or narcotics. It does not overrule, except by way of dictum, the clear decisions of the supreme court of this state in the Gonzales and the Winkle cases.

I am informed that there are pending or on appeal at least 2 other cases in which the validity of this provision is now in question. For this convention to remove the proviso from the constitution would be to pull the rug out from under the position of the people in these pending cases and in many others that may arise.

I submit that the admonitions given to the prosecutors and the police in the Winkle case are more than sufficient to put them on notice that they must act with prudence and circumspection in making searches and seizures even on the public highway and even in protection of the life of the police officer himself. With this admonition before them, the law abiding citizen is given every protection to which he is entitled.

Finally, the report of the committee on declaration of rights suggests that in place of the proviso we have been discussing, the constitution shall provide that "evidence obtained in violation of this section shall not be used except as authorized by law."

The committee comments that this provision has the effect of restoring to the legislature a very large degree of discretion in what constitutes good policy on rules of evidence in relation to search and seizure.

I submit that no legislative enactment can be given the dignity of a constitutional provision, either by the supreme court of this state or of the United States.

The time is now and the place is here to retain in our constitution in improved form the proviso which will protect the law-abiding citizen and the law enforcement officer.

Should this proviso later be struck down by the courts as violative of the federal constitution the resulting license of the hoodlum, the burglar, the highwayman, the bank robber, and the narcotics peddler, will be chargeable to those courts and not to this convention.

This, Mr. Chairman, completes the prepared statement of Mr. Prettie. I have some remarks of my own to make, but I shall yield the floor at this time.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Very well, to whom are you yielding?

MR. DANHOF: I yield the floor.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Very well.

Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Prettie amendment.

I think that at this time it is very important to analyze and sum up the statements made by members of the committee in support of the committee proposal.

In particular, I should like to refer to the comment that appears in the journal wherein it is stated that the committee's decision rests principally upon its recognition of the fact that the apparent sweeping impact of the opinion of the United States supreme court in Mapp against Ohio, June 19, 1961, in which the court, in a 5 to 3 opinion, appears to have asserted categorically in very broad language that hereafter evidence obtained in violation of the guarantees of the fourth amendment to the federal constitution will be inadmissible in both state and federal courts.

I wish to point out, first of all, that Mapp against Ohio is overruling the previous decision of the United States supreme court. It is very significant that they are split in this way. I also suggest that wherein it states, in the committee's report, that the decision was 5 to 3, they do not take account of the opinion of Justice Stewart.

Actually, the line up of the opinions is as follows. You have Justices Clark, Black and Douglas all writing concurring opinions—Clark writing the majority opinion, and Black and Douglas writing separate concurring opinions, and Justice Stewart agreeing with the decision of the majority to overrule the lower court, but on a totally different basis.

He states in his memorandum that although he would reverse the judgment in the case, he is persuaded that the provisions of the Ohio revised code, upon which the petitioner's conviction was based, is, in the words of Mr. Justice Harland, not "consistent with the rights of free thought and expression assured against state action by the fourteenth amendment."

In other words, at least one member of the supreme court, in favor of reversing the judgment, bases it not on the fourth amendment, but on the first.

Now I suggest, then, that this decision in the Mapp case is such that it leaves very much in doubt, on its facts, what the supreme court would do in another case, and I do not feel that the delegates to this convention should prejudge what the supreme court might do in the future, faced with other facts.

At pointed out in Delegate Prettie's statement, the facts are entirely different. The evidence in the Mapp case would not have been admissible under the Michigan provision which the committee seeks to strike out.

The Mapp case is perhaps an example of a very old idea expressed by lawyers and judges that hard cases make bad law.

In the Mapp case the police officers broke in the door of an apartment which would fit as a dwelling house. In other words, here is the first point, under Michigan law the evidence has to be received outside of the curtilage. That means outside not only the home but the outbuildings and the immediate vicinity of the home. Not only that, but the police officers in the Mapp case grabbed the woman, twisted her arm, handcuffed her unlawfully and took her up and made her sit in the bedroom while they searched the dresser and searched suitcases and they actually physically seized and abused this woman. And the evidence that they secured was pornographic literature which would not be admissible under the Michigan rule.

Now, there are 2 other factors which must be borne in mind. The Ohio law which was overruled was statutory, it was not a constitutional provision.

There is also the fact that this woman, when the police officers came, called an attorney and asked his advice as to what to do, and he told her not to let them in, not without a search warrant. And the police officers thereupon sought reinforcements but they did not obtain a search warrant. They waited 2½ hours, as I recollect the facts, before they broke down the door.

This is indeed a hard case, but it is certainly not authority for the proposition that the committee advances.

I should also like to point out that Judge Gadola repeated the wise words of Justice Frankfurter and placed a great deal of reliance upon what he had to say in the civil rights field, but Justice Frankfurter was with the dissenting justices in the Mapp case.

I wish to also to make it clear that what we are dealing with here is of great importance. A great deal has been said and much emphasis has been placed upon the historic rights of our citizens.

The federal constitution, in the fourth amendment, which deals with unreasonable searches and seizures, says nothing whatsoever about the problem that we are debating. It merely states, "The right of the people to be secure . . . against unreasonable searches and seizures. . . ."

What we are dealing with is a judicially created rule of evidence. And the question whether we are going to extend the opinions of the supreme court in such a way as to, in advance of such a decision, contend that the federal government has preempted this field, must be answered. The question is whether the fourth and fifth amendments shall be applied to the states under the fourteenth. This, I submit, has not been definitely decided.

Now, a great deal was also said about conservation officers and police officers indiscriminately searching automobiles and I submit that if this should constitute an illegal search or seizure, these offended persons have a remedy. They have a civil remedy at law for damages. And this is not a hollow and meaningless remedy. Police officers have been on many occasions sued and made to pay—they are bonded—and they are made to pay when they conduct an illegal search and seizure. And the delegate who raised this point would have had a remedy if he had been forced to submit.

Now, who suffers when guns, narcotics and dangerous weapons are excluded from evidence? Have we punished the police officers or have we punished the law abiding citizens of the state? Who is that bullet meant for? What about the civil rights of the bullet? I refer of course to the bullet that Gonzales was carrying in his pocket. I should like to know about that.

I also wish to say, in conclusion, that the supreme court of the United States is composed of 9 men who happen to be lawyers. If they want to overrule the will of the people of the state of Michigan, that's their business. But I'm not going to do it here today.

In 1952 the vote of the people of the state of Michigan in favor of including the narcotics provision was 1,910,728 for the inclusion of this in our constitution; and against that 382,285. I feel that the proceedings of this convention, our official record, should include those figures. They represent, as Delegate Prettie has said, a vote of 5 to 1. I also wish to point out that the vote in Wayne county was 6 to 1.

As I understand it, at the time this vote was taken there was a serious problem in Detroit with regard to narcotics and the police officers there and the law abiding members of the public derived some benefit, in that narcotics since that time have ceased to be the menace they were at that time to the high school children in that community.

Accordingly, I urge you to support the Prettie amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman. I rise to point out that I have placed on the secretary's desk an amendment to the Prettie amendment which I would ask the secretary to read at this time.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hanna offers the following amendment to the amendment offered by Mr. Prettie:

1. Amend the amendment after "seized" by inserting "by reasonable means"; so that the language of the Prettie amendment will read, after the recital of the items that may be considered: ". . . or any other dangerous weapon or thing, seized by reasonable means by any peace officer outside the curtilage of any dwelling house in this state."

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that the problem with which we are faced here is the unreasonable use of this loophole to the exclusionary rule of evidence to allow police officers to make searches, and the court is powerless to pass, when it is presented to them, on the reasonableness of the initial search.

I believe the language that I propose would serve to carry out the warning offered to police officers to the effect that they should not "dance in the streets". My amendment, I believe, would implement that warning in relation to police officers.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I would oppose the Prettie amendment, and also the Hanna amendment to the Prettie amendment.

Of course, the Hanna amendment is a substantial improvement over the Prettie amendment because it now says that legal seizures cannot be excluded from evidence. Of course, legal seizures cannot be excluded from evidence. We do not need to state that in the constitution.

I see no reason to engage in circumlocution. If it is a legal seizure it is clear without this statement, and therefore I believe it is not necessary to approach it in that way. What we should do is strike all the language which is submitted in this amendment, and I would like to state my reasons for saying that.

First of all, I should like to point this out. The way we are talking here you might think that we are about to change the law on this subject. That is not so. That is not what the issue is. We cannot change the law on this subject. The law on this subject has been handled by the United States supreme court in the Mapp case. The law has been handed down by them. They have said, without any ambiguity whatever, what the law on the subject is. They have said that the federal rule is one which they have been applying for many, many years—and not just this year—for a period of about 50 years, and that it will now be construed to apply to the states and will be obligatory upon the states and applicable to them in the same way as it has been applicable to and obligatory upon the federal government. No distinction was made as to what kind of evidence was seized or where it was seized. The only thing that was done in that decision was simply that it was said

> We give up; we have waited for the states to begin to tell the police officers to obey the law; we have waited and we have waited and the states have not done so, and now we give up, just as we gave up with the federal officers 50 years ago.

There are no if's, and's or but's about that decision. We are not in a position to reargue that case here. The 9 supreme court justices are someplace else.

What we are doing here is saying that the case is different. I repeat that there is nothing in that case that draws any distinction. There is no rationale in that case that permits any distinction. It is a clear cut decision. The attempt to draw distinctions could go on forever.

This is a common problem in law school. The student will say, "Well, that case does not apply to John Smith because the last case happened to Al Brown, and there is a distinction between Al Brown and Jack Smith." There is a distinction but there is no difference. There is certainly no legal difference.

The differences that are being mentioned here have never been mentioned in any federal case. They are ignored. Narcotics, for example, are included. Weapons are included in the federal decisions.

And therefore let us not kid ourselves that we are doing anything differently from what the southern states did when they did not like a certain supreme court decision. It was only a few years ago that the United States supreme court also changed its mind. They gave a decision which said: We change the law. We say from now on there must be integration of schools.

The southern states didn't like that, just as many of the people in this state do not like that—do not like what we have, that is, what we have before us. They did not like that change. They said we can distinguish that and not only can we distinguish it—we can probably distinguish it for about 100 years.

They can distinguish it forever, they think. They have lost every case, I believe, one right after the other and they have done what we are now going to attempt to do, put language in laws which on the face of it is illegal, on the theory that either, somehow or other, the supreme court will change its mind and reverse a decision which took 100 years in that case to reach, and 50 years in this case.

They feel that by obstinacy or by some such means they can hold back the tide. We cannot do it and they can not do it, and I hope that we will not make any effort to do that.

We should abide by the law. What is at stake here, in other words, is not whether we can change the law. We can not change the law. We can change the words in the constitution but that will not have any effect upon the law. Actually, no matter what words we have in this section — even if we were to delete all the words — it would make no difference. We cannot change that federal law. The only thing that is really at stake here is whether we wish to follow the law and wish to say so.

That is one of the points I should like to make, that the issue is not clearly drawn as it should be. The issue is not: should we change the law? The issue is: could we change the law? And the answer is that we absolutely cannot. The second issue is: should we change the law, if we could? In other words, is the change proposed good and worthwhile? Is it a good change or a bad change?

The change as suggested by the Prettie amendment in my opinion is extremely unsatisfactory and I should like to explain why. It is often argued and it was argued in the newspapers for quite awhile, and I believe the impression is broadcast here, that if you do this, if you put this kind of language in, then the police will be able to enforce the law. They will now have authority to do something that they do not otherwise have.

In other words, it is thought that by putting the language in or taking it out, a difference would be brought about as to what the police can do. But that is not so.

The police, in any event, cannot make an unreasonable search or seizure, because it is illegal. They cannot be instructed to do so by anybody who has an oath of office or anybody who believes in the law of the land. The police are not permitted to make an unreasonable search or seizure, that is clear, and if we put the language in here that this kind of evidence, if seized, could conceivably be introduced in evidence, that does not authorize them to seize it anyway.

It was pointed out before that if they seize it, they commit a tort, a civil wrong, and they might very easily commit a crime in addition. As was pointed out, in the Mapp case they did commit a crime. They manhandled a woman. There was an assault and battery on that woman. When you manhandle a person in searching them, it is almost impossible to do that without committing a battery which is a crime.

I hope that nobody is going to tell us that the chief of police will instruct the policemen to go ahead and make unreasonable searches and seizures. I do not think they are likely to tell them that; they are not permitted to do that. And, therefore, let us keep that in mind, that what this language that we have in the Prettie amendment would do, would not make or permit the police to do anything that they cannot now do. They could not make an illegal search and seizure and if they did they would be subject to civil penalties and criminal penalties.

Now, we know that it is argued that since that is the case, therefore, why worry? Of course, there are 2 answers to that. One answer is that if that is the case, they are going to make the searches and seizures anyway. The other answer is that there is something to worry about in any event.

The relief that is suggested, this relief of a civil suit, or maybe possibly criminal penalties, can be looked at in this way. Criminal penalties, of course, are not very good against the police department. It is probably not a good idea to try to get these prosecutors to bring a criminal action against the police. You may end up finding that you are charged with some other crime. Civil actions against police have not been extremely successful, either.

Let me point this out, if those remedies had succeeded, the United States supreme court and the supreme courts of half of the states would not have been in despair, as they have been. They did not reach this decision lightly. It has taken 50 years for the United States supreme court to throw up its hands 100 per cent. It is not because they wish to get to this position.

Everyone realizes, I believe, that this is not the logical way to solve the problem — that is, making the evidence illegal, or rather inadmissible. But that was likely done because no other solution had ever been proposed which would do it successfully. Every solution that had been proposed had been unsuccessful. Therefore, it is either this remedy, or no real remedy.

Putting this language in could certainly do nothing except invite the police to make a search which they are not permitted to make, a search which is illegal, a search which on the face of it is unreasonable. If the search they make is reasonable, they do not need this provision. If it is illegal, this provision will not make it legal.

What are we actually asked to do, in fact, when we put this language in, the language suggested in the Prettie amendment? One thing we are asked to do is to encourage the police to commit illegal acts. I say we should never encourage the police or anyone else to commit illegal acts, whether it be illegal search and seizure or any other illegal act.

The other thing we are asked to do is to fight the legality of the United States supreme court, to fight a rearguard action similar to the southern states with respect to integration and other arguments with the supreme court. We are asked to say, in essence, that the United States supreme court is not the law of the land, or to fight it. We are asked to say that it is okay for the police to commit illegal acts.

Now, the argument is made, suppose the police do make these illegal searches and seizures. Who does it hurt, anyway? Suppose they do stop every car. Suppose they do seize evidence, and so on. Who is being injured — only the criminal. That is the argument. If that is the only person that is being injured, I have no objection to it. I wish criminals to be punished. But the trouble is, as is pointed out, 1000 persons for every criminal will be injured.

Well, it is stated that the injury is very slight. What happens is that they stop your car, they ask you to get out, politely no doubt, and never do anything except to search your car. And if there is nothing wrong, what do you have to worry about?

I think the answer to that is that you have a great deal to worry about. They could do that to everyone. I suppose they could. But suppose they decide not to do it to everyone. Suppose they decide to do it only to some people. If they had the practice of doing it to everyone, it certainly would not be harmful to quit doing it to some people and to do it only to the ones who are left over.

Now there have been countries where that is exactly what happened. The police violated the law, not as to everyone but only as to some people. They pick out the people whom they wish to abuse. And when they do that they do not only abuse them in a slight way; they abuse them as much as they can get away with.

You will have noticed, as was pointed out to you, that in the Mapp case the abuse in that case was not a very slight abuse. It was manhandling. That is the result of allowing any kind of improper or illegal conduct by the police.

If you allow one kind of illegal conduct by the police, why shouldn't they do illegal conduct number 2, and why not illegal conduct number 3? Why shouldn't they manhandle someone if that is the way to get the evidence? Why shouldn't they stomach pump someone, for example, in a case where they think he swallowed drugs? The police have done that in a case in California and the supreme court had to act on that.

When you encourage illegality by the police, you permit, as Judge Gadola pointed out, a gradual erosion of the freedom of the people and you make it possible for discriminatory police illegality to exist. That is no theory. That has been a fact. What you encourage — I do not say that the mere searching of a car does this — but what you encourage is a gestapo technique. I wish to discourage the gestapo technique. Many people of my race have experienced it personally. They are not here to report it, but I would like to report that I am opposed to it, and even if it is only a slight violation, let us not go in that direction.

Once you point to a disease and say it is good, what do you do? Do you cure it? No, you spread it. And if this is a wrong thing, let us not make it appear right. We cannot make it right, therefore let us admit that it is not right. If it is not right, let us stop it and let us not spread it or encourage its spreading.

Now, I should like to make another observation. This argument is obviously not just a legal argument and I believe it is not an argument that is being brought to us entirely on its merits. This argument has been presented in an unusual way. I believe that the delegates have been bombarded with information and with a great deal of misinformation.

I somehow feel it is like a jury in which they discussed the issue beforehand. I do not refer to our caucuses. I realize that both caucuses discussed it. But they have lots of democrats who did not have enough time to determine the answer. But this has been discussed in the newspapers. Not only was it discussed in the newspapers but copies of the newspapers have been sent around to us in case we missed them.

I received 3 copies of the Detroit Free Press telling me the whole thing in a nutshell. One of them I got when I was home, when this article came out in the Detroit Free Press of December 26, a copy of which was sent to me yesterday. And by bad luck a delegate gave me a third copy today. It was just as wrong each time I got it.

The first time I got it I wrote an outraged letter to the editor and to his boss setting forth categorically 14 points of factual and legal error and I pointed out that I did not think that was very responsible journalism.

He wrote me back and he said, "Well, just because you disagree with me does not mean it is irresponsible." But I believe that it is, when it is chockfull of factual, legal errors. And that is the kind of information that you undoubtedly will be bombarded with.

I will not read the article. I would just like to point out, however, to the free press — and I use the term "free press" in a generic sense — that last night some of us were fighting our hearts out for the free press and we were not exactly winning. We were fighting our hearts out for the freedom of the press in spite of what we knew they had done. It was not a simple decision to conclude that this kind of journalism should be protected without any regulation, but that was the conclusion that we reached, except that maybe it should be said the convention did not. There is a great deal of misinformation, not only the misinformation in the article referred to.

I should like to point out what the actual law is on this subject. I refer not just to the federal law, but to the law of search and seizure. First of all, you have to keep this in mind. If seizure is legal, it can be admitted — the evidence I mean — it doesn't matter whether it is narcotics or weapons or whatever, it can be admitted in evidence.

Now what kind of seizures are legal? There is a great deal of confusion about that. There are 3 different ways in which evidence can be seized and it could be legal.

One of them is with a search warrant. Naturally that is not the best way with an automobile. But it is the best way in many other cases. That can only be obtained upon probable cause, upon oath before a magistrate. But that is not the only way.

There is a certain amount of belief among some people that you have to get a search warrant and if not it is automatically an illegal seizure. That is not so. There are 2 other ways of making a seizure which are legal, or which are reasonable, in other words.

One of them is where there is probable cause to believe that a crime has been committed and evidence thereof, and where there is no time to get a warrant because the evidence is in such a condition or is of such a type that it is likely to be removed. Now, an automobile, of course, is such an example. If there is evidence which is believed to be in an automobile and there is probable cause for believing it is there, so that you could have gotten a warrant if you had had time, you do not have to get the warrant, you can seize it. Therefore, if you have a situation where a policeman stops a car and he seizes something in there, that is legal. If he sees something in the car he can make the seizure right then and there. In fact, he can make it on that ground and on another ground which I will mention in just a moment.

The third ground which makes a seizure legal is, as also was mentioned somewhere along the line today, when a seizure is incident to a lawful arrest. If there is a lawful arrest, whatever the reason may be, the officer who makes the arrest has the authority to make a reasonable search and seizure of the surroundings, of the person and the surroundings. The original intention was to protect the officer from being killed by some weapon but it is not limited to that.

There are 3 different ways of making a search and seizure which are legal and there are no other ways at the present time.

The point, then, is this. There are certain cases when seizure from an automobile, even without any advance information, will be legal. There are other cases in which it is illegal. The police are not prevented from making legal seizures just because it is from a car. There are certain cases when they can make it and other cases when they cannot.

Now, if the police are interested in solving their problems, what they should do is to try to expand the law concerning reasonable searches and seizures. They should try to find a way to make searches which are legal. And I will suggest a way. It is not a correct solution to say, "Well, we are going to go ahead and make illegal searches and seizures," on the theory that it will pay off. What I am asserting now, is that the solution to this problem of the police, which of course is a real problem, lies not in breaking the law but in making the law, finding a way, if they can, to make legal searches and seizures.

The law of search and seizure is very vague. It is possible that it can be amplified and clarified by law. I would simply suggest 2 things that I believe the police could do. Probably there are many others that could be thought of, but here are 2 which occur to me.

One of them, I suggested to the convention. And that would be that the attorney general, who is basically in charge of the state's law enforcement, could be given subpoena power to investigate. If he could investigate, probably we could get probable cause to make these searches and seizures; and in addition, of course, it would assist in all kinds of crime prevention and law enforcement. That ought to be done. I asked the convention to do it; I do not know whether or not they will do it.

The main thing that I suggest, however, is this. This relates directly to searches and seizures, let us say, and not indirectly. Let me put it like this, the difficulty with these searches and seizures is this. We all know that it is unknown before we make the search and seizure whether the person is innocent or guilty. If we were positive beforehand that he were guilty, we would have no problem. The evidence should be seized in that case. If we were positive beforehand that he were innocent, the evidence should not be seized. We do not want searches conducted against innocent people; but we do want searches conducted against guilty persons, basically, but the trouble is that we do not know which is which until it is too late.

Suppose we did know which was which beforehand. Suppose we took into account that what we are really after in criminal law enforcement is to break down syndicated or professional crime, not just the person who commits a crime once but the persons who make it a business. If we can solve that problem, then we are solving the main problem. Suppose, for example, then, that there were enabling legislation enacted by our legislature which would say something like this, "a person convicted of a felony may be sentenced, among other things, to a loss of certain civil rights, one of which includes the right to be free of unreasonable searches and seizures within certain limits." Now, that has never been done, as far as I am aware, but there is a first time for everything, just as there was for many other things much bigger than that. And bigger things are done all the time.

When you deprive a person of all his liberties by putting him in jail, that is, of course, much bigger than depriving him of this little liberty. It seems to me we could put criminals out of business—professional criminals, that is,—if we sought to do so. We could do so if, in so doing, we would not make a wholesale attack upon the entire population but if we could make it on the professional criminal. It seems to me that a professional criminal is out of business when his associates know that he actually is a dangerous person to be next to because he can be searched any time.

Some such attack as that on the problem is what I believe would be an appropriate attack. Try to find out how you can make legal searches and seizures and do not try to make illegal ones appear to be legal.

I will close now by simply saying this. Let's not kid ourselves about what we are asking ourselves to do here and about what we are being asked to do. We are being asked to make illegal acts appear to be legal and permissible. That is the wrong approach. There are approaches that can be taken but this is not the right one. Let's not be stampeded by error in law and logic. Let us consider the matter coolly, face the truth and act upon it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair wishes to advise the delegates who are standing that he has written their names down and it is not necessary to remain standing. You will be called in the order in which you rose.

The Chair at this time will recognize Judge Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I have been very much interested in the discourses here this afternoon. At the outset I wish to express my appreciation of the work of Dr. Pollock's committee. And I do not question the sincerity of him or any members of his committee, and I have profound respect for the legal opinions that have been given here this afternoon.

So much has been said, pro and con, with regard to the technicalities of procedure that are involved in the question under discussion, that I believe that I would only add more confusion through any attempt that I might make at this time to expose my theory of the law.

To come to the point, I rise to support the amendment of my colleague, Mr. Prettie, who sits across the aisle.

I might talk for some time regarding personal experiences which I have had during my years on the bench and particularly with cases during the latter days of my term in which the question which has been discussed here this afternoon was presented. I know that there are men today at 4000 Cooper street who did not agree with my rulings and interpretations of the law. Fortunately, the supreme court did not have the opportunity to do by me as they did by my colleague, Judge Gadola, and so my decisions stand, in those cases, without reversal.

It seems to me that it is very obvious that there are 2 or 3 or more points of view in this case. I do not profess to have either the gift of prophecy or the legal knowledge to foretell with accuracy what the supreme court may finally say, if and when they have an opportunity to do so, regarding the issue before us. But I do feel this way at this particular time. As a delegate, I am not in favor of reversing the verdict of the people of the state of Michigan which they expressed in 1952 and before that many years.

In other words, I believe that the issue is one which the supreme court and not this convention should decide.

From my own experience, and I repeat, I believe that we should retain and support the law enforcing officials of this state who are trying to do their duty. I, too, might cite examples in which I think they infringed upon the personal liberty of individuals. And I have never, and I do not now, wish to tolerate or encourage them in any form of wrongdoing.

On the other hand, I do not wish my position on this issue to be misconstrued or I may place myself in the position of appearing to be selling out to public enemies. I believe those are the ones who stand to profit most by the deletion from the constitution of the provision which is here under consideration.

I think I have said enough. I might, however, conclude with this thought. It has been said of police officers, when they are selected to receive their badges, some of them grow with authority and other just swell.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, I should like to offer a substitute amendment, which is on the secretary's desk, for the amendment offered by Mr. Prettie and the amendment to Mr. Prettie's amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hatch has filed the following substitute amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 28, after "affirmation" by striking out the period and on page 3, line 6, by striking out "Evidence obtained in violation of this section shall not be used except as authorized by law" and inserting "Evidence obtained in violation of this section shall not be admissible in any court against any person".

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, at the outset I might state that I agree wholeheartedly with the remarks of Judge Gadola, Delegates Nord and Norris. I also agree with the spirit of Mr. Hanna's amendment.

However, I feel that the language which is suggested by the committee—in other words, "Evidence obtained in violation of this section shall not be used except as authorized by law"—may open the door even wider to the use of evidence illegally obtained. In other words, as I understand the provision, "as authorized by law" would permit the legislature to expand the present proviso which applies only outside the curtilage to within the curtilage.

True, the Supreme Court of the United States has ruled that evidence obtained illegally within the curtilage in the Mapp case is not admissible. But I would hate to see an individual put in the position of having to take a case all the way up to the Supreme Court of the United States merely in order to have an enactment of our legislature stricken down.

Therefore, I offer this amendment in order to make crystal clear that any evidence that is obtained illegally or by unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be admissible in any court.

I agree with the remarks of Dr. Nord to the effect that the Mapp case has settled this matter. I think that the language suggested by Delegate Prettie, in effect, would be unconstitutional under the Mapp decision. I believe what the Mapp decision decides is that where there is an illegal search and seizure, regardless of where it occurs or how it occurs, evidence obtained in violation of that search and seizure is not admissible against the defendant or accused. But assuming that the Mapp case had not been decided or, as some contend, that it does not apply to the language suggested by Mr. Prettie, as a matter of principle I still advocate the language I have proposed.

I oppose the Prettie amendment in principle because it fosters illegal acts, and while paying lip service to the constitutional guarantee, that of freedom from unreasonable search and seizure, to permit the admission of evidence illegally obtained nurtures and even acts as an inducement to law enforcement agencies to act illegally. In my mind it is a prime example of the adoption of a concept of the ends justifying the means.

Now, the laymen here may not understand that legal searches may be made without a warrant. That is, a legal search may be made pursuant to a lawful arrest. I will not go into all the ramifications of that because it has already been covered by Delegate Norris, Judge Gadola and Dr. Nord. I feel that where a search is made, pursuant to a lawful arrest, or by virtue of a warrant, lawfully issued, this is certainly adequate protection to society and to law enforcement agencies.

We have heard the complaint that if the present language is not continued, that law enforcement will be irreparably damaged. This I dispute and the United States supreme court disputed it in the Mapp case.

It was pointed out in the majority opinion by Mr. Justice Clark, who I might point out was formerly holder of the top law enforcement position in the country, namely that of attorney general, that the federal government has been working under the rule that I propose for nearly 50 years and that this has not hampered or in any way reduced the efficiency or effectiveness of the federal bureau of investigation.

I urge all delegates to consider seriously my amendment and I thank you for this opportunity to present it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, on a point of information, I did not fully understand Delegate Hatch's amendment with regard to a substantive change. Did he indicate that he wished to delete the present proviso in article II, section 10, and add the words that he proposed, or just add the words that he proposed?

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment offered by Mr. Hatch is offered as a substitute to the Prettie amendment, and would strike out the language on page 3, in line 6, in capitals, which reads, "Evidence obtained in violation of this section shall not be used except as authorized by law.", and would insert in lieu thereof "Evidence obtained in violation of this section shall not be admissible in any court against any person.".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this particular issue is one to which I have given some serious consideration. I have examined the long line of federal cases and the long line of state cases on the question. It is unfortunate but true that there is a great deal of emotional emphasis being placed on the true issue here. For example, the statement was made, "If the supreme court of the United States wants to overrule the will of the people, let them; but I'm not going to do it." Several delegates have expressed this sort of sentiment.

Of course, it is not the supreme court of the United States. It goes back to a group something like this that met in Philadelphia about 175 years ago. The presiding officer was a fellow by the name of George Washington. These people decided what our federal constitution should consist of.

The supreme court is duty bound, and this was established very, very early in Marbury v. Madison and other early cases, that the supreme court is the arbitrator of the meaning of the constitution and how it should be applied. For nearly half a century the supreme court has been eloquent and clear with regard to applying the law pertaining to this sort of illegally obtained evidence in federal courts. The Weeks case settled the issue once and for all.

It is true that in the Wolf v. Colorado case the supreme court vacillated a little bit, I think, in applying the rule to the states with the hope that the states would step up to their responsibilities. Apparently the states, although unfortunately not all of the states, did this. I would say that most of them have.

We are now in a position where we have to decide, as delegates to this constitutional convention, what course we want Michigan to take.

Now, obviously there are 2 approaches to the problem. We can do what we think is right or we can do what we have to do under the supreme court. In my opinion, it all adds up to the same thing. We still have to obey the supreme law of the land.

I am now suggesting that the people were wrong in 1952. I am saying that the people were wrong on June 19, 1961, if they still felt the same way as they felt in 1952, when completely apprised of all the facts. That, of course, is a moot question. No one knows how they felt on June 19, 1961. But at that time the Mapp case came down. That became the supreme law of the land.

Attorneys, by habit I suppose, try to distinguish any case that they do not like. Perhaps, we have not gone into the question of the color of Mrs. Mapp's house, so maybe it only applies to brown houses or to white houses. I don't know. But the supreme court made no attempt to distinguish the facts of this particular case. Now, surely it is not the same thing. It was pornographic material they were talking about, it was the violation of an Ohio statute they were talking about, it was a search within the curtilage—in fact, within the very dwelling. But the Supreme Court of the United States said, and these words were repeated today by Judge Gadola. I am not going to talk too long but I want delegates to pay particular attention to what is being said here:

> Today we once again examine Wolf's constitutional documentation of the right to privacy free from unreasonable state intrusion and, after its dozen years on our books, are led by it to close the only courtroom door remaining open to evidence secured by official lawlessness in flagrant abuse of that basic right, reserved to all persons as a specific guarantee against that very same unlawful conduct. We hold that all evidence obtained by searches and seizures in violation of the constitution is, by that same authority, inadmissible in a state court.

Now, they are speaking very specifically, and when they say constitution, unfortunately they do not mean the Michigan constitution, they mean the federal constitution. They do not mean certain types of searches and seizures in certain types of circumstances and they do not say that.

I will concede that some argument can be made for the one majority voice on the supreme court which did try to distinguish his opinion on a few facts. But the other 4 justices made no such attempt. They very clearly go along with this wording and this now is the supreme law of the land.

Now, as a delegate, first of all, let me say that I have sworn to uphold the federal constitution, the Constitution of the United States, and that I will do. I will not vote in favor of something which I personally believe—and I realize that reasonable men can differ—but I will not vote in favor of something which I personally feel violates the federal constitution. And if there was ever any question in my mind before, and frankly there was not, there is none now. The Mapp case has made the issue crystal clear as far as I am concerned.

A second point, the record may show this, I will stake my professional reputation as an attorney at law that, if we adopt any of these amendments, or retain the present proviso, it will be held unconstitutional by the supreme court of these United States.

I thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Sharpe.

MR. SHARPE: Mr. Chairman, in view of the fact that the hour is so late and I have become so weary, I will yield to someone else. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Faxon. Mr. Faxon, will you yield for just a moment?

Dr. Pollock?

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I have no desire to terminate an interesting and valuable discussion but perhaps we have gotten as far as we can get this afternoon in relation to these matters. If the committee would prefer to sit it out, that is fine. I was prepared to move to rise but I will not do so if that is not the wish of the committee.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair would like to call attention to the fact that the speakers should confine their remarks and make them germane to the amendment before the committee of the whole.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I can see that I am coming on at a very unpopular time, as the hour gets later and as the words become many, people grow even more fatigued.

I just heard Delegate Hatch's amendment or substitute amendment and, although I had an amendment pending, I realize that you get involved with a certain degree of complexity through adding and adding and adding, so I would then at this time rise to support Delegate Hatch's amendment and speak to that particular point. I refer to Delegate Hatch's substitute amendment. Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do you mean that you will withdraw your amendment?

MR. FAXON: At this moment, yes.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Very well, Mr. Faxon. You may proceed.

MR. FAXON: Now, we have been hearing so many different arguments that I know we are beginning to repeat some of these things. I think we have to remember, however, that the people of the state of Michigan in 1835 and again in 1850 and again in 1908 submitted to the people of the state for ratification a constitution without any proviso. I think we have to keep in mind that we are dealing with a very old and sacred doctrine in our history; that is, dealing with unreasonable searches and seizures.

I am slightly worried, as I think Delegate Prettie was, about the wording of the committee proposal and I share with Delegate Hatch the concern he expressed, because the committee proposal leaves it up to law and it does not say the rule of the Mapp case is the rule for Michigan. It says it shall be as prescribed by law.

I think this could be interpreted in many ways and I would much prefer to see something along the lines of the substitute of Delegate Hatch which takes care of this and does not put it in the hands of the legislature to interpret at will or to change it. It could lead to even greater infractions upon the rights of the people.

Our proposition is to protect society from the criminal. Everyone is agreed on the value of that. At least we start out with something we generally agree upon. In order to do that, however, we want to get as perfect a case as possible. Historically speaking, the most perfect case that you can present is a confession, a signed confession.

Now, this is the procedure that was used for hundreds of years. We go back to Roman law — we can see it in the Spanish inquisition — they used the signed confession as the perfect case, and this would ultimately mean that the person accused was guilty. We see it today in the Russian courts.

Now, this is all based on a perfect case. No matter how you get it, if you have a signed confession, that is enough. But the anglo American development, our own development here, is not based on a perfect case.

In our system, as it has developed over the years, we let a jury decide, with the assistance of the judge on points of law, whether the facts in the case are such as to indicate a decision against the person involved. This means that the prosecutor, or whoever is prosecuting the case, does not have to have a perfect case. He does not have to have a signed confession in order to prosecute. He can go ahead with circumstantial evidence, if that happens to be available, and prosecute on the basis of that.

This very process of permitting the use of circumstantial evidence results in a less perfect case. It also means that the person has to have certain protections. That is, the individual does not have to expose himself, and he is protected in his daily activities from such exposure. This is based on the doctrine of individual freedom.

The other system of a perfect case, of a signed confession, is alien and foreign to our ideals and to our tradition. We settle for much less, as far as the evidence is concerned but in doing so, we protect the individual in the whole process.

As soon as you institute illegal seizures, you restrict the individual and you give him less protection. Now, I am going through this review very quickly, but let me say this. You simply cannot have a free, fluid society, a capitalistic society, and have this kind of provision which restricts the rights of everyone. It is not just a matter of law enforcement; this deals with the whole activity of society, the activities of everyone — all the people — in our society. This, in a sense, represents taking away certain liberties. I realize that we are talking about unreasonable searches and seizures and I think everyone who has spoken in this debate has made that clear.

We have heard reference to this case to which I shall direct your attention. I simply wish to make one point a little clearer. I refer to the case dealing with James Otis and his speech against the writs of assistance, February 24, 1761. That is a very famous case in point which led up to the adoption in all the colonial constitutions of restrictions against unlimited search and seizure. It was reflected in the 1776 constitution, and in 1778, in 1779 — Pennsylvania, New York, et cetera — they all carried forward this idea, because these general writs did not define the place, they lasted as long as the life of the king, they did not require the person who served them to make any return, they did not require a report to the court on what the server did, and so on. These are essentially illegal and the American colonists fought a war to protect themselves against this kind of usurpation of the authority of the king.

I will skip all this — these portions of my notes — (laughter) I am going to make this a little shorter because the hour is late. I will just quote from one extract. Everybody is quoting this afternoon and I think I should get in at least a couple of quotes. I do not have the court citation and all the elaborate paraphernalia of the lawyers that the legal profession requires but later I will produce the evidence.

I wish simply to quote from a decision of Chief Justice Taney, 1862, in the case of ex parte Merryman, 17 Federal Cases, 144. Here it says:

> The constitution provides, as I have before said, that "no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law." It declares that "the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated, and no warrant shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched and the persons or things to be seized."

He considers these a fundamental law and a fundamental right and it is one of those rights referred to by previous speakers as being embodied in the present declaration.

And so, in concluding, I put this statement forth, certain rights are so fundamental as to be derived from the very nature of justice, even from the very nature of God. It was the purpose and function of society to protect these rights, and indeed constitutional government existed to assure this protection.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Ford indicated that he wished to speak and he is now yielding to Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, I have learned once again that if I can only restrain myself and keep still long enough, almost invariably somebody else will voice the thoughts that are going through my mind. And that has happened this afternoon. Of course, they did not say the things as well as I could have. (laughter) But yet they voiced them.

There is one thing, however, I should like to bring to your attention. Much of the discussion we have heard this afternoon seems to be based upon the absolute certainty that the Michigan supreme court and the federal supreme court will declare our present constitutional provision void as being in conflict with the federal constitution.

And in that connection, I hope you noted a part of the remarks of Delegate Higgs. From that it appears that the meat of that decision that the barring of the testimony in a case of illegal search applies to state courts as well as to federal courts, was not the decision of the majority of the supreme court. That was a decision of 4 of the justices. Apparently that case was heard by only 8, and the fifth justice, there concerned, joined in voting for a reversal upon some other ground. So we have this picture, that 4 of the justices of the supreme court have committed themselves on this issue. You might say that 3 definitely, the other way, and one, inferentially, and it all depends upon the ninth justice when we have a case that is heard before the full court.

I realize the seriousness of this question and it is not lightly that I have arrived at my conclusions in the matter. However, I recognize the compelling force of the arguments on the other side. But my feeling is this, that this convention should not take out what the people have so emphatically put in, unless and until the highest court has specifically declared the proviso to be invalid and ineffective.

I noted, and I am sure it was sincere, that everybody who has spoken on this subject has done so out of a sense of loyalty to our free principles as reflected by our bill of rights in the federal and state constitutions. I am reminded by the spectacle that we have had before us that although we may be convinced of each other's sincerity, we are still convinced of the superiority of our own reasoning.

There is the story of 2 clergymen who had gotten into a red hot discussion about some point of theology to the extent that they had become very angry with each other. They turned away to part and one of them remembered his Christian principles sufficiently to suggest to the other, "Now, brother, it really would be unseemly, would it not, if we parted here in a spirit of hostility?" And the other one said, "Yes, come to think of it, I guess that would be true. I think the important thing to remember is that we are engaged in the same endeavor. We are both trying to do the Lord's work — you in your way, and I in His!" (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I was one of the delegates who submitted a proposal relative to this very question. My proposal was somewhat like the committee's proposal as it eventually was turned out, except that the last sentence went something like this:

> The evidence obtained in violation of this section shall not be admitted in any court in criminal cases or in any criminal proceedings held before any magistrate or justice of the peace.

I would like to point that out, due to the fact that I feel I am now taking a different position relative to this matter. I shall not quote other authorities because in my own modest way I feel that I am the best authority on this subject today. (laughter)

I think we should recognize that this is not—the language that we are contemplating for this constitution, that is—a matter of eliminating illegal searches and seizures. Basically, we are attempting to adopt language that will act as a deterrent to illegal searches and seizures.

The history of this, which I think we should investigate a little bit, goes back, first of all, to the Weeks case. At that time, of course, there was a federal constitutional guarantee against illegal searches and seizures. There have been in some states—I recall that at that time there were in some states and even after that—statutes adopted which made it a criminal offense for a state officer to violate the state's constitutional guarantee against illegal searches and seizures by the making of such a search or seizure.

This proved to be ineffective. Likewise, the other deterrent to such illegal searches and seizures—the right of a trespass action against the officer who committed this illegal search and seizure or this trespass—has proved unavailing and did not deter illegal searches and seizures by officers.

This, as I say, was adopted, so therefore, in the federal government there came about the exclusionary rule which was a judicial decision. It was adopted in the case of Weeks v. United States.

Following that, Michigan, which also had a constitutional guarantee in much the same language as that contained in the federal constitution, adopted the exclusionary rule in the case of People v. Markshousen.

Subsequent to that, of course, the amendments were put into the constitution which presently constitute the so called proviso dealing with contraband, which permitted the admission of contraband into evidence in a trial of respondents even though such contraband had been illegally obtained.

Now, with this short background, we move on to a critique of the committee proposal. First of all, I think that it is objectionable. By the way, in order to show that I am dealing with something that is properly before the committee at this time, I am speaking both to the Hatch amendment, the committee proposal, and the amendment offered by Mr. Prettie. They are so intertwined that they cannot be segregated.

The failure of the committee proposal, first of all, to limit the application of the inadmissibility language to criminal proceedings raises a question of the effect of this provision on civil proceedings. It has always been contemplated and the proviso where it speaks of the admissibility of contraband in the trial of a respondent limits it to criminal proceedings.

I would not be so bold as to say that I can contemplate all of the effects of the present committee proposal—the language of that proposal—under civil proceedings. I can think of divorce actions, et cetera, where very possibly evidence would be offered and an attempt would be made to have it admitted, which in effect would be contrary to the search and seizure provision of the constitution. And I am sure, sir, the committee did not contemplate that this would be applicable to civil proceedings.

Too, the following may be said. My second criticism of the language of the committee proposal is this. I believe they have employed the word "used"—shall not be used—it is not that it shall not be admissible but that it shall not be used. This, of course, brings in a whole raft of judicial applications of the language. For instance, the following questions are raised. Does this mean that although maybe a certain invoice which is illegally obtained may not be used in evidence but may be used to obtain information and in that way lead the enforcement officer to other evidence which, in a sense, would also be convicting in nature?

There have been cases in other jurisdictions and a case in Michigan which seem to say that evidence which is indirectly obtained by virtue of an illegal search and seizure may not be used, either. Neither can the evidence itself nor any evidence which is indirectly obtained by this very evidence which was initially illegally obtained.

As I have said, at first I was of the opinion that the Hatch amendment or the amendment of the committee proposal, which would make this evidence inadmissible, was the proper way to handle this matter. However, the present controversy arises, basically—as I have said—out of the amendment to the 1908 constitution, that is, those amendments which constitute the proviso at present.

That, plus the decision of the United States supreme court in the case of Dollree Mapp v. State of Ohio which was decided on June 19, 1961—June 19 of last year, which held that the protection against illegal searches and seizures of the fourth amendment of the federal constitution is carried over and imposed upon the states by the fourteenth amendment to the United States constitution, in effect, said that the exclusionary rule is not a rule of evidence, but is a rule of substance; that the exclusionary rule is part and parcel of the fourth amendment and that no state may further limit the fourth amendment in its effect upon their residents or citizens. That is what they said.

Now, what is the effect of the Mapp case? Certainly the facts of the Mapp case would limit that decision to the curtilage of the home, if that was the intent of the courts, because the facts of the case were that the curtilage of the home was involved and it did not involve contraband. But I am of the opinion—and I think that any lawyer here who has read that case certainly should be of the opinion—that the Mapp case is not limited to the curtilage of the home nor has it any effect on the decision, the judicial interpretation, of our present constitutional provision about contraband.

It certainly does raise a question, however, in view of the effect that Judge Dehnke spoke of, and that is that 4 of the supreme court justices held that the decision as we have mentioned it applies to the states whereas the fifth justice joined with the 4 for reversal of the Ohio supreme court's decision but really did not join with the other 4 in their reasons for their decision. At the same time I think that it should be pointed out that, as I recall the Mapp case, in rebuttal of what Judge Dehnke has said, I believe that one of the justices at least said that although he was inclined to think that possibly this should be the reasoning of the court, he did not think that the question had been properly raised in the Mapp case since the attorneys arguing the case had not really raised the matter as an issue in the United States supreme court.

It is, therefore, my purpose in speaking at this time—and I am not offering an amendment because I have checked with the secretary and I notice that there are amendments in the secretary's hands—1 or 2 at least—which suggest that we retain the language of the present constitution without amendment. Otherwise, that would be the language of the 1908 constitution without the proviso—without any language with respect to the inadmissibility of evidence obtained in violation of the section.

I support this approach because it occurs to me that, now that we have said that the exclusionary rule is not a rule of evidence but a rule of substance, very likely congress may pass a law making it a criminal offense for any state officer to violate this constitutional guarantee.

This was not possible and it was not effective before because you were requiring the county prosecutor who was constantly working with the law enforcement officers to cite that law enforcement officer for a violation of a constitutional provision. This was impossible to do. Prosecutors would not do it and they could always find some reason for not doing it.

However, when we remove the jurisdiction of that criminal offense from the state jurisdiction to the federal jurisdiction, very likely we will have a protection against the over zealous officer who in reality should be the one punished and not the people, by failure of a conviction. The whole purpose of the exclusionary rule is aimed against the over zealous officer, not against the people by result of the failure to get a conviction.

Secondly, I think there can be little question but that the proviso as it presently stands under the wording of the Mapp case decision and the present holding of the United States supreme court, is unconstitutional. I, as a delegate here and as a lawyer, do not propose to put something into this constitution which at this time, in my opinion, is unconstitutional. I appear stupid at times but I do not like to do so when I know I am appearing stupid.

Thirdly, I think that the effect of the exclusionary rule, as it has been brought down to us by the federal court, can best be determined in a judicial proceeding rather than in a convention called to draft the constitution. It has always been my opinion that judicial questions should be decided in a judicial rather than in a political atmosphere.

Now, as to the proviso, it seems to me that, if the Mapp case by subsequent judicial opinion is limited in its effect to the curtilage of the home and to exclude contraband, the legislature may very well, by a simple legislative action, enact the very proviso about which we are now talking.

Furthermore, this can be done by judicial interpretation. It has been said here today that, in effect, not to retain the proviso is to "pull the rug out from under the people of the state of Michigan" with respect to cases that are presently pending in our supreme court.

I do not agree with this. I think that the debate and the reasons advanced for the removal, if it is removed, have been very well recorded here, and there is no basis for a court subsequently to say that it was the will of the constitutional convention to remove the proviso as a matter of political theory rather than of facing reality in terms of this decision in the Mapp case.

To those who have said that the Mapp case does not mean what it says, I would like to mention that the United States supreme court, in several cases—I have noted here just 3—the United States supreme court, in effect, has said the very same thing that is said in the Mapp case, but has found some other way to justify the decision.

First of all, in Rios v. United States, a federal officer obtained narcotics by an illegal search and seizure, and was unable to present that evidence in a federal proceeding because of a motion to suppress that evidence. When that motion was dismissed—when the case was dismissed because of the way in which the evidence had been obtained—he walked across the street to the prosecutor's office and brought a similar proceeding in a state court where this rule would not apply.

The defense attorney being quite wise in that action—the state action—proceeded to file a motion for an injunction in the federal district court having jurisdiction over that officer and the federal district court there enjoined the federal officer from testifying in the state prosecution. In that case they did not say that the fourth amendment applies to the states through the fourteenth but rather the court said, "We hold that this man may not testify in this action, not because of the fourth amendment but rather because of the general supervisory powers which the federal courts have over federal officers. That was begging the question, I believe, Mr. Chairman.

Likewise, in the wire tapping cases. Once again the court, after finding that the evidence was inadmissible by virtue of section 535 of the federal communications code, said that since it is unlawful to do this, the evidence is inadmissible and we do not reach the other constitutional grounds.

Likewise in Lustig v. United States, there was a 5 to 4 decision in which I recall one of the justices saying the defendant in this case is not concerned with who made this illegal search and seizure and who obtained this evidence illegally; and we should not be either. This was a 4 man dissent out of the court with a 5 man majority.

The Mapp case is, therefore, not a new decision. It is not a new development in criminal procedure, in criminal law, in this nation; but rather, it is the end result of the eventual processes of the law.

I would like to further point out that there are at least 2 circuit judges that I know of in this state of Michigan who have already held that the proviso of the Michigan constitution is unconstitutional under the ruling of the Mapp case.

Thank you very much.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report to the convention.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Those in favor of the motion signify by saying aye. Opposed, no. The Chair is in doubt. Those in favor of the motion will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Eighty-two, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The majority elect of the committee having voted to rise, it is so ordered.

[Whereupon the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration one proposal, has made no amendments thereto, and begs leave to sit again in this matter. The secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 15, and has come to no final resolution thereon.

This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, may I request that any copies of amendments that were resting on the secretary's desk in the committee of the whole be mimeographed for distribution before our session tomorrow. I think this will facilitate the work of the committee.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, it will be done. Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, in addition to the announcements on the composite calendar, the following:

Due to the lateness of the hour, the meeting of the committee on legislative organization, scheduled for this afternoon, is postponed until tomorrow morning at 9:30 a.m. John Hannah, chairman.

The meeting of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, which was scheduled after the session, is cancelled. The next meeting will be at the regularly scheduled time, tomorrow morning, at 10:30. Reports by subcommittees on corporations, militia and division of the powers of government will be considered. Claud Erickson, chairman.

The school financing subcommittee of the committee on education will meet after the session today in room J. Mr. Page, chairman.

The committee on administration will meet tomorrow at 1:00 o'clock p.m. Walter DeVries, chairman.

The committee on legislative powers will meet Wednesday at 10:30. T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

The committee on public information will meet in room D tomorrow at 1:00 o'clock. Ink White, chairman.

The committee on legislative organization will also meet in room D tomorrow, immediately following the session.

And this further notice, the committee on education will meet January 11 at 10:30 a.m. for a full committee meeting; report of subcommittee on libraries, article XI, section 14. All meetings of the committee on education and the subcommittees are held in room J—mark this, note please; room "J", not "K".

The apples today are furnished by Delegate Rush. (applause)

I have the following requests for leave of absence: Mrs. Koeze and Mr. Martin ask to be excused from the latter part of Thursday's session and the Friday session to attend a meeting of the Republican national committee in Oklahoma City.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they are excused.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Doty.

MR. DONALD DOTY: Mr. President, I move that we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion for adjournment. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

We are adjourned until tomorrow at 2:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon at 5:00 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 2:00 o'clock p.m., Wednesday, January 10, 1962.]

FIFTY-FOURTH DAY

Wednesday, January 10, 1962, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

The invocation today will be given by Mr. L. Edsil Dale, Professor of New Testament and Church History, Great Lakes Bible College, Lansing, Minister of the Church of Christ, Charlotte, Michigan.

Will you please rise.

PROFESSOR DALE: Our Father and our God, our help in ages past, our hope in years to come, we thank Thee for the powers that be which are ordained of Thee. Grant and hasten the day, our Father, when the governments of men on this earth may humbly acknowledge the source and finality of all human powers — that both our wisdom and our strength come from Thee. May the leaders of our great nation constantly seek strength and wisdom from Thee.

And now, in this historic session of these lawmakers of this, our own state, grant guiding wisdom and quiet courage, mingled with faith and foresight, to accept their responsibility and proceed in a proper manner to reframe our guiding principles for good government and Christian conduct. May the decisions of this earnest effort become a worthy example to our sister states and our nation.

To this end let Thy blessing rest upon this daily session, we pray in the name of Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present, please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The machine is now locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Absent with leave: Mr. Thomson.

Absent without leave: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Martin, for the committee on executive branch, introduces Committee Proposal 16, A proposal to permit the governor to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons and to delegate this power according to law. Amends article VI, section 9; with the recommendation that it pass.

John B. Martin, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 16 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 579.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Martin, for the committee on executive branch, introduces Committee Proposal 17, A proposal respecting eligibility for the offices of governor and lieutenant governor. Amends article VI, section 13;

with the recommendation that it pass.

John B. Martin, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 17 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 591.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Martin, for the committee on executive branch, introduces Committee Proposal 18, A proposal to provide for a great seal of the state and to authorize its use. A substitute for article VI, sections 11 and 12;

with the recommendation that it pass.
John B. Martin, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 18 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 593.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Erickson, for the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, introduces Committee Proposal 19, A proposal to provide for a state militia. A substitute for all of article XV;
with the recommendation that it pass.
Claud R. Erickson, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 19 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 593.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, reports back to the convention Exclusion Report 2003, A report recommending the exclusion of article X, section 20; without amendment, and with the recommendation that the exclusion report pass.
T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2003, as introduced by the committee on finance and taxation, and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see above, page 415.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the standing committee reports.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Yesterday, Delegate Dade submitted the following parliamentary inquiry:

> Upon the completion of the revision by the 1961-62 constitutional convention, will this document be submitted to the electorate of the state of Michigan in its entirety for ratification, or article by article?

Article XVII, section 4 of the present constitution, as amended November 8, 1960, provides in part:

> Any proposed constitution or amendments adopted by such convention shall be submitted to the qualified electors in the manner provided by such convention.

Professor Pierce and Mr. Lowe, in their work on constitutional convention powers, state, on page 22:

> One of the most important problems to be faced by the convention will be the method to be chosen to govern the submission of the constitution to the electorate. The 1907 convention was bound to submit the constitution as a whole, but the 1961 convention will not be so limited. It has discretion to submit its proposals in any manner it should deem fit.

Accordingly, it is the opinion of the Chair in response to Delegate Dade's inquiry, that the proposed new constitution may be submitted to the people in any manner determined by resolution of this convention.

Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders of the day.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of discussing items on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Baginski that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole.

All those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

May I make just one more statement before I relinquish the Chair. Yesterday for 3 hours we debated section 10. I hope that in today's discussion and debate we will not have to go back and review all the work that was done yesterday and all the arguments and questions that were raised. I trust that members of the convention will address themselves to the issue before them and make their remarks germane to the discussion in an effort to expedite the work of the convention.

Mr. Baginski, please proceed.

[Whereupon Mr. Baginski assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The committee will be in order. We have before us from the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, Committee Proposal 15, A proposal to amend article II pertaining to the declaration of rights.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 15, see above, page 488.

The Chair recognizes Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, as the committee resumes its consideration of the proposal of the committee on rights and specifically section 10, may I suggest, as the president of the convention has done, that since we have had such an adequate general debate, the delegates limit themselves to a brief discussion of the proposed clarifying amendments.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I should like to speak in favor of the Hatch amendment, that appearing as "C" on the sheet listing pending amendments to committee Proposal 15, and I also wish to speak in support of the principles of amendments 2 and 3. Before speaking, I wish to express appreciation to Dr. Pollock and his committee for the very excellent presentation made and for the very fine way in which it handled this problem which has been a very difficult one in the history of mankind.

I believe that the language of these 3 amendments and the intent arises from a desire to provide people with protection from unreasonable searches and seizures as individual citizens and that the result will be that of protecting society by permitting reasonable or lawful search and seizure. The particular reason for my desiring to see this included in our state constitution, and not just in the federal constitution, is that it means that we would then have this historic right spelled out, clear cut, defined and protected, both in the state and federal constitutions.

I, for one, support the concept that a right this strong and this important should be protected in both the state and federal constitutions. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Ladies and gentlemen, before we go any further with the action of this committee of the whole today, I am going to ask Secretary Chase to read a statement relative to the procedure on amendments to amendments, to substitutes, and so forth, and I would ask that each of you give your approval to that procedure.

SECRETARY CHASE: The procedure on amendments as generally followed and as approved by Mason is as follows:

1. Amendments to the pending amendment are to be disposed of before a substitute amendment will be taken up. Only one amendment to the amendment is in order at one time.

2. Amendments to the substitute amendment, if any, are to be next voted on.

3. The substitute amendment will be next voted on. Both the amendment and the substitute amendment having been perfected and presented in final form, the committee will make its choice between the two.

4. The amendment is to be voted on last. If the substitute amendment has been agreed to, the vote then comes on the amendment as amended by the substitute.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do I hear any objection to this procedure?

Hearing none, it will be adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Before we proceed, Mr. Chairman, may the secretary, on behalf of the reporter, make this request. If you have some brief or some particular statement from which you read during the course of your remarks, the reporter would appreciate receiving a copy of it so that this may help insure the accuracy of the reporting.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Before proceeding, ladies and gentlemen, the Chair will further state that yesterday afternoon a number of delegates rose to speak and their names were placed on the list. These delegates wanted to talk. We will hear them in the proper order.

The Chair at this time will ask the secretary to read aloud what is before the committee of the whole for its consideration today.

SECRETARY CHASE: Pending at this time is the amendment offered by Mr. Prettie which appears as item 1 on the mimeographed sheet of pending amendments to Committee Proposal 15, copies of which have been distributed and are now before the delegates. Mr. Prettie's amendment reads as follows:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 494.]

To this amendment, Mr. W. F. Hanna has offered an amendment which is now pending:

[The amendment to the Prettie amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 497.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is now on Mr. Hanna's amendment to the Prettie amendment. The Chair will recognize Mr. Sharpe.

MR. SHARPE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I rise to express my views on this question at this time. Yesterday, I yielded my privilege. Today I asked for it back, and through the courtesy of Mr. Boothby who is on the docket next, he yielded. I am not an orator. I do not have straight in my mind the law about which we heard yesterday — and I am not so sure that we want to hear any more of it, anyway. (laughter) I told someone that I was going to make a farmer's speech but I am going to leave out a few of the farmer's words.

This document which I have here is, I think, the best that has been prepared on this subject. I prepared it last Saturday, as a matter of fact, on my wife's kitchen table. She said, "If you are going to keep this up, I am going to leave you, and move out." But, in any event, I will read this thing verbatim — or nearly so — hoping that you will bear with me if I become a little shaky here, and I probably will. My father told me one time that it takes a smarter man to sit down and shut up than to stand up and talk. And so I will not talk too much. My statement is as follows:

Since it has come to my attention that the committee on rights, suffrage and elections has recommended the deletion of the major part of section 10 by a vote of 8 to 7, I have found myself acting contrary, taking a different position from that which many of you have previously heard me recommend. That is that we should, by and large, take the recommendation of the committee as being the "last word" in sound judgment.

I have attended every session of the convention since its opening and, as you know, I have been saving my words on unimportant matters for occasions such as this.

This proposal to delete from our constitution the amendment of 1936 permitting the introduction of certain weapons in evidence, and the amendment of 1952 permitting the introduction of narcotics into evidence, whenever the same are seized outside the curtilage of a dwelling house, should command our serious attention. These amendments were added to the 1908 constitution after proper deliberation and following a 5 to 1 vote of the people of the state of Michigan. And I say the will of the people is the supreme law of the land. This section, incidentally, is not a part of the so called "horse and buggy" constitution, since its last revision was less than 10 years ago.

Let us not forget that these amendments were considered necessary in order to enable the police to effectively combat gangsterism and traffic in narcotics. What are your proponents of this change going to tell the mother whose daughter is involved with a dope pusher who is given license to carry narcotics without the threat of having it used against him in court? I am well aware that the constitution must protect the rights of the people and that we, as delegates to this convention, should not be permitted to transgress against the rights of the individual. However, we must have the proper regard for the rights of society as well as the duties imposed upon law enforcement officials by the people.

A police officer, as well as a prosecuting attorney, is bound by our constitution in performing his duties. Protection of our society should not be suppressed — law enforcing officers must have the backing of every honest citizen. They must continue to achieve victory over those in our state who are habitually committing crimes against our society. The liberty of the honest, hard working citizen must be protected from the racketeers and hoodlums. They have never worked, nor do they intend to.

This provision relating to search and seizure should not be weakened. We, I am sure, want to live in a state of which we can be proud, with honor and integrity, and not in a state that is full of corruption. Let us stiffen the backbone of our state. And for heaven's sake let us not relax our guard against the thugs and murderers. The hands of our law enforcement people should not be tied so that they cannot perform their duties, the duties which they have sworn to perform to the best of their ability.

I presume that the proponents of the movement to strike out these provisions are motivated by one or more of the civil rights groups, and possibly they honestly feel that the rights of the individual are transgressed by these clauses. However, I do not see how any individual here could object to a clause permitting the seizure of illegally carried guns or narcotics.

I am well aware of the decisions of our supreme court in the cases of the People v. Gonzales, and the People v. Zeigler. These cases carefully define the rights of a police officer to search an automobile on the highway. The Gonzales decision held that the constitutional amendment was not in violation of the United States constitution. I really wish to emphasize that and so I repeat: the amendment is not repugnant to the United States constitution.

I would guess that the officer who stops an automobile for a traffic violation and finds in it ½ dozen stolen typewriters or some other stolen goods, only to have the evidence suppressed, would be discouraged, to say the least, but I ask you this question. Would you want a similar circumstance to obtain if, instead of typewriters, the officer were to discover a quantity of illegal narcotics? Would you like to sit back and watch the narcotics peddler go on his merry, illegal way? Illegally carried weapons and narcotics are certainly 2 items which should not be carried by the violator under the immunity given to that violator by ourselves as delegates to this constitutional convention.

If these clauses come out of the constitution, as has been recommended by the committee, a police officer, in order to prosecute, will have to have advance information that is reliable to the effect that such narcotics or guns are actually being carried in the specific automobile, before he stops it for search or seizure.

If the criminal is given a license to carry his tools, in the same fashion as the carpenter, the plumber, — and, yes, even the lawyer — this will encourage the cunning, law defying individual to undermine every branch of society in our state.

I would not wish to be guilty of following the rule of appeasement, regardless of any pressure to which I might be subjected. I do not believe in giving up, in surrendering, essential liberties that the people of the state of Michigan saw the need for and in respect of which passed the present amendment that we are asked to delete from the new constitution.

Let us not be taken in by some cock and bull story about some people being unduly harassed. Let us demonstrate leadership and integrity by protecting the honest, upright, hard working citizen.

I urge you to vote against the proposal to delete these clauses from our constitution. Be careful that you do not — in effect — license persons to carry narcotics, guns, bombs, et cetera, under the protection of the law of our state.

I thank the committee for its indulgence.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on Mr. Hanna's amendment to the amendment.

Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise to oppose the Hanna amendment and, of course, necessarily must speak to the other amendments which are on the floor. The reason for my rising at this time is because of the fact that Mr. Brown and other individuals have raised the 2 cases which have been recently decided by the circuit court in the state of Michigan, one of them being a case which occurred in Berrien county. I wish to speak with respect to this particular matter because I am familiar with this case, being a member of the prosecutor's office of Berrien county.

That case was entitled the People of the State of Michigan v. George Washington. And incidentally, this is a different George Washington from the gentleman of the same name who served as president of the United States. (laughter) This matter arose out of a factual situation which occurred on July 9, 1961. It is correct to say that our circuit court, in a much publicized decision, indicated that the facts were controlled by the Mapp decision.

The facts in this case are concerned with the provision in our constitution dealing with section 10 of article II. However, I think it might be of some value for you to know that at the present time the case of the People v. Washington is being appealed to the Michigan supreme court. I also understand that the other circuit court decision is also being appealed to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan.

At the present time, we have on the books a decision of the supreme court of this state, the People v. Gonzales, which has held that the proviso in our present constitution is constitutional and that matters which are seized, that come within this provision, may be introduced into evidence even though they may be obtained under an illegal search or seizure.

I thought it might be of some benefit to the committee if I were to read a portion of the brief which was filed by the prosecutor's office in the case of the People v. Washington because it touches on this issue. I think possibly it pinpoints the distinction between the matters which we have before the committee at this time and those in the Mapp case. Reading now from the brief:

> It is the contention of defense counsel that the question of whether or not the search of respondent Washington was reasonable is in no way affected by the following provision:
>
> > The person, houses, papers and possessions of every person shall be secure from unreasonable searches and seizures. No warrant to search any place or to seize any person or things shall issue without describing them, nor without probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation: Provided however, That the provisions of this section shall not be construed to bar from evidence in any court of criminal jurisdiction, or in any criminal proceeding held before any magistrate or justice of the peace, any narcotic drug or drugs, any firearm, rifle, pistol, revolver, automatic pistol, machine gun, bomb, bomb shell, explosive, blackjack, slungshot, billy, metallic knuckles, gas ejecting device, or any other dangerous weapon or thing, seized by any peace officer outside the curtilage of any dwelling house in this state.

This was article II, section 10 of the Michigan Constitution of 1908, as amended in 1952.

This position is based solely and entirely on counsel's interpretation of the United States supreme court decision in Mapp v. Ohio, 367 United States, 643, 81 Supreme Court 1684 (1961), in which counsel contends renders the Michigan constitutional provision above quoted void and of no validity or effect.

Prior to the decision in Mapp v. Ohio, supra, the United States supreme court had adhered to the rule handed down in Wolf v. Colorado, 338 United States, 25, 69 Supreme Court 1359 (1949), viz., that a conviction obtained in a state court on evidence obtained without a warrant and as the result of an unreasonable search and seizure did not offend the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment of the federal constitution. In the same opinion, however, the supreme court stated further that unchecked lawlessness by a state would not be tolerated and could very well be found to violate the federal guarantee.

And then it is quoted:

> We have no hesitation in saying that were a state affirmatively to sanction such police incursion into privacy it would run counter to the guarantee of the fourteenth amendment. (Frankfurter, J.)

And then it continues:

> Hence, even prior to the overthrow of Wolf by the Mapp decision, the law of the land was clear: the statutes and constitutional provisions of each sovereign state would control until such time that those same provisions, or their application and interpretation at the state level, became intolerable and offensive to common decency and honesty.

Said the court in Mapp:

> Today we once again examine Wolf's constitutional documentation of the right to privacy free from unreasonable state intrusion and, after its dozen years on our books, are led by it to close the only courtroom door remaining open to evidence secured by official lawlessness in flagrant abuse of that basic right, reserved to all persons as a specific guarantee against that very same unlawful conduct. (Clark, J.)

It is contended by the people that a comparison of the facts in Mapp v. Ohio, supra, with those in the case at bar make the decision in Mapp understandable and laudable, and further that the Mapp rule does not operate to render void the provision in the state constitution.

Miss Mapp lived on the second floor of a 2 family residence. She was suspected by police to have in her possession obscene literature, contrary to the Ohio criminal code.

Three police officers arrived at her home and demanded entrance. Miss Mapp telephoned her attorney and was advised to deny the officers unless they presented a search warrant.

The officers left the premises and returned some 3 hours later. When Miss Mapp did not respond to their knock at her door, the officers broke down several doors and entered the house.

Miss Mapp demanded to see the search warrant. The officers waved a paper before her, implying that it was a warrant. Miss Mapp demanded that she be allowed to inspect it, grabbed the paper and placed it in her bosom. Several of the officers thereupon seized her, retrieved the paper, twisted her arm, put handcuffs on her, and forced her to accompany them to her bedroom.

Once there, the officers searched Miss Mapp's dresser, a chest of drawers, a closet, and some suitcases. They looked at a photo album and other personal papers.

They then searched a second bedroom, the living room, the kitchen, a dinette. The basement of the house was also searched and a trunk opened and inspected.

During this entire time Miss Mapp was handcuffed. Her attorney appeared on the scene but the officers refused him admittance and would not permit him to communicate with his client.

During the course of this outrageous search, obscene literature was discovered. The Ohio supreme court upheld the conviction that followed with obvious reluctance, stating that the conviction was valid though based primarily upon the introduction in evidence of lewd and lascivious books and pictures unlawfully seized during an unlawful search of defendant's home . . .

Moreover, no warrant was introduced at the trial; it was apparent that a warrant had not been obtained.

And continuing:

Let us consider the various factors which render the Mapp factual situation so vastly different from the instant case.

The search was of a woman's house, not of her person, following her valid arrest for a traffic violation. There is nothing to indicate that Miss Mapp tried to escape or to destroy the literature found in her possession. The officers had to break down doors to gain admittance. They had had ample time in which to procure a search warrant and had failed to do so. Their search was not confined to a wallet, but to Miss Mapp's entire dwelling. They refused her the benefit of counsel and the entire scene is accompanied by continued violence.

It is the position of the people that this is the very conduct which was intended to be outlawed by the supreme court in Mapp as "official lawlessness" and "flagrant abuse" of the individual's basic security.

It is also the people's position that the Mapp decision was not intended to overthrow the provision in the Michigan constitution nor to prevent its reasonable use to the end that the people of the state of Michigan may be the better protected from traffic in narcotics.

Now, I submit to you that this certainly comes within a situation that is a flagrant abuse. But that is certainly a situation different from the one being considered before this constitutional convention — to merely exclude certain evidence.

I should now like to make a couple of additional comments. It has been suggested that there is some degree of comparison between a forced confession — forced confessions which are not admissible in evidence — and matter being introduced in evidence in compliance with our constitutional provision.

There is no duplication here nor is there any similarity or possible basis of comparison. In a coerced confession you have a great degree of doubt as to whether it is a true confession. But when you find a gun in an automobile, there is no question that it is a gun. When you find narcotics in an automobile, there is no question but that it is narcotics. When you have a forced confession, there is certainly grave doubt as to whether it is an actual confession, freely given. So there is a distinction between forced confessions and evidence found in an automobile.

Now, there has been a question raised as to why, since the federal government has not had a problem with the federal bureau of investigation, with this rule of evidence that the federal court has against the admissibility of evidence relating to matters found in searches and seizures, the state cannot abide by the same program the federal government has. And then they refer to the F.B.I. That is the argument raised.

The F.B.I. is only an investigative body. They do not ride around in squad cars. They do not have a situation similar to that of the police of the state of Michigan in terms of ferreting out criminal offenses.

Again, it was pointed out by Mr. Faxon that in our 1908 constitution we did not have the proviso that is now contained in section 10 of article II. And I agree with you, Mr. Faxon, because in 1908 the common law of the state of Michigan was that you could introduce into evidence matters which were found in illegal searches and seizures. It was only some time later that the court changed the common law and for that reason it was necessary to include the 1937 and 1952 amendments to the Michigan constitution. And that is the reason why it is presently there and why the people of the state of Michigan put it there.

I should like to submit this one further thought. But first, I think I need to point out one thing. The introduction of a matter into evidence is one thing. A false arrest suit is another thing. You do have a remedy when there has been an unlawful search and seizure, as was pointed out in People v. Gonzales. You have the remedy of a false arrest suit.

I submit that when a crime has been committed the people of the state, acting through the prosecutor's office, should not be bound by the single act of an investigative officer. The wrong of a police officer should not be imputed to the prosecutor's office or the people of the state. I submit that the wrong of an individual officer should be dealt with by the proper action against the wrongdoer and I would submit that this can be done by a civil suit for false arrest.

Now, I understand that some people think that that is not a sufficient remedy. But at least I can assure you from my own bailiwick that after a false arrest suit was brought in the city of Benton Harbor, our police officers were very concerned about false arrest suits. We have a case going up to the Michigan supreme court on this very constitutional issue. And I understand there is one coming on in the Ingham county circuit on this very constitutional issue.

As Judge Pugsley has well pointed out, we are not a court of last resort; in fact, we are not even a court. We are only the meeting of the sovereign people of the state of Michigan. In 1952 the sovereign people of the state of Michigan spoke. And I submit to you that if we want to determine what is correct and what the proper decision is on this constitutional question, it is best to leave this to the courts, as I have previously said.

Since honest people do differ in this body, have honest differences of opinion, and since lawyers also differ in this body, it would seem that it would be best to leave it to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan to decide if we are going to overrule the case of the People v. Gonzales. And we will not have to wait long for this decision, there being 2 cases that are now scheduled to go up to the supreme court for decision.

Thank you very much.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is now on the Hanna amendment to the amendment.

Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I would not presume upon the time of this committee, either with or without the admonition of the president and the chairman of the committee, if I did not think that there was a viewpoint which has not been expressed and which ought to be expressed before we come to a vote on this question.

I cannot regard the action of the rights committee in leaving this item out of the constitution as an isolated instance. We have running through government, in most of its phases, fashions and styles that we change almost as thoughtlessly and as unreasonably sometimes, as we change fashion in clothes. Some of that is evident already.

I have been interested in how many of our present styles are coming from Alaska, Hawaii and New Jersey. But in the field of law enforcement we have a fashion and it is a recent fashion. And that fashion is to lean over backwards in trying to give a person accused of crime every possible right, every possible advantage, and, to borrow a phrase from the past, "let the public be damned." It is not a case of whether we are going to protect the accused or protect the officer; it is a question of how far we are going to go in seeing to it that the accused has his rights and forgetting completely the necessity of the protection of the public from dangerous criminals. And people who run around with ammunition and guns and explosives and narcotics in their cars, are dangerous to the public.

I think we ought to examine this situation in its proper perspective. I simply want to show you some of the things that have been done very recently in following this trend which to me seems to be a dangerous trend. And the strange part of it is that it comes at a time when the crime rate in this United States is the highest in the history of the country. It is so high that it lacks very little of being a national disgrace.

Now in Michigan 2 lawyers at least on the floor here yesterday stated that you can search a car, or make a search of anything, after you have made an arrest. Unfortunately, that is no longer the law of Michigan. It was the law for many years, a well established law for many years. And if you like to look through political eyes, the last 2 opinions were written, one by a Republican, Justice Clark, and the other by a Democrat, Justice Bushnell. Under that, police officers did search cars after they had made an arrest. They thought they had a right to; the court had said they had a right to; and in doing so they protected the public from a tremendous number of dangerous criminals.

That is no longer the law. By dictum in the Gonzales case, by direct decision in the Ziegler case and the Winkle case which followed, our court has now laid down the rule that the arrest does not give you the right to search. The arrest, of course, even when you had the right to search, had to be a genuine arrest, not just arrest on a pretext. But you had the right to search after you had made the arrest.

Our court in 1962 took another step — this is a step which makes it difficult for law enforcement officers — and that was in the Hamilton case which came up in Detroit. And it was a tough case; it is one of those cases that makes bad law.

But there, in the question of a confession — it always has been the law that an involuntary confession is not admissible in evidence and it ought not to be admissible because it is not reliable. May I call your attention to the fact that that is generally the reason for excluding evidence, the fact that it is not reliable; it may not be the truth. That is the reason we exclude hearsay — but in this case it was a confession and the court held it to be involuntary and therefore it should not have been admitted.

The difference is this. It has always been the law that the question of whether or not the confession was voluntary was a question of fact for the jury. Now, in Michigan the law is that it is a question of law for the courts. And that is a stumbling block for police officers who are trying to protect the public from dangerous criminals.

Now, I wish to review what has happened on the federal level. I think we have had painted a very incorrect picture, so far in this discussion, as to what has taken place. It is true that 50 years or so ago the federal court decided that they would not admit in federal courts illegally obtained evidence. But under what conditions? Only — and I repeat, only — if the federal officers were the ones who made the illegal search. If the search were made by state officers or by a local police officer, they still admitted it. In other words, it was just a matter of disciplining the federal officers.

But recently they have changed that and they said that no matter who made the search it would not be admissible. And — when you have in mind that the federal officers were abusing the thing, they got the state officers and the local officers to do what they could not do themselves — it was not surprising that the court made that change, but it didn't stop there. They made a decision then which makes anyone's hair stand on end who has any regard for state's rights; an unusual decision. Before that, always what was a question as to what was legal and what was illegal was to be decided in the state involved. And if the supreme court of the state involved said "this act is legal" the federal court did not go back of it.

For instance, in Michigan we have had the law that after you have made an arrest you can make a search. If that kind of case came into the federal court, they would say, "Okay, that is the state law; that is enough to make it legal here." But the Supreme Court of the United States has now gone to the extent of saying, "We will for ourselves determine what is illegal and what is legal in terms of searches in any state regardless of what the supreme court of the state has said about that question."

Then, of course, they went on to the Mapp case. The language in the Mapp case encompasses what we have here. You take the language of the 4 justices who agreed, for instance. The decision does not.

In the old days lawyers relied on what courts decided and paid little attention to the superfluous language that we ordinarily speak of as dictum. I don't know now what lawyers can rely upon in these days when it is so difficult to distinguish the work of the legislators who dress in business clothes and the work of the legislators who are garbed in black robes.

But whatever we may be able to depend upon, I have in my hand a petition filed in the Supreme Court of the United States asking for a rehearing in the Mapp case. The case was not argued as it was determined. The state of Ohio had no warning that the court might go off on a tangent and use the language that it did use and they are asking for the privilege of presenting their side of that particular question. I do not know what the court will do with it. But it is pending in the Supreme Court of the United States.

Now, if this fashion that we are following goes on, very likely when the Supreme Court of the United States gets to our case, they will throw this out. But who knows how long this will go on? At some time or other we are going to turn back from this trend and start paying some attention to the protection that the public needs. Maybe that time is now. Maybe the pendulum has swung as far as it is going to swing and we will start back to balance, and "balance" is the big word.

Certainly we must protect the right of a person accused of crime — just as we must certainly protect the public against dangerous criminals. Those 2 ideas are in conflict. Good service to the public requires that we get a good balance between them and not go to any extreme; and that runs true all through government. Maybe the pendulum now starts to swing back to balance. I hope so. The public will be better off if it does.

As for me, I shall vote for the Prettie amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the Hanna amendment to the amendment.

Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: If you please, Mr. Chairman, when I asked yesterday to be heard, I was speaking also on behalf of Mr. Prettie who has since returned, and basically can take up for himself a number of the items on which I was going to talk.

I would only state this: that when we vote, we have heard a lot about voting in a calm, cool, collected manner. I have heard a lot of talk which has bothered me somewhat.

It was my privilege to spend some 7½ years in a law enforcement agency of the United States and I wish to state that I have been greatly perturbed about the statement that the question is whether we are or are not going to continue a police state in the state of Michigan. This has not been the fact.

I am greatly perturbed when an inference, or a direct statement is made, that by voting for the amendment offered by Mr. Prettie, we will be encouraging or fostering or even intending to start a gestapo type operation in the state of Michigan. This infers that by reason of the amendments of 1936 and of 1952 we have had this in the past. This, I submit, is not true.

By and large, the law enforcement officers of this state — for the salaries that they receive from the municipalities which each one of us come from, be it city, township, or county — do a tremendous job on behalf of the public. The question here is not to discipline police officers, state police or deputy sheriffs. The question is on a rule of evidence.

The upgrading of our police departments and our sheriff's departments is not a question of this rule or of any other. I think it is unfortunate that there has ever been brought into play — or rather brought into question — the integrity, the honesty and the hard working ability of our law enforcement officers. And I, for one, hope that when eventually we vote on this, it is not upon that particular item.

As to the other points, I think Mr. Prettie should speak to his own amendment. Yesterday I was speaking on his behalf.

Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I have discarded my 50 page address. I simply want to make an announcement to correct a mistake which seems to exist in the minds of some delegates. The committee, it is true, voted unanimously to submit this. It is also true that the committee voted by a vote of 7 for and 8 against reconsidering The original vote was a compromise between the idea of retaining the provision and the idea of striking it entirely. The vote to reconsider was with the purpose of again voting to retain the present provision.

Now, I make this statement only to make it clear that the committee was about equally divided in the matter. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now in on the Hanna amendment to the Prettie amendment.

The Chair will recognize Mr. Habermehl. Mr. Habermehl, will you speak on the Hanna amendment or on your own amendment? Of course, your own amendment cannot be presented at this time.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I wish to speak on the Hanna amendment, and, of course, necessarily, on the Prettie amendment. It seems to me that we have spent 2 days here trying to do the work of the courts. I think it might come as quite a relief to nonlawyer members of this convention for me to make the statement that we cannot do the work of the courts and we cannot pass rules of evidence.

I think the question is considerably more fundamental than that. When we think of the constitutionally guaranteed rights, we think of rights that individuals have against any encroachment by any branch of government. We consider them to be so fundamental to the basic rights of individuals that no branch of government has any right to infringe or encroach upon such rights.

Now, that idea has been many, many years in developing, and of course, the federal constitution, in the bill of rights, reinstated the English common law doctrine. As a matter of fact, if you remember your history, without the first 10 amendments, the socalled bill of rights, the federal constitution would never have been adopted. People felt that strongly about a constitutionally guaranteed right.

Now, the federal government said that congress shall pass no act; and I do not think there is any question here but what the federal constitution in article IV, section 4 — you will find it on page 45 of your blue book; you will find it much easier by looking at the Bledsoe and Donnelly amendment on your desks — did intend to guarantee the rights of individuals against an unreasonable search and seizure. And note the use of the word "unreasonable". Not all searches and seizures but just unreasonable searches and seizures.

Now we did, in 1908, in the constitutional provisions adopted at that time, actually reenact or restate the federal guarantee.

I would not question but what the state of Michigan has some rights in this field that have not been preempted by the federal government. But I would very seriously question that they would have any right to limit or abridge a constitutional guarantee, the type of right which no government is empowered to abridge or limit.

If the state of Michigan, in other words, chose to extend this and grant the individual more freedom, more rights than he enjoys as a United States' citizen, I think it would have the right to do it. But no question of state's rights is involved here in the issue before us. Neither congress nor the states can abridge these constitutional guarantees. The language of the 1908 amendment did exactly what the federal rule or the federal provision does now. I do not remember the dates, but the people of this state saw fit to add an amendment to that provision, to section 10.

I do not think that any of us here today would question but what that abridged, that limited, that somewhat encroached upon the right of a person to be secure from an unreasonable search and seizure. Now, that might be a legal question. If it is a legal question, let us argue it in the courts. I think it was intended to do exactly that, and that is why it was made in the form of an amendment to section 10. It was intended to abridge that right.

Now, I call your attention again to the blue book, on page 49. About the middle of section 1 of article 14, it says, "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; . . ."

We are not a court here. The court is bound by rules that we are not bound by. One of the most important rules of construction in any court is that if the court has any possible way of avoiding holding a statute unconstitutional, it will do so. It will seize upon any other basis for a decision rather than contest the constitutionality of a statute.

That is not our problem here. We are a law making body for the state of Michigan. The question before this committee then, is simply this, do we, the law making body, make the law that would abridge the protection afforded by the fourth amendment? And the fourteenth amendment says simply that we do not have that right as a law making body. We are not a deputy sheriff or a state trooper or a constable making an arrest. We are here making law. We are not the supreme court of Michigan nor the supreme court of the United States which are bound by certain other precedents and certain rules of construction which do not apply to us. We are concerned here simply with that one sentence in section 1 of article XIV of the United States constitution which says, "No state shall make any law abridging . . . the rights or the privileges or the immunities of the federal constitution. . . ." I am paraphrasing, really, in this instance.

We are all citizens of the United States; and no state — and certainly not this body — has the right to abridge what rights, privileges or immunities we enjoy as United States citizens.

I think all of you would agree that it could not be otherwise. We could not have a certain right or privilege or immunity against an unreasonable search and seizure in the state of Ohio, only to lose it when we cross the state line. This right must be enjoyed by all United States citizens regardless of where they might reside; and no law making body has the right to abridge it.

For that reason I would oppose the Hanna amendment principally on the ground that while it does take some of the sting out of the Prettie amendment, it does not actually go far enough.

I would oppose the Prettie amendment because it clearly and very obviously is an abridgement of a right all of us enjoy as individuals and as citizens of the United States. Now, I very seriously question whether this body would have any such right to so abridge that immunity or privilege we enjoy as United States' citizens.

Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Hanna amendment to the Prettie amendment.

The Chair will recognize Mr. Downs. He indicated yesterday that he wanted to talk.

MR. DOWNS: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman, but I have made my comments at the first of today's session. If I was out of order of seniority, I apologize to the committee.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Very well. Mr. Greene.

MR. GREENE: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I hope to bring you a relief, in a sense, from the type of testimony or remarks, evaluations, or what have you, that you have been hearing for the last 2 days, and to bring you comments, truisms, that probably you have not been exposed to, or understood.

Now, I have no citations. I acknowledge or accept, for my personal interest, the fact that I cannot discuss language — and I put the word "language" in quotation marks — with you. But I do come to you to give you, probably, the views of one who is closer to this matter than likely any of you, including the law enforcement person with 7½ years' experience, for I am still, with the exception of the leave of absence I now enjoy, engaged in law enforcement.

In a dramatic way, let me say: I'm a cop. And as a cop, I do not get secondhand the impact of the provisions of 1936 and 1952 that many of you receive. I pay special deference to the judges and to the attorneys, Mr. Boothby, and to prosecutors on leave.

And I say unequivocally that the deleted articles that now appear in the constitution are absolutely no good. I say this realizing that I take certain personal security job risks, but from the 10 years that I have been in law enforcement, I have been able to make certain evaluations and I know that the articles, or rather the amendments that we refer to, have given the presumption of false license, to disregard the total concept of the section on illegal search and seizure.

And is so happens that I am fraternal leader of a secular organization that has been in the state of Michigan for better than 120 years, composed, if you please, of good and true citizens — by careful choosing, or permission, to belong to us — I repeat, of good citizens.

It was necessary, because of a false premise of license, for me to print last year and to distribute to all of them a document which would tell them how they must react to search, to arrest, and to all of the things embodied, if you please, in the matter we have before us.

Over and beyond this, for fear you may have forgotten, I am a cop; but because of certain natural identifications ordained by God which I am not ashamed of, I, too, have been subjected to the abuse that obtains from these 2 provisions in our constitution, 6 times in the 10 years that I have been a law enforcement officer. The first time found me subjected to physical contact, while I was attempting to identify myself. The other 5 times, I deliberately refused to identify myself up to a certain point so that for my own edification I would be able to ascertain the reaction of those who were searching me.

And I say to you, not in relation to the technical aspects of the Mapp case or of any other case, I say to you in behalf of human dignity, that I do not see how anyone here who daily stands on his feet and listens and subjects himself to the prayers that are offered on our behalf in a democratic and Christian spirit, how we can continue to permit the inclusion of the provisions we refer to.

Remember, I am a cop. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Hanna amendment to the Prettie amendment.

The Chair will recognize Mr. Youngblood.

MR. YOUNGBLOOD: Mr. Chairman, I should like to speak also as a law enforcement officer in the county of Wayne.

I do not believe any of the provisos that are in the present constitution are necessary. As it reads, up to the provisos, we are protected both as police officers and as citizens. Both the police officers and the citizens are protected.

The words "unreasonable search" are very big words and they can be used in many ways. If an illegal search is made, the people have the right to sue the police officer, and I think, too, with the proper schooling, you are not going to have incidents like you have had in the Mapp case. Those officers evidently were not schooled properly. I say that because we are not like that in Wayne county.

I am in favor of dealing with the matter in this way. I am in favor of deleting all of the provisos in this section.

Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is now on the Hanna amendment to the Prettie amendment.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Bledsoe. Are you going to talk on the Hanna amendment, Mr. Bledsoe, or on your own?

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman, my fellow colleagues, I had hoped that it would be possible for me, if I may use the term, since our committee has done such a magnificent job in this area of rights, to let this cup pass.

I approach this matter from an entirely different point of view. I do not speak to you as a lawyer. I prefer to speak to you in the spirit of the town meeting.

When I think of what I have heard here, I want to express my appreciation for the magnificent contributions that each and every one of you made as you have discussed the sacred principles involved in this matter. To me, they are indeed sacred.

The nearest that someone got to this yesterday was when he mentioned George Washington and the second continental congress. It goes much further than that.

Ever since man, in his ceaseless effort and the ceaseless shuffling of his feet in pursuit of an area to build a better society, a better government, a better lair, a home with a fence around it, contemplated this area of rights — that is where it started.

Someone said — I believe it was Gladstone — speaking of our constitution, that it was the greatest document that had ever been stricken, as it were, overnight by the hand of man. I differ with him on that. Long before any pen had ever been dipped in the never fading ink that transcribed that document, the people who founded this great country of ours were on the move. The bill of rights, the continental congress, and America as we know it today — these constitute a result, an achievement. The bill of rights was picked up in progress.

Let us begin there. Let us not get into the emotional abyss of whether some police officer will or will not or may or may not catch a dope peddler. That is police work and I think the police are doing a good job and I have no quarrel with them. All of the paraphernalia that they need, the legislature will give to them.

We sit here in this room today, my colleagues, in the presence, spiritually, of the men and women who built this nation. We are a sovereign body here. The things that we do here are basic and fundamental. We are not interested here, as it were, as I said a moment ago, in whether or not some dope peddler may get away. By and large the majority of the people in this country are law abiding citizens. They are not dope peddlers. We did not build a society either for or against dope peddlers. We built society in order to bring into being a great nation, and this we have done, and we are going to keep it that way if we will only keep the proper balance.

I am a little ahead of my amendment here, on which my colleague, Miss Donnelly, will speak. But I may make reference to it, and in doing so, I want to beg your pardon and call your attention to article VI of the United States constitution. I am not going to read it all, just a part of it. You have it in your manual on your desks. There is nothing new about this.

And in support of article IV, that my colleague spoke about a moment ago, article VI of the United States constitution says simply this: ". . . and the judges of every state shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any state to the contrary notwithstanding. . . ." This refers to the constitution and laws of the United States which shall be made and which we recognize as the fundamental law of our land.

I wish to call your attention to this purported appeal with reference to one of the cases that has been discussed here. I have no hesitation in saying to you that it was used by one of my colleagues — I believe it is the same, is it not? — I am going to ask the chairman, since it has been referred to as an appeal of this case to the United States supreme court, an appeal for rehearing, — but I do not think my colleague read the top lines and I am going to read them for you.

I have in my hand a document which is entitled Articles, Reports and Notes of the National District Attorneys' Association, the headnote of which reads:

> This section of the journal has been added for the exclusive use of the national district attorneys' association. The selection and editing of the material contained herein is the sole responsibility of the association's representative, Mr. Duane R. Nedrud, a former prosecuting attorney, and a member of the association. However, neither Mr. Nedrud, the association, nor the journal assumes any responsibility for the views expressed by the authors of the articles appearing in this section.

Mr. Duane R. Nedrud is associate professor of law, University of Kansas City, Kansas City, Missouri. The article is entitled Petition for Rehearing — Mapp v. Ohio.

I call your attention to the fact that this is apparently unauthenticated material, an apparently unauthenticated document. I have just read what was said by those sponsoring it — that is what they say about it. In conclusion, my colleagues, I wish to say this with reference to this fourth amendment. We who have to do here with writing this constitution are dealing with the basic law of our land. When the fathers of our country sat in similar edifices engaged in the same type of work, let me repeat they were engaged in building a structure — the blueprint of a structure — upon which a government and a nation could find and create a better way of life for its people.

And that is what is involved here. The law, the statutes, the constitution, the work of this committee, and all that has gone into making up the proposal that has been presented here, with reference to the rights of our people in an effort to secure those rights; all these things are completely in accord with the Constitution of the United States of which we are all proud and with which we have no quarrel.

I am going to ask you members of the committee, with reference to this proposal, that you remember that you have no need, in my humble judgment, for any qualms about supporting it. The question of search and seizure, and all illegal and unreasonable traverses upon the liberties of the people, are shrouded in this document.

I cannot escape the facts of harsh reality and I am sure you can't. In the past decade or so we have just gone through and experienced an occasion and a case when the liberties of the people, the basic liberties of the people, were forgotten. That story was wiped out by General Eisenhower. It is in the face of the crises — the great crises — that the basic law we must rely upon to defend the rights and liberties of our people is relied upon. The questions that belong to the police and to the statutory enactments of our legislature are separate and distinct from the basic law of our constitution.

I am going to ask you, in the light of that, to support this proposal as it has been presented on this floor by the committee.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the Hanna amendment to the Prettie amendment.

Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order, we have heard arguments here, I believe from about 6 people in the last hour, and I seem to recall that the chairman announced that we were on the Hanna amendment. May we now have a vote on the Hanna amendment?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The answer will be, Mr. Iverson, that these people requested to speak on the Hanna amendment.

MR. IVERSON: Well, I have heard none do so as yet.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair might point out and call attention to the fact that the next speakers should confine themselves as closely as possible to the Hanna amendment. I know it is pretty difficult to separate them, but I urge you to do the best you can to make your remarks germane to that amendment.

The Chair will recognize Mr. McAllister.

MR. McALLISTER: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I will be brief. I would like to say that while I am a lawyer, I am not here in that capacity. I am here representing the people of Huron county district, and am speaking as their representative. Because of that, I oppose the Hanna amendment. It is not what I personally think. I have been on both sides of this proposition, as a prosecutor and as a defense attorney, and I am not giving, as I said, my personal opinion. The people of my area voted for substantially the content of the Prettie amendment some time ago and, since I represent them, I feel that it is my duty to do as they wish in this matter.

There is another angle here that has come up which I do not think is pertinent. One speaker, yesterday, stated that if he voted for the Prettie amendment, he would be violating his oath as a lawyer, given in support of the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of Michigan. It is my opinion that in a representative capacity he is not a lawyer, and no lawyer would be violating his oath by voting for the Prettie amendment. That is all I have to say.

Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I should like to defer speaking at this time so that we can draw this particular matter to a head, but I would like to speak on this matter in favor of one of the other amendments at the appropriate time and would like to ask to be recognized at that juncture.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, as we vote upon these so called clarifying amendments, I can merely say this, occasioned by Mr. Danhof's remarks that the members of the committee all voted on the matter without any reference whatever to law enforcement officers as such. To imply, as some of the speakers have implied, that any of the members of the committee, any of them, were less diligent and alert in protecting society and law enforcement officers is wrong. Some of us differed. It happened to be that the majority differed as to the method and the means which would be provided for law enforcement officers. Some people look upon this as an exceedingly important question. Obviously we differ about this. But let us not leave the implication on the record that any of the members of this committee — the majority or minority — were inspired by any desire to weaken law enforcement. We are all just as strongly in support of legitimate and proper law enforcement as anybody else.

And, as we vote upon these amendments, I hope you will keep in mind the question of whether or not they are clarifying and improving without regard to any of these implications that have been so simply stated.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I can be very brief. I will talk on the Hanna amendment which is, of course, related directly to the Prettie amendment.

It seems to me that all of us are sitting here bothered by the problem that this is the kind of question where, for some reasons, we might like to vote both ways. But we cannot do that.

Everybody believes that there should be the right of privacy and that it should not be invaded and that police officers should not make unreasonable searches and seizures. At the same time, everybody wishes to do what he or she can to make sure that crime does not spread and is not encouraged by whatever procedures we have.

Now, the one thing that has not been mentioned here is the background of this particular amendment, or these particular amendments. The background is the advent in the entire crime picture of the mobile vehicle, of the automobile.

When there was no automobile, there were very few problems of having rum runners or people trafficking in narcotics or people running in firearms or moving from place to place rapidly in getaways from burglaries, robberies or something of that kind. The advent of the automobile has created a problem in the enforcement of law which in many cases makes it almost impossible to solve, unless the officer can go on something less than a warrant because the automobile makes it possible to be gone before the warrant can be obtained. For this reason the officer often has to go on less cause, in making his arrest or in making his search and seizure, than might be the case where we were just dealing with the dwelling house or something of that kind. This is the origin, this is the background, of these amendments.

I know a little bit about this because some years ago when I was in the senate the problem came up with regard to the conservation laws and the right of search and seizure there. The supreme court threw out the provisions of the law which were clearly unconstitutional and it was necessary to pass some additional legislation. The problem, however, was essentially the same as the one before us.

Now, I do not agree with my colleague, Mr. Brake, that this is just a fashion, that the amendments of the committee are just a fashion. I do not think the committee was working in that way and certainly the right to freedom from invasion of privacy is not a fashion. I believe it was Mr. Brake who made that point.

But we have a provision in the constitution. It obviously seems to the people themselves to be of tremendous importance to have it there. Probably the people themselves, if you asked them, are not familiar with the particular provisions of law involved, and the search and seizure provisions, and so on; but they want some kind of protection if they can get it. So the provision is there.

The matter has come under the scrutiny of the supreme court in the Mapp case. There is grave doubt in my own mind, and I am sure in the minds of many of the lawyers here, as to whether the Mapp case doesn't make these provisions entirely unconstitutional. But no man can tell until the court has passed on those questions. But, for that reason, it seems to me important that we give the court the opportunity to make a decision in this matter and that we should leave the provisions there substantially as they are at the present time.

For that reason I believe we should oppose the Hanna amendment and we should favor the Prettie amendment which will affect just that, and probably almost even before we leave this convention, perhaps, we may have a decision on this question which will materially clarify it and will preserve for the people whatever protection the supreme court says they are entitled to under this language.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair will recognize Mr. Binkowski who has indicated that he wishes to speak to the Hanna amendment to the Prettie amendment at this time.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, I am not necessarily going to speak; I would like to ask a question. I am not going to read all of the document I have in my hand but in order to ask my question I will have to read a couple of paragraphs.

There was a speech made by Mr. Leo Farhat, the prosecuting attorney of Ingham county, on behalf of the prosecuting attorney's association, and I should like Mr. Norris or some other member of the committee to comment upon a few of the paragraphs from that speech which I should like to read to the entire committee with respect to the Mapp case. I do not know if this is necessarily germane to the Hanna amendment. I think it runs throughout all of the amendments. There are only about 4 paragraphs of this, so please bear with me. I quote:

> It is interesting to note that if Miss Mapp had been arrested in the state of Michigan she would never have been prosecuted and the evidence obtained by the illegal search and seizure would have been suppressed by the trial court.
>
> In the first place there is wide variance between pornographic pictures and narcotic drugs. But even assuming that the Michigan constitution proviso had been broad enough to include pornographic pictures, still the evidence would have been inadmissible because the search and seizure in the Mapp case was within the curtilage of the home.
>
> Also, in Michigan we have no rules of court similar to the one invoked by the courts of Ohio. What rules Michigan has, allowing such evidence, are those prescribed by the constitutional proviso.
>
> While perhaps not material to this subject it is also interesting to note that Michigan requires positive knowledge on the part of one seeking to obtain a search warrant while many states and the federal government allow a search warrant to be issued upon information and belief.

Going now to another paragraph:

> Thus, a proper analysis of the Mapp case indicates that the question before the United States supreme court in the determination of that case was whether or not there had been a violation of article IV of the federal constitution, to wit: an unreasonable search and seizure in the specific case.
>
> The court did not determine whether or not the people of a state, by the exercise of the police power inherent in their rights under article X of the federal constitution, could adopt an amendment similar to that adopted by the people of the state of Michigan.
>
> The fact that this particular decision in Mapp may have raised questions concerning our constitutional amendment can properly be laid on the natural contentiousness of attorneys.

There are 2 more portions — bear with me, please:

> With these guideposts and standards to go by, consider whether the provisions of article II, section 10 of our present Michigan constitution look unreasonable. Consider the danger to the people of the state from the illegal traffic in narcotic drugs and from the uncontrolled handling of dangerous weapons by agents of organized crime.
>
> Consider, also, that the constitutional provision limits the location which may be searched to one outside of the curtilage of a dwelling house in this state.
>
> Consider also that the limitation in the proviso is not to allow an unreasonable search and seizure, but to allow the admission of evidence in a court of criminal jurisdiction of limited articles.

The great jurist, Judge Learned Hand, was quoted by Justice Smith of the Michigan supreme court in People v. Gonzales as follows:

> The protection of the individual from oppression and abuse by the police and other enforcing officers is indeed a major interest in a free society; but so is the effective prosecution of crime, an interest which at times seems forgotten. Perfection is impossible; like other human institutions, criminal proceedings must be a compromise.
>
> That a state by a valid exercise of its police power does in effect limit the rights of the people under the federal constitution cannot be denied. Even our most basic rights, those of religious freedom, freedom of speech and the press, and the right to assemble peaceably are limited by the exercise of the state's police power.
>
> Freedom of religion is controlled or limited by statutes relative to obscenity and polygamy. The right of freedom of speech is limited by laws of slander and libel. The right of the people to assemble is limited by laws against syndicalism, communism, and organizations advocating the overthrow of government.
>
> The right to bear arms, guaranteed by the second amendment to the federal constitution, is limited by the state laws against carrying of concealed weapons.
>
> Is it not equally logical that the right of privacy should be limited by rules or laws against the use and carrying of dangerous items such as narcotics and weapons?

Those are not my words. I wish to emphasize that, before taking my seat. But because I was not in attendance at the committee hearings, as I believe most of us were not, I should like to get comments from the committee members, if that is possible.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, I simply do not know what the question is.

MR. BINKOWSKI: There must be 2 sides to the question. Perhaps Mr. Norris would like to comment on those sections from the document which I have just read to the committee.

In other words, I think this of some importance. This is the presentation of the association of prosecuting attorneys of the state of Michigan, and I should like to hear from Mr. Norris or some other member of the committee, or anyone in the committee, as far as that goes, with respect to those items I quoted.

MR. STEVENS: Well, Mr. Chairman, will you permit me to answer this briefly? The committee considered all these things. There was no question that if this thing had happened in Michigan, the evidence would have been inadmissible. There is no argument about that. That was not the question. The committee seemed to be concerned with the dictum in the federal case. But nobody contended that in Michigan this evidence would have been admitted. That was not the question. The question here was: would evidence have been admitted if it were within the provisos of the Michigan constitution?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Norris, would you care to comment?

MR. NORRIS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The question really posed here boils down to this: what is the constitutional significance of the matters in the Mapp case with regard to the deliberations of this convention and this committee of the whole, particularly with regard to the Prettie amendment and the Hanna amendment?

I think we ought to recognize that what the supreme court was doing in the Mapp case was reflecting an historical judgment in the history of American constitutional jurisprudence. This was not a decision which was specifically applicable exclusively to the fact of the Mapp case. It was intended to explain or expound a theory of constitutional law to which Mr. Brake, in part, alluded. It was intended to open the court room door to all of the first 10 amendments to the Constitution of the United States through the fourteenth amendment, and make them applicable against the states, and it was in this context that we wanted to, and should now, appraise the Mapp case. This point has not been expounded and it should be expounded.

In a portion of the statement quoted by Mr. Binkowski there was an allusion to limitations on the freedoms of speech and the press and assembly. And it is indigenous to the subject matter when the justice so links the question of freedom of speech, press and assembly to unreasonable searches and seizures.

I say that because what has happened in the last 40 or 50 years in the supreme court's history is this. The court has said that those rights which are fundamental, which are implicit in a system of ordered liberty, are applicable and obligatory upon the states through the fourteenth amendment, which amendment says that no state shall deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law.

So that there has been, if you will, a nationalization of the bill of rights, an exposition on the part of the courts to say that these rights are so fundamental, so implicit in a system of ordered liberty, that they are applicable to the states, and in those rights we include all of the rights of the first amendment, freedom of religion, speech, press and assembly, and the court has added, freedom from unreasonable searches and seizures.

And in the Mapp case, in order to implement that trend, it has stated that as an essential ingredient of the prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures, such evidence which is obtained in violation of that prohibition shall not be admitted in any court, state or federal. And it does not get into the specific minutiae of the Mapp case. What it really does is say, in categorical, historical terms is that today we once again examine Wolf's constitutional documentation of the right to privacy, free from unreasonable state intrusion, and after its dozen years on our books are led by it to close the only courtroom door open to evidence secured by official lawlessness in flagrant abuse of that basic right reserved to all persons as a specific guarantee against that very same unlawful conduct. And this is not dictum. We hold that all evidence obtained by searches and seizures in violation of the constitutional guarantee is by that same authority inadmissible in a state court.

This decision was presaged and developed from Boyd to Weeks and then in 1959 through the Elkins case, the so called "silver platter" doctrine. In that case state officers who had obtained evidence inadmissible — I mean federal officers who had nothing to do with obtaining the inadmissible evidence — turned it over — the state turned it over to the federal government to be admitted — and the court excluded it in the federal court.

Under the silver platter doctrine state officers obtained evidence during the search which, if conducted by federal officers, would constitute an unreasonable search and seizure under the fourth amendment.

Under the Elkins case the Supreme Court of the United States threw out this silver platter doctrine and said that even though no federal officers were involved in securing the evidence in violation of the fourth amendment and only state officers were involved, the evidence was inadmissible in a federal court. The federal officers did not have anything to do with obtaining it. The state did. And yet the federal government did not admit this in evidence in the federal court.

And that was a step to the Mapp case. So this was not a matter of a decision that did not have any historical antecedents. They had been building this up for some time.

Yesterday, I think, Judge Dehnke indicated, and I respectfully watched in detail what he said, and I have been moved by various of his contributions to the convention, but I respectfully disagree with what I thought I understood him to say during the course of his remarks. He said that this was, in essence, a 4 to 4 decision. I wish to state to you that this was at least a 5 to 4 decision and could have been a 6 to 3 decision, depending upon some of the language here.

Now, Justice Clark wrote this decision and he spoke for himself and Justice Warren, Justice Douglas and Justice Brennan. And to this, Justice Black added a concurring opinion in which he said that the combined impact of the fourth amendment and the fifth amendment against compulsory testimony would, in his judgment, sustain the findings of the court. And, in addition to that, Mr. Justice Stewart said that while agreeing wholly with part one of Mr. Justice Harlan's dissenting opinion, "I express no view as to the merits of the constitutional issue which the courts today decide." So he leaves it open, and he is one of the persons who combine in the dissenting opinion.

So you could say that Justice Stewart leaves the matter open and 5 justices agreed with the decision of the Mapp case and 3 dissented. So you actually have a 5-3, and one reserving judgment with regard to it, and even one of the 3 gentlemen who wrote the dissenting opinion, Mr. Justice Harlan, said that had this matter been raised properly in the Ohio court, then he would have come to deal with the constitutional question. So he, too, leaves it open.

This is a landmark decision, and we are dealing with that matter here in this particular assembly, and we have a duty as a constitutional body, dealing with constitutional issues, to appraise the state of constitutionality of the matters before us.

But there are 2 issues. There is not only the question of constitutionality, there is the question of wisdom, and with regard to that I would say that there is this important proposition, and that is that a prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures protects individual privacy, protects the right of people in their personal effects, their property, not only in automobiles, as Mr. Martin has suggested, but personally. The fact that automobiles might have come about recently does not preclude the fact that persons are excluded from the proviso of the Prettie amendment and from the proviso in the existing constitution.

I submit to you that if we are admonished by the ancient injunction that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, we ought to exercise that vigilance here and continue the trend — not a fashion but a trend — in favor of expanding the function of the bill or rights, not only as a prohibition against unlawful conduct, or unconstitutional conduct, in relation to the federal authorities, but also in the states.

This is what America is all about. This bill of rights is what we export. This is what gives us moral stature throughout the world. This is what, I think, gives us the kind of authority to speak for people throughout the world. And we ought to support, I believe, the committee report and be against both the Hanna amendment and the Prettie amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: At this time the Chair will recognize Mr. Hodges and will admonish the speaker to confine himself to the Hanna amendment.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, speaking in favor of the Hanna amendment, only because I think that it does the best it can with a bad situation, which is the Prettie amendment, I would only say to those who have argued that this — I am speaking of the Mapp case — that this is not a majority decision, that it starts out with Mr. Justice Clark speaking for the court, and as all attorneys know, the man who writes the majority opinion speaks for the court. The others speak as individuals on their dissent. But this is the Supreme Court of the United States speaking.

I would just reflect a minute — this has been done before — and recall how this case came about, the Mapp case. This is not an instance in which this issue was even raised in the lower court. Mr. Brake makes this point. I think this is an important point. This was not raised in the lower court, it was raised in an amicus brief filed, and the court went out of its way to pick this case up, not because of its peculiar facts in the situation or anything else but because it wanted to make this point, that it did not believe that state courts should use illegally obtained evidence.

Now, I think that all this boils down to this — disregarding the fact of what we may believe in this matter, it boils down to this question — are we going to accept the interposition argument of the south? This is what it boils down to, in my opinion.

Those that rise and say, "I don't like what the supreme court has said; I don't think it really said that and the facts are a little different" — are in this position. The south has been arguing for almost 10 years the Brown decision because each state says "Our segregation is a little bit different from that one, and let us wait until the court strikes it down."

I don't think we here should be in the position of interposing ourselves between what we know is federal supremacy — the decisions of the United States supreme court — and all I think we are doing is giving aid and comfort to this lunatic fringe in our country which is decrying the courts and castigating them continually. There are those in this country who want to hold our courts up to disrepute. And if we join in this folly — and I believe we are because we are proceeding here as a constitutional convention, and we cannot disregard what is being said by our courts. If this convention were not meeting at this time I could say, "all well and good, let's leave this decision to the state supreme court to apply it to these provisions and it will be dead anyway," and in my humble opinion this will be done before the people ever vote on this.

But this isn't the point. We have an obligation. We are meeting as a constitutional convention and we cannot disregard this, we cannot ignore it. And I beseech you — especially the attorneys here — and urge you to think of this, we are officers of the court. And I differ with my good friend behind me here. I think as attorneys we do have an obligation to consider these cases and I don't think we should find ourselves on the side of the lunatic fringe in this country and the dixiecrats from the south who try to impugn our courts by disregarding their decisions.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman.

MR. IVERSON: A point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: State your point.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, I have listened to these arguments and I would like to hear some argument on the Hanna amendment. If there is no argument on it, I would like to see a vote taken on the Hanna amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Your point is well taken, Mr. Iverson.

Judge Mosier?

MR. MOSIER: Mr. Chairman, I propose to speak on the Hanna amendment as it amends the Prettie amendment.

Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I wish to speak briefly upon a point which I do not think has been properly elaborated before this committee. In 1791, the constitution was amended by the bill of rights, and article IV as written in at that time, contained this language:

> The rights of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

That is the language and it stands today, after 170 years, without change.

That language, substantially, was the language that was put into the Constitution of Michigan in 1835. It is substantially the same language that was put in the Constitution of Michigan in 1850. It is substantially the same language that was put into the present constitution. And it served this state until, in 1936 and again in 1952, an amendment was made.

This was an unusual thing. And I say "unusual" because it is rare for the people, by constitutional amendment, to set forth in our basic law a rule of evidence which binds the court to receive in evidence any narcotic, firearm or other dangerous weapon seized by any peace officer outside of the curtilage of any dwelling house in this state. Ordinarily, such language would be found in a bill by the legislature.

Now, as the court said in the Gonzales case, and I quote:

> The supreme law of this state, its constitution, thus directs the admission of evidence of the character with which we are concerned in this case even if the evidence was produced by an unconstitutional search and seizure.

And the court went out of its way to emphasize the meaning of that language by putting the words "even if the evidence was produced by an unconstitutional search and seizure" in italics.

Now, in this Gonzales case the court went on to decide a second question. The court said, and I quote:

> Our remaining question is whether or not such state constitutional sanction of the admission of illegally seized evidence is barred by the federal constitution.

The Michigan supreme court in the Gonzales case then proceeded to determine this question and for authority for its decision it relied on the reasoning of 2 cases decided by the United States supreme court, Wolf v. Colorado, 338 United States 25, and Salsburg v. Maryland, 346 United States 545. I shall not burden you with the arguments other than to quote from the Wolf case where the United States supreme court said:

> We hold, therefore, that in a prosecution in a state court for a state crime the fourteenth amendment does not forbid the admission of evidence obtained by an unreasonable search and seizure.

That is the United States supreme court speaking in that instance. It is of interest to note that in that case there were 3 dissenting opinions.

Now, I quote from the case of Salsburg v. Maryland where the Supreme Court of the United States used the following language:

> Rules of evidence, being procedural in their nature, are peculiarly discretionary with the lawmaking authority, one of whose primary responsibilities is to prescribe procedures for enforcing its laws. Several states have followed diametrically opposite policies as to the admission of illegally seized evidence.

Now, the Michigan supreme court in the Gonzales case concluded its decision holding that the articles seized should have been received in evidence but in doing so they used this language — and I quote — and I think it is important that we consider the language of our supreme court in its last pronouncement:

> It is beyond all question that the United States supreme court is the sole authoritative interpreter of the United States constitution; and that it speaks only through opinions adopted by the majority of the court.
>
> Interesting as may be the view of the minority of the United States supreme court as stated by Justices Murphy, Douglas and Rutledge in Wolf v. Colorado, this offers no reason for failing to give effect to the interpretation adopted by the majority of the United States supreme court until and unless it is changed.

That is the language in the Gonzales case, the judgment in that case.

Those last 5 words from Gonzales were prophetic — they were indeed prophetic. It is quite likely that the Michigan supreme court could envision the day when the United States supreme court would say that articles seized by an officer illegally could not be received in evidence in a trial in a state court.

And this was what happened in the Mapp case decided in June of this year. And, as has been quoted here, this is the language of the United States supreme court. It is plain language. It is not ambiguous. It deals with the subject that the court was considering. This is the language of the United States supreme court in the Mapp case. I quote, "We hold that all evidence obtained by searches and seizures in violation of the constitution is by that same authority inadmissible in a state court."

Now then, let me say this. We are here today dealing with fundamental rights. At no time or place has it ever been written or decreed that any and all searches and seizures are improper or illegal. From the earliest days in 1791 down to this day our constitutions have sought to protect the people against unreasonable searches and seizures.

The difference between a reasonable or unreasonable search or seizure becomes a question for the courts. Its determination depends upon the particular facts and circumstances of each case. No constitution and no act of the legislature could possibly comprehend all the facts and circumstances surrounding the conduct of officers who attempt to search and seize.

Therefore, it must be left to the courts to say in each instance whether or not the search and seizure was justified as being reasonable. The law on this question has been expounded many times by courts of appeal and all trial judges would have ample guideposts.

As the court said in Gonzales, and again I proceed to quote:

> Facts which indicate probable cause to believe a felony is being committed have many times been held to render "reasonable" within constitutional terms a search and seizure without warrant.

The court then cited both Michigan and United States supreme court cases.

The law protecting persons from unreasonable searches and seizures in our federal constitution has not been changed in any way for 170 years. The same language protected the people of Michigan from 1835 for over 100 years and no one could point out that the Michigan courts were derelict in their duty in determining what constituted reasonable or unreasonable searches and seizures.

Now, the court, the United States supreme court, upon which our Michigan court rested its decision in Gonzales, has spoken and has changed its mind and has specifically said, in no uncertain or ambiguous terms, that a state trial court should not receive in evidence where it appears that the thing seized was taken in an unreasonable search and seizure. Let us not encumber our organic law with a command to our courts by a rule of evidence that they must receive certain evidence, where it was produced by an unconstitutional search and seizure.

I hope, therefore, that the delegates will see fit to keep that which is good and has stood the test of time, and reject that which violates our basic right to be secure against unreasonable conduct.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Beaman.

MR. BEAMAN: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, as a lay member of the rights committee I have been hearing for many weeks much discussion and debate on this particular issue and I want to say that it has not been easy to reach a decision in the matter.

Yesterday we heard Delegates Norris, Nord, Gadola, Stevens, Pugsley, Ken Prettie — all men of the highest integrity and of great legal ability, and I say that sincerely; and I say that they probably rank equal or above many of the men who have in the past and who are at the present time serving in our courts — but they do not agree, and so it has caused many of us to look elsewhere to arrive at a decision which we think is right.

I think there is one aspect of this matter of which I believe I have some knowledge, and that is the shocking increase of the young men and women who are being committed to our federal institutions on narcotic charges. I certainly would not wish to do anything that would make that situation more aggravated.

I was somewhat concerned yesterday when one delegate said that he would not be so dumb as to vote for something that might be declared unconstitutional. And also, more recently, I have heard that we might be considered lunatics.

But we have also heard that the supreme court is the supreme law of the land. I have been taught all my life that in this great democracy of ours the people are the supreme law of the land. In 1952 the people of Michigan gave us a 5 to 1 decision on this subject and for that reason I am against the Hanna amendment and any other amendment except the Prettie amendment which I hope that we can pass, and if that is "dumb" — so be it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Dr. Nord. Do you care to speak on the Hanna amendment?

MR. NORD: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I will speak exactly on the Hanna amendment. I believe it has had very little discussion; in fact, I don't really know that it has had any specific discussion even though I have spoken on it myself on one occasion. (laughter)

Now, the only reason I returned to the floor is this. There is one subject which I believe has come up since I have spoken which has not been adequately handled.

All of the arguments I have heard have been exceptionally high level arguments, not only my own, as has been pointed out, but we have undoubtedly had, I believe, an exceptional debate here and there is no question but that the arguments on both sides have been extremely sincere, and, I might add also that I observed the delegates listening with extreme care and diligence, and I was thrilled to see that because it is an extremely legal, difficult subject.

But there was one point that was made to which I think we ought to devote further attention. And that is that the people have spoken in 1952 and I believe in 1935 or 1936 and, therefore, we should leave the Prettie amendment in and not the Hanna amendment.

That is the subject on which I should like to speak. First of all, I should like to point out that the people have not seen Mr. Hanna's amendment. That is the subject with which we are dealing. Have the people seen Mr. Hanna's amendment? Do they think that it would be wrong to say evidence obtained in violation of this section shall not be used if it is a certain type or provided it was seized by reasonable means? Are they opposed to that? I believe several people have indicated they think that the people back home are opposed to Mr. Hanna's amendment. How can they be opposed to Mr. Hanna's amendment when he only dreamed it up yesterday? And, anyway, are they against it in any event? Are they against the principle? I don't know anyone who says that they wish evidence to be seized unreasonably.

What Mr. Hanna says is that evidence that is seized by reasonable means of this type should be admitted. Now, how can the people be against that? That is point number one. I doubt that anybody has a good or reliable poll to tell us that the people are opposed to Mr. Hanna's amendment.

I would also say I have extreme doubt whether the argument that was actually made that they are in favor of the Prettie amendment can be correct for the same reason. The Prettie amendment is not the one on which the people voted. The one that the people voted on you will find in Michigan Statutes Annotated. It is true that the Prettie amendment is very similar to it but it is not the same.

I wonder why any change is being made. Have the people ever voted on that? Have they ever seen it? I can tell you the answer to that right now. I happen to know that the people have not seen that because I happen to know where it came from. It is the same language as appeared in the letter that was sent to all of us by Donald Leonard except for certain changes.

Now, the people may have seen the language of Donald Leonard, I suppose that is quite possible. But it was changed. And it was changed the night before it was submitted to us. Obviously the people didn't see that either.

Therefore, I draw to your attention the fact that there are certain assumptions being made which are certainly not true.

The people have not seen the language of either of the amendments, either the amendment offered by Mr. Prettie or the amendment to the amendment offered by Mr. Hanna.

However, that is not the main reason for my speaking. The main reason is the substantive question of whether we should do — whether we should be bound, so to speak, by what the people have said in 1952 and 1935 and last week. That is an important question. In fact it seems to me it is an indispensable question for us to answer now that it has been raised.

For example, are we bound by what the people did in adopting the constitution, and therefore we should not change it? If that is the case, I call to your attention the fact that every single part of the constitution that we are considering has been adopted by the people — every part.

If that idea follows, that when the people have adopted something we should not touch it, what are we doing here? That is exactly what we are doing. We are deciding whether, after the people have adopted something, it should be reconsidered by us.

We cannot take the view that because the people have adopted this language, that language, or similar language, or any language, that the people want us to conduct a poll to find out whether they want to ratify it themselves. If that was all they wanted, we could have put the constitution on the ballot and had no convention.

I realize that many people here say they are bound or they feel bound by their constituents. If we were the legislature we should feel that way. But we are not the legislature.

I don't know the answer to the question that was just handed to me, because I can't read it — the question I was just handed, I mean — and, anyway, I think the question I am raising is better and I'll stick to that. (laughter)

The question I was raising is this, are we bound by what the people think, what our constituents think? If we are the legislature, probably we are bound. But the reason for having a constitutional convention is different. We obviously are not bound just by the constituents who live in our territory, and I would like to explain why. Why I think so, I mean. We are trying to adopt a constitution that will live not for 2 years — which is the way the legislature works — but for 50 years. We do not know who will live in our districts in the next 50 years. We have to protect all of the people for the next 50 years, those who live in our districts now and those who do not live in our districts now. We have to be thinking of the people who are not even born and who will be born within the next 50 years. We are not in the same boat as the legislature. The reason the constitutional convention was called — and I think we have to keep this in mind all the time — is that they wanted a group of people to do what we are doing here, to consider word by word, section by section, idea by idea, everything that the people have adopted in the past and to decide whether we suggest that they keep it or that they not keep it.

Now, we should not ask the people by a poll what they think. They have sent us here and they have asked us: what do we think? If they don't agree with us, they won't adopt it. But our job is to find out what we think.

Therefore, I hope that of all the arguments that have been presented, you will pay attention to every single one of them, except the one that says, "I don't know what to do; I'm going to ask someone else."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, we must be very close to voting on the Hanna amendment. (laughter) Accordingly, I would like to speak about the Hanna amendment so we won't forget what it is all about. Mr. Hanna proposes to insert the words "by reasonable means" after the word "seized". I do not believe that we have had very much enlightenment as to what is reasonable or what is unreasonable under the law.

I would like to give you a case in point. One of the delegates to this convention was driving his car down the road. One headlight was out. The state police stopped him. I won't disclose his name. The trooper asked the delegate to stop. The delegate asked, "Why are you stopping me?" The trooper said, "You have a headlight out. That is violating the law." The trooper asked, "Have you been drinking?" The delegate said, "Yes, I have." The trooper asked, "Would you mind getting out and walking around the car?" And the delegate did. The trooper asked the delegate if he had a bottle in the car and the delegate said "No." "Do you mind if I search?" the trooper asked. "No, you may search," the delegate replied. And the trooper did search. And having concluded that there was no bottle in the car he said, "I think you have not had too much to drink, you have nothing in the car to drink; I am satisfied that you are in good condition and can drive home," whereupon he let the delegate go home.

Do you think that was reasonable or unreasonable conduct? The Michigan supreme court has declared that this was an unreasonable search and seizure.

If the police officer had found, in the glove compartment, a half pound of heroin, or a loaded automatic, he would not, under the Hanna amendment, have been able to introduce that in a court of law.

I do not believe that that is what the people of the state of Michigan want. I think when they voted in 1952 — and I think the same would be true if they voted today — they did not want to prohibit the introduction into evidence of that loaded automatic or that half pound of heroin, because the public safety is involved.

The case I am relying upon is 358 Michigan 355, and I am reading from the Wayne Law Review, Volume 6, Summer 1960, No. 3, and it states:

> It was also found that the defendant had not voluntarily waived his right to be secure against unreasonable search and seizure by telling the officer to search his car and by himself removing the wagering memoranda.
>
> For a voluntary waiver to be valid the accused must first be advised of his rights, informed he need not submit to a search, and that if he did, the fruits thereof would be used in evidence against him. 358 Michigan 355, 362; 100 N.W.2d 456, 461 (1960)

The people, I think, in the public safety, — and we have authority for this, by the way, coming up, section 11 — the right of habeas corpus is certainly as venerable and old and well recognized a right as any that we have, and yet under section 11 we provide for the suspension of the right of habeas corpus when the public safety shall require it.

Now, I would submit that under this provision, under the Hanna amendment, I think the people if they were voting on it today — if you think of that particular case and that half pound of heroin and that loaded automatic — would want to have that evidence submitted and admitted and the criminal convicted.

Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. Chairman, in view of what I am going to say I am sure that Mr. Hubbs would be glad if I said my name begins with a "T".

I once knew a man who became 95. He was asked to what he attributed his long life. And he said, "I have never wasted my strength resisting temptation." (laughter)

I would not suggest than anyone here should waste his strength resisting temptation but I would hope that 144 people would resist the temptation to add any more verbiage to that we have already had, for a period of 5 minutes, and that during that time we would come to these amendments and vote on them. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Hanna amendment to the Prettie amendment. As many as are in favor will signify by saying aye. Those opposed?

The amendment to the amendment is not adopted.

Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: The next amendment on file is the one proposed by Miss McGowan and Mr. McCauley to amend the Prettie amendment:

1. Amend the amendment after "weapon" by striking out "or thing"; so the language of the amendment will then read in part, " . . . or any other dangerous weapon seized by any peace officer outside the curtilage of any dwelling house in this state."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: I rise, Mr. Chairman, to accept the amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment. As many as are in favor of the adoption of the amendment to the Prettie amendment will signify by saying aye. Opposed?

The amendment to the amendment is adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Mahinske has filed the following amendment to the Prettie amendment:

1. Amend the amendment after "drugs,", by striking out "any firearm, bomb, explosive, or any other dangerous weapon" and inserting "any machine gun or automatic pistol"; so the language of the amendment will then read in part, " . . . preliminary examination any narcotic drug or drugs, any machine gun or automatic pistol seized by any police officer. . . . "

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. Chairman, I think, in view of all the debate that we have had yesterday and all of the debate that we have had today, although I tend to go along with the Prettie amendment, I must object to the general terms used. We have just excluded the phrase "or thing". I am doubtful as to whether or not the phrase "dangerous weapon" is just as inclusive as the words "or thing". We know that the courts have interpreted the phrase "dangerous weapon" to include anything that has been or could be used as a dangerous weapon and I think with respect to firearms that we are in the area of the conservation people again and there is a lot of objection to the conservation people being able to search cars.

Just in the past couple of days we passed the civil rights section allowing the people to bear arms in defense of themselves or the state. I wonder how far that goes? Does this mean that they can bear arms but not in game reserves or not in forest lands or not as the conservation department believes they should?

I would think that the words "bomb" and "explosive" are also general terms that could be widely applied here. I think the crux of this whole proviso is that most of us are objecting to items that we feel there is absolutely no doubt about and narcotics, drugs, and so on — I do not think we can place any second meaning on what the intent of a person carrying narcotics or drugs either on their person or in their car would be. And also, any person carrying a machine gun or an automatic pistol — I do not think there is any doubt about what the intent of the person is who has these items on his person or in his car.

And for those reasons I object to the general terms "firearms, dangerous weapons, bomb or explosive".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Mahinske amendment to the Prettie amendment. As many as are in favor of the amendment will signify by saying aye. Those opposed?

The amendment to the amendment is not adopted.

Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the last amendment on file that has been offered to the Prettie amendment, Mr. Chairman.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman —

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are you rising to a point of order?

MR. FORD: This maybe isn't a point of order, Mr. Chairman. Perhaps it is more in the nature of a parliamentary inquiry. When do we get to the Hatch amendment?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Next.

MR. FORD: Do we vote on the Prettie amendment first?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: No, the Hatch amendment is a substitute for the Prettie amendment and that is coming up before us next. The secretary will read the Hatch substitute.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment offered by Mr. Hatch as a substitute for the Prettie amendment is as follows:

1. Amend page 3, line 6, by striking out "Evidence obtained in violation of this section shall not be used except as authorized by law" and inserting "Evidence obtained in violation of this section shall not be admissible in any court against any person".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now in on the substitute amendment offered by Mr. Hatch. As many as are in favor of the substitute will signify by saying aye. Those opposed?

The substitute amendment is not adopted.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Is the demand for a division supported?

It is supported. As many as are in favor of the substitute amendment offered by Mr. Hatch will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Forty-five.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Those opposed?

SECRETARY CHASE: Eighty-one.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The substitute amendment is not adopted.

Are there any further amendments?

The question now is on the —

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, may I ask Mr. Prettie a question as to the meaning of some of the words in this amendment? I note that the amendment is drafted in language of this type, that the provisions of this section shall not be construed, et cetera. Now, those 2 parts interest me and I should like to inquire what the meaning is. First of all, I would like to inquire whether this means that this is only to be a question of construction and not a matter of substantive law?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman, we have had in the constitution of this state for 25 years language similar in principle to that proposed. The incidence of the amendment that I presented, Dr. Nord, was in my own mind. I took the language of the present constitution. I eliminated therefrom the spelling out of what I thought was a verbose number of definitions or descriptions or words as to articles. I then, because of the thinking in this convention on the subject of magistrates or justices of the peace, substituted "preliminary examination".

I feel that the language that has been the settled law of this state for the past 25 years is so clear, the English so cogent, that the meaning of those words cannot be in question in anyone's mind and particularly the mind of a brilliant man like you.

MR. NORD: I would like this for the record, sir.

MR. PRETTIE: You have it, sir.

MR. NORD: Now I have an additional question in connection with that. I note only that it says — I might add, incidentally, that this question was ruled on in the Gonzales case; I simply want everyone to know what we are doing — the language reads "nothing shall be construed" but we have, for the record, that it means something more than that in legal parlance.

The other question is this. It states here that "the provisions of this section". Now, does that mean that if there is anything else in the constitution which would prohibit this, or any other rule of law, let us say, in the federal constitution, or any common law rule of law, does that mean that those rules might not prohibit such evidence?

MR. PRETTIE: In my opinion, Mr. Chairman, for what it may be worth, they do not. This is a proviso to the section we have been debating now for 2 long sessions. I think it is definitely restricted to the language to which it is a proviso.

MR. NORD: My other question then, sir, is this. I assume — I trust correctly — that we all understand what it is we are doing here. I would like everyone to understand what we are voting on. Check me if I am incorrect. This does not in any way imply, does it, that evidence of this type which is seized in an unreasonable manner is legally seized? Is that correct?

MR. PRETTIE: That is correct.

MR. NORD: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise to speak very briefly in support of the Prettie amendment.

What section 10, as it now exists, and what the Prettie amendment mean to me is this. Even though you have an illegal machine gun or a bomb or narcotic drugs in your house, the law says you cannot reach them without a search warrant. But if you take that machine gun or that bomb or those narcotic drugs on the street, then the law says that they can be reached without a search warrant because you are endangering public safety.

Mr. Greene, Delegate Greene, spoke of the deplorable conditions in Detroit in connection with police work. I point out to the delegates of this convention that those deplorable conditions do not come from section 10. If they did, they would exist everywhere in the state because section 10 is applicable everywhere in the state. The deplorable conditions that Delegate Greene says exist in the city of Detroit are a local police matter and could and should be corrected by the local citizens of Detroit.

Again, I advocate the passage of the Prettie amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Garry Brown. Is this on the Prettie amendment?

MR. G. E. BROWN: It is, Mr. Chairman. I would like to move at this time that we consider a substitute for the Prettie amendment, that being the Habermehl amendment presently on the desk of the secretary.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order, I understand that we cannot do this, that by marching down the list the way we are supposed to is the only course now open to us. That is the reason the amendments were set out in this fashion. I do not basically quarrel with this. The only difference between Mr. Habermehl's amendment and mine is one of phraseology. The intent is the same. I could move mine as a substitute for the other. They are absolutely opposed — both of them — to Mr. Prettie's amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Before this session started we agreed to go along and follow certain rules of procedure, and I think the motion made by Mr. Brown is contrary to that agreement. His motion, therefore, is not in order.

The question is now on the Prettie amendment as amended. Mr. Faxon, are you going to speak on the Prettie amendment?

MR. FAXON: Yes, sir.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Very well.

MR. FAXON: I wish to ask Mr. Prettie a question on the amendment here. We are probably all concerned with the idea of doing the right thing and some of us are concerned about getting at the criminal in one way and some in another way.

What I want to know is primarily concerned with the idea the police officer has in his own mind. Maybe he stops a car when he suspects there may be narcotics or other contraband in the car. He thinks he wants to find out. Now, it may be some intuition on his part. He goes ahead and he searches the car. First he removes the occupant of the car or asks him to get out. The occupant of the car may object. The policeman makes his search and does not find any evidence such as listed here in the amendment. Now, his motive may have been in some way prompted by the thought that if he had found contraband it would be all right.

I wish to ask and I think it is important to have and record the answer to this question — what guarantees does the person have in this instance other than what some people have alluded to, which is that they can take the police to court for searching them, because he found nothing, but if he had found something it would be all right.

I am simply trying to get at what the citizens' rights are here.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Faxon, I did not have the privilege of hearing the debate of 3 hours yesterday afternoon on this subject which you did have. I have, however, with you, listened to the debate this afternoon. I am sure that the answer to the question you have posed — which I do not think I quite understand — but I think I get the purport of it — if the answer to that question is not clear, sir, in your mind after 2½ hours, I am sure I cannot clarify it.

MR. FAXON: Well, let me just state this for the record. It has been said by many that the recourse for an illegal search or seizure is court action and I think that for lawyers this would probably be a likely thing to expect. But I think it is unreasonable to expect such action on the part of the many, many people who may have this experience of being illegally searched or seized as they pass through life. I do not think we can logically expect them to go into a court — and I don't know what procedures would be involved but I suppose the hiring of an attorney — to take action against law enforcement officers in a matter of this sort where usually 2 officers are going to testify differently anyhow, and the judge won't pay much attention to the citizen.

So I do not believe in this case the idea of expecting many people to go to court where they feel there has been an illegal search is particularly reasonable or valid and I simply offer that comment for what it is worth.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair wishes to state at this time that there seems to be some concern about taking up the amendments as they were presented to the secretary. This will be done in the exact order that you have on your calendar.

Are there any questions on the Prettie amendment as amended?

Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I believe that there has been one point made here which I think ordinarily, in relation to many parts of this constitution, would carry a good deal of weight with all of us. That is the fact that the people in a statewide election have passed or have carried or ratified certain amendments to this section.

I should like to point out, however, that we are dealing here with a subject which is intended to protect the individual against just exactly that sort of majority action. We are talking about a constitutional guarantee, the right of the individual to be secure. We assume, by the fact that it is a constitutional guarantee for the protection of the individual, that no majority, regardless of how great it might be, can affect that individual's liberty.

Therefore, the size of the vote has nothing whatsoever to do with this unless we want to get down to the matter of people's courts — the abolition of all rights of individuals as against the majority. The size of the vote has nothing whatsoever to do with this question.

As a second point I should like to say that in my opinion, as an ex prosecutor, this Prettie amendment is absolutely unnecessary. In 6 years of acting as prosecuting attorney I have never on one occasion felt the necessity to rely upon this ruling. All that was ever necessary was that the officer make the reasonable search and seizure.

I should like to point out, in response to Mr. Higgs' example, that when the officer said, "Do you mind if I look in the car?" that he made a reasonable search, despite what the Michigan supreme court might have said in regard to this question. The officer in the illustration conducted a reasonable search. He obtained the permission of the man concerned to search. It is simply unnecessary, as 2 police officers have testified, and as I testify now. In 6 years I never found any occasion to rely on it whatsoever.

Then the original language, without the provisos, provides adequate police power and it still provides for the protection of these individual rights against the right of the majority. I would not want to have any delegate influenced by the fact that the majority of the people of the state have abridged a constitutional guarantee of an individual. The majority of the state simply does not have that right.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Miss McGowan.

MISS McGOWAN: Thank you. Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I consider it a privilege to support the Prettie amendment. I speak as a former assistant prosecutor and as a defense attorney.

I can see absolutely nothing in this provision which lends weight to the argument that law enforcement officers are given blanket authority to crush or violate the basic rights of any person.

We believe in the dignity of all men and inherent in our belief is the thought that society deserves protection. Our children need protection from gunmen and from narcotic pushers.

We feel that the Prettie amendment is the way to afford society, and especially our children, the proper and much needed protection.

I implore you to join me in supporting the Prettie amendment and thereby reaffirming and clarifying the direct mandate of all of the people of the state of Michigan.

Thank you. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: I wish to advise that an amendment has been offered to the Prettie amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. King has filed the following amendment to the Prettie amendment:

1. Amend the amendment after "weapon,", by inserting "unlawfully"; so that the language will then read:

. . . in any criminal proceeding or preliminary examination any narcotic drug or drugs, any firearm, bomb, explosive, or any other dangerous weapon unlawfully seized by any peace officer . . . .

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. King to the Prettie amendment.

Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the purpose for offering this amendment is to convey clearly to the people just what we intend to do here, that we intend to sanction unlawful activity.

I read from the Mapp decision yesterday some quotations which I thought might sustain the legal authority involved. As I say, there is no question in my mind what the case says. And if you will recall — and the record will show I staked my professional reputation upon my beliefs, something which no one else has done, to my knowledge.

But let me not argue the merits of the case. Let me rather point out what the court in that case said with regard to what they thought, these men, this particular group of men, sitting as our supreme tribunal, thought about what they were doing or what they would not be doing if they did not hold as they held. I quote:

> Nothing can destroy a government more quickly than its failure to observe its own laws, or worse, its disregard of the charter of its own existence. As Mr. Justice Brandeis, dissenting, said in Olmstead v. United States (1928):
>
> > Our government is the point, the omnipresent teacher. For good or for ill, it teaches the whole people by its example. If the government becomes a lawbreaker, it breeds contempt for law; it invites every man to become a law unto himself; it invites anarchy.

And in conclusion I should like to reiterate what that quote said:

> Our decision, founded on reason and truth, gives to the individual no more than that which the constitution guarantees him; to the police officer no less than that to which honest law enforcement is entitled, and to the courts, that judicial integrity so necessary in the true administration of justice.

I think the people are entitled to know what we propose and I do not think there is any reason why we cannot spell it out. I do not think there is one out of 144 people sitting in this room who do not agree that this is what we are saying. And inasmuch as this is what we are saying, let us say it. Let us be honest. Frankly, many people, I am afraid, believe that the law is what Mr. Hanna's amendment would make it. But unfortunately, of course, that is not what the present law is. So let us be honest with the people.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the King amendment to the Prettie amendment.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, could I ask that the whole amendment be read, please, with the word of my amendment inserted?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Prettie's amendment is sought to be amended in the following way:

Mr. Prettie's amendment, as amended, and with the amendment now proposed by Mr. King, would read as follows:

Amend page 2, line 28, after "affirmation" by striking out the period and on page 3, line 6, by striking out "Evidence obtained in violation of this section shall not be used except as authorized by law.", and inserting a colon and "Provided however, That the provisions of this section shall not be construed to bar from evidence in any court of criminal jurisdiction, in any criminal proceeding or preliminary examination any narcotic drug or drugs, any firearm, bomb, explosive, or any other dangerous weapon unlawfully seized by any peace officer outside the curtilage of any dwelling house in this state.".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the King amendment for reasons that are so obvious after 5 hours and 45 minutes of debate that I shall not belabor them.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is now on the King amendment to the Prettie amendment. As many as are in favor of the amendment to the amendment will signify by saying aye. Opposed?

The amendment to the amendment is not adopted.

Are there any further amendments? The question now is on the Prettie amendment as amended.

Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, as I understand the procedural posture it is this, that if we vote down the Prettie amendment, then we have before us the committee report to which there may be further amendments.

If we vote for the Prettie amendment, then we vote for that as, in effect, an amendment to or a substitute for the committee's suggestion. Is that right, sir?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That is right.

MR. NORRIS: I just wish to make one point in passing, and in response to the question that was asked by Mr. Faxon which I think was germane to this inquiry and to which I think too flippant an answer was given by the very able representative of the amendment which we now have before us. I can only cite, if I may, Mr. Justice Jackson who made this observation which I think is pertinent to the 8 million people in the state of Michigan who are our clients in this matter. The statement reads:

> Only occasional and more flagrant abuses come to the attention of the courts, and then only those where search and seizure yields incriminating evidence and the defendant is at least sufficiently compromised to be indicted.
>
> If the officers raid a home, an office, or stop and search an automobile, but find nothing incriminating, this invasion of the personal liberty of the innocent too often finds no practical redress.
>
> There may be, and I am convinced that there are, many unlawful searches of homes and automobiles of innocent people which turn up nothing incriminating, in which no arrest is made, about which courts do nothing and about which we never hear.
>
> Courts can protect the innocent against such invasions only indirectly and through the medium of excluding evidence obtained against those who frequently are guilty. Brinegar v. United States, 338 United States, 160, 181; 69 Supreme Court 1302, 1313 L. Ed. 1879 — dissenting opinion.

I think that succinctly states what we have before us and I respectfully urge a vote against the Prettie amendment and a vote in favor of the committee report.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mrs. Elliott would like to talk on the Prettie amendment.

MRS. DAISY ELLIOTT: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise to speak against the Prettie amendment and speak favorably for the Bledsoe and Donnelly amendment. As one of the delegate proposers to the deletion of the proviso in article II, section 10 —

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mrs. Elliott, the Chair would like to call to your attention the fact that we are on the Prettie amendment and not on the Donnelly, Bledsoe amendment. We are about to vote on the Prettie amendment and if that is lost then we will proceed to a consideration of the other.

MRS. DAISY ELLIOTT: Mr. Chairman, I propose to speak against the Prettie amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: All right.

MRS. DAISY ELLIOTT: As one of the delegate proposers — one of the initial or original delegate proposers — of the deletion of the proviso in article II, section 10, I, too, believe that the right to be left alone is the most comprehensive of the rights most valued by civilized men and hold that the proviso in the Michigan constitution is a violation of the federal constitution.

I agree with and condone the summation of Judge Gadola of the historical facts and, because of my moral obligation to my constituents as a delegate to the constitutional convention, I would like the record to show that regardless of the decision here, I shall vote against any amendment that retains the proviso of article II, section 10. I should like the record to show my position in this matter.

Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the hour is late. I raise for about 2 minutes in support of the amendment that has been so long discussed. I wish to apologize, first of all, to this committee for having presented an amendment upon which I was not present to speak at its introduction.

I had it prepared on Sunday after 2 days of work. I had it ready for presentation at the Monday night session. And when it became apparent, because of the debate arising out of section 4, that I probably would not be here when this committee reached this debate, I had to submit it in absentia, so to speak, for which I think I am deserving of censure. I wish publicly to express my deep appreciation to Mr. Danhof, who so ably presented the remarks I would have made, to Miss McGowan, to Messrs. Sharpe, Boothby, Brake, Stevens, McAllister, Martin, Binkowski, Beaman, Davis and Leibrand.

One point and one point only I think has not been covered here. We have had a long and a most arduous discussion and on a very high level and a very sincere level with respect to a very fundamental thing. We have heard many comments as to the relevance of certain provisions of the federal constitution, the laws of the sovereign state of Michigan.

I did not hear what was mentioned yesterday and I hope I am not being redundant, but in the amendments and the tenth amendment which had to be annexed before the constitution itself was adopted, it is stated:

> The powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively or to the people.

We are the people — or at least the chosen representatives thereof. We are here assembled to voice their views. We have been admonished from the rostrum our chairman occupies that now is the time for Michigan to lead the way in recovering to the states some of the powers that have been lost through dereliction of state duty. This recovery, I submit, applies equally to the recovery of our legislative, our executive and our judicial powers.

The Mapp case, so long discussed, is on petition for rehearing. It is a case about which you have heard much on both sides. It is the only legal doctrine upon which the proponents of the original report of the committee on declaration of rights bases its objection to the present language which we have by this amendment attempted to simplify.

We think that case casts doubt upon the sovereign powers of the people of the state of Michigan. I say it is time for us to stop indulging in guessing games. We were sent here by the people of the state of Michigan to speak their views, to voice their sentiments.

I do not agree with Delegate Habermehl when he says that a vote of the people is not of any significance to us. It certainly is. This is what we are here for. The people within the past 9 years have given a mandate.

If that proviso, as simplified by this amendment, is to be struck down, let it be struck down by the courts of the United States of America and let the results rest where they belong, and not with this convention. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Rush.

MR. RUSH: Mr. Chairman, I rise to support the Prettie amendment. I feel it is about time to take action if we are going to give the honest citizens of this country the protection they need. To do so, we had better stand behind the law enforcement officers.

I would also like to ask Mr. Habermehl, who seems to advocate that an officer should not search a car without the permission of the driver or owner of that car, if he would be very apt to get permission from a thug or a bunch of bank robbers?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do you care to answer, Mr. Habermehl?

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman, I would hate to leave the impression that I advocated that that is the only way an officer can search a car. An officer can search a car any time that he can make a valid arrest. An officer can make a valid arrest when he knows that a felony has been committed and has reasonable grounds to believe that the person that he is arresting committed the felony. He can make an arrest any time a misdemeanor is committed in his presence.

Now, the law has been for many years — a couple of recent cases from the Michigan supreme court notwithstanding — that any time an officer makes an arrest he may search the house, in case the arrest is made there, he may search the automobile, he may search the immediate vicinity of the commission of the crime. Under those provisions, 99 and 99/100 per cent of all searches are made. That is the reason why, in a period of 6 years, I never felt any necessity to rely upon the proviso that is presently contained in the constitution.

The officer has ample power, as Delegate Greene and Delegate Youngblood stated, and he is instructed in the proper means of making a search so that it will be a reasonable search and seizure. That affords the police all the power that they need.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Binkowski requests one minute.

MR. BINKOWSKI: I just want to say to Mr. Prettie that I am normally very receptive to thanks, but one of the delegates back here perhaps misinterpreted one of your helpers and I think it was I, and so for the record will you please tell this convention which "ski" you are talking about?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do you care to answer, Mr. Prettie?

MR. PRETTIE: I think I gave the name of representative Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Again for the record, Mr. Chairman, may I say this. I think this perhaps deserves some explanation. I know of no occasion on which I have helped you, Mr. Prettie, with respect to your amendment, or any endeavor in this cause.

MR. PRETTIE: I may have been confused by the tenor of your remarks but it sounded right down my alley. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the Prettie amendment, as amended.

Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, please, for the record, I was just reading comments. They were not my own. Heaven forbid. Well, perhaps I should not say that. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mrs. Judd.

MRS. JUDD: Mr. Chairman, I simply want to remind the committee of this fact. If we are to give priority to the vote of the people on this provision of some 10 years ago, I would like to remind the convention that about 8 months ago the people voted to have the constitution revised. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask why this provision has not been adopted in any other state? Does this mean that every other state has a flow of narcotics and firearms? Why is this necessary only in the state of Michigan to insert a proviso? Would any of the proponents of the Prettie amendment care to answer the question as to why Michigan will be the only state in the union to have a provision restricting the present wording of the federal constitution in respect to searches and seizures?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Faxon, the committee studied this proposal very carefully. Many states that do not have any provision in the constitution do permit the introduction of evidence following an unreasonable search and seizure.

The exclusionary rule is that of the federal government and the state of Michigan and such other states as have adopted it by judicial action. In Ohio, for example, it was not necessary to have anything in the constitution. Ohio, apparently, does not have the exclusionary rule. That, at least in part, answers your question.

MR. FAXON: Well, does this come about then, by reason of the decision of the courts of Michigan?

MR. STEVENS: I thought by now everybody would understand that the exclusionary rule is a rule of evidence and not a constitutional provision. It is not even a statute.

MR. FAXON: Well, I am not a lawyer and I am sorry, Mr. Stevens, if I was unable to follow all the legal arguments but I was just concerned with the reason why Michigan would be the only state that would find it necessary and I thought I understood you to say that this was due to the interpretation that the courts of Michigan have placed upon the amendment.

MR. STEVENS: This is a rule of procedure. I cannot understand why you don't understand it, Jack. The courts have adopted this as a rule of procedure in order to enforce the search and seizure provision. In the federal courts it was adopted and it was adopted in some state courts but in many courts it is not the rule. So those states that do not have it have no reason to put it in the constitution. Other states might, but haven't, that is true.

MR. FAXON: And the exclusionary rule is then what is in question here?

MR. STEVENS: Delegate Faxon, the exclusionary rule is the rule of evidence which forbids the admission of evidence which has been secured by an unreasonable search and seizure. That is a rule adopted by the courts. It seems it ought to have been clear long ago that we are not talking about a constitutional provision. The Constitution of the State of Michigan never did provide for the exclusion of the evidence.

MR. FAXON: Why were these amendments added in 1936? What was the motivating factor at the time?

MR. STEVENS: I yield to Mr. Prettie. Maybe he wants to answer your question.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: My view is that we have this proviso in the Constitution of the State of Michigan, not found in any other state, because the people put it there.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Prettie amendment as amended.

Mr. Brown.

MR. T. S. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, let me quote from the oath of office that we took when we first arrived here in Lansing, as follows:

> I do solemnly swear or affirm that I will support the Constitution of the United States, and the constitution of this state, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of the office of a constitutional convention delegate according to the best of my ability.

Now, you will notice that it says we will support the Constitution of the United States and, very briefly, that means that we will support the Constitution of the United States as interpreted by the Supreme Court of the United States at any time.

The argument that has been advanced, the vote that has been indicated favorably for the Prettie amendment, are all arguments which would obviate the effect of the decision of the supreme court which is undeniably at present, however you may dislike it, the law of the land.

I would simply like to remind the delegates that when you are voting thusly you are voting against the principles of the constitution. I, for one, cannot do it and I hope that you will not be able to say, ashamedly, to your grandchildren that you did vote to strike down a basic tenet of the United States constitution by so voting here today.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman, I feel compelled to rise in answer to Delegate Brown's remarks. The oath that he read compels me and every delegate here to support 2 documents, the Constitution of the State of Michigan which we now have — true, we are revising it — but as it now exists it has been construed in Gonzales as clearly the law of this land, and surely not violative of the federal constitution. I also swore to and I am observing my oath in upholding the Constitution of the United States of America. A very recent decision of the supreme court of this state, even now on petition for rehearing before that court, in which after about 7 months the decision was arrived at in overruling the settled law under Wolf v. Colorado and other cases, is something that I do not feel constrained to observe as a constitutional mandate within the federal constitution.

I also feel that article X of the state constitution reserving sovereign rights to the people whom we here represent is a very great part of the oath that I took on October third.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. Chairman, I must also rise in opposition to the remarks made by Delegate Brown and I object to his or any other delegate placing any qualifications or definitions on the intent or motive of my vote; whether they are legal or illegal, I think that this is something that I must decide myself and not someone else for me. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: Just for the benefit of those who have not rechecked it, I wish people would be mindful of the fact that Mr. Bledsoe's amendment which I cosponsor is article IV of the United States constitution, and in re that statement and what it says, and what you are for and what you are against, I am not saying necessarily that I believe that any individual who votes to support Mr. Prettie's amendment would be violating the United States constitution. This is just a matter of opinion among people and I do not wish to say that anybody would violate his oath if he voted for Mr. Prettie's amendment.

I do want them to know, however, that it is opposed to the language, in my opinion, of the United States constitution which language is contained in my amendment that will come up after this is disposed of.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mrs. Hatcher?

MRS. HATCHER: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise at this time because I feel compelled to put before you the position that Delegate Brown took just a few moments ago.

At first, sitting here as a delegate and an active citizen, and as one who has been active in community affairs in the state of Michigan for a number of years, and having the privilege of serving as a delegate to this constitutional convention, I felt that certainly this particular section of article II, section 10, was being sufficiently discussed by the legal minds of this convention. And it has also been discussed by those on the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections who have been designated by that committee to more or less carry the ball in this behalf.

But after sitting here for 2 days listening to the discussion and listening to the points that some of the delegates have raised and the positions they have taken in terms of their point of view, I felt compelled to enter some remarks, based on the experience that I have had for the past 15 years working in the field of human rights and in the field of community relations in the city of Detroit, in the state of Michigan, and on a national and international level.

I feel that the position that I must take at this time is in opposition to the Prettie amendment and to support the recommendation made by the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

I certainly feel that those people who like to divide decisions that are made by the supreme court by saying that only 4 voted this way and 2 voted another way, are only attempting to evade the law of the land and the decisions that are made by one of the highest bodies of our great nation.

I think, too, that certainly the comments that have been made here today and yesterday are more or less tending to lead some people, who may not be thoroughly aware of what is the discussion on the floor, to believe that we are discussing the rights of police officers in the city of Detroit or in the state of Michigan to search and to obtain certain illegal properties from individual citizens.

But in the context of section 10 we are talking about the rights and privileges of the people and protecting those rights. No place in this particular section does it deal primarily with the rights of officers, but more or less with the rights of people. And that is a point which I certainly wish to emphasize.

And so, in concluding, Mr. Chairman, I would like to record my support at this time for the recommendation of the committee's report. And before concluding I should like to say that the fact that the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections voted 7 to 8 to reconsider section 10, certainly does not mean that we were in favor of including the proviso finally because we did not reach that point. We were merely voting on whether or not we should take up the matter again. I would not be so presumptuous as to say how the vote might have gone. I have an idea but I would not answer that. I would rather have gone through the procedure.

I thank you for this opportunity of entering my view on this section.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. McCauley.

MR. McCAULEY: In response to Delegate Brown's remarks in worrying about all of our grandchildren and so on, I am certainly not afraid of anything my grandchildren might think about this in the event that I am fortunate enough to have any. And I might state further in response to Delegate Brown that I am as aware of my constitutional obligations as I am sure he is or anybody else in the room.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I am opposed, as I guess everyone knows by now, to the Prettie amendment, but I am also opposed to the remarks that Mr. Brown made. I do not think that it is the intention of anyone to do something which is opposed to the federal constitution, and I think we may inadvertently do something which, in my opinion, violates the federal constitution; but there are many people here who are not lawyers and even the lawyers disagree, and I cannot understand that, but I am never able to. (laughter) Every time I go into court I never can understand how the guy on the other side can think the way that he thinks. So I just want to state very clearly that I do not think that anyone here is intentionally doing something which would be in violation of his oath of office.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I have been hearing a great deal about the officers, as though they were public enemy number 1. I noticed that Mrs. Hatcher talked about the rights of the people and I wondered if officers are not people.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Prettie amendment as amended.

Mr. McLogan.

MR. McLOGAN: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I am in the anomalous position of favoring what I feel to be the true intent of the Prettie amendment but I am compelled by the arguments of the last 2 sessions to feel that, in balance, the matter of rights is better expressed by the precept of the argument given by Mr. Habermehl. Therefore, I respectfully oppose the Prettie amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Prettie amendment as amended. As many as are in favor will signify by saying aye.

Mr. Douglas.

MR. DOUGLAS: Mr. Chairman, I have sat here very quietly hoping that the complexion of this committee would change and I have heard the technical arguments pro and con and I am not afraid, as a lawyer, of the principles enunciated in the Mapp case. I am also a teacher in the city of Detroit. I have seen the impact, the real thing that happens, with this provision amended in 1952.

Now, since 1952 we have had supreme court decisions that have given to our democracy a greater emphasis, a greater meaning throughout the world. In 1954 all of you lawyers remember what happened. Our thinking progressed on the supreme court. And again in the Mapp case we see that the thinking of the supreme court is keeping pace with international affairs.

Now, I take this matter very personally because this provision affected me in 1956. I think it is worthwhile that I relate this to you.

I am a lawyer today only because there was, fortunately, a gentleman who was connected with the prosecutor's office in Wayne county who had some foresight. I had recently returned from West Virginia, the university there, and I had in my trunk sporting equipment. Not having much time — just as now — I had not completed emptying out my trunk. And so one Saturday night I was dressed, driving in accordance with the law, and there was absolutely no reason for the police to stop me. But we in Detroit know why I was stopped. I was stopped, I was searched, my car was searched, and in the trunk, buried underneath all of this sporting equipment were war souvenirs.

A technicality? Yes, a technicality. I had a souvenir pistol and hunting knives from Japan. I had forgotten they were there. They had been there for 6 months since I was attending school in West Virginia.

And so I was taken downtown and I was kept in the "bull pen" which was very confined, all weekend. And over and over the detectives were apologizing to me because they had to submit a recommendation for prosecution.

And I am very grateful for that deputy prosecutor who had some foresight. After they had investigated me back through the years, 10 years, they saw that I had a clean record, was formerly an army officer, the deputy prosecutor entertained or filed a motion to quash. What would have happened had he not done that? I would have been technically convicted of a felony and I would not be here today.

When I first came to this convention, the first week I was here, it was important to me to meet many of the delegates from out state areas. And I remember one of them asking me, "Delegate Douglas, whom do you represent?" And I told him that I could give him 3 answers. I could first tell him that I came here to represent the 119,000 people in my district. And in another sense I could tell him that I came here to represent the 700,000 citizens of color in this state. And even in the greater sense, I came here for the benefit and welfare of 8 million citizens.

Now, we can deal in technicalities all we want to. You can disregard the mandate of the Mapp case. But I tell you, in truth, that this is not the last time you will hear of this. In 1952 you say that the people voted for this measure. If they voted for this thing, why should it not be changed now? A wise man changes; a fool will never change.

Now, we have had one delegate speak of "cock and bull" stories. I raise my hand. What I have told you today is no cock and bull story and it is very similar to the experiences of many citizens who are affected by this thing. It is a mandate to our courts. They cannot do anything about it.

It was also said by another delegate that perhaps this is a fashion of the times. Well, maybe it is a fashionable thing but surely the time has come when we should start to uphold the individual's rights.

In the first week we were here, I heard one of the most able leaders of this convention say that this convention has an international complexion. The whole world is watching what we are doing here. So the technicalities, you see, are so very important as to what happens to people when you pass something like this.

We are doing something here which we thought was important enough that we invited the former president of the United States to come here and talk to us about it. And we are meeting in our sessions here at the same time that many millions and millions of dollars are being spent trying to convince the Asian bloc and the African bloc nations that we have a good democracy.

Ladies and gentlemen of this committee, I think we must give sincere thought to this question. I am not for the Prettie amendment. I am for the committee's proposal.

Thank you. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Gover.

MR. GOVER: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I had thought that I would not get to my feet but I can't sit any longer and I wanted to stand up anyway. I just wanted to relate one incident. Delegate Douglas spoke about army souvenirs and such. Back during the war I had a store. I stepped out of the store one Saturday night to deliver groceries to a person in a car and on the way back I stepped into a gas station. As I stepped through the door, one of these souvenir guns was pointed at me. I was looking right down the muzzle of a German luger. And that was like one of these souvenir items that are casually carried around. But how can the police know about the intention of the person carrying the weapon without checking into these things?

I do not feel that the original statements in our constitution are so bad. They have been in there up to now and they are good. I think the Prettie amendment is probably just as good but as far as that is concerned I would just as soon go back to the original wording of the constitution.

Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Sharpe.

MR. SHARPE: Mr. Chairman, in view of the fact that I spoke about a "cock and bull" story, I would like to remind my good colleague, Mr. Douglas, of the fact that I feel for these people but I also say this is a city of Detroit problem and it looks to me as though they have solved the problem for themselves very well.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Ladies and gentlemen, I did not intend to say anything but I do feel compelled to do so for this reason. So much heat has been generated — perhaps that is the word — that in view of the fact that I support the committee proposal, and oppose the Prettie amendment, I feel called upon to state for the record my reason. Within the last year I have had the privilege twice of seeing a documentary motion picture film in Williamsburg, Virginia. That film has been shown, I believe, to millions of people who have visited Williamsburg and the film has been very popular.

During some of the debates I had an opportunity to think of that film in lieu of anything else, and when I think of the travail, the things that our forefathers went through, to get us the privileges we have, I feel compelled to vote against anything that tends to delete one of our basic rights.

I feel that although this may be labeled an evidentiary rule, the results have been and cannot help but be to dilute that hard won right. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Heideman.

MR. HEIDEMAN: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I also wish to express my view for the record. A free or constitutional society has 2 main aspects, the right of the majority to rule, and the right of the individual to be free. We are now here concerned with the right of the individual to be free, free even against the majority.

Man's most sacred right is the finest jewel in the crown of democracy and, because there is a reasonable doubt in my mind, I wish to do the sure thing and support the original committee report.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Prettie amendment as amended. As many —

Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, we must be very close to voting on the Prettie amendment. (laughter)

I feel constrained to say this. A certain amount of emotion has been introduced into this debate upon which I should like to comment and, in particular, that introduced by Delegate Douglas. I am, I think, pleased, and Delegate Douglas should be pleased, with the compassion demonstrated by the law enforcement officers in that particular case. Although he was carrying weapons, he had an opportunity to explain himself and it was explained and he was released.

But I would not like him to think that illegal arrest is a matter of color. I, too, have been illegally arrested. In 1951, in flagrant violation of my rights — and I might say that I do not take my rights lightly — I was stopped, taken to the police station, and fortunately I did not have in my possession anything illegal. But I would like to say that as a consequence of that, when I had the opportunity to do so as an attorney, I prosecuted a civil claim against 2 constables and a sheriff in a federal court, for an illegal arrest, and secured a judgment.

Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Garvin.

MR. GARVIN: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, first I want to say, in answer to Mr. Higgs, if there is emotion in this debate, there has been emotion with regard to this issue since 1835; and that emotion has worked out pretty well in these United States of America. And since 1835, this emotion has been reflected in the state constitution, and it has worked out well.

If it is emotion, let us have the emotion, if that is your opinion of it. But actually, it is law. It is basic law under the Constitution of the United States.

Judge Mosier, Judge Gadola and other delegates here have explained to the committee all the legal efficacy of the Constitution of the United States, and I do not believe it is for us to change it. It has been going along great so far.

Now, as has been stated, this is a rule of evidence and I believe that most of us know that rules of evidence are not ordinarily contained in a constitution.

I was impressed, too, by the few words spoken by Mrs. Judd. There has been a lot of talk here about what has happened heretofore when people were voting on these amendments. Of course, one of the reasons they voted for the amendment is that through the newspapers and through the press — which was brought out yesterday — the facts were made known and that is the reason they voted as they did.

But more important than that, just a few months ago they asked us to review the constitution and draw up a new one. And I am standing by that, and I am standing by the proposal as brought in by the committee.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Young.

MR. YOUNG: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I, too, wish to take a position in opposition to the Prettie amendment. I think that our present discussion, in its inordinate length, is an indication of the importance of this matter, and of the fact that this will probably be one of the most critical discussions we have had and will have in this constitutional convention.

We have, in my opinion, reached the turning point. The basic question before us is: shall we continue the 100 year march of progress, the extension of human rights, that has characterized the great state of Michigan and go forward and expand those rights? Or shall we turn our back and begin to contract individual rights of citizens?

I have heard it said here that this is a Detroit problem and that Detroit can solve that problem. I think Delegate Sharpe indicated that he was sorry for those people. Now, I don't know what he meant by "those people" — he might have meant the citizens of Detroit or he might have meant the negro people who constitute 1/10 of the population of this state.

But in any event, whether it is a minority consisting of the population of the city of Detroit or the minority of the negro people, this entire convention should be very alert to any threat to the liberties of any individual, much less any substantial minority among us.

There were those in Germany when Hitler started his imposition of the laws of the state, his illegalization of police power, who felt this only concerned the Jewish people. But history has shown how wrong those people were, for indeed Hitler's illegality was extended against the whole German people, against all of continental Europe, and it threatened to engulf the world.

I think that here today we all are faced with this question, this same type of constitutional question. I say that the people of the state of Michigan will judge, to a great degree, whether or not this constitution shall be accepted or rejected on the basis of what attitude we take toward the basic human liberties that are enshrined in our national constitution.

This is no technical question. I am no lawyer. This is a matter of human rights. This is a matter of the doctrine of the federal constitution as opposed to the doctrine of interposition, as has been advanced here.

I, for one, take the position that the doctrine of human rights deserves my support and I take my position in support of the Constitution of the United States.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Sharpe.

MR. SHARPE: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Young, I did not say this was a problem for the city of Detroit that they could not solve. What I said was this: it looks to me, as though, according to the last election, they have solved this problem — and I do say that it is a local problem because it has not happened that way in Grand Rapids, at least I have no knowledge of it, and it has not happened in Howell. We have, however, apprehended several criminals because of this proviso and that is why I am in favor of it. I did not say that it was a problem for the colored people. I said I feel for these people whoever they are, who are harrassed. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I am not an orator. I am not even a public speaker. I had planned to keep my seat — and I have been trying very, very hard to do so — but there are many reasons why I am going to have to stand up here and talk now. You see all of my colleagues, fellow citizens and members of my race in this convention have gone on record as stating their positions, so I am forced to. And I am forced to for a very important reason. I am here as an independent. I am here because my actions in the community and my actions in the city of Detroit have demonstrated to many, many people in the city the type of thing for which I stand.

I have had great faith in the results that this convention was going to produce in terms of human rights. I had great faith in the results that would be achieved by the convention in the field of human rights for the people of my race in this state.

However, I have been tremendously disappointed with the people here expressing insistence on keeping those clauses which really are meaningless in this section. I have been disappointed with their desire to retain them.

I have been searched, too. I have been searched so many times that it has become just one of those things that I expect. I was searched in the recent dragnet. I was not driving a car. I heard Delegate Norris mention that you do not even have the right of protection from your person being searched. I was walking down the street at 2:30 in the afternoon when I was searched. I had to pull my personal belongings out of my pockets. I do not wish to dramatize this situation, but let me say that this is the bill of rights, and this is a deplorable situation, and I do not think the courts will be able to do anything, as a result of our action here, that they cannot already do.

I rise in support of the proposal just exactly as it was introduced by the committee on declaration of rights.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Tweedie.

MR. TWEEDIE: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, Mr. Heideman talks about reasonable doubt. Well, because there is very reasonable doubt in my mind as to whether the committee did the right thing in overruling the mandate of the people, I support the Prettie amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, at this time I feel compelled to rise, not because of my being a resident of the city of Detroit, I am not; and not because I am a member of the colored race, I obviously am not. I do not think that is the issue in front of us. I think the issue in front of us is the rights of all people in this entire state versus the right of the police in an attempt to gain evidence and to gain it in an unlawful manner because it is not pursuant to a lawful arrest.

It seems to me that not enough emphasis has been placed on the fact that lawful arrest will allow for lawful search which will allow for the proper admission into evidence.

The issue in front of us in my opinion is: do we vote, in effect, to uphold the general statement as set forth in the United States constitution, article IV, or do we wish to preserve the limitations on the rights of every individual to help the police?

I should like to state one other point. I happen to think that many of the police are marvelous. I do not mean to be against them. But I would like to point out that for every police officer and every prosecutor in any instance you take them, wherever the citizens are, you will find that against them you will have one defendant and his counsel. Now, I do not think the police are in that bad shape. I think they do a marvelous job and I do not think they need this.

Further, if we are going into narcotics very intensely, as an individual who has practiced in Wayne county courts, in my opinion whenever a narcotics issue arises and there can be any federal situation involved, we will waive to the federal authorities so that they may commit the individual to the federal hospital which we cannot do in the state of Michigan.

So, if anybody is getting carried away on the question of narcotics, I would remind them of this. I think it is basically not understanding what is done where probably most of it is going on.

So, as I say, again, the basic issue is: do you want to protect the rights of all people against this method of obtaining evidence, bearing in mind that they can always get a search and seizure by legal means — they can always get a warrant — and if they cannot get a warrant they can make a lawful arrest for a misdemeanor, in their presence, or a felony, or on probable cause that a felony has occurred, and they are not helpless.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the Prettie amendment as amended. As many as are in favor of the amendment will signify by saying aye. Those opposed?

The amendment, as amended, is not adopted.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Is the request for a division supported? A sufficient number are up.

The question is now on the Prettie amendment as amended. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I should just like to ask this question. We went through this division twice just a few minutes ago. I wonder whether by consent of the committee we could use the voting board just to make it a little easier and we could also all see the count.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That is up to the committee of the whole. We went through the rules on this yesterday. I would like to have the consensus of the committee of the whole in this regard.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I am asking for the consent of the committee of the whole to use the board for the division when it is called for.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Is that a motion?

MR. FORD: I am just asking for consent. I do not believe that I can make such a motion. Is anybody objecting?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: It will be so ordered, unless there is objection.

MR. FORD: A correction, Mr. Chairman. Senator Hutchinson informs me that I can make such a motion, so I move that the board be used in this division in the committee of the whole.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, if I recall correctly, yesterday our president said that if this question came up about the use of the board, if there were 10 delegates requesting that the board be used, that you could then use the board.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: We will ask the secretary to read the memorandum applying in this particular case.

SECRETARY CHASE: This is found on page 297 of yesterday's journal. The president made the following statement relative to voting in committee of the whole:

> The ordinary method of voting in committee of the whole is by voice vote. This will be used, with 2 exceptions. One, when the Chair is in doubt, he may order a division; and two, when a delegate asks for a division, and his demand is seconded by 10 or more delegates, the Chair will order a division.
>
> A division is not a recorded roll call vote. When a division is ordered, the Chair will specify whether it will be taken by a rising vote (show of hands) or by use of the voting machine. If the machine is used, no record will be made of individual votes, but only of totals.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair will order the use of the machine.

Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, I would like to say I have been corrected slightly on this, because I did say a recorded vote, but I meant a division. But just to let everyone else in the committee know — I did not agree with what the president said yesterday, because that is a recorded vote, and the only reason that I am for it now is to find out how they are going to vote, and I can't by a show of hands.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, I think I was the one who raised the biggest question in this respect, and for clarification, I did have a discussion with President Nisbet, Secretary Chase and others. It was explained to my satisfaction that this is not a recorded roll call vote, it is merely a division and by using the board it does not record here. By using the board you merely save time and it is faster than having to go around and count hands and I am satisfied with this procedure.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: As many as are in favor of the Prettie amendment as amended will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The machine is now locked and the tally will be taken.

On the adoption of the Prettie amendment there are 74 yeas and 62 nays.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The majority of the delegates having voted therefor, the amendment is adopted.

Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: The next amendment on file is the amendment offered by Mr. Bledsoe and Miss Donnelly. It is as follows:

1. Amend the body of the proposal, pages 2 and 3, by striking out all of section 10 and inserting a new section 10 to read as follows:

"Sec. 10. The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Bledsoe, Donnelly amendment.

Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I would again like to state, Mr. Chairman, that this is merely article IV of the United States constitution. It is not my authorship. I would like to urge it for 4 specific reasons.

First, there is no question about its meaning. It has been interpreted many, many times.

Secondly, it does not have the onus of an attempt to change the Michigan constitution against the will of the people of Michigan in any way, shape or form, because I do not think the will of the people of Michigan is 100 per cent against the language of the United States constitution.

Thirdly, I originally put this in to absolutely clarify the issue between this and the Prettie amendment. However, I think people now know that this is language opposed to the Prettie amendment in the sense that they are attempting to reserve the amendment we have set up.

Fourthly, and in conclusion of my brief statement, I think we have had more than enough argument. I believe basically that in People v. Gonzales, the people have been citing repeatedly that the United States did indicate at that time that our amendment was not of the best but that it was being upheld.

I think at that time they were improper in reducing our good Judge Gadola and I think that if that were in front of them at this time they would have upheld Judge Gadola and not reversed this, mainly because, whether it is dictum or not, it has a tendency to indicate the direction that that court is going.

With those few remarks, I will yield to my cosponsor, Mr. Bledsoe, if he so desires.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, every person in this great assembly, I am certain, is in support of the Constitution of the United States.

This measure was presented as a sort of saving clause, if I may use that term, so that whatever happens, I wanted to be certain that we would not be going far afield.

This is something that was included in our oath, as Mr. Brown has already said. It is something to which we are already committed, without amendment or without any change. It is the law of the land. Our supreme court's decisions are in accord with it. And every oath that was taken was taken in support of it.

Someone has said here that they did not think anybody intentionally or wittingly would violate his oath. I will go along with him — up until now. You know now. Look in your drawer at your copy of the constitution and read it. You have subscribed to it — it was born of the sweat and tears of your forefathers — and I think we should stand by it today.

I am still voting against the Prettie amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I should like to speak briefly for the amendment of Miss Donnelly and Mr. Bledsoe. The question in my mind is one basically of what is right and what is wrong. These provisions are in the United States constitution and I for one believe we should have at least the same protections in our state constitution.

Now, I am the first to admit that the concept of unreasonable search and seizure is not one that is detailed out for all time but is one of those terms, similar to equal protection of the law and due process of law, which must be interpreted from time to time by the courts. But I am particularly concerned that the people feel that we have at least the same basic protection in our state constitution that we do have in the federal constitution, so our citizens will look to the state, equally as well as to the federal government, for the protection of these rights.

Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would have to at this time object to the statement made by Mr. Bledsoe for the very same reasons that I objected to these statements made by Mr. Brown. I intend to vote against this particular amendment and I do not believe that in so doing I am violating the federal constitution or any other principles or my oath of office here. I think it is an imposition on the rest of us for Mr. Bledsoe to make remarks to the effect that we are violating our oath if we vote against this particular amendment. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman, I beg your indulgence, just to have that read, so that when we vote on it we will know exactly what is contains.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment offered by Mr. Bledsoe and Miss Donnelly is:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I do not see where voting against this is a violation of my oath of this office or a snubbing of my nose at the federal constitution, if you please. I just cannot come to this legitimate determination under any argument presented here. We have this provision that goes before the Prettie amendment to article II, section 10, that we are proposing here.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman, I think Mr. Mahinske raises a good point. I think each one of us right now ought to stop for a moment and realize exactly what we seem to be in the process of doing. Mr. Prettie made no bones about it whatsoever. In response to a direct question Mr. Prettie said that this amendment of his would authorize the use of evidence obtained by an illegal search.

If the language as it now stands, with the Prettie amendment intact, goes into this constitution, is there any question in the mind of a single delegate here that you are giving tacit permission, constitutional authority if you will, to a violation of an individual's right against an unreasonable search and seizure? That is precisely what you are doing. That is precisely the point that Mr. Prettie made.

The sole question then that you have before you is whether or not you, as constitutional convention delegates, want to grant this tacit authority to violate the rights of one single individual against a constitutional guarantee, against an illegal, unreasonable search and seizure.

I rise to support the Donnelly, Bledsoe amendment. There is no substantive difference between this amendment and mine which will follow. I do not wish to withdraw mine at this moment, since my amendment procedure would be a little bit simpler.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Youngblood.

MR. YOUNGBLOOD: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, as a police officer for the past 7½ years, I have seen both sides of this story. As I look at this amendment, I see no quarrel with it at all. It protects both the people and the police officer. We have everything we want in this. Therefore, I am in support of this amendment, just as it is now.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. McAllister.

MR. McALLISTER: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I wish to say in the beginning that I have the highest regard and the greatest respect for both Miss Donnelly and Mr. Bledsoe. They are people of good judgment.

I was prosecuting attorney for 12 years and have been a defense counsel for the past 15 years. The benefits of section 10 as enacted are far greater and far outweigh the harm it will do. We have law enforcement officers who are overzealous and on 2 occasions I have had the privilege of looking down the barrel of a gun.

We at times must suffer some inconvenience in order that a great majority of the people may be protected. A gun, a bomb, dope, a machine gun, or a pistol are items not usually carried for pleasure. And when a person is found carrying one of these articles he or she should expect to be apprehended and investigated before being allowed to continue.

I might also add that I have been threatened with an illegal search. In other words, when threatened, I told them they could take me to jail if they wanted. I had no contraband and that was up to them. Incidentally, I was allowed to go on. I probably am a suspicious looking character, because of the experiences I have had. But in spite of that, I think the benefits of section 10 as amended far outweigh any damage that could be done by it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I arose for another purpose than that of discussing the amendment immediately before us. I want to refer back to this discussion of the charge that was made in very blunt language that those of us who did not agree with the speaker were knowingly and deliberately violating the oath we had taken. My first emotional impulse was to rise and to resent that statement. Then I began to look the group over and I realized that that remark had been made under the influence of a momentary emotion and that the response it first engendered in me was also due to a momentary emotion.

We are here engaged in a great historic task. We differ, and differ sincerely, and will continue to do so about many things.

In this convention are long time friends of mine. Among them is Mr. Bledsoe who sits almost directly in front of me. I learned to regard him highly and to respect him many years ago and I have continued to do so over the years.

My plea is that however high our emotions may rise, let us never permit it to be said that, more than momentarily, years of love have been forgotten in the anger of a minute. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman, I could not live with myself knowing His Honor as I have known him, and the respect that I have for him, both as a man and as a judge before whom I have appeared while he was on the bench, if he for one moment thinks that I think that he would wittingly violate any oath that he might take, and I wish now to disabuse his mind of any such impression.

I revere our judiciary because they are symbols of the sovereign power of the people and that means a lot. This is a sovereign body. We, too, are symbols here today.

That is why I simply wanted to be sure that whatever we do here, we will measure it by the highest law of the land. That was the only reason why I thought it wise, after lengthy deliberation, to suggest the amendment that was placed before you today. I did not rise in any way to impugn the character of anyone, or the honor and reputation of anyone.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Faxon:

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, yesterday I tried to say some words with regard to the history of this. I am not going to read any statement now. But I think we should understand that we are dealing here with a very, very basic right.

It has been said and said again that when this came up in the 1787 convention, one of the arguments for their not including a bill of rights at that time was that these rights were already known and understood, and so why put them down, as this would tend, almost, to restrict them because it would spell them out. This is Madison's argument, I believe, in this respect. Now, afterwards, some of the people felt that we ought to spell out some of these inalienable rights.

I am speaking now with reference to a question that was answered in response to an inquiry I put when I asked why this was adopted here in Michigan and no other place — and that was because the people of Michigan voted for it. That was the answer I was given. Does this mean that the people of Michigan voted to establish a church? Voted to take away our freedom of speech, our freedom of assembly? Does it mean that the Michigan residents could do this kind of thing?

There is a law beyond which the people of Michigan cannot vote to impose upon their fellow citizens and we are dealing here with a basic right. This is not a subject for voting upon in terms of a majority taking something away from a minority. We are dealing with individual rights and individual liberties. We are here representing all of the people of the state.

Now, some people like to say, "Well, this is a problem for you people in Detroit." But this is not a problem exclusively for those from Detroit. It is a problem for all of us. I am told to take into account the problems of the people in the upper peninsula and the problems of people of western Michigan and I am willing to do this. And certainly it is a problem with which all of us should be concerned. It is not a local problem, it is a fundamental problem.

I am supporting the Donnelly, Bledsoe amendment. It is the basic right that was put into our constitution in 1791. It deals with those rights that Jefferson and Madison and the founding fathers of our country believed in. It is a right that has been with us for hundreds of years. I cannot see why anyone at this point wishes to turn the tide of history and the direction of our whole culture by starting to restrict those rights.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Upton. The Chair admonishes the speakers to confine themselves to the amendment.

MR. UPTON: Mr. Chairman, I know the hour is getting late, but we have heard much said about our having to abide by article IV of the Constitution of the United States and I wish to make a comment in this connection. I have been reviewing this blue book that has been referred to and I find a note in here to the effect that the application is limited to the federal government only, "The fourth and fifth amendments of the national constitution are limitations upon the federal, not upon state, powers."

Therefore, not being a lawyer, but a layman, I would say that the amendment that we have already adopted is completely within our jurisdiction, and we do not have to abide completely by the fourth amendment in our state powers.

Thank you very much.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Dr. Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I have listened attentively through 2 days of discussion of this problem and I rise to speak in favor of this amendment, being as interested in strengthening the ability of law enforcement officers of this state as any member of this convention.

The university with which I have the honor to be connected has for a long period of years operated the outstanding program in police administration in this country — and I think in the world — because we believe that law enforcement is important, and that the officers who have to enforce the law should be well trained and should have all the tools that are required to do the job that society gives them to do.

For the past 4 years, I have had the responsibility of serving as the chairman of the federal commission on civil rights, appointed by President Eisenhower and reappointed by President Kennedy. A few weeks ago we gave our report to the congress and to the president, outlining what we believe the facts to be with reference to the infringement of the civil rights of the people of this country where the infringement is due in part to race, color, creed or national origin.

One section of that report — one whole volume — is entitled Justice, and it is a compilation not of myths but of what the facts are in the United States with reference to the administration of justice to members of society who are not white or economically advantaged.

And, ladies and gentlemen, there is a vast difference between the treatment that I receive, or those of most of the members of the convention receive, when they are approached by officers of the law, and the treatment that is accorded those disadvantaged good American citizens — just as good as you and I are — who pay their taxes and serve in our armies and give their all. But when they are apprehended or even when they are not apprehended, they are harshly and unreasonably treated. And this treatment is not limited to nonwhites. It is the kind of treatment too often accorded to white people, too, who are economically disadvantaged. It is an entirely different kind of treatment.

I understand why it exists, and I understand why the officers of the law feel they are entitled to behave as they do. But I do not believe that any citizen of this state, if he really is thoughtful, will knowingly do anything that will encourage the continuance of the abuse of unfortunate people, as they have been abused not only in Alabama and Mississippi, but in Chicago and in Detroit, and, I suspect, in other Michigan cities.

Without prolonging my remarks, I would only urge — you cannot do it now but I would urge for your own education — that sometime in the next few days or weeks you read this volume Justice. It is factual and it is disturbing. I am not a lawyer. I am impressed with the good faith of all of the people who have spoken in favor of the Prettie amendment and all of these other matters that have been before us.

But I, for one, am not interested in making it difficult in any way for the state police, the sheriffs, the local police officers. However, I think it is important, too, that we make certain that every citizen is given fair treatment always and is not damned because he happens to be black or brown or economically disadvantaged.

And it is for these reasons that I shall vote for the amendment before us. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I should like to call to the attention of the committeee a few facts.

First of all, the beginning language of the section under consideration states " . . . the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated.". It says it shall not be violated. I ask you whether it is being violated? I don't need to ask you because many people have stood on this floor, some in favor of the Prettie amendment and some against, and have told us that it has been violated in relation to themselves.

I believe that perhaps 15 people have stood here on the floor and said they had personal experience with this particular provision of the United States constitution and that it has been violated. This provision and a similar one in the Michigan constitution have been violated repeatedly.

It says, in section 10 of the constitution, at the present time, and also under the Prettie amendment, " . . . persons, houses, papers and effects. . . . " It means that the persons, houses, papers and possessions of every person shall be secure from unreasonable searches and seizures.

I ask you whether they are secure. Are they secure? Can it be said that they are secure when our own delegates report to us that they are not secure?

Let me ask you this: how many of the parts of the bill of rights that presently I hold in my hand have been similarly violated? If all of them were violated to that extent, what would be left of the bill of rights? It would be a shred, a tatter; it would be nothing.

If this is a bill of rights, it has to be secure, and it is not secure. It is not secure with the Prettie amendment. As a matter of fact it is very difficult to keep it secure even without the Prettie amendment. But we certainly cannot keep it secure by encouraging, as was pointed out, the police to violate it.

I think what we should do is this. We should adopt the Bledsoe, Donnelly amendment, and when we leave here, we should go back to our people and tell them that when it says "the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects," and so on, we mean it to be applied.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman, I wish first to ask Dr. Nord a question, and reserving the floor until I have his answer, I would like to make a brief statement in opposition to the Donnelly, Bledsoe amendment. My question, sir, is this. Under the proposed amendment it is prescribed against the issuance of warrants but upon probable cause supported by oath or affirmation, particularly describing the place to be searched and the person or things to be seized.

How does a police officer, with a car in front of him, having perhaps been informed of a bank robbery in the vicinity, go about obtaining a warrant such as this constitutional mandate requires?

MR. NORD: Mr. Prettie, you have asked the perfect question. I am delighted that you asked me that question because it is one question on which I have lectured to my students over and over again and I mentioned it on the floor but I believe that nobody paid much attention to it because somebody else asked that same thing, or implied the same thing — that there is no way. There is a way under the federal cases.

The federal cases provide, as I pointed out, 3 different ways, in addition to the one — the instance — in which there is permission to search. In addition to getting a search warrant, there are other ways. That is one way.

Another is incidental to lawful arrest. The federal cases have provided repeatedly that there is a third way in addition. I am glad you pointed this out. I will mention what it is in a moment. I am glad because I am quite certain that the police seem never to have heard of it.

The third way is by probable cause when the evidence is in such a place or in such a condition or of such a nature that it is likely to be moved away. And the reason for that rule — in that case no warrant is required — the type of probable cause that is required is the same type of probable cause as if you were going to get a warrant.

In other words you must have personal knowledge that would support a search warrant. In that case you could make the arrest without the warrant. That has been held by the United States supreme court and as a result I see no reason to worry about this.

I might add further that the language before us would state how the warrant is to be obtained. It does not say, however, that that is the only way there can be a reasonable search and seizure.

The United States supreme court has interpreted this particular language, as I say, to allow 2 other ways. That is my answer, sir.

MR. PRETTIE: I appreciate the short course just given, Dr. Nord. I wish, in opposing the Donnelly, Bledsoe amendment, once again to remind the delegates of this committee of the language of Mr. Justice Smith in the very recent case that we have discussed so much, the Gonzales case. That language is as follows:

> The constitution does not define liberty, nor do we. In an absolute sense it does not exist.
>
> A myriad of commands we follow daily. But not every intrusion upon our person or property is an encroachment so gross that the spirit becomes hostage to the act and we are no longer free. Much will depend upon the circumstances attendant.

Omitting some language for brevity, I continue as follows:

> Always there is the problem of balance. . . .
>
> . . . The concept of freedom, then, has no fixed content.
>
> . . . The freedom of one man necessarily involves the correlative restraint of his brother. . . .

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Rush.

MR. RUSH: Mr. Chairman, it looks as though this could be debated for a long, long time.

I move that the committee do rise.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the motion that the committee rise.

Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, I thought that you were keeping a record of the people who were standing and who wished to speak.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: I am.

MR. MARSHALL: Well, do they get to speak? Will they have that opportunity?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The motion is not debatable. The question is on the motion that the committee rise. As many as are in favor signify by saying aye. Those opposed?

The motion does not prevail.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I voted for the Prettie amendment. I am going to vote against the Bledsoe, Donnelly amendment. I have lived in the city of Detroit for over 50 years. Nobody knows any better than I do the disgraceful treatment at times accorded by the police to the negroes and other groups in Detroit. But that has been an old, old story. It has nothing to do with this proviso.

Long before 1936 the same things occurred spasmodically. In periods of hysteria the police would start wholesale, unlawful searches and seizures. But the remedy is not this proviso. Frank Murphy, when he was mayor of Detroit, put a stop to it the first time and your present mayor of Detroit will probably put a stop to it again.

The remedy is with the responsible people and no constitutional proviso will stop illegal searches and seizures.

All that this proviso does is this. When you do catch a narcotics peddler or a criminal you convict him. It does not hurt the innocent person; it does not help him.

When I first started law school in 1921, we studied illegal searches and seizures — and they had them then by the hundreds. One of my classmates who is now a high official in Detroit was picked up on the average of 1 or 2 nights a month on his way home from law school. But not because of this proviso. That was 15 years before this proviso. This proviso does not hurt any innocent person. It merely enables the people to convict guilty ones.

Now, nobody has more sympathy — and it is not an abstract sympathy — with people who are unreasonably searched or unreasonably persecuted. I know, first hand, what it is to be the object of nationwide persecution. My people came here from Russia. A mad painter in Germany tried to exterminate all the members of my religion.

But this is not going to cure the situation. Taking this provision out will not meet the situation, in that it will not stop discrimination and it will not stop illegal searches and seizures and leaving it in will help send some guilty persons to jail. Keeping it in will not hurt any innocent people. Taking it out will not help any innocent people. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I shall be very brief in my remarks. I have indicated previously, of course, that I would support the Habermehl amendment which is the language of the Michigan constitution as it was in 1908 prior to the amendments of 1936 and 1952.

The Donnelly, Bledsoe amendment being very comparable in language — constituting practically the same thing as the 1908 language of the Michigan constitution — is not so essentially different that I would not support it also.

I think that rather than listening to what I might have to say, you might be interested in what the director of the federal bureau of investigation has said regarding this subject. Mr. Hoover, in 1952, said this:

> One of the quickest ways for any law enforcement officer to bring public disrepute upon himself, his organization and the entire profession is to be found guilty of a violation of civil rights.
>
> Our people may tolerate many mistakes both in intent and performance, but with unerring instinct, they know that when any person is intentionally deprived of his constitutional rights, those responsible have committed no ordinary offense.
>
> A crime of this nature, if suddenly encouraged by failure to condemn and punish, certainly leads down the road to totalitarianism. Civil rights violations are all the more regrettable because they are so unnecessary.
>
> Professional standards in law enforcement provide for fighting crime with intelligence rather than force. In matters of scientific crime detection, the services of our F.B.I. laboratory are available to every duly constituted law enforcement officer in the nation.
>
> Full use of these and other facilities should make it entirely unnecessary for any officer to feel the need to use dishonorable methods.
>
> Complete protection of civil rights should be a primary concern of every officer. These rights are basic in the law and our obligation to uphold them leaves no room for any other course of action.
>
> Although the great majority in our profession have long since adopted that policy, we cannot yet be entirely proud of our record. Incidents which give justification to charges of civil rights violations by law enforcement officers still occur.
>
> This state of affairs ought to be taken as a challenge to all of us. Every progressive police administrator and officer must do everything within his power to bring about such an improvement that our conduct and our record will conclusively prove each of these charges to be false.

I merely direct the committee's attention, in the field of narcotics, to this point. Most of these indictments, charges and convictions arise in the federal jurisdiction which is governed by the exclusionary rule and they have no problem with a provision of this nature. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Youngblood.

MR. YOUNGBLOOD: Thank you for recognizing me Mr. Chairman, but what was just said was what I went down to the library to look up, so I will not have to repeat it. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in support of the Donnelly, Bledsoe amendment. I am not going to infringe upon your time and patience to give the reasons, because I believe that every reason that I could conceivably think of and which I might have had in mind has been expressed on the floor here today and yesterday. I can think of nothing that has not been said.

I appreciate — and I want to say this very honestly and very frankly — Mr. Prettie's wonderful presentation in support of and in substantiation of his position. I believe that all of the speakers have been sincere in their remarks and in expressing their convictions. I have to concur with what Judge Dehnke said in his remarks the last time he was on the floor. I think we can disagree without being disagreeable.

I feel very strongly about this particular subject myself and I should like to have more time to go into some of the reasons, as many of the other speakers have done, including speakers much more eloquent than I, such as Dr. Hannah, Mr. Bledsoe and others.

If you listened closely to Dr. Hannah's presentation, I think you heard one of the most forthright and eloquent presentations that could be made on the subject which we have been debating here during the past 2 days.

And even more important than rising to support the Bledsoe, Donnelly amendment, I rise to ask the delegates to use some degree of reasonableness in helping to bring the debate to a close, because if the committee of the whole should rise, then we start over tomorrow where we leave off now. And it is obvious to me, and it has been obvious for at least ½ a day or longer, that most of the minds, if not all of the minds, in this committee are made up as to how you are going to vote in accordance with your own beliefs and your own convictions.

So I would only appeal to your sense of reasonableness to cut off debate and let's have a vote on this question. I realize I cannot move that, and I am only asking, Mr. Chairman. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, I wish to direct a question to Mr. Prettie. Mr. Prettie, you asked for a short course from Dr. Nord and he mentioned a third way in which evidence may be seized when it is about to be moved, et cetera. My question to you is this. Can that rule be written into this section in such a manner that it would erase the objections to personal search and seizure or search upon the streets to which various delegates referred; and if the officer could show that the evidence he uncovered could be disposed of unless he seized it at that minute, would this not answer all problems raised here and reconcile our 2 positions?

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Hanna and Mr. Chairman, if you are asking me whether I could write such language without further study of Dr. Nord's suggestions, I would say that I cannot at this moment. I would say further that it seems to me that this subject has for 25 years had very deliberate consideration by those who framed the amendment in the first place, those who drafted the amendment in 1952, the voters who by a chorus of 5 to 1 voted upon it, and had there been a better approach to the problem you suggest I think it might better have been evolved during the past 25 years than — hopefully — within the next few moments. I cannot write such language as you suggest at this time.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the amendment offered by Miss Donnelly and Mr. Bledsoe. As many as are in favor of the amendment will signify by saying aye. Those opposed?

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Is there support for the request for a division? Please rise. There are more than 10 up. The Chair will order the use of the machine.

As many as are in favor —

Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order, I do not know if it is proper to raise this question at this time, but let me say this — I would ask the indulgence of the Chair for just a moment — in view of the importance of this issue and in view of the fact that we have been discussing it for 2 days, I think we should have an opportunity to have the vote of every delegate who is reasonably close to the committee floor. Could we take just a minute in which to give these people who are absent a chance to enter the hall and vote? It would just take a moment and it would give these people a chance to come in, take their seats and vote.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Those in favor of the Donnelly, Bledsoe amendment will vote aye. Those opposed, no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The machine is now locked and the tally will be taken.

The vote on the Bledsoe, Donnelly amendment: yeas, 62; nays, 70.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The amendment is not adopted. Are there any further amendments to section 10 at this time?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Habermehl has filed an amendment to strike out all of lines 6 and 7 on page 3. The secretary would suggest that the amendment proposed by Mr. Prettie has already accomplished that.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: I agree, Mr. Chairman, that the Prettie amendment has somewhat affected the amendment that I offered. (laughter) In that case, Mr. Chairman, I would move the adoption — as a substitute for the matter as it is now — but the adoption only of the first 2 sentences of section 10 as it is now, as it was contained in the committee report. That would read:

> The person, houses, papers and possessions of every person shall be secure from unreasonable searches and seizures. No warrant to search any place or to seize any person or things shall issue without describing them, nor without probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Habermehl has offered the following amendment to section 10:

1. Amend page 2, line 28, after "affirmation.", by striking out the balance of section 10; so the language of the section would read:

> The person, houses, papers and possessions of every person shall be secure from unreasonable searches and seizures. No warrant to search any place or to seize any person or things shall issue without describing them, nor without probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. The amendment which I proposed and which we have so long debated was adopted. The effect of the amendment just proposed by Delegate Habermehl would be to delete all of the amendment so adopted.

I inquire as to whether this is not tantamount to a reconsideration of the vote by which the amendment was adopted and whether a motion to reconsider is in order in committee of the whole?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Prettie, members of the committee of the whole, I am informed by the secretary that the rules do deal with this particular situation and the amendment is not in order.

Are there any further amendments to section 10 at this time?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hubbs has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 28, after "affirmation.", by inserting "Any inspection, by governmental authority, of corporate or personal business records without a search warrant properly obtained shall be a violation of this section.".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, what I intend to say will be very brief and we will not be delayed much longer.

My basic purpose in offering this amendment when I did 2 days ago was to illustrate a point. And I intend to illustrate it even though the Prettie amendment which I favored has carried, because as I see it there are a great many people here who believe that the Prettie amendment is an unfair intrusion on the rights of people.

I would like to point out to you that as a small businessman, statutes grant certain agencies of the state power to effect police authority and to come into my place of business, flip open their pocketbooks, show me a badge, and demand to see my records of the automobiles I have sold, and inspect my business records. From my point of view, they should have no more right to do this than a police officer should have to stop a car on the highway and search illegally. As far as I am concerned, when one of these people shows up and searches my records in this way, my back gets up because they impugn my integrity and my honesty in the conduct of my business.

And the people of Michigan, apparently, have seen fit to give them this police authority which is the same thing which we, in effect have granted, with regard to dope and narcotics.

I make the following statement. We have adopted the Prettie amendment and I am happy that we have, and as long as we have adopted the Prettie amendment to control criminals engaged in the traffic of narcotics and firearms, as an innocent businessman I am happy to submit to regulation also. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: If I understand Mr. Hubb's amendment, Mr. Chairman, I oppose it, if this amendment means what I think it means. If it means that sales tax people could not come in to audit your records or any other governmental agency could not come in to audit your records, then I certainly oppose it and I think most of the delegates here would, too, especially if we get a state income tax. (laughter) In that case we would certainly want to audit your records, and those of everyone else, no matter how honest they are. Despite Mr. Hubbs' honesty, there are other people who are not quite as honest.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, as the chairman of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, I feel it is my duty, without expressing an opinion as to the merits or demerits of this amendment, to say that although Mr. Hubbs was a member of the committee, he did not submit to the committee this amendment during the course of its many meetings.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Walker.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Chairman, I rise only to say that although I do not agree with Mr. Hubbs, I daresay that Mr. Hoffa would. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I think it has been several years since I left the navy, and the good doctor and those in authority can no longer issue demerits relating to my conduct.

As I said when I first started to speak, I was trying to illustrate a point. We have heard much discussion today about protecting the rights of individuals against unreasonable searches and seizures, and as far as I am concerned, I feel that my rights are being unfairly violated.

As far as I am concerned, if we had adopted section 10 without the proviso, from the standpoint of the protection of business people against unreasonable intrusion into our business affairs, that would be a hollow shell — it would give me no protection whatsoever.

Under the circumstances, I concluded my remarks by saying that as long as this committee had seen fit to regulate criminals, I, as an honest businessman, would also be willing to be regulated, and I therefore withdraw my amendment. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee of the whole do now rise and report to the convention.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock, are we quite through with section 10?

MR. POLLOCK: I beg your pardon. I retract that. I assumed we had completed but we have not. Will you put the question, Mr. Chairman, and then I will make my motion.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: I am sorry, but I am informed that there are 2 more amendments.

SECRETARY CHASE: May the secretary make this statement. Following the listing of the amendments that you have here, there have since been filed 2 other amendments to section 10, one by Judge Mosier and one by Dr. Nord.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I think we should dispose of these 2 amendments, if we can do so quickly. If not, I will make my motion again.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Mosier.

MR. MOSIER: Mr. Chairman, my amendment was filed before I knew that there was on file the Bledsoe, Donnelly amendment. The question raised by my amendment has been thoroughly disposed of by the committee, and I therefore will withdraw my amendment. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any further amendments to section 10?

SECRETARY CHASE: Dr. Nord has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, following line 24, by striking out all of section 10.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, Judge Mosier here has been so gracious as to withdraw his amendment, and I am going to withdraw Mr. Prettie's amendment — not mine. (laughter)

Mr. Chairman, I believe when I move to strike every single word — every single word — of the search and seizure section of our constitution, you can detect that I think we are in trouble with it. And I also think that we will have to rely on the federal constitution.

I believe the position in which we have left ourselves is this. Having what we have now in the constitution is worse than having nothing because it adds no rights and it tends to subtract from them.

It was pointed out by someone else that the only purpose of the bill of rights of Michigan, if any at all, is to increase the liberties of individuals. If it does not increase but tends to decrease, we ought to take it out, I believe. This would certainly be a drastic step. I realize that. But that is the situation in which we find ourselves, I submit. We are in a position wherein we are actually better off without a section than we are with what we have under the Prettie amendment.

If we take the position — I think we would recognize fully and I think we should recognize fully — that when it comes to simple liberties — the basic civil liberties and civil rights — it is a lucky thing there is the United States constitution, because that is where we must place our faith. We cannot place it in the Michigan constitution, evidently, so we must place it in the federal constitution.

I will say one other thing. The only reason for the Prettie amendment — for the proviso — is this, that certain language in it is said to cause a certain construction which they wish to remove. All it says in the Prettie amendment is this, "Provided however, That the provisions of this section shall not be construed in a certain way". Obviously, if there were no section, there would be no need for the proviso. There would be nothing to construe either way.

The harm that Mr. Prettie fears, that the language in the beginning of the section will be construed in a certain way, will be obliterated. There will be no construction of the section, because there will be no section.

I therefore urge that as a desperation move we rely on the place where we can rely and we remove these dangerous things that are now in this constitution.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order, I think by the words of Delegate Nord he has already told us that his amendment is out of order. He says that if this amendment were to pass we would be controlled by the unlawful search and seizure amendment of the federal constitution, which is correct. That amendment was the Bledsoe, Donnelly amendment which we have defeated. Therefore, it would be out of order to bring it up by indirection.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, may I reply?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Obviously, if I would move to insert the language in the Michigan constitution that was offered by Mr. Bledsoe and Miss Donnelly that would be correct. I am not. I hope that is clear. I am not urging to insert anything. I am urging the removal of something. And there has been no such question on the floor.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: In answer to Mr. Kuhn through the Chair, it is in order.

Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman, since the Chair has ruled this amendment in order, I want only to say that I cannot in conscience agree that the amendment which this committee has adopted vitiates and destroys this entire section.

The historic sanctity of the home, to which section 10 speaks, is there as it always has been. I urge you to defeat the amendment now before you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the Nord amendment. As many as are in favor will signify by saying aye. Those opposed?

The amendment is not adopted.

Dr. Pollock?

MR. POLLOCK: Is the Chair now prepared to put the final motion?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any further amendments to section 10?

Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, I am hungry, too — I didn't eat lunch, either. But let me say this. In view of the fact that we are now going to pass on a proposal which the rights committee did not report out, and in view of the fact that there has been a tremendous concern expressed over this and over the wording of the section, and in view of the fact that delegates have attempted to bring about some sort of a compromise position that would put at rest the fears of certain other delegates, I would like therefore to move that this be referred back to the committee so that they could consider the new language and make a recommendation in the light of the requests and discussion of the delegates here.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair will advise that the committee of the whole does not have the authority to do so.

MR. FAXON: Then I would like to move the recommendation that this be referred back. Am I not able to do that?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the motion of Mr. Faxon that the recommendation be made after the committee of the whole rises that the proposal be rereferred to the committee. As many as are in favor of the motion will signify by saying aye. Those opposed?

The motion does not prevail.

Are there any further amendments to section 10? If not, it will be passed.

Section 10, as amended, is passed. (applause)

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee now rise.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The motion of Dr. Pollock is that the committee of the whole rise and report progress to the convention. As many as are in favor of the motion will signify by saying aye. Opposed?

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, Vice President Romney assumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: While we are waiting for the report of the committee, may I announce that the president had to keep an appointment at 5:30 in Howell along with Mr. Hutchinson and that is why he is not here.

May we have a report, Mr. Baginski?

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, the committee of the whole had under consideration one proposal and the secretary will make a detailed report thereon.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 15 and has come to no final resolution thereon.

This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The secretary has the following announcements:

The class in speed reading will not be held tonight. (laughter)

Mr. Brake requests the following announcement to be made: the committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E this evening at 8:00 o'clock.

The subcommittee on annexation of the committee on local government will meet in the conference room Thursday, tomorrow, at 9:00 o'clock in the morning. Mr. Follo, chairman.

The committee on administration will meet in the conference room tomorrow at 12:30 p.m. Mr. DeVries, chairman.

The committee on legislative powers will meet in room H tomorrow at 8:30 a.m. Mr. Hoxie, chairman.

The committee on legislative organization will meet tomorrow at 8:30 a.m. in room D. Mr. J. A. Hannah, chairman.

The remaining announcements are found in the composite calendar.

There is this additional announcement: the subcommittee on higher education, Mr. Bonisteel, chairman, will go immediately to Kellogg center for their meeting.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Dr. Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Mr. President and fellow delegates, it has been a very, very good session. Some have gained, some have lost. I would like to remind all of you, however, that there are always 2 chances.

This individual walking down the street with a downcast expression met his friend who said, "What's the matter, Bill?" He said, "I've been drafted." The friend asked, "Don't you like that?" He said, "No." "Well," said his friend, "it isn't so bad; you always have 2 chances. They might keep you at home or send you across the United States. If they keep you at home, you'll like that; if they send you across the United States, you have 2 chances. They'll either keep you in this country, or they'll send you across. If they keep you here, that'll be fine; if they send you across, you have 2 chances. They'll keep you back of the lines, or send you up to the lines. If they keep you back of the lines, that's good; if they send you up to the lines, you've got 2 chances. Either you'll be killed or your life will be saved. If you are saved, it's fine; and if you're killed, you still have 2 chances." (laughter)

SECRETARY CHASE: There are a few requests for leave of absence. Mr. Everett requests leave of absence from the session of tomorrow. Mr. Follo requests leave of absence from Friday morning's session, having been asked by the state board of libraries to meet with them.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: If there is no objection, they will be excused.

Mr. Erickson?

MR. ERICKSON: Mr. President, I move that the convention do now adjourn.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The motion is for adjournment. Those in favor say aye. Opposed?

The motion prevails. We are adjourned until tomorrow afternoon at 2:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 6:40 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 2:00 o'clock p.m., Thursday, January 11, 1962.]

FIFTY-FIFTH DAY

Thursday, January 11, 1962, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation today will be given by the Reverend Ed C. Crandell, of the West Lansing Church of Christ. Mr. Crandell happens to be the pastor of Mr. Chase's church, so we are especially happy to welcome him today.

Will you please rise.

REVEREND CRANDELL: Our gracious Father, we thank Thee that Thou in Thy divine providence hast ordained that law and order be maintained by men whom Thou hast created. We express our deep appreciation for the noble and genuine forces for good that have brought us thus far in our quest for truth, justice, and freedom.

We now ask that Thou wilt invoke Thy blessing and make Thy divine power and providence felt in the deliberations of this great gathering. May all that are here assembled be made to feel that their ultimate and deepest obligation is not to those who have chosen them to serve, but to Thee, our Creator, Sustainer, and Redeemer. Through Jesus Christ we pray. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present, please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted?

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following request for leave: Mr. Marshall, from the afternoon session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the request is granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Marshall and Thomson.

Absent without leave: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on administration, by Mr. DeVries, chairman, recommends to the president for his consideration the appointment of Mr. George Sidwell as research consultant.

Walter DeVries, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the recommendation will be concurred in.

SECRETARY CHASE: The president appoints, pursuant to authorization by the convention, and with the approval of the committee on administration, the aforenamed person to the position indicated.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, Mr. Sidwell will be appointed research consultant. Hearing none, he is appointed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hoxie, for the committee on legislative powers, introduces Committee Proposal 20, A proposal to provide that no law shall be enacted providing for the penalty of death. Amends article V, by adding a new section;

with the recommendation that it pass.

T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 20 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 595.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Erickson, for the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, introduces Exclusion Report 2006, A report recommending the exclusion of article XII, sections 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 7 and 8.

Claud R. Erickson, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2006 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 598.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the standing committee reports.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: No resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders.

Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, I move the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering several proposals.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Baginski. Those in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

Mr. Baginski, will you take the Chair?

[Whereupon, Mr. Baginski assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The committee of the whole will be in order. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, Committee Proposal 15, A proposal to amend article II pertaining to the declaration of rights. The first 10 sections have been read and several amendments have been adopted thereto.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 15, see above, page 506.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, before resuming consideration of the remaining sections under the bill of rights, I want to be sure that this committee did not make a mistake yesterday. This was on a very serious matter. It was a very close vote and I believe under the rules, I have the right now to move a reconsideration of the vote by which section 10 was amended, and I do so move.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair will advise that the motion will be in order.

Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman. Rule 40 provides that a motion to reconsider shall be in order in the committee of the whole by a majority vote of those present before the committee shall rise. Is it the interpretation of the Chair that the committee has not yet risen with respect to the matter in question?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That's right. The Chair is advised by the secretary that the motion to reconsider may be made now or be made before the committee of the whole rises.

I understand that Dr. Pollock chooses to make that motion at this time.

Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: I invite the Chair's attention to the journal of yesterday's proceedings, page 303, line 9. The journal reads, and I quote:

> Mr. Pollock moved the committee rise.
>
> The motion prevailed.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair is somewhat in doubt as to what Mr. Prettie intends. However, we are still in the committee of the whole on this particular proposal and therefore, just a continuation as if this were yesterday.

The question is on the motion made by Dr. Pollock that the vote by which the amendments to section 10 were adopted be reconsidered. Those in favor of the motion will signify by saying aye. Those opposed, no.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: A division has been demanded. Is there sufficient support?

Sufficient number up. As many as are in favor of the motion —

Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, continuing the procedure that we used yesterday, I would ask that the machine be used when a division is asked for in the committee of the whole.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: I understand the machine isn't working today. (laughter)

MR. FORD: I move we adjourn until it is ready then. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: We can't adjourn the committee of the whole, Mr. Ford. However, the machine might be used if there is a demand for it and we can count the lights.

MR. FORD: That might be more satisfactory than depending on hands waving around out here.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Those in favor of the motion to reconsider will vote aye, those opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is now locked and we will count.

According to the secretary's count, the yeas are 67, the nays are 69.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The motion to reconsider does not prevail.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, continuing our presentation of the sections of the bill of rights, I think we will now be ready to come to section 11 which will be explained by the first vice chairman, Mr. Stevens.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 11.

[Sec. 11 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Point of information, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: State your point, Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Just so I will clearly understand where we are, it is possible at any time before this proposal is reported out of the committee of the whole for any section of the proposal to be amended, or is that not correct?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: After we're through, yes. After we're through with all of the sections and then we get to the body of the proposal.

Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, may I suggest that all delegates turn to Journal 50 of January 4, page 279, section 11. In this section 11, which is quite brief, we have done one thing in the committee. We have inserted the word "insurrection". Let's read it the way it was originally:

> The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless in case of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it.

As the committee presents it, we add the word "insurrection" so it reads:

> The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless in case of rebellion, insurrection or invasion the public safety may require it.

In other words, we add the word "insurrection."

The purpose of the committee in doing this, which followed after the research on this word by our very able, competent and efficient researchers, was to give the governor possibly a little bit more leeway, a little bit more power in the use of this very rare action, the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus.

We have very little precedent in this matter — practically none — within the state for the governor. In the case of the federal government there is some precedent but not much. In the case of the suspension of the writ by the president on a couple of occasions the supreme court later ruled that it was not within his power under the conditions. We feel that if he is to have the power under any conditions to suspend a writ of habeas corpus, it should not be too limited. We feel that the word "rebellion" is perhaps a little bit too restrictive; that it implies establishment of some kind of a government such as the confederacy during the civil war, or something comparable to that, as distinguished from an organized riot or an invasion into the capitol to seize control of the offices or something, possibly without any intent of setting up a rebellious government, or it might mean seizing certain buildings, either governmental or otherwise, and holding them against the authority of the government.

I understand that an amendment will be offered to delete this from our proposal. We do not feel too deeply on the point but we feel that under the circumstances, it might be well to make this matter a little broader to give the governor just a little bit more flexibility if he should need to use it.

I don't have any information that this writ has been suspended by the governor in Michigan.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Stevens a question which he has partially answered. I would like to know if we could have a little more precise definition of the difference between "rebellion" and "insurrection".

MR. STEVENS: Well, I think I assumed something I should not have assumed. We have the explanation here in the journal and I had asked you to read that. I quote:

> Technically in law "rebellion" implies a state of belligerency and public war such as that alluded to by the supreme court in the Prize Cases (1863) and in Texas v. White (1866). Disturbances which close the courts and require suppression by military force may require suspension . . .

notice that the word is "may"

> . . . of the writ of habeas corpus and yet not be rebellion in the sense that the confederacy constituted such.

If you want some citations, which you probably don't, there is ex parte Merryman, 9 Fed. Cases, 487 (1861). Does that answer your question?

MR. YEAGER: Thank you very much.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 11?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: I would like to ask Mr. Stevens a question. I haven't done any research on this point and I am sure that others have. My question to Mr. Stevens is this, in reading the language which he cited in the committee report, it says that when you have a situation where the civil courts are closed, that you might not have a full fledged rebellion. In that case you would have a situation of martial law, wouldn't you? If the civil courts cannot act, then you have a martial law situation, and if you are operating under martial law, of course there wouldn't be any writ of habeas corpus available because you wouldn't have any civil courts to grant it or to go to. The whole thing would be run by the military.

As a matter of fact, what we have in actual legal fact at the present time is that there is a suspension of the writ of habeas corpus in cases of rebellion or invasion and also when there is an actual state of martial law. Now if I am wrong, will you just correct me because, as I say, I made no research. This is just my thinking on the matter.

MR. STEVENS: The idea here of an "insurrection" would not necessarily depend on the courts being closed. I suppose it would be more proper to cite an example where the courts were not closed but the governor felt it essential under a system of partial martial law to suspend the writ. I am not sure, but I believe that was done on the federal level to a certain degree in the recent Rock Island situation. I may be wrong about that. But anyway, under some such situation the governor might feel compelled to do that. Of course, if the courts are not open, obviously you couldn't get a writ anyhow. I think maybe the explanation here is a little bit weak on that point. But if the courts are open and the governor wanted to, at his discretion, presumably he could issue such an order. In other words, he could suspend the right to a writ.

We do not feel that it adds greatly to the governor's power to do this. We do not feel it is very apt to happen, I do not yet know what the objection was on the part of the judicial committee.

Have I answered your question, Delegate Hutchinson?

MR. HUTCHINSON: Yes.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mrs. Cushman.

MRS. CUSHMAN: My question concerns the question of who declares when the writ of habeas corpus is to be suspended. From the discussion I have heard I assume it is the governor. However, it isn't stated in here clearly and not having a legal background, I wasn't entirely clear.

MR. STEVENS: Mrs. Cushman, I can assure you it is the governor. The governor would be the only person who would have that authority, the reason being, of course, in suspending a writ of habeas corpus you take it out of the hands of the court. This is an old established provision. There is no question about it except possibly the addition of this word.

MRS. CUSHMAN: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 11?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Danhof, on behalf of the committee on the judicial branch, offers the following amendment to section 11:

1. Amend page 3, line 10, after "rebellion" by striking out the comma and "insurrection"; so the language will then read:

The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless in case of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, the amendment offered is based upon the action taken by the committee on judicial branch, which committee was assigned — I don't like to particularly use the word "concurrent" — but which was required under the rules of the procedure of the convention, to consider sections 11 through 19. At the time that my committee considered it, it basically took the position that Mr. Stevens has stated, that we have lived with this particular section in its present form for well over 100 years; that it was not sure what, if anything, was added by the use of the word "insurrection". Consequently, the committee was of the opinion that with the judicial interpretations that have been made — and they are very few — that the present section adequately covered the needs of the public and the needs of the state and would protect society in case the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus became necessary.

The amendment offered is not necessarily mine, personally, but is offered on behalf of the committee on judicial branch, which feels that the present wording of the 1908 section is adequate and should remain as is. It is to be noted that some 26 states in addition to the state of Michigan use the language as it is contained in the present 1908 constitution. We admit that simply because somebody else does it, it does not necessarily make it correct.

We were also somewhat concerned with the use and the definition of "insurrection" and what it might or might not entail. If you look in a dictionary — and I have not a complete dictionary here but a Webster's collegiate dictionary — and if you check the word insurrection, it says an armed resistance to authority; a limited rebellion. And you check "rebellion" and it is quoted as saying an armed revolt; a spirit of resistance to authority.

We simply felt that the word rebellion adequately covered the situation; that the courts had interpreted this and had lived with it, so to speak, over these numerous years, and that unless there was some compelling reason to broaden, or for the addition of the word insurrection, that it best be left out.

Now, this being a committee action, with the consent of the Chair and the committee, I would like to yield to the second vice chairman of my committee, Mr. Ford, who has some further comments to make.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: In considering this addition of the word, it should be noted that although 26 other states use the identical language that we use in our constitution, as a matter of fact all of the states use substantially the same language as we use, and the ability of the governor, or in some cases the legislature, to suspend for temporary periods the right of habeas corpus is limited to the key words of "rebellion" or "invasion". Only one state in the United States presently uses the word insurrection and that is the state of South Carolina, which has never been noted, in my personal opinion, for its liberal tendencies.

The lawyers on this committee were concerned about the fact, at the time that we considered it, that it might be construed by a court at some time in the future as a modification of a very basic right, the right of habeas corpus, which I am sure all of us recognize as something that goes all the way back. Yesterday we went all the way back to 1791, and I think we are moving to the stage where we can go back to the magna carta. Now that we have amended the United States constitution, we can start on the magna carta. This is one of the things that they wanted at the time of the magna carta. It is one of the things we inherited with our system of justice.

I am more alarmed today than I was when we considered this in the committee, by Mr. Stevens' remark that is now in this record, that it was the intention of the committee on rights, suffrage and elections to broaden the power of the governor, whoever he might be from time to time, to suspend this very valuable right. And with that in mind, as an individual member of the committee, I would appraise the action of the committee to be that we probably would be more disturbed with that statement than with the language itself because I think the sense of the committee, as I observed it, was that they felt that this language had been thoroughly construed by the courts that this was a right that shouldn't be tampered with.

To use Mr. Lawrence's words of yesterday, this would be a right that should in no way be watered down and we should look upon the possibility of expanding it with a word that is not capable of clear definition, such as "insurrection" as a possible opening of the door for abuse in the future. And as a practical matter, an appeal to the supreme court after your right of habeas corpus has been denied you really is not much of a remedy because it is one of these things that you have to have right now or it isn't worth anything.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Fellow delegates, I want to support Mr. Danhof and the judicial committee in their recommendation that the word "insurrection" be deleted. I also looked through other state constitutions and, as Mr. Ford just pointed out, there is only one other state constitution which provides for insertion of the word insurrection. Some state constitutions actually say that the writ will never be suspended, but our constitution in its present form simply repeats the words of the federal constitution, which have had some interpretation in the courts.

I read the Prize Cases and the decision of Judge Greer in deciding on them in 1863, dealing with the civil war, and yesterday I was trying to get some people to translate Latin expressions for me because this particular case is quite loaded with a lot of language which perhaps present day lawyers aren't as familiar with. But essentially, the Prize Case that is alluded to dealt with the legal status of ships captured in their attempt to run the blockade which had been imposed by the union government. And Lincoln had, of course, not declared war because of the legal status that a war would involve and he called the uprising in the south an "insurrection". But when the courts dealt with the Prize Cases and later in Texas vs. White, very briefly — and I am not going to trouble you to read from the actual decision — I think their position was more or less "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet." And whether you call it an insurrection or a rebellion or a war, it's there anyhow and you're required to take certain actions.

As far as defining the word is concerned, I could give a little more of a definition — at least the one that was taken out of my constitutional history text — that an insurrection is an organized and armed uprising for public political purpose. It may seek to overthrow the government or it may seek merely to suppress certain laws or to alter administrative practice. I don't think the court decisions where this came up during the civil war period were really clear on the definitions of insurrection. There were several cases where this came up. In addition to Texas vs. White it also came up in the case of ex parte Merryman, ex parte Valandingham and ex parte Milligan. In these separate cases the courts, in very close decisions — 5 to 4 in 2 cases — sort of vacillated around it because the exigencies of war had required certain actions that were illegal but you couldn't get away from the fact that they were necessary.

I am saying this partially to give some understanding as to the brief committee report and the allusions to the cases there dealing with the court interpretation. But I think the point has been well made by Mr. Danhof and Mr. Ford, that the definition is not a clear one at all and that a rebellion is an insurrection. I feel we are very safe in keeping the present wording of our own constitution which has been the wording of the past in addition to the wording which is in the present federal constitution, and which is the same wording in all the other state constitutions.

And so, without getting into more technicalities on the cases, because I marked all sorts of places where I could read the judges' decisions, I will rest at this point.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I wish to speak in favor of the amendment of Mr. Danhof which strikes the word insurrection. I think I shall try to match my high school Latin with that of Judge Gadola of yesterday. My loose construction is that the writ of habeas corpus means in general terms: deliver the body. The normal use, or rather abnormal use, is in the case where the police make an arrest which may be legal or illegal but do not let the arrested person get before the judge in the proper time. Then the attorney, if he can locate the police official with the arrested person, can, by getting a writ of habeas corpus, get the body of the arrested person from the police or executive branch of government into the judicial branch and before the judge. I think that, as has been stated, this is one of our very basic rights. It is a right to see that the individual gets into the hands of the judiciary when he is accused of any illegal action. It does not decide his innocence or guilt but simply gets him before a judge. Now, this is sound.

I think the only time, theoretically, this should be suspended is when the courts as a practical matter are not functioning, such as the case of rebellion or invasion. I think the committee could even use the words, "The writ of habeas corpus shall be denied only when courts are not functioning." I think these terms "rebellion" and "invasion" have historic definitions.

What I am concerned with — and I will be frank, I don't know what the word insurrection means — I assume if this got to a court, a court would assume we meant something by it and it would be a further reason for limiting the writ of habeas corpus. I think the present provisions are good. They have proved historically sound and I think we should do, above all, those things that see that the individual has the opportunity, if arrested or detained, to get before the judicial branch of government and have his day in court.

Therefore, I support the Danhof amendment which strikes the word insurrection. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee of the whole, I rise also in favor of the Danhof amendment. You will notice in the comment on the report of the committee on rights, suffrage and elections, the vote was 13 to 2, and I was one of the 2 on the committee that voted against insertion of this language.

On the whole, the committee report is an excellent report and this is about the only place where I wish to record a dissent but I do so because what we are dealing with here, after all, is a declaration of rights. I think the emphasis of the proposed language is one that emphasizes the limitation on the right and not the substantive character of the right. We are talking about the privilege or right of habeas corpus. This is the ancient writ of liberty. This is a writ which, as Mr. Downs has suggested, means an order of a court commanding anybody who has any other person in his custody to bring that person before the court so that the court can examine into the reasons for the arrest and the reasons for the detention to see whether those reasons for the arrest and for the detention are sufficient in law. If they are sufficient in law, then the person is bound over and held in custody. If they are insufficient in law, during the hearing on writ of habeas corpus, then the person is released.

This is the only way we have of seeing that the question is adjudicated in a court of law by a judge trained to see whether or not the entire action of those who have the person in custody is lawful. This has been since the habeas corpus act and I see no reason why we ought to change it under the contingencies that have been described in the committee report. I think there is no showing of any particular need for this limitation on this basic right which we are here in this particular report supposed to declare and not limit.

I think, also, there is this very important fact to be considered, sometimes history is a little more important than logic. The logic may be that when the courts are closed you can't have the writ to issue, but the fact is that I foresee and I am apprehensive of the kind of series of contingencies where this power on the part of the executive authority to suspend a writ might be abused. I refer specifically to the area of labor disputes. I think that you have a situation, regardless of the merits or the demerits of any particular difficulty between labor and management. It may be that the size of the dispute may be considered by some, and repeatedly in our history under certain circumstances has been regarded, as an insurrection. This would mean that those who may be participating in the labor dispute and engaging in otherwise lawful activity with regard to picketing situations might be taken into custody. These people in such a situation would not have available to them petition on a writ of habeas corpus under the language this is proposed here in this article.

I think that we have here to examine with great circumspection and deliberation the fact that it is precisely in the situations of extremity and situations of communal difficulty that we have to be more circumspect rather than less circumspect with regard to the protection of rights involved because it is precisely in those situations where you do have the abuse of the rights which gives rise to petitions of writs of habeas corpus.

I think this is a fundamental area in which we ought to be very, very careful. I don't think there has been a demonstrable showing to indicate that we ought to change the language which has served this state for so many years and I accordingly urge the people here to support the Danhof amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, as I said in the beginning, we do not have too deep a feeling on this matter, but we did think that since the only person who could suspend a writ of habeas corpus — the right of a person to ask a court to bring his body before it for consideration — the only person who could and would do that was the governor, we ought not to make it unusually difficult for him if the necessity required it.

Whatever definition you might give to a situation in which the safety of the government and the safety of the people perhaps might be endangered — whether it's an insurrection or a rebellion — isn't going to make too much difference for the immediate situation. Certainly, if the governor suspended the right to a writ of habeas corpus it would be an immediate action and the person would be held at least until such times as the matter might be adjudicated in a court. It isn't a question where it can wait. The governor can't go to court on the matter. It is his responsibility. He is governed by the constitution just as much as the court is governed by the constitution. He, the governor, must make this decision and make it promptly.

Obviously we haven't had any experience where this has actually come about, although there have been one or two cases which closely approach that. This was not intended by the committee as having anything to do with an ordinary labor dispute. Obviously, if it became an insurrection, it would be so whether it were a labor dispute or some other action. But we did not have in mind, certainly, that pickets would be picked up because they were involved in an insurrection.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Brown.

MR. T. S. BROWN: I just wanted to add, Mr. Chairman, in support of Mr. Danhof's amendment, Mr. Ambrose Bierce, probably America's greatest satirist, at the turn of the century in his Devil's Dictionary, described insurrection as any unsuccessful revolution, and thereby showed his disdain for the loose terminology of the phrase even back in those days. I think since that time the phrase has lost whatever meaning it once held.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the Danhof amendment.

Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: This is just one quote from that decision. It's such a nice one I think we can all listen to it. It's just one paragraph from ex parte Milligan — the court spoke in 1866. In referring to the constitution and the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, the court said:

> The illustrious men who framed that instrument were guarding the foundations of civil liberty against the abuses of unlimited power; they were full of wisdom, and the lessons of history informed them that a trial by an established court, assisted by an impartial jury, was the only sure way of protecting the citizen against oppression and wrong.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I would like to speak in favor of the amendment of the judiciary committee. I've used the writ of habeas corpus a few times. I think it might be just a matter of interest for you to know — and we have some former circuit judges here — that it is the one time when you can get a judge up out of bed in the middle of the night and he is duty bound to come down and open court and listen. I haven't done that, however, in our county. I don't think it would be very politic. But the point is that it is a very basic right. It is a right as basic as any we have. "Insurrection" doesn't add anything to the right. It deprives or perhaps could be construed to limit that right.

I think that the right is so basic, so fundamental, and so American as we use it, that any effort to change it would be frowned upon by all of us and I know that there was no effort to do that here but it could be construed that way. The addition of a word doesn't, I'm sure, help any. It doesn't make it any clearer and it could become a word of limitation that any of us, I might say, might ourselves not want. It could happen to any of us.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I think that I would just like to add one further point to those already made by Mr. Lawrence. I hope that every one of us really appreciates what happens when the writ of habaes corpus is suspended. Let us assume that the writ of habeas corpus is suspended and a citizen is then thrown into jail and there he languishes. We don't tell him what he is charged with, if anything, and the writ of habeas corpus has been suspended and there isn't any way for him to further his cause. He simply languishes in jail or in a compound of some sort.

Now, I think that this is a very fundamental right of American citizens and I don't think that the power to suspend the writ should be broadened. I feel so very strongly about that that I am fearful about including this word insurrection. I think we know by tradition and by judicial interpretation and so on what the meaning of the language is as it has stood all these years and to make a change in it, perhaps we would, unwittingly, be restricting the freedom of American citizens.

After all, the bill of rights is to protect the individual — the minority of one — against the will, if you please, of everybody else in the country. One of those very basic rights is the right to be taken before a judge to find out upon what ground they are holding you, and that's it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: Mr. Chairman, point of information. I would like to ask of Mr. Norris or anyone that might be able to answer this question, if the word insurrection were inserted, according to this proposal, could this in any way be construed by court or by justices that it would pertain to the rights of people to strike, such as in labor disputes?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Does anyone care to answer? Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, in response to the question, I am not sure that I expressed in the course of my brief exposition an apprehension that there was this possibility, and because of that, I felt that the right ought not to be limited by this particular term.

I think a student of labor history in the United States the last 100 or 150 years since the Cordwainer's case in 1832 in Philadelphia and the rise of collective bargaining and trade unions, could cite a number of instances where there was difficulty of a communal nature in which the word insurrection was used to characterize the particular difficulty, and certain legal consequences flowed from that and I think that the answer to that question might very well be yes.

I think we ought to emphasize and discuss in here that there is no limitation contemplated by the removal of the word insurrection upon the power of the governor to protect the public safety in the case of difficulty. There is the power to maintain law and order. All we are talking about is whether or not the writ of habeas corpus should be suspended under certain circumstances and I wholeheartedly subscribe to the formulations of Delegate Hutchinson on that.

MR. PERRAS: That being the case, I support the Danhof amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is now on the Danhof amendment.

Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, I certainly want to say the committee does not wish to belabor this matter. It is somewhat surprising that these delegates have read so much possibility into the word. We weren't able to find out exactly what the objection was from the judiciary committee until we heard it here today. We do not wish to prolong the argument.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is now on the Danhof amendment. As many as are in favor of the amendment will signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

Are there any further amendments to section 11?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: If not, it will pass.

Section 11, as amended, is passed.

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, before coming to section 12 I would like to call the attention of the delegates to page 283 of the Journal of January 4, the appendix to our report, which indicates the concurrent action of the committee on judicial branch. Perhaps, Mr. Chairman, this might expedite the discussion and we might not have quite as many arguments about these other amendments.

And now, section 12, which will be explained by Mr. Stevens.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 12.

[Sec. 12 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this is a result of my personal proposal to delete 2 words, "or agent" from this for a very simple reason. At the time I proposed it, I considered it would probably be the shortest and least controversial proposal in the convention. I was soon made to realize that that was not necessarily so. I had no intention to do anything except to take out that word "agent" which the Supreme Court of Michigan has said in effect is merely a repetition, a synonym for the word "attorney".

At the present time — I think most of you know this by now — a person may not practice law in a court of record unless he is an attorney admitted to the bar in Michigan. The only purpose I had here was to make this clear to the layman reading this provision in the constitution because I knew the question had often been asked by people, "Why can't I send my brother in law in?" It says not only attorney, but agent.

Now, to call your attention to the fact this does not otherwise change it, any person may defend himself or prosecute his own case, if he so desires in any court in Michigan. This does not necessarily affect the justice courts.

The deletion of the words "of his choice" was a suggestion of the judiciary committee. Now, as I said before, I didn't think it was controversial but I found the judiciary committee suspected that I was trying to make it easier or make it possible for laymen to practice law and that some of the laymen thought I was trying to establish some sort of a monopoly for the attorneys. Neither one was my purpose. As I said, it was to clarify the existing provision. That's all there is to it. The judiciary committee made its suggestion. We accepted it. The 2 committees concurred.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 12? If not, it will be passed.

Section 12 is passed.

Section 13.

MR. STEVENS: Is the secretary going to read section 13?

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 13.

[Sec. 13 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I am sure that even the laymen here have some appreciation of the anglo American system of trial by jury. This grants to all persons in Michigan the right of trial by jury.

In practice, every person is entitled to a jury if he wants it. That means a common law jury of 12 men except where the law otherwise provides it, as it does in the constitution for lesser courts, where it may be 6 men. In practice, a person may waive a jury in a criminal case only in writing. In a civil case a jury is deemed to be waived if neither party asks for it. This guarantees to everybody in every case a jury trial.

We have done nothing with this. It remains as it was. The right to a trial by jury will be the same as it was if you pass this.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 13?

Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: I'd like to ask Mr. Stevens perhaps a pretty naive question, but I would like to know where in law or where in the constitution does it define what size a jury should be?

MR. STEVENS: You will find that in the bill of rights. Further down it speaks of 12 persons. If you will read section 19, Delegate Yeager, you will notice there has been an amendment to change the word "men" to "jurors". That was in consideration of the ladies. Does that answer your question?

MR. YEAGER: What about grand juries?

MR. STEVENS: This has nothing to do with grand juries.

MR. YEAGER: I know that but what about them?

MR. STEVENS: You want me to go into a discussion of grand juries? That's not relevant to the question here.

MR. YEAGER: Is a grand jury part of a trial? Is that considered part of a trial?

MR. STEVENS: No. A grand jury is for the purpose of indictment to bring a person to trial. Having been indicted by a grand jury, he is then entitled to a jury trial. It would be a criminal case. In case of indictment, he gets a jury trial unless he waives it in writing. This isn't concerning grand juries. This is the right to a trial by jury.

I want to make this clear if there is any question about it. I didn't think there was. Delegate Yeager, have I made that matter clear?

MR. YEAGER: Yes.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 13? If not, it will be passed.

Section 13 is passed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 14.

[Sec. 14 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and delegates, the original wording of this was: "No person, after acquittal upon the merits, shall be tried for the same offense." The Supreme Court of Michigan, however, has virtually held that this means the same thing as the provision in the federal constitution, which is what we have put in: "No person shall be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy."

It is true that in the opinion of some of the jurists of the state this might make it a little bit easier for the state to appeal in some cases. Otherwise it makes no difference except it brings the provision of the constitution more clearly into the practice of this state. This was brought to us and suggested by one of the judges in Detroit and Mr. Buback introduced it. I joined with him to sponsor this proposal.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I think perhaps the record is sufficient with what Mr. Stevens has already said. There is a change in language here which I personally would interpret as making no change in the rule we have hitherto had and I would like to have Mr. Stevens state that as the conclusion of the committee for clarifying the record.

MR. STEVENS: That was the opinion of the committee.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: Mr. Stevens, I would like to pose this query. You envision this change of language to allow the prosecutors to appeal a not guilty conviction under some cases. Would you care to enlarge on that opinion? In what cases do you want them to be able to appeal the not guilty conviction?

MR. STEVENS: I do not feel competent to do that, Miss Donnelly. This was brought to us by a judge. It's the language of the United States constitution. We could not see where it would probably make much of any change, possibly none. Perhaps one of the judges could answer your question better than I could. I think perhaps it has already been answered; but Judge Dehnke, I'd be glad to yield to you.

MR. DEHNKE: Well, the provision we are dealing with is the one which protects an individual, who has been once put on trial, from being prosecuted a second time for the same offense. In practice in this state, and I think in all others, except possibly one, that has meant that if he is acquitted at the first trial — even if the supreme court later holds on appeal by the prosecution that an error prejudicial to the people was committed during the trial — that he cannot be tried again.

It was a surprise to me — and it may be to some other of the attorneys here — when I found a case that arose in the state of Connecticut in which the first trial had ended in an acquittal, the state took an appeal to the state supreme court, which found prejudicial error that had hurt the prosecution, reversed the case on that ground and sent it back for retrial.

On the second trial the defendant was convicted and took an appeal upon the ground that he had been twice put in jeopardy. The Connecticut supreme court ruled no, the second trial was merely a continuation of the first one; that the state was entitled to a fair trial as well as the defendant, and had not had it. The United States supreme court upheld the state supreme court. That is one of the references that I carry around with me because it was so out of the ordinary as I had understood the rule to be. This case is found in 58 Supreme Court Reports 149.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: The committee will note that the judiciary committee had in mind a little bit different approach in language but as we point out, we do not differ in intent. I put it to the committee the other day and they did not believe it advisable to enter an amendment to the committee on style and drafting to determine which language they are in favor of.

I note that there is a case in the state of Michigan, if you will turn to page 235, where it says that although the constitution does not make use of the word "jeopardy" providing instead that "No person, after acquittal . . ." this court as a general proposition is committed to the views upon this subject to former jeopardy adopted by the federal courts under the United States constitution. The wording which we propose is that which is found in the vast majority of state constitutions. It is perhaps a little smoother than that used in the United States constitution and also the committee struck from the language of the United States constitution the words "life or limb" which do not pertain to the idea of jeopardy but actually pertain to the punishment.

Accordingly our committee, as reported in the appendix, concurs in the intent and we believe that if there is any differential in language it could best be handled by the committee on style and drafting.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Gover.

MR. GOVER: Mr. Chairman, as a layman, I am still at a loss on this provision. I went through it the other night and it just seemed like it is rather ambiguous or something. The original proposal has the word "trial" or "tried" in it and this has left it out entirely. There is nothing that refers back to the trial of the person.

There is another thing that also bothers me and that is this second paragraph of the comments, the committee said:

> The committee also believes that the new provision will permit the courts an appropriate degree of latitude in defining and restricting the concept of jeopardy so as to permit retrial of a defendant in certain instances in which some minor mechanical legal flaw in indictment or procedure permits a guilty person to escape without punishment.

I'd like a little more explanation on that, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, before answering his question, may I apologize for not mentioning the deletion of those 2 terms "life" and "limb". This was suggested by the judiciary committee and concurred in by the committee on rights and suffrage because they were held to be archaic and not in any way affecting the rights of the individual.

As to the other, there is no question in law but what the right not to be twice put in jeopardy is the equivalent of the right not to be tried over again with the possible exception of this Connecticut case which the judge cited. Certainly in Michigan I don't think there would be any question about it. Some of the judges seem to think there might be some possible appeal, where some is now present, if the case had not been heard. But let me explain this again. In the state of Michigan, the case cannot be appealed after the jury has been drawn and the case started. There is no appeal by the prosecution. If the man is acquitted, that's it. It wouldn't change that. Does that answer your question or not?

MR. GOVER: Not entirely, no.

MR. STEVENS: Do you want to repeat the question?

MR. GOVER: It just doesn't seem that the language of this sentence is quite clear. Maybe it's just my not being an attorney but it's that same paragraph:

> The committee also believes that the new provision will permit the courts an appropriate degree of latitude in defining and restricting the concept of jeopardy. . . .

I want a little more explanation on that.

MR. STEVENS: Here is the point: generally a person is put in jeopardy when the jury is drawn and the trial is started. Is that the question you have?

You would think from reading this, probably—and that is a matter of clarification—a layman might think that only after a person has been acquitted on the merits has he been put in jeopardy. That is not the fact under the decisions of the Michigan supreme court. He is better protected than that. There is nothing in here that I believe can be construed to in any way delete or reduce the rights of the defendant.

MR. GOVER: Mr. Stevens, if the word "tried" or "trial" was in there somewhere, wouldn't that explain it a little bit better? It doesn't refer back to that, that I can see.

MR. STEVENS: It would except for the supreme court decision that it virtually means the same thing as the provision that we put in. We put this in so it would be clarified. We thought people would understand better what the supreme court says it means.

MR. GOVER: If the word "acquittal" then, was put in to take care of that any place—

MR. STEVENS: Well, "twice put in jeopardy" certainly refers to acquittal. If the person is convicted, he can appeal. There is no question about that.

MR. GOVER: Of course, in your jeopardy there, you can be in jeopardy if you step on a race track and get in front of a car. You can be in jeopardy there. But it doesn't say anything about a trial in this thing.

MR. STEVENS: We're talking about jeopardy of a defendant in a court.

MR. GOVER: It doesn't mention it in that sentence of the section.

MR. STEVENS: This has been interpreted since the United States constitution was written. I don't think there is any difficulty in that.

MR. GOVER: There's a judge over there. Maybe he can explain it a little bit better to me.

MR. STEVENS: I yield to Judge Pugsley.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of privilege.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I think that it should be made clear on this record—and I am speaking now as a member of the judiciary committee after a brief conference with our chairman—that the comments that Mr. Gover has been referring to were in no way authored by the judiciary committee, directly or indirectly. We took no action with respect to the comments contained in this. We discussed in our committee only the proposed section and now, speaking as an individual, I have to say that I have—

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order. I think I had the floor and I yielded to Judge Pugsley. I'll be glad to hear anything from the judiciary committee.

MR. FORD: I'll yield to Judge Pugsley too.

MR. PUGSLEY: I'm willing to yield to Delegate Ford until he has completed his remarks. (laughter)

MR. FORD: Thank you, Judge Pugsley. I simply wanted to say that since the judiciary committee hadn't discussed this section, I would invite, as Mr. Gover did, someone to explain what the committee meant by its comment. I know what the section means, I think, but I'd like to know what the committee intended by the paragraph that Mr. Gover is talking about.

MR. PUGSLEY: In answer to the inquiry that has been made by Delegate Gover, I wish to say this. This takes me back a good many years to one of the first cases which I was called upon to try as a prosecuting attorney and I learned then, very much to my embarrassment, a definition of "jeopardy".

I had placed upon trial a man who was accused of taking indecent liberties with a small girl. I had been very much interested in that particular case. Defense counsel shrewdly remained quiet until after the jury had been sworn, and one witness was placed upon the stand, whereupon I was confronted with a motion to dismiss the case because the preliminary proceedings did not comply with the law. And I was embarrassed to find that the motion was well founded. The respondent was discharged and I was prevented from bringing another prosecution because this man had been placed once in jeopardy and could not be placed in jeopardy the second time for the same offense.

I didn't make the same mistake the second time. I learned, as I say, the hard way. In other words, this amendment which has been offered here to the original language of the section has been made to comply with the rulings which have been made by our supreme court on the matter of jeopardy. In other words, it is not necessary that a trial be completed on its merits in order to put the defendant in jeopardy. As has been stated by Delegate Stevens, he is in jeopardy the minute a jury has been empaneled, and in my case it was further when the witness had taken the stand, even though the case never proceeded to trial on its merits.

Does that satisfy your inquiry?

MR. GOVER: Does that satisfy the committee language then on that explanation? From what Mr. Ford brought up, it doesn't seem to explain that just exactly. I guess I'm thick headed today but I just can't seem to get it.

MR. PUGSLEY: I think the explanation is also found in the comments in the following language:

> The committee also believes that the new provision will permit the courts an appropriate degree of latitude in defining and restricting the concept of jeopardy so as to permit retrial of a defendant in certain instances in which some minor mechanical legal flaw in indictment or procedure permits a guilty person to escape without punishment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 14? If not, it will be passed, it is passed.

Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I would like to continue, if I may, the remarks made by Mr. Gover because now that he has brought them up I see why he is troubled and I wasn't before. There is a problem here. It didn't seem so at first; it isn't in the language of the section itself. That's why I didn't observe it. But the comment in the report, it seems to me, is abominable. The report, the comment, is not good and I don't think it should be left on the record. It is definitely in conflict with the answer given by Mr. Stevens. I would like to point that out and after I do, I would like to move that the entire comment to section 14 be stricken from the record.

There are 2 things in the comment which I now see Mr. Gover has uncovered. (laughter) One of them says this: "The new language thus appears to be more consistent with the actual practice. . . ." It doesn't say it's the same as the actual practice of the courts. I understand the answer of the committee and in my opinion as well, it isn't just more consistent. It's identical with the actual practice but the language we have here throws some doubt about whether it is identical.

Secondly, the final paragraph, I think, throws even more doubt. It states that the committee believes that the new language will permit the courts an appropriate degree of latitude, so on and so forth. It doesn't state—but it implies to me—that it will increase the latitude of the court in redefining. It doesn't say redefining but it implies that there will be more power in the court to restrict the concept of jeopardy. As far as I can understand it, there never has been any intention to do that because of the answer to the question given—I believe the question was by Judge Dehnke—whether there is any change whatever intended by this new language.

Mr. Chairman, am I in order to move that this part of the report, the entire comment following section 14, be stricken from the record?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair will rule that you can't make an amendment to the committee report. However, a motion to correct the journal may be offered here. That's a proper matter.

MR. NORD: I move that when the committee of the whole rises, it recommend that the entire committee comment following section 14 be stricken from the record.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, we are not adverse to striking some of this from the record but I wonder if Dr. Nord wants us to strike out the explanation of deleting the words "life or limb" and the use of the term "double jeopardy". The committee doesn't object to striking those things to which he objects but I don't see the point of striking out the other.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Stevens' point is well taken. I would like to repeat in different language. I would like to strike only those portions of the comment which begin at the bottom of page 280 in the left hand column with the words, "The new language . . ."—from there until the end of the comment.

MR. STEVENS: The committee does not object to striking that material.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair understands that Mr. Nord wants to amend the words of the committee report—

MR. NORD: To strike all words of the committee report starting with "The new language . . ."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: You are not dealing with the section? You are dealing with the words of the comment in the committee report?

MR. NORD: I am dealing only with the words of this comment in the committee report.

Mr. Chairman, if I may, we have had many reports given to us from committees and we have always dealt with them in some fashion. Now the question I asked you originally was whether I am in order to amend the committee comment as such. I understood you to say that I was.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair feels that the comments made by the committee that reported this proposal—it is their privilege—and if Mr. Nord cares to make some comment about the wording of this report, that is his privilege.

Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, Delegate Nord has made his comment. I would like to yield to Judge Dehnke if he has any reply relative to this. The committee is not averse to striking some of this comment if it is objectionable. I don't know whether it is in order or not.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman, I doubt very much whether the committee of the whole has any authority to strike any part of the committee report but the originating committee, as Mr. Stevens has suggested, can withdraw any part of the report it desires or the committee of the whole can express its disagreement with any such statement in the report which it thinks is possibly dangerous.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair would like to ask the chairman of the committee that made this report if they are averse to making this change.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, we will be glad to modify the report to meet the objections of Delegate Nord. That, I suppose, would take care of the situation?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That is correct.

SECRETARY CHASE: Is the secretary then to understand that Mr. Stevens, on behalf of the committee, is asking to withdraw the following language of the comments in its report on page 280 beginning at the bottom of column 1, and reading:

> The new language thus appears to be more consistent with the actual practice of the courts in Michigan.
>
> The committee also believes that the new provision will permit the courts an appropriate degree of latitude in defining and restricting the concept of jeopardy so as to permit retrial of a defendant in certain instances in which some minor mechanical legal flaw in indictment or procedure permits a guilty person to escape without punishment.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and Dr. Nord, would it not be better to leave in that statement that the committee believes that this is more consistent with the present practice in Michigan, to meet the rest of it?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Stevens, I wonder what you would say to this. Suppose we would only strike out the word "more" before the word "consistent".

MR. STEVENS: The committee agrees to that.

MR. NORD: I think that would be better. Can we work that deal? Cross out only the word "more" in that sentence and all of the final paragraph.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, the committee will revise this and strike that portion.

Do you want to read it again, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: The secretary then understands the agreement is that in this sentence, "The new language thus appears to be more consistent. . . ." that the word "more" be stricken.

What about the last paragraph following that?

MR. NORD: Entirely stricken is what I suggested.

MR. STEVENS: Entirely stricken.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: It will be so ordered unless there are objections.

Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I just wanted to make an inquiry. Will this action also appear in the journal record, not just our action but will the reasons be printed in our journal? Because without this I must vote against this suggested change in our constitutional language. Because of this belief of the committee I must always be 100 per cent opposed to it. Will this show in the action journal and printing?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Miss Donnelly, I am advised it will.

Mr. Doty.

MR. DEAN DOTY: Mr. Chairman, I am not half as concerned with removing the comment as I am the interpretation of the comment and whether or not it wouldn't be smarter to go back to the old language. This makes me a little nervous as a layman since I see no comments on the part of the judiciary committee and they are the ones who recommend the change. I'd be interested in their comments on these comments, whether they are right or wrong. Are we making a severe change here?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: On page 283 it was the original recommendation of the committee on judicial branch that the first sentence of the section be changed so as to read, "No person shall be put in jeopardy twice for the same offense." And we go on:

> It is pointed out that this is a change from the present section and is a change in the wording of the recommendation of the committee on declaration of rights but is, in essence, only the deletion of the words "life or limb", as found in the U.S. constitution which this committee believes to be obsolete. This committee concurs in the intent expressed by the committee on declaration of rights in the change made from the present section.

The committee concurred unanimously in the remaining portion.

Now, it was the opinion of the judiciary committee that the words recommended by the judiciary committee, as I have just read, were in line with the law as it now stands in the state of Michigan and that in so stating, we would be changing nothing substantive in the law because the words "trial upon the merits" have not, by court interpretation, meant the completion to acquittal, as Judge Pugsley has pointed out. It may be that the Convention of 1908 wished in essence to try to state that no man had been in jeopardy until he had been acquitted upon the merits. But the court did not in fact go along with this, and it never has. The way it stands now, you could leave it the way it is and it never would say that in order to be in jeopardy you have to go all the way to an acquittal or a conviction. As Judge Pugsley stated, it has to be interpreted to mean that you are in jeopardy when the jury is sworn or when a witness is sworn and if for some reason the trial is not concluded—as in his case—you cannot bring the man back for retrial.

It also deals with something that if you are tried for murder and found guilty of a lesser offense such as manslaughter, you can not be retried for murder. Now, it does not apply to a hung jury because the idea is that you go on with the same case, but I think I express the opinion of the judiciary committee that no change was being made in the substantive law.

As Mr. Ford pointed out, on this last comment that we have been talking about we did not concern ourselves with the comments of the committee on rights. We concerned ourselves with what they did. We felt that what they did was correct. Now, we suggested the wording be somewhat changed. As I previously stated, we will leave this to style and drafting. We think the wording means the same thing and we concur in the intent; but, to my way of thinking, so far as granting more or less latitude for the rights of the states, while it may be in there, it is doubtful whether the court would consider it.

We can't grant or decrease what is or is not somebody's constitutional right or increase one iota, by way of comment, the idea of whether or not the state might appeal. Now, I can see the reasoning for it. Whether or not we ever develop a school of law that allows the state to appeal is something we get into when we consider what may constitute jeopardy. But this is historic language. It has been interpreted. It is now in line with what our supreme court in the state has said is involved in jeopardy, as Judge Pugsley has pointed out. And I think it gets rid of language which causes a lot of confusion, especially after acquittal upon the merits. It just doesn't mean that.

I think now with the comment out, we hope the supreme court, when it reads this fourth grade English—as the chief justice said he wanted—will not be confused as to what we meant. This is my interpretation of what we meant in the judiciary committee. But again I point out that there was a motion passed—which unfortunately did not get printed correctly in the journal and perhaps we can correct it—in which the judiciary committee said that where we concur in the changes made in the substantive portions to go in the constitution, we do not always concur in the reason therefor stated by the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections. They have their reasons. We were not asked, nor did we have the time, nor under the rules of the convention, if we have concurrence, do we print a separate reasoning for it. This idea comes to us—they did the primary work, they had their reasons—we concurred in what they did, not always in the reasons therefor. What was attached in the appendix to the bottom of our comments on section 19 should have applied and does apply to the entire sections that we considered. This was a motion made by Mr. Ostrow and passed by the committee. It got typed up a little differently. We will make a correction. It should refer to all of the sections. This was our thinking on the matter.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Brown.

MR. T. S BROWN: I should like to remind the delegation that this again concerns a point that I brought up Monday night—perhaps in an unfortunate manner—with Dr. DeVries. But the point is essentially the same, and that is that the supreme court will hundreds of times in the future, during the life of the document that we are working on now, be looking to the comments of the issuing committees and these statements and general consensus expressed on the floor in support of the terminology in question.

Now, without talking on the merits of what we have been discussing here this afternoon, I think the point is doubly emphasized and becomes doubly important because apparently we have had conflicting opinions—or at least, in some way, unclear opinions—issued by one or both of the committees exercising concurrent jurisdiction on the same terminology.

Especially for the laymen in the delegation you must understand that when the supreme court looks at the language, they understand, as well as all of us do, that anything is possible with words and words can mean a thousand different things, even in the same order, in the same structure and within a sentence; and they necessarily always look to the real intention of what we are doing. And I think that as a result of today's unfortunate mixup we should have some standardized procedure so that we will all understand that the committee report, the committee comments, are just as important in this sense as what we actually vote upon as going into the constitution because we are, by voting on the particular section and not saying anything about the committee comments, actually acquiescing in the intention and the meaning and the various nuances of the phrasing within the comments. I do think that some sort of structure ought to be set up so that we will realize the import and the intent of the actual words we are using.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Gust.

MR. GUST: Mr. Chairman, I'd just like to make one brief comment for whatever it is worth for posterity and style and drafting, and I understand the chairman of style and drafting is also on the judicial committee. I think the language that was proposed by the judicial committee is far more understandable and less clumsy than that that was proposed by the committee on rights, suffrage and elections, and I'd like to bring that to the attention of the style and drafting committee rather than making it in the form of an amendment because I understand from the comments made by the chairman of the judiciary committee that this is the way it prefers to do it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Heideman.

MR. HEIDEMAN: I was going to speak on the same thing, that is, the difference in language between the recommendation of the committee on rights, suffrage and elections and the judiciary committee and whether the judiciary committee was going to put that to a vote. The idea then is to pass that on to the style and drafting committee?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do you care to answer that, Mr. Ford?

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, if it will help in perfecting this record, I made the motion in the judiciary committee but I claim no authorship of this because we got it directly from the Alaska constitution, which duplicates the language in 24 constitutions of the United States and is in line with the federal constitution. One of the things that appealed, at least to me, in making the motion— and I think was persuasive with the committee—was that by adopting the exact language that was in vogue in the constitutions of some 24 states and is modified slightly in several others, we were taking safe language that was not open to semantic differences of opinion or construction and we have the exact words in the exact order that they have been used for many years and construed by many courts and this is the only difference between our language and the language of the committee on rights and suffrage, which in my humble opinion says exactly the same thing.

We don't feel that ours is any more palatable than theirs or does anything that theirs doesn't do. And as a matter of fact, our committee determined amongst ourselves that although we had a little different language, we were satisfied with what they had done.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: As I understand it now, on stipulation between the 2 sides here, this last paragraph under section 14 has been stricken from the record or is to be stricken from the record plus some words from the preceding paragraph. Is this correct?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That's correct.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would like to ask Mr. Stevens or anyone else who dealt with this item, does the last paragraph still set forth their intent in the change of the wording in this section of the bill of rights here?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do you care to answer, Mr. Stevens?

MR. STEVENS: Yes. Mr. Chairman and delegates, I have no doubt that the moving force of the committee on this recommendation, which was sent to us from a member of the judiciary, was to bring the language of the constitution within keeping with the practice existing today. It is very similar to my idea of deleting the words "or agent" in section 12. We didn't propose to change anything. We just thought when somebody reads this constitution it will be much more clear to him if we can say something to him what is anyway the law of the state. It has been explained here several times that this does not change the law of the state as it is now. However, if you read the original provision, it might be difficult to understand why the supreme court has ruled that it means what we are putting in here now. In other words, it all probably revolves around the fact that the supreme court says when a jury has been sworn or a witness has been sworn, he is in jeopardy, and he is in jeopardy whether you change the language or not, in fact. Does that answer your question?

MR. MAHINSKE: You are now saying that your remarks in the last paragraph where you say that it is to permit latitude and so forth and retrial of a defendant in certain instances and so forth, is no longer your intent? Whether it is stricken from the record or not, this is no longer your intent?

MR. STEVENS: This was suggested when the matter was given to the committee. Whether it would make any difference there I am not prepared to say. Possibly it would, as Judge Pugsley just pointed out. Certainly it does not dilute the rights of the defendant; at least, we don't think it does. In accepting this idea, the committee thought we ought, if we could, to say the thing that would most likely be clear to anyone who read it. Apparently we haven't done so entirely. There seems to be some argument. But I don't think there is any question as to the fact that the law is now fixed and it would not be changed in substance by any change in language which we have here.

MR. MAHINSKE: I have a question to direct to Mr. Danhof of the judiciary committee, based upon exactly the same lines that appear in the comment under section 14.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: I don't believe Mr. Danhof is in the hall.

MR. MAHINSKE: Or anyone else from the judiciary committee who would care to comment on this. I think Mr. Ford has been taking the floor on behalf of the committee here. In your report on section 14 you say, "This committee concurs in the intent expressed by the committee on declaration of rights. . . ." Down in section 19, you say, "Concurs with the recommendation of declaration of rights committee, but not necessarily for the reasons given in that committee's report." Just what do you mean by this?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Does anyone care to answer that?

Mr. Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: If Mr. Mahinske would care to retain his question for a few minutes, Mr. Danhof has gone down to the committee office to get the committee letter. It appears there is a misprint in section 19.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman, I was going to ask Mr. Stevens a question but I think he has answered it. But this is so important and so vital to the rights of the accused that I would like it as a matter of record so no prosecutor, or anyone else, will be confused, that you in no way intend to allow the state to appeal on matters of error in a criminal case. I'd like the record to state that in light of the Connecticut case which was read to us earlier.

MR. STEVENS: We have a statement from the judge that he thought that in case of such a technicality as Judge Pugsley brought out here, it might give the state some right of appeal. Certainly, under the present law and under this provision, there is no idea that once the jury has been sworn, that the state would have a right of appeal.

MR. KUHN: Another question I want to be sure we get an answer on is whether or not it is the intention to give the state any further rights or is it that you are hoping to open up the field?

MR. STEVENS: No.

MR. KUHN: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: I'd like to ask Mr. Stevens a question, Mr. Chairman. As I understand the word "jeopardy", just to define this for some of the laymen, is it not true that jeopardy attaches when a jury has been sworn in a criminal case?

MR. STEVENS: That is true. It has been pointed out 2 or 3 times.

MR. BOOTHBY: And the wording of the present constitution would indicate that "jeopardy" under the literal interpretation of the present constitution would not attach unless there was an acquittal.

MR. STEVENS: That would seem to be what it says; but the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan doesn't agree with your intention so we want to make the constitution read the way the supreme court says it does read.

MR. BOOTHBY: So this is a distinction that you are actually trying to make, to make the jeopardy attach at the time the jury is sworn rather than later on in the trial. Actually you are extending the rights of the individual?

MR. STEVENS: We are not doing anything in that regard. We are simply trying to state the matter in such a way that even a layman might understand that jeopardy does attach.

MR. BOOTHBY: I am going to ask one further question. Under the literal interpretation of the present constitution — and I don't mean what the courts have decided — but under the literal interpretation of the words, if the prosecutor began a criminal case and the jury was empaneled, but on the motion of the prosecutor himself the case was dismissed — under the literal interpretation — a person could be tried again, is that not correct under the literal interpretation?

MR. STEVENS: That is correct, if I know what you mean by literal interpretation. That's what it seems to say.

MR. BOOTHBY: So the changing of words to comply with the federal constitution would not allow the prosecutor to drop the case in the middle of a criminal case and allow him to begin the prosecution over again; is that correct?

MR. STEVENS: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I understand recently in reply to Delegate Kuhn's statement you unequivocally said that you had no intention to open the door to any interpretation of the state to allow the state to appeal on not guilty. Is that correct?

MR. STEVENS: If I understand your question, it is correct.

MISS DONNELLY: If that was your intent at that time and now you have changed your position, in my opinion, since you filed your report, would the committee object to amending their report to so state that that is not the intention and that is the direction they wish to foreclose?

MR. STEVENS: Subject to any comment or objection of any member of the committee, I would say yes.

MISS DONNELLY: I'd like to request that your committee then do that.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman, I don't know whether this is connected or not. There is one thing that we need to watch. We do have the practice in some cases of the prosecutor being allowed to take an appeal to the supreme court to review a judgment or decision or ruling that the court made during the trial, which the prosecutor thinks was erroneous. And I think that is a good practice. The purpose of that is not to send the case back for another trial but to obtain a ruling of the supreme court so that if the supreme court says the ruling was wrong, that some mistakes will not be made in later cases in other courts or the same court.

So I think what we desire is to make sure that after an acquittal, even in a case in which the trial judge made error prejudicial to the prosecution, the defendant shall not be put on trial again. That may allow a person really guilty to escape once in a great while but the alternative is the possibility of letting it run into what people would call a persecution by continual appeals and retrials.

I have no desire to see anything go into this constitution which would make it possible to compel an individual who has once been acquitted or put on trial in such a way that he has been in jeopardy to be tried again. But I do think the door ought to be left open for appeals by the prosecutor so that erroneous rulings by the court can be checked by the supreme court and so marked.

To guard against another possible misunderstanding that has been touched on perhaps not quite sufficiently, if a mistrial occurs; if a juror becomes sick and the defendant is not agreeable or the prosecutor is not agreeable to completing the trial with the remaining jurors; if it is found out during the trial that some juror who has been accepted was in fact disqualified; if something else occurs which justifies the court, for good reason, declaring a mistrial, that is not necessarily the end of the case. A new jury can be empaneled and the case then carried on and completed.

I think we need to be pretty careful as to what we put into the language of this amended comment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair would like to suggest, if it is agreeable to the committees that handled this report, and in order to avoid any further confusion and loss of time, that they prepare a new report.

MR. STEVENS: The committee would be glad to prepare a new report. We would appreciate the privilege of having a little time to do it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The report would not necessarily have to be made and prepared today but it could be included in the action journal as to what the comments were on the proposal.

MR. STEVENS: The committee would be more than glad to rewrite the report.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Miss Donnelly, does that satisfy your feelings in the matter?

MISS DONNELLY: Yes, generally. However, I would like to go on record as saying, in my opinion, a person who has been acquitted has never been guilty and you can't thus let a guilty person go free because he was not guilty.

MR. STEVENS: We don't need to put that in the report, do we? (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: In view of the fact, Mr. Chairman, that the committee is going to rewrite their report, I would assume the judiciary committee will rewrite their report. These reports are tied in pretty solidly with the committee proposals themselves. I think it would be in order to move at this time that when the committee rise, we take no action on this section of the bill until we have the new reports before us.

MR. LUNDGREN: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: State your point, Mr. Lundgren.

MR. LUNDGREN: Wouldn't it be prefectly proper to pass this particular portion by and move on to the next section?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Is that satisfactory to you, Mr. Mahinske, that we temporarily pass section 14, proceed to the other sections and come back to this one later?

MR. MAHINSKE: When we have the new committee reports in front of us.

MR. STEVENS: It's agreeable to the committee, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKE: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, as a matter of procedure — and I agree with Mr. Mahinske, I don't think we are in a position to act on this section until the committee report is complete — we had very little time to consider this in our judiciary committee under the concurrent jurisdiction. We were under great pressure to act immediately and to much of this no attention was given, and I'm on the judiciary committee. But I wonder what the procedure is that we are following here now. If the committee report is going to be rewritten, will it go back to the judiciary committee? Or what is going to happen?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: It would seem to me that Dr. Pollock, who handled the proposal, would make contact with the judiciary committee and get together and make a proper report.

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, as I understand it, the committee, through Mr. Stevens, has now promised to rewrite the report and since that has been requested and will be done, there is no point now in going any longer in the discussion on this section. We can pass this section and come back to it with a new comment in front of you and then I hope it can be speedily disposed of.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Unless there are objections, we will pass temporarily section 14 and proceed with section 15.

The secretary will read section 15.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 15.

[Sec. 15 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I am going to read the comment here in order that I may not say something that I did not intend to say. I don't expect any controversy here. We have not changed this. We simply say:

> The committee believes that these guarantees against a requirement of excessive bail, excessive fine, cruel or unusual punishment, and the unreasonable detention of witnesses are satisfactory as now stated and require no change from the present constitution.

The judiciary committee concurred in this.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 15? If not, it will be passed.

Section 15 is passed.

Section 16.

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report to the convention.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: It has been moved that the committee do now rise. As many as are in favor of the motion will signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The motion does not prevail.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 16.

[Sec. 16 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, if you will look at your section 16 in the journal, please, I would like to yield to Professor Norris to explain the change which we made, the addition which we have made to this provision.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee of the whole, with regard to the recommended change of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, I'd like to make these observations: first of all, the proposed language is a very slight modification of a comparable provision in the recently adopted Alaska constitution. The judiciary committee concurred in principle and added 2 words which were incorporated in the language which is now before the house. Secondly, I'd like to say that this morning we were notified by the civil liberties committee of the state bar of Michigan that they also concurred with the principle of this particular proposition now before us.

May I say by way of elucidation — because I suspect that if this should meet with the favorable consideration of this body the courts might construe this — I have given this considerable attention. I want to read this very brief statement with regard to this proposal.

It is the purpose of this additional language to facilitate the important and valuable function of legislative and executive investigations by protecting the right of all persons to fair and just treatment in the course of such investigations. It is through procedural rules that the individual is protected against arbitrary governmental action. The quintessence of liberty is the protection of the individual against arbitrary application of the collective powers of the state. It is submitted that there is need for such fair and just treatment and, when fair and just treatment is accorded to all persons, there is a greater disposition to assist such legislative and executive investigations in the discharge of their lawful duties. Dean Griswold of the Harvard law school has placed the problem in these terms:

> Now let us turn to the question which has been constantly recurring in recent days. Does this basic idea have any application to legislative investigations? Do these investigations always measure up to our ideal of due process of law? I think it fair to say that a large section of the public has from time to time felt a sense of injustice with respect to some of these hearings; and if they have, then there is a situation where the ancient ideal of due process is involved.
>
> A failure to appreciate the intimate relation between sound procedure and the preservation of liberty is implicit, may I say, in that saddest and most short sighted remark of our times, "I don't like the methods, but . . ." For methods and procedures are the essence of due process and are of vital importance to liberty. As Mr. Justice Brandeis wrote some 30 years ago, ". . . in the development of our liberty insistence on procedural regularity has been a large factor." More recently Mr. Justice Frankfurter has put the same truth in these words, "The history of liberty has largely been the history of observance of procedural safeguards."

Fair and just procedures are the basis for effective investigations. Chief Justice Warren has summarized the basic policy considerations on this relationship in the Watkins Case, 354 U.S. 178 (1957). He said:

> The power of the congress to conduct investigations is inherent in the legislative process. That power is broad. It encompasses inquiries concerning the administration of existing laws as well as proposed or possibly needed statutes. It includes surveys of defects in our social, economic or political system for the purpose of enabling the congress to remedy them. It comprehends probes into departments of the federal government to expose corruption, inefficiency or waste. But, broad as is this power of inquiry, it is not unlimited.
>
> There is no general authority to expose the private affairs of individuals without justification in terms of the function of the congress. This was freely conceded by the solicitor general in his argument of the Watkins Case. Nor is the congress a law enforcement or trial agency. These are functions of the executive and judicial departments of government. No inquiry is an end in itself; it must be related to, and in furtherance of, a legitimate task of the congress. Investigations conducted solely for the personal aggrandizement of the investigators or to punish those investigated are indefensible.

Moreover, Justice Warren points out that it is unquestionably the duty of citizens

> . . . to cooperate with the congress in its efforts to obtain the facts needed for intelligent legislative action. It is their unremitting obligation to respond to subpoenas, to respect the dignity of the congress and its committees and to testify fully with respect to matters within the province of proper investigation.

But, Justice Warren points out that the investigations and the duty of citizens to cooperate

> . . . assumes that the constitutional rights of witnesses will be respected by the congress as they are in a court of justice. The bill of rights is applicable to investigations as to all forms of government action. Witnesses cannot be compelled, for example, to give evidence against themselves. They cannot be subjected to unreasonable search and seizure. Nor can the first amendment freedoms of speech, press, religion, or political belief and associations be abridged, . . .

by such investigations. Justice Warren continues:

> But the power to investigate, broad as it may be, is also subject to recognized limitations. It cannot be used to inquire into private affairs unrelated to a valid legislative purpose. Nor does it extend to an area in which congress is forbidden to legislate. Similarly, the power to investigate must not be confused with any of the powers of law enforcement; those powers are assigned under our constitution to the executive and the judiciary. Still further limitations on the power to investigate are found in the specific individual guarantees of the bill of rights, such as the fifth amendment's privilege against self incrimination which is in issue here.

In short, Chief Justice Warren declares that some "specific individual guarantees" of the bill of rights apply to the investigative process. Hence, it is germane that in the bill of rights of the Michigan constitution the people may properly seek to protect the individual against unfair and unjust conduct by legislative and judicial investigations.

It may be asked, does not the due process clause protect the individual against unfair and unjust treatment? Yes, but not in executive or legislative investigations. The fact is that the due process safeguards of a criminal trial have not been interpreted to apply to legislative or executive investigations. While many investigations have unfairly and unjustly assumed the character of a criminal trial and abused the prestige of government, the rights of individuals, and our concept of separation of powers in so doing, the normal rights of an accused have not been judicially accorded to a witness in an investigation. In a criminal trial a defendant has at least the following rights:

The right to notice of the nature of the accusation; the right to confront and question witnesses; the right to counsel; the right to subpoena witnesses; the right to take the stand in one's own defense; the right not to take the stand, or decline to answer incriminating questions, without adverse comment; the right to rules of evidence; and the right to a prompt public and fair trial.

But the courts have held that only some specific guarantees of the bill of rights apply to legislative hearings. The specific guarantees protected in legislative hearings have been the right of a witness not to answer self incriminating questions, the right not to be subject to unreasonable search and seizure, and the right not to answer questions invading first amendment freedoms of speech and association. The courts have also held that questions propounded in such hearings must be pertinent to the mandate of the inquiry. While there has been language in some decisions that go beyond these protections the specific holdings have been confined, in the main, to the specific guarantees outlined above. The court has not held that the due process clause applies to legislative or executive investigations.

The need for fair and just treatment may be summarized as follows: while due process generally means simply fairness, experience with many legislative and executive investigations — federal and state — across the land in recent years, amply indicate that even the fairness in elemental due process has been wanting. The privilege against self incrimination protects only against punishment; it does not protect against defamation of character — and such defamation, imputations and charges have been made under the auspices of such investigations — nor does it protect against the imputation of unfair business practices or, indeed, a charge of treason.

The court decisions to date have not protected individuals against being charged with innumerable offenses, offenses not proved nor intended to be proved. Investigators have assumed a right to ridicule, expose, demean, deprecate and intimidate witnesses with impunity. The witness usually has only a limited right to counsel, no right to submit a prepared statement, does not have a clear right to a clear definition of the scope of each inquiry, no right to a transcript of the proceedings, no influence on executive or open sessions, no opportunity to restrain the issuance of public statements by committee members, no right to confront witnesses, cross-examine witnesses, or call rebuttal witnesses, no right to decline appearances on radio or television, and no right to appear before subcommittees composed of more than one person.

Moreover, nonwitnesses, who are the subject of adverse hearsay comment, identification or charges at such hearings, with great resultant irreparable damage to their reputation and livelihood, are usually not permitted the right to appear, answer or rebut.

Mr. William T. Gossett, vice president and general counsel, Ford motor company, arrived at conclusions precisely pertinent here in an address delivered before the Michigan judges' association meeting at the Dearborn inn on September 4, 1952. Mr. Gossett said — and I quote:

> . . . We should be the first to recognize that there is a proposition at the heart of American life which is the constant and overriding preoccupation of the people; and that the people seem to give their confidence and praise to those who endeavor to protect this proposition from substantial impairment.
>
> The proposition is that, no matter how complex society may be or become, the individual must be the focus of all public and private efforts. It is the belief that the human being has that divine spark which alone insures progress toward a better world. It is the belief that because of this divine spark, every individual, however cantankerous or sinful he may be, has basic rights which the self interest of society demands be protected and expanded, consistent, of course, with the rights of the group of which he is a part. Consider, for example —

Mr. Gossett continued

> — current developments in the conduct of congressional investigations and similar quasi judicial processes. They have proliferated in recent years and, like the printing of cheap money, have debased the original coin. This once honorable device is today being used in ways that cannot fail to provoke deep concern about maintaining the rights of the individual.
>
> Congressional investigation is essential, of course, to the proper functioning of our government machinery. It has been sanctioned by usage and upheld by judicial decision. No thoughtful person would withhold from lawmakers their right, indeed their duty, to investigate. Public airing of matters relevant to the creation of new law and enforcement of existing law is vital to democracy.
>
> But manifestly it is not essential to the investigative process that a person summoned before a legislative committee be denied constitutional rights: the right to cross examine those who have testified against him; the right to call witnesses in his own behalf; and the right to answer then and there the accusations made against him.
>
> It is not essential, moreover, that individuals whose beliefs or conduct are under scrutiny be subjected to public pillory or be slandered with impunity by investigators who are secure in the knowledge that there can be no retaliation in court. And last, but by no means least, there is no need to compound the inherent invasion of indivi-ual privacy or the damage to reputation by televising the proceedings. In the light of the abuses which have sprung up in the investigative process, the possible injury to the individual is multiplied many times when his ordeal is projected into the homes of millions of his fellow citizens.

End of Mr. Gossett's quote.

It is not suggested that all of the abuses of executive and legislative hearings can be corrected, or be corrected completely, by any one branch of government. Varied and delicate problems are presented and each coordinate branch does not have the sole responsibility for the proper conduct of government. But each branch — the courts, the legislature, and the executive — should have a duty to protect and promote fair and just procedures in investigations. The urge for reform of past and current procedures cannot be denied. There is nationwide interest. What then can move each to assume its proper and unique function in protecting the rights of every person to fair and just executive or legislative hearing?

I conclude that it is submitted that each branch can evolve within its own proper sphere appropriate measures to deal with this problem. But the absent impulse and incentive must be provided. This incentive can best be provided by a constitutional mandate. While Michigan has not had an objectively measurable record of the abuses in legislative and executive hearings, the power and capability exist.

Parenthetically I might refer to several proceedings. I had my attention brought in the judiciary committee by Delegate

Ford, for example, to the investigation of the J.P.s, a situation where in the morning an investigation was conducted of an individual and in the afternoon the gentleman committed suicide. There has been the Callahan committee; there has been the Francis committee; there have been a whole host of committees in which there have been abuses. My attention was invited by one delegate to this convention to the fact that he resigned from one of our own committees because of the conduct of the chairman. I am sure that we could recite instances which would indicate that this is a Michigan concern as well as a federal concern.

Such was the view indeed of the people of our newest state, Alaska, in adopting the language of this particular submission. Alaska's experience in this regard, like that of Michigan, was limited. But Alaska realized that the way to such abuses exists, and hence the will to such abuses must be denied. The experience of the nation, of other states, indeed, of other nations, can and should be taken into account by delegates drawing up a new Michigan constitution.

Justice Cardozo said that a constitution must be based on principles, not only for the passing hour but for the future. Both the passing hour and the future require that the right of all persons to fair and just treatment in the course of legislative and executive investigation shall not be infringed. It is the precise purpose of a bill of rights to foresee and forestall arbitrary, unfair and unjust conduct of government against all persons.

And for these reasons we respectfully recommend that you favorably consider the recommendations of the committee.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, may I address a question to Delegate Stevens? Delegate Stevens, you yielded to Delegate Norris. I am wondering if we are to consider the statement or report made by Delegate Norris just completed as part of the official report of the committee on rights, suffrage and elections, or is it merely his individual statement?

MR. STEVENS: Judge Leibrand, the official report of the committee is contained in the journal. The statements recently made by Professor Norris are those that he used before the committee in introducing and sponsoring this proposal. Am I not right, Professor Norris?

MR. NORRIS: That's right, Mr. Stevens. However, I don't feel there is anything inconsistent between what I said and what is in the comment that is appended to this section of the report.

MR. STEVENS: That was not the question. Judge Leibrand asked me a question. I want to be sure I answered it correctly.

MR. NORRIS: I think it is an appropriate elucidation of the reasons which motivated the submission, sir.

MR. STEVENS: Have I answered your question, Judge Leibrand?

MR. LEIBRAND: I was very happy to have you do so.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Heideman.

MR. HEIDEMAN: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'd just like to read something and pose a question. The proposed language, or additional language, reads, "The right of all persons to fair and just treatment in the course of legislative and executive proceedings, investigations, and hearings shall not be infringed." The committee comment reads like this:

> . . . . The language proposed by the committee does not in any sense impose categorically the guarantees of procedural due process upon such investigations. Instead, it leaves to the legislature, the executive and finally to the courts, the task of developing fair rules of procedure appropriate to such investigations and hearings. . . .

Well, it's like starting to take a hot bath and you turn on so much cold water you end up in a cold bath. I mean, what does this mean? It says ". . . shall not be infringed." And the committee comment says, "Well, after all, we don't mean what we said we meant. This is the constitutional language."

MR. STEVENS: I think I can speak for the committee as a whole. We were convinced that it was well to put into the constitution a provision which might guide the courts, the legislature, the governor, the administrative board in these hearings where they bring in witnesses or in some cases defendants. All we want to do to put it as simply as possible is try and guarantee fairness in the hearing. Does that answer your question?

MR. HEIDEMAN: No, Delegate Stevens, it doesn't because now you use the term "guarantee" and the language says that it does not in any sense "impose categorically the guarantees of procedural due process investigations." Instead, it leaves it to the legislature. Why put it in? The executive, in particular. We don't generally think of the executive as laying down the rules of fair procedure.

MR. STEVENS: Probably I didn't make myself clear on that, Dr. Heideman. I meant to say we hoped that the constitution, as we changed it, would be a guide not only to the courts but to the legislature and administrative bodies to be fair and just. It is not expected that due process of law in the sense which it would apply in a court would necessarily apply in an administrative hearing or in a legislative hearing. It never has and it isn't intended that it should.

MR. HEIDEMAN: Then shouldn't the language be modified?

MR. STEVENS: Which language are you talking about?

MR. HEIDEMAN: "Infringed."

MR. STEVENS: No. I think all it says is "The right . . . to fair and just treatment . . . shall not be infringed." It doesn't say that due process of law is required or shall not be infringed.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 16?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Cudlip has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend page 4, line 4, after "all" by striking out "persons" and inserting "individuals, firms and corporations"; so the language will then read:

> The right of all individuals, firms and corporations to fair and just treatment in the course of legislative and executive proceedings, investigations, and hearings shall not be infringed.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman and members, I think the committee is to be praised for its insight and perception in proposing this change and making it a part of Michigan constitutional architecture. As Member Norris has said, these hearings at all levels of government are increasing and sometimes seem to be oppressive.

It is true in my experience that the people that appear before these hearings appear in large measure as representatives of groups and not in their individual capacities. The purpose of my amendment, if this section 16 is adopted, is to make it very clear that persons not only means individuals but also means firms and corporations, such as universities, private business corporations, labor unions and all other artificial persons.

Now, why the suggestion? Simply to avoid future argument, litigation, expense and nuisances. The first sentence of section 16, which is unchanged and which provides all of us with ancient rights, uses the word "person." This sentence contains a mixture of rights which we are entitled to constitutionally. "Person" in that sentence has been defined by our supreme court in the case of the privilege against self incrimination to include only the individual. That was recently established in the case of St. John vs. General Motors, 308 Michigan Reports, 333, where the corporation was not entitled to invoke that privilege, but only the individual working for the corporation if he were guilty.

Now, on the other hand, the same first sentence, in speaking about due process of law, which Mr. Norris carefully defined for us again, does apply to corporations, cities, labor unions, charitable organizations, universities, firms, etc. Therefore, I say that I think if the section is to be adopted, we can avoid lots of expense and lots of argument if we make it clear that we intend that individuals, firms and corporations covering all the entities I have mentioned, are to be protected and not simply the individual who appears in his own right. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, in order to clear up a slight matter of confusion, I would like to have the delegates turn to page 283 of the Journal 50 in the appendix wherein there is contained a report of recommendations and decisions of the judiciary committee. At the time we considered this matter we were passing it along to the rights committee practically as fast as we voted on it. The section marked section 16 should read as follows:

> This committee concurs with the recommendations of the rights committee as they are contained in sentence 1 of said section. The judicial committee concurs, in principle, with the recommendations set forth in the second sentence of this section but recommends that, in addition to the word "investigations", there should be included the words "proceedings and hearings".

This was in fact done after the report back and the rights committee corrected it. Further —

> The committee was of the opinion also that the word "persons" might be expanded to include corporations and business entities in addition to natural persons.

This now deals with the amendment that Mr. Cudlip, who is a member of my committee, made.

If I might go on further, since the idea in section 19 was brought up. As I transmitted it back to Dr. Pollock — and I say that it is not his fault or anybody's fault; he was in there when we took the vote and they went out and the official written report arrived later — the report should read this way, and I would ask that it be printed in the journal tomorrow to correct any misapprehension:

> This committee concurs in the recommendations contained in this section and approves of the word "jurors" in place of the word "citizens" which latter word was the original choice of the committee on rights prior to consultation with the committee on judicial branch.

This has been done.

> It was the considered opinion of the committee that this would eliminate any confusion and would leave to the legislature the manner of determining the qualifications of jurors.

This suggestion was likewise incorporated in the final report and the final committee proposal that we are now considering. And further, the following motion was likewise passed —

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Danhof, the Chair would like to suggest that you wait until the committee rises and then submit that statement and it will appear in the journal tomorrow.

MR. DANHOF: I wanted in particular—since we are discussing section 16—to bring out what we had there.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That will be done. But you see, you are in section 16.

MR. DANHOF: I went over to 19. But go ahead. That's all right.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, the rights and suffrage committee has no objection to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I also am on the judiciary committee and it is true that the committee concurred after a very brief consideration of this matter in principle. Now I think there are some very serious questions that should be asked of the committee in this particular connection and perhaps Delegate Norris would be kind enough to answer some of these.

The first question I have deals with that part of the comment that reads — and I am reading from page 280 of the journal —:

> Instead, it leaves to the legislature, the executive and finally to the courts, the task of developing fair rules of procedure appropriate to such investigations and hearings. . . .

Now, would I be correct in assuming, in view of the comment, that all legislative and executive proceedings, investigations and hearings then would be subject in the final determination as to the rules of procedure where the rights of persons are involved to the rules of the court? That would be the Michigan supreme court, would it, Mr. Norris?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: The thinking behind the proposal and the submission before you was that there was, if you will, a concurrent jurisdiction on the part of the coordinate branches of government to evolve such just and fair rules as would reach that objective for all people coming before such investigations or proceedings or hearings. And, if this were passed, it would be a duty in the first instance upon the legislature to evolve codes and statutes, it would be a duty on the part of the executive department to promulgate such rules for the conduct of executive investigations as would comport with fair and just treatment and also the court would review this and evolve the fair and just rules.

Now, we have to understand that we are not talking about due process for a very important reason. We do not wish to encourage the trend of regarding legislative hearings as quasi criminal trials. We want to get away from that and get them to think in terms of the purpose of the investigation or the hearing, which is to get facts upon which to predicate remedial legislation. That's why we do not use the words due process. We're talking in terms of fair and just treatment and we recognize a rather tender and sensitive area in the separation of powers doctrine.

That's why we were thinking in type of language.

MR. HIGGS: I'm very interested in that feature of it. When you mention separation, I presume you are speaking of separation of the executive, legislative and judicial branches of government. When you use the words here, "Instead, it leaves to the legislature, the executive and finally to the courts, the task of developing fair rules of procedure appropriate. . . ." we are speaking of all legislative and executive proceedings—all of them, all investigations and all hearings. We're going to leave it to the courts to determine how these branches of government are going to do business; is that correct?

MR. NORRIS: I think the intent is to relate what we are thinking about to the investigative hearings and proceedings.

MR. HIGGS: That's not what is said here.

MR. NORRIS: I appreciate the point that you are making. There is a question there. I don't think it is the intent of this language to say the courts would review the rules by which the legislature conducts itself in its own proceedings. I think that what it is related to is with reference to the public in its investigative operations, particularly with regard to hearings before committees and executive hearings brought to the public.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I would like to speak, then, in opposition to both the Cudlip amendment and the committee report inasmuch as in the first place the language covers every possible kind of proceeding of the coordinate branches of government. We are not talking about concurrent jurisdiction; we are talking about finally leaving to the courts how they are going to do business.

Now, I'd like to call to your attention in this connection the fact that on the Supreme Court of Michigan, which theoretically is an elective body, 5 of the members of our supreme court were appointed and placed on that court solely by appointment of the governor and the sixth member of the court also came to the court by appointment. Now, this is reaching a long way from the electorate. It says "finally to the court." If we are going to place finally in the courts the very broad and uncertain idea of what is fair and just in the conduct of their proceedings, investigations and hearings, I think that's going too far.

We've seen, I think yesterday, how a court divided 5 to 4, with one man swinging one way or the other can determine ultimately the final disposition of a matter in the face of the electorate of Michigan; and I think that this is a very dangerous doctrine to put in our constitution. Especially you will note that under section 16 the first sentence is dealing with an entirely different matter and I don't understand and you might answer, Mr. Norris, why this is incorporated in that particular section. What is the effect of it? How far will this go?

MR. NORRIS: First of all, may I make this observation. The words ". . . and finally to the courts . . ." are an interpretation in the comment and are not in the language of section 16. The idea here is to create a constitutional duty upon each of the coordinate branches of government to deal fairly and justly as far as investigative hearings of proceedings are concerned and I don't see that there is that confusion.

With regard to the proposition that this particular proposed language in its relation to the due process law and self incrimination laws, I think these are all elements of fairness and justness in proceedings. To be sure, the first 2 relate principally to criminal matters, but not only to criminal matters, and similarly with regard to the investigations. I think it is indigenous and I think our sister state, Alaska, recognized that when they put this particular provision in similar form in this particular area of concern. I think it is germane and related and serves a useful purpose in that juncture. I don't know what your point is with regard to the courts involved.

MR. HIGGS: Let me ask this further question then, if what you mean is concurrent jurisdiction, doesn't the legislature now have the power to establish rules for fair and just treatment and doesn't the executive have power to establish such rules? And if you leave it finally to the courts, aren't you placing the ultimate responsibility there?

MR. NORRIS: I'm sure they have the power but we here, as a declaration of rights, are declaring the right of the persons not to have fair and just treatment infringed. So that when you speak of power, I think that's unrelated to what we are talking about. If the legislature had exercised this power to promulgate rules for fair hearings and things of that kind, both on a statewide and federal basis, perhaps there would be less need for this particular proposal. But the fact is that you have found the use of the collective power of the state to abuse witnesses and nonwitnesses, which has created the need for a declaration of the right, which is promulgated in this particular recommended language.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I am not going to presume any further upon the time of this committee to express my particular viewpoints, but I do urge you to examine this very carefully. I'd like to hear from other delegates on it but it seems to me that Delegate Norris is aiming at a national and federal situation rather than at our problem in Michigan.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, the committee did not intend and does not think it said anything which would mean necessarily a court review of all these things that you seem to have in mind.

It is true the committee recognized that the problem with which this deals is mostly a federal problem but wanted to make the application to the state if the matter should appear. It is also true that the committee recognized the fact that the consequent witnesses sometimes irritate members of committees and commissions and perhaps lead them to actions which are not proper and right but we didn't feel there was much we could do about that. We simply thought a person called by subpoena or certainly one who appears voluntarily should be treated with courtesy and fairness, that his personal reputation should not be impugned if he is there merely to make statements to the committee — certainly so long as he voluntarily cooperates with the committee. I don't follow your construction which you give on this. Certainly the committee had no intention of that.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the Cudlip amendment and the Chair will recognize Mr. Lundgren, if he would care to speak.

MR. LUNDGREN: Thank you. I rise in objection to the committee report and I'd rather see the original language of the section here retained as is because I believe and concur with my friend here that we are going beyond the state of Michigan and getting involved in federal processes. I do not think we are here to do our business in that position. I hate to be in objection to Mr. Cudlip's amendment but if we adopt the committee's report, then I'd support the amendment. But I do object to our getting into fields of national legislation, which I think the federal government should take care of properly. We should stick to the business of this section as it was originally intended and take care of the state of Michigan.

I would ask this question of the committee and Mr. Stevens, just how many problems has Michigan had in this particular condition that made you change the language of the original section?

MR. STEVENS: We didn't change any language except we added to it.

MR. LUNDGREN: Your additions, that's right.

MR. STEVENS: We had no intention to try to control practices in the federal government, Delegate Lundgren. Our only purpose was to guide us if it should be necessary 20 or 25 years from now or any other time in the state of Michigan. It would have no effect whatever on anything of that sort in the federal government. We have no jurisdiction over the federal government.

MR. LUNDGREN: I realize that, but all through the comment you allude to the problems of the quasi judicial hearings at the federal level and things like that. I believe we should stick to the state problem.

MR. STEVENS: The allusion to the federal government is one of comparison. I was a little bit reluctant to put them in myself for fear somebody would object, just as you have. We used them only as a matter of comparison. We do not feel that there has been any very great abuse in Michigan; however, we do not feel that if the matter should come up in the future we are doing anybody any harm by asking that a witness be entitled to fair and just treatment.

MR. LUNDGREN: Thank you very much. Then you achieve by your statement just what I am objecting to.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Cudlip amendment. The Chair will ask Mr. Gover and future speakers to confine themselves to the amendment.

MR. GOVER: Mr. Chairman, mine isn't entirely on the Cudlip amendment. I was on my feet when Mr. Stevens made some statements a few minutes ago in his preliminary statements and I wanted to question him in regard to that. May I proceed?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Proceed.

MR. GOVER: Mr. Stevens, in your preliminary remarks you referred to administrative boards and administrative bodies and yet in your new wording you do not have those mentioned. Where do they come in with regard to the legislative or executive proceedings?

MR. STEVENS: The purpose was to try to give any person called as a witness to give information, whether before a board, commission, legislative committee, any state organization of that sort — not a court — fair and just treatment. That was all.

MR. GOVER: Then Mr. Stevens, shouldn't we have an amendment in your wording there, "The right of all persons to fair and just treatment in the course of . . ." and insert in there "administrative, legislative and executive proceedings"? Shouldn't the word "administrative" be in there in that case as you use the words "administrative boards and administrative bodies" in your statements?

MR. STEVENS: We understand that the judiciary committee has a provision at the present time that it is considering to deal with administrative boards.

MR. GOVER: O.K., thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: I have some comments to make. One of them has been partly anticipated by Mr. Gover and I'm not certain whether it's been cleared up entirely. There is nothing about administrative law in the language that I see here in this section. However, it has been mentioned a few times that this is intended to cover administrative law and I would like to ask Mr. Stevens a question on that. I note that it was mentioned and it is mentioned in the report that due process is not intended to be guaranteed in the cases listed in the new language. As I understand it — and I'm not an expert on administrative law — but I believe I am correct in saying that in administrative law there is due process. Do you happen to know the answer to that, sir?

MR. STEVENS: My answer would be our purpose is to provide for just and fair treatment by any executive organization. We do not by this intend to take away the right of due process where it exists.

MR. NORD: Thank you very much. That satisfies me entirely on that point.

The only other point was raised, I believe, when Mr. Higgs raised a worthwhile problem that we ought to consider further. I might add that Mr. Cudlip's amendment is a point well taken and the committee report as a whole is good, but nevertheless, there is this problem raised by Mr. Higgs.

The problem has to do, I believe, with the word "proceedings." I note in the first part of the report it talks about investigations and towards the end of the report it says "investigations and hearings." But in the body of the section it says 3 things, "investigations, hearings and proceedings" in different order. I also note that the word "proceedings" was not originally in the proposal as the committee on rights drafted it and I gather the word "proceedings" was put in by the judiciary committee and has apparently caused some problem. But the problem that was pointed out by Mr. Higgs is that if you read this extremely broadly, you'll get into that question of whether the judiciary could possibly tell the legislature how to conduct its hearings. I really don't think it's a terrible problem because it states in the beginning, "The right of all persons to fair and just treatment in the course of . . . proceedings." Of course, in the ordinary proceedings of the legislature, individual persons would not be involved.

Nevertheless, I wonder whether you think, Mr. Stevens, that there would be any advantage in taking the word "proceedings" out in order to satisfy any objections that have been raised.

MR. STEVENS: As you have indicated, Dr. Nord, that was suggested by the judiciary committee. We acceded to their request. I think I would like to yield to Delegate Danhof on the matter. Our committee accepted the suggestion of the judiciary committee in this matter.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I might state that I think, as I recall the discussion — and I do not have the transcript, although we have it on tape — that investigations could be interpreted to be extremely narrow and might be limited to prehearing activity on the part of any particular committee in the legislature or as they have it, in the executive, and that adding the words "proceedings and hearings" broadens the activity from not only the investigating stage, but through the actual public hearings and the proceedings before some legislative committee. As I recall, Brother Cudlip of the committee also had some comments on this. I am trying to reconstruct in my mind specifically who talked on this point and proposed the recommendation. I know that he also raised the problem of "persons", which he has raised today and it seems to me that if Delegate Cudlip can recall, maybe he can enlighten us further. Excuse me, I guess it was Mr. Cudlip on the "persons" and Mr. Ostrow on "proceedings and hearings". Mr. Ostrow can proceed.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: All the discussion so far has been about legislative investigations. My understanding of this article and the reason I voted for it in the judiciary committee was that it was much broader than that. It is not just a hope; it is a guarantee, or at least that is my understanding.

Now, the principal idea in back of this "proceeding" was that anybody that has to submit to a proceeding, investigation or hearing, regardless of what you call it — and they'll call it different things in different departments — is entitled to fair and just treatment. Everybody is entitled to fair and just treatment, no matter what business they have with government. It's a rule of ordinary decent human conduct and there is no reason why people in government shouldn't be ordinary decent human beings. Now, the legal distinction between "fair and just treatment" and your present rule making power is this: on review of a rule of any administrative agency — and they are part of the executive department — the only question is whether that department has the authority to make the rules and, if they have the authority to make the rules, the court can't do anything about it if the rules aren't fair and just.

With the growth of all the administrative agencies and with the growth of proceedings — some formal and some just by a letter calling you in to the office — they can do you more damage than the most formal investigation. People are entitled to ordinary decent, fair and just treatment. And this was intended — at least on my part — to cover the whole gamut of both the legislative and executive departments.

You can be called in to one department by a simple letter. If you come there with an attorney and the attorney begins to say, "Now what is he charged with and who are the witnesses?" they say, "Well, this is not a formal hearing." But when they get through with this thing that they don't call a formal hearing or an investigation — and that's why we used the word "proceeding" — the end result is that somebody's license is cancelled or something is done to him.

Now, fair and just treatment is an ordinary rule of decent human conduct and there is no reason why the government and all its agencies shouldn't be subjected to the same rules. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: I would like to thank Delegate Ostrow for his very fine presentation of this matter. In substance, at least, it agrees entirely with the idea our committee had in mind in proposing this addition to this section.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I do not desire to speak to the Cudlip amendment which is on the floor and I will yield until we get to the main question.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Pellow.

MR. PELLOW: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I concur in the remarks of Delegate Ostrow and the only question in my mind is whether or not this language is mandatory and binding on the legislature. From reading the language that is the way that I interpret it and that is the reason that I am standing so that the record will show that this language is mandatory on the legislature to act.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Cudlip amendment.

Mr. King.

MR. KING: I will yield until we vote on the Cudlip amendment. I want to speak on the general question.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: I would like to ask Mr. Cudlip, in proposing the inclusion of the language "individuals, firms and corporations," whether it is his intention to include only legally constituted entities or other entities such as civic organizations, clubs, political organizations, and then there are trusts and estates that might be covered too.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Would you care to answer, Mr. Cudlip?

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman and Member Austin, I was using words that in legal phraseology are supposed to cover the orbit which I described. But certainly, I have no objection if you want to put in "voluntary associations, joint stock companies, partnerships" and all the rest. I think myself that these 3 words are generally regarded by lawyers and courts as covering about all the entities you can think of. There are voluntary associations which aren't even profit or nonprofit corporations, such as the chamber of commerce, as it was pointed out. That's all I can say to the matter. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Cudlip amendment.

Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman, as Mr. Cudlip stated, I don't believe that he has any objection to the addition of the words voluntary associations and I think it might well take away any doubt about their right or their standing before such an investigative body. I believe Mr. Austin's point was well taken. "Voluntary associations" would cover fraternal or civic groups, or anything that has not been incorporated as a nonprofit corporation. I would move to amend the amendment by adding the 2 words voluntary associations.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair would like to know where you want to put them, Mr. Habermehl. (laughter)

MR. HABERMEHL: I don't care.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Would you advise the Chair just about where you want to place the words?

MR. HABERHEML: After the word "corporations".

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Habermehl offers the following amendment to the Cudlip amendment:

1. Amend the amendment after "corporations" by inserting "and voluntary associations".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the Habermehl amendment to the amendment.

Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to speak to that. It seems to me, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, that one of the things we have to be careful about in writing a constitutional provision is that we don't try — by spelling out a long list of things — to make it look and read just like a statute.

I think we go a long way when we add firms and corporations but when you begin to talk about voluntary associations, which are not legal entities in and of themselves, it seems to me as though that, for all practical purposes, reverts back to "persons." All you are talking about here anyway is the right of fair and just treatment. Really, neither a corporation nor a firm or any other kind of a group can appear or act or anything of the sort except through persons. Really, it's the rights of persons that we are concerned with here.

I wouldn't want to raise objection to Mr. Cudlip's original amendment, although I disagreed with it, but I didn't think there was any point in splitting hairs. But when you add voluntary associations, then somebody else will think up some other kind of entity and after you get all through you'll have the thing reading just like a statute, and that is not good constitutional practice, nor is there any need for it for the reason, as I say, that basically this thing has to do with the right of persons to fair and just treatment. And I say, any other kind of entity can act only through persons.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman, I disagree with Member Hutchinson. I don't know whether he was in the hall when I spoke. We are concerned here with the careful use of language to avoid a lot of litigation and I repeat that in the first unchanged sentence of this section, the word "persons" is used and it has different meaning, depending upon the application of the mixture of rights in that first sentence. And if the committee wishes to adopt the proposed change, I simply was pointing out that there was no use in the same section in putting on our courts the problem of interpretation. If we mean these things, let's say them. Because if I were a judge I'd be a bit confused if a body — a legislature or a convention such as this — gave me in 50 words the use of the word "persons" twice when they meant different things in the use of the word "persons".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to point out again that obviously the courts came to the right decision in interpreting the old original language in referring to a person as being an individual in the first right guaranteed the witness against himself. And it came to the right conclusion with regard to the second right, referring to life, liberty and property without due process of law, because it is true that an entity can hold property, but an entity doesn't have life and I don't think it has liberty. It has property.

But now, then, we are talking about the treatment before investigations, proceedings and hearings. And I say to you again, a fair expectation is that in interpreting the words "persons" there, the courts would revert to the concept of the individual again because it is only the individual that this sentence can actually apply to.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Austin on the Habermehl amendment to the Cudlip amendment.

MR. AUSTIN: I am inclined to agree with Delegate Hutchinson and I am wondering if the language of the Cudlip amendment is necessary inasmuch as these entities are represented by individuals or persons. So I am wondering if Mr. Hutchinson would like to suggest along with me that perhaps we ought to get along without this additional language.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Yes.

MR. AUSTIN: I would be inclined then to oppose the Cudlip amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Habermehl amendment to the Cudlip amendment.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: If it is in order, I want to support the Cudlip amendment and disagree respectfully with Senator Hutchinson on the question that he raises about a corporation or legal entity not being subject to the same sort of abuses we are talking about here.

I don't want to appear to be pleading the case of corporations but I can visualize situations — and I think this is one of the things that came to light while we were talking about the word "proceedings" — when, for example, a state agency is establishing rates for utilities and, although the individuals representing the utility company appearing before the agency may themselves be treated fairly, it's entirely possible that the proceedings might take a turn where the business reputation of the corporation is affected in a way that cannot be successfully defended against.

And when you get to the unincorporated associations and the others — I remember not so long ago in this state when we were reading a lot of stories about our state university that were disturbing to us and arose out of hearings that were being held over here in the legislature. And I don't know what the rights of the university as an entity might be in that case, but if there is a way that we can be sure that when the reputation of something such as one of our universities or a corporation, if you please, for private profit is impaired by the nature of the proceedings and we can do something here to prevent this as indicated by the Cudlip amendment, I think we should support it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Ostrow for the purpose of discussing the Habermehl amendment to the Cudlip amendment.

MR. OSTROW: I disagree with Mr. Hutchinson because a corporation can be unjustly treated by any one of a dozen different administrative departments in the matter of issuing licenses or cancelling licenses or assessing penalties in this day and age when so many small businesses are incorporated. We're not just talking about large corporations. We're talking about the little ones too. They can be pushed around. It's just as important that they receive fair and just treatment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: I just wanted to ask Delegate Hutchinson a question as to whether or not he didn't believe that a witness before such a body could be treated with the utmost courtesy but be required to do an act that would be grossly unfair to the organization that he represents.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Will you give me a hypothetical illustration?

MR. HABERMEHL: I will. I can recall a certain organization that was asked to submit the entire list of its membership. Certainly, that could not have been — had it been done politely — an unfair treatment of the individual that was appearing. But I believe the courts held it was unfair to the organization.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to reply that apparently that matter was something that was taken care of without this additional language in the constitution. The courts found an unfairness, even though we didn't spell it out in the constitution. Then maybe it's not necessary to spell it out in the constitution.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I wish to ask a question of Mr. Habermehl regarding his amendment, and that is this: as I understand it, a voluntary association is never a legal entity; it's merely a descriptive phrase used to define an association of individuals, and as such, no voluntary association can sue or be sued except by listing all of the names of the individuals. I raise that question with the thought in mind that perhaps the word "persons" alone is sufficient to cover voluntary associations.

MR. HABERMEHL: Technically, Mr. Wanger, a voluntary association is a partnership. You are right in that it couldn't sue or be sued but I assume that it could be called before one of these investigatory bodies and be asked questions concerning the entire organization.

MR. WANGER: If they are a partnership, then would not the word firm be sufficient to cover that?

MR. HABERMEHL: I don't know the legal definition of the word firm.

MR. WANGER: I remain at the microphone merely for the purpose, Mr. Chairman, of raising a point of order should any subsequent speaker fail to confine himself to the Habermehl amendment before it is acted on.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair will try to accede to that request.

Mr. Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me what we are bogged down here with is choosing the right words after we have a pretty well understood idea of what the consensus of the committee is, and I take it that the consensus of the committee is that the protection afforded should go not only to individuals but to all types of business entities. The only problem is we don't know how to describe them. Perhaps if we did try to describe them, we start running into too many words and we start reading like a statute rather than a constitution.

Now, I know when we try and work these things out immediately on the floor — we had this problem before, last week, when we tried to do this — we just don't have enough time or enough immediate knowledge. And I am wondering, as a practical matter, when the style and drafting committee knows what the intent of the group is — and it is only a case of putting in the right words — if we can't save a lot of time in this kind of situation, both right here today and on ones we will have in the future, if we could pass the proposal and allow style and drafting, which has to come back to us, to make the necessary corrections and rely upon the judgment of style and drafting that if they feel that the words as passed don't represent the feeling of the committee, to call it to our attention, because under the rules it may do so. Because I fear that as this committee goes along, if we don't do something like this, we are going to have many cases where we know what we want but we don't how to say it. And if we try to work it out on the floor, we will be here for a long, long time.

Now, I might also say that a similar problem came up on the construction of the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution where the word "citizens" as referring to equal protection of the laws and the word "persons" as referring to due process were used. And I know that the courts have construed a person as a corporation under the due process and I am inclined to feel that Senator Hutchinson is right in this case but since we don't really know, I think we ought to refer this matter to the style and drafting committee.

MR. WANGER: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: What is your point?

MR. WANGER: I respectfully raise the point of order that the delegate is not speaking now on the subject of the Habermehl amendment but rather on the Cudlip amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Have you any comment to make?

MR. ALLEN: I think it applies to both. In other words, I think we are working out words here.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Continue, Mr. Allen.

MR. ALLEN: That was all I had anyway. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair will recognize Miss Donnelly on the Habermehl amendment.

MISS DONNELLY: Well, I would like to first support the Habermehl amendment but more substantially to support the Cudlip amendment, and I must take exception with our good senator because I do feel that corporations may be substantially injured and that it is —

MR. WANGER: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: What is your point?

MR. WANGER: The speaker is not confining herself to the Habermehl amendment, which is the subject before the committee.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The point is well taken. The question is on the Habermehl amendment. Miss Donnelly, do you care to continue on the Habermehl amendment?

MISS DONNELLY: I yield to Mr. Cudlip.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: I wish to speak to the Habermehl amendment because I think I know what I want to say in the amendment. Mr. Habermehl wants to say something else and that's fine with me. But I do want to point out that these voluntary associations which he refers to are common law associations; they have no corporate status. Most of our trade associations are not incorporated; they are voluntary common law associations. They can sue and be sued as such without listing all the members. I just want to make that observation. It is my opinion as a lawyer, pertinent to the point raised by Mr. Habermehl.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Tubbs on the Habermehl amendment.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I want to speak to all amendments. It seems to me that this is a pioneering piece of constitutional literature. We are trying to throw a cloak around the shoulders of witnesses. If we can't throw a cloak, let's at least give them a fig leaf. After all, that's the pioneering piece of protective clothing, isn't it? (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Mahinske on the Habermehl amendment.

MR. MAHINSKE: As I understand the remarks just made by Mr. Cudlip, he has no objection to the Habermehl amendment and I have no objections to the Habermehl amendment. It seems to me we are all talking about the same thing. I was wondering if Mr. Habermehl would yield to a substitution of his amendment and include the words after "person", "natural or otherwise," which would be all inclusive, and go on from this point.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do you care to answer, Mr. Habermehl?

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Mahinske, probably you can inform me on this. Would that cover anything but persons and corporations who would be covered under your language? Would it cover voluntary associations?

MR. MAHINSKE: I think it would because we had the argument from Mr. Ostrow and Senator Hutchinson here where we talk about the voluntary associations that have no legal identity as such. We are still talking about persons, whether they are called in as persons or as a natural person or otherwise, and they are covered under any construction of what their entity amounts to here.

MR. HABERMEHL: If that is so, I have no particular pride of authorship in the words "voluntary associations". I would yield, however, to Mr. Cudlip. Of course, this would affect his amendment too.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: I don't believe you are talking about my matter now. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Habermehl amendment to the Cudlip amendment.

Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of the Habermehl amendment because the subject matter was something that I raised. The only reason why I suggested that perhaps we might avoid all of this language is that it does appear that it is persons who do appear before these organizations, that is, these governmental organizations representing other organizations. But if we are going to have the Cudlip amendment, I certainly feel that the Habermehl amendment is appropriate.

I would like also to address just a few remarks to the remarks made by Mr. Cudlip in regard to the right of unincorporated groups to sue and be sued and so on. We are not talking about the courts now, as I understand it. We are talking about appearances before governmental agencies and it is not just a matter of whether they can be sued or not be sued. I believe that these voluntary organizations or associations do need to be included. Just as an example, I would like to remind you that there are such things as neighborhood clubs that may want to appear before zoning boards and so on and they are certainly entitled to proper consideration.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Habermehl amendment to the Cudlip amendment.

As many as are in favor of the Habermehl amendment to the Cudlip amendment will signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment to the amendment is adopted.

The question now is on the Cudlip amendment as amended. As many as are in favor of the Cudlip amendment will signify by saying aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendment, as amended, is adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Lundgren offers the following amendment to section 16:

1. Amend page 4, line 4, after "law.", by striking out the balance of the section.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Lundgren amendment.

Mr. Lundgren.

MR. LUNDGREN: Mr. Chairman, I offer that as a substitute for the following purpose; with all the discussion we've had here this afternoon, I feel that the language of the original section should be carried forward and the new language deleted that the committee has brought forth. So far this afternoon, I've heard no substantial argument that changes my opinion that the old section was proper. The courts have interpreted it many times, they have found favor with it. Therefore, I just ask that we delete the new language and revert back to the old section. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Lundgren amendment.

As many as are in favor of the amendment will signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted.

Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the amendments on file to section 16, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: If not, section 16 will be passed.

Section 16, as amended, is passed.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to interpose any will of mine here but it is obvious that we are not going to be able to complete all of the consideration of the bill of rights at this sitting. I was wondering if, in view of the hour, the chairman of the committee might not think that it was time that the committee did rise. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I was hoping that we could finish 2 more sections before we adjourned. I see no reason to be in any hurry. (laughter and applause)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The secretary will read section 17.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 17.

[Sec. 17 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, here is one in which we do not anticipate any amount of argument. (laughter) We feel that it is purely noncontroversial. The purpose of this provision is merely to provide that no person shall be disqualified to testify in court because of any religious belief or lack of belief. A person who cannot take an oath because of his religion or lack of religion is of course permitted to testify after an affirmation. This has been in a long time. We think it is sufficient. It has nothing to do with religious liberty and so forth. That is why we did not see fit to attach it to section 3. This has to do with witnesses in court, their qualifications, nothing else. With those few remarks, I think the matter should be settled.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to Section 17?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: If not, it will be passed.

Section 17 is passed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 18.

[Sec. 18 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, in this case we did have suggestions of amendments. If you will read your comment there:

[The comment to Sec. 18 was read by Mr. Stevens. For text see above, page 465.]

In other words, we recommend the retention of the present provision of the 1908 Constitution.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 18?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Nord has the following amendment:

1. Amend page 4, line 14, after "true" by striking out "and" and inserting "or"; so the language will then read, ". . . and, if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous is true or was published with good motives. . . ."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, the suggestion I have to make here is not a change in language, really, even though it has been performed in one word. It is a substantive matter and I might say that it has been called to the attention of all the delegates by virtue of the Comparative Analysis of the Michigan Constitution put out by the citizens research council, which in volume 1, part 2, on page 4, makes this comment:

> Probably no change is necessary although there are good reasons for eliminating the requirement that the jury must find in truth that it was published with good motives and justifiable ends before acquitting the accused.

The question is, why require more burdensome defense in a criminal libel case than in a civil libel case? That is the exact question I would like to address myself to.

First of all, I would like to point out that in the committee report there seems to be an unquestioning assumption which on the other hand is unquestionably not so. It is made twice and is incorrect. The 2 points in the comment — first of all it is stated that the committee carefully considered removing the entire subject of criminal libel. Now, I did not make that motion. I don't know who did. But I notice right after that it says this, "But it believes that the defenses of truth, good motives and justifiable ends constitute an adequate protection . . ." and it goes on. The point is that it says "the defenses", in the plural. It lists 3 defenses: truth is a defense, good motives is a defense, and justifiable ends is a defense. And it is made perfectly clear that they mean them, they assume them to be 3 separate defenses because not only is the word defenses used, which is the plural, but then they say constitute, which is also the plural form of the verb.

Finally, in the last paragraph of the comment we again have similar language:

> "Again, the guarantees of the section with respect to defenses of truth, motives and justifiable ends appear to be adequate for this purpose also."

My comment is this, if there were defenses of that type, there is no question in my mind that the language would be all right; that this section would be all right. But the trouble is there are no such defenses. There is no defense of truth to criminal libel; there is no defense of good motives and there is no defense of justifiable ends. There is only one defense which requires all 3 jointly to be present. That's quite a big difference.

Criminal libel, as pointed out by the citizens research — and I checked that myself; I checked all the cases on criminal libel, there are actually very few — and there is actually no holding one way or the other. It is mere dictum. But it has always been construed the same way in this state and many states which have the same kind of provision; that the defense to criminal libel with language of this type is not just truth but truth plus a good motive or truth plus a good motive and good justifiable end as we have here.

Therefore, in uniform construction language of this type there is substantive law which says in the case of criminal libel, when you have language of this type, truth is not a defense. If you told the truth and if in addition to telling the truth, you had a good motive but you didn't have a good justifiable end, that is to say, there was no reason for you to say so — you said the truth because you thought the truth should be said, but actually it need not have been said, there was no reason objectively to say it — if any one of those 3 things is missing, even though you have one or two of them, you are guilty of criminal libel.

Now, in retortive libel in civil law that's not so. In retortive libel and slander, truth is a defense. I checked the civil law in Michigan on that too. Strangely enough, I didn't find any cases which established that point firmly. There are very few cases in the supreme court, either on criminal or civil law in Michigan, but in all the textbooks, for example, Prosser on Torts, it is stated categorically as it is by the citizens research council, that truth is a defense to civil libel and in criminal libel, truth is not a defense.

It seems to me this is not a trivial matter. If truth is not a defense in a criminal case, it means if you tell the truth you can be punished criminally. Why that should be I haven't got the slightest idea. I don't know that anybody knows why you should be punished when you tell the truth; why you can't be punished civilly and yet you can be punished criminally. This, of course, has never been done as far as I know in this state.

But there is the language. There is no law and it is a terrific blow to freedom of speech. It is a very grave impairment of freedom of speech. And I note that this is in the constitution in the bill of rights, which purports to increase or to guarantee and secure the rights of the individual and here actually it tends to reduce it.

I believe that the committee is correct in saying that if there are those 3 defenses, there certainly should be a crime for criminal libel. But if there are not those 3 defenses, there should not be. I don't believe it is necessary that there be 3 separate defenses. I think the law should be the same in criminal and civil libel. That could be done by only changing one of the "ands" to "or" and not the other.

The language that I suggested would do this, it would establish 2 defenses. The first defense would be truth. If a statement is true you could not be charged with criminal libel. The other defense requires 2 things, just as in civil law: good motive and justifiable ends. In the civil law of libel or slander, you have a qualified privilege to state things that even are not true, provided you had good motive and there were justifiable ends. In criminal law, the result would be the same, provided this one word was the same.

Therefore, in view of the fact that the committee relies on the fact that truth is a defense and in view of the fact that truth is not a defense and in view of the fact that as I see it, truth ought to be a defense, we need to make some change, in my opinion, not just in the language but in the law, and it could be accomplished the way I suggested. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, the committee realizes this situation. This has been the law for a long time. About the only use made of it is where somebody has used this libel or slander against the government, usually when they desire to overthrow the government.

Now, what Dr. Nord suggests would, to some extent at least, change this provision which we have had for all this time which is not much used. There are few cases on it because the question has seldom been raised. I don't think the committee at this time is willing to agree to the change. Of course, that does not prevent him from offering an amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen on the Nord amendment.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I could go part of the way with Dr. Nord. I think it might be sufficient that the statement was true to make it a defense, but I would be extremely reluctant to create the alternative defense which he now suggests: that a statement which was made with the knowledge that it was false would nevertheless be immune from prosecution if it were made with good motive and for justifiable ends. I think in effect what that defense would be is that the end justifies the means and I would be extremely reluctant to go that far. For that reason, in its present form I would have to oppose the Nord amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I believe Mr. Van Dusen's point is well taken and I think that the proper form—and I would ask leave of the Chair to amend or revise my amendment and rather than changing the word "and" to "or", I would move to strike in lines 14 and 15 the following words: "and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends". I believe Mr. Van Dusen's point is well taken. This would satisfy him and it would satisfy me. I believe it would be a step in the right direction.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and Dr. Nord, this would indeed satisfy me.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, the committee is not prepared to accept or to recommend adoption of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Young, did you care to speak?

MR. YOUNG: Mr. Van Dusen raised my objection.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Nord has withdrawn his first amendment and in lieu thereof offers this one:

1. Amend page 4, line 14, after "true" by striking out "and was published with good motives and justifiable ends"; so the language will then read, ". . . and, if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous is true, the accused shall be acquitted."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the Nord amendment.

Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I must state respectfully that the amendment does not satisfy me and I would oppose it for the following reasons, as indicated by Mr. Stevens: the history of criminal prosecution for libel is almost entirely confined to statements which are made when the security of the state itself is in peril.

It is possible for someone to give a statement which, taken out of context, is true; but which, if it was stated or if it was published not out of good motive or justifiable ends, could very seriously jeopardize the security of the state. While this does not often occur in a society such as we know it, it occurred very frequently in the society of our forefathers. I suggest therefore, on that basis, that we should leave all 3 of these requirements in the amendment. On those perhaps rare occasions when criminal prosecutions for libel are brought for the slandering of individuals, I would like to state that I think again in that case it is only brought when pursuant to a law which clearly indicates that those individuals have been slandered in a particularly gross or unusual way and would call to mind the statement, I believe, of the poet who said:

> He who steals my purse steals trash; but he who filches from me my good name takes that which not enriches him but makes me poor indeed.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Brown on the Nord amendment.

MR. T. S. BROWN: For the sake of brevity, Mr. Chairman, I agree with Mr. Wanger. He stated my arguments.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Ford on the Nord amendment.

MR. FORD: I'd like to follow Ted and agree with Mr. Wanger and call Mr. Nord's attention to the fact that apparently now he would limit this by saying that once you've proved it's true — it doesn't matter for what purpose — you publish it and you are home free. And I submit very briefly that if Mr. Nord had participated in small town politics for very long he might not be agreeable to letting certain irresponsible people get off the hook that easily with some of the things they put out sometimes in the heat of battle.

I can think very quickly of numerous instances, but something we should have before us when we think about this is this: that the statute establishing criminal libel is rather limited and I can't recite it because I haven't had this in front of me since I was a justice of the peace, but it is something that comes up frequently as a method of stopping trouble between people who are wrangling and you sometimes get these people in and explain the law of criminal libel to them and they quit the name calling across the back fence.

So it is something that doesn't get to the supreme court but it is something that is discussed at the local level quite frequently and it is limited to, as I recall, impugning a person's professional reputation, impugning to a person the fact that he has committed a crime, suggesting that a person has a loathsome disease, I believe is the expression they use — oh yes, and protecting, of course, the good name of a female. You can't suggest that a woman is unchaste (laughter) c-h-a-s-t-e. (laughter)

Now, if we look at this defense of truth alone being enough with just these instances in mind, I think you'll see that it's not unreasonable. I'm a little bit surprised also, Mel, because generally you take the position of being the outstanding defender of the individual and really, here the liberal point of view in my mind is to defend the person who is libeled against more strenuously than the person who is prone to make the libel or publish the libel. When people talk, I think it is a legitimate exercise of the police power to guarantee use against irresponsible language, as Mr. Wanger has pointed out, that deprives us of that which is most valuable to us.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I would like to point out that the definition of libel given by Mr. Ford is no different from the definition of libel in civil law and in civil law the same remark, if true, is not actionable. I don't know why there is any place in the world whatever — this place or any place else — why something that is not a civil wrong should be a crime. If it is perfectly O.K. in civil law, why should the same remark be punished by criminal penalty?

I might say I forgot to bring my badge marked "liberal" today. It is difficult for me to tell anyone whether something is liberal or not. I figure if I say it, it turns out to be liberal, but not vice versa. (laughter) I can't tell that way. (laughter)

The point I am making is this, what I am trying to do is protect a person against the state. In criminal libel the state is the one that is getting excited, not some person. If a person is injured, he brings his own lawsuit and he loses in this case because the remark is true; but the state doesn't lose. They go ahead and bring the suit and they exercise the power of the state over the individual and the individual will lose. Not only will he lose — he wins in civil law — but he ends up in jail.

Now, there is nothing in the definition of criminal libel which says it is restricted to remarks against the government. As far as I can recall, all the cases in Michigan — the few that have been brought on criminal libel — have nothing to do with the government at all. They were just private remarks and I believe they were, as far as I can recall, against public officials running for office or in office. They were not against the government and they were cases of criminal libel.

The point is this, it is a fortunate thing that we live in a state where the state has never attempted to abuse this right. I don't foresee any case where they would. This is not a campaign to stop an existing abuse. But I see it as a wrong principle. It's a principle that says if the state wishes, it may put you in jail simply for telling the truth. Why should the state be able to put you in jail simply for telling the truth? That passes my understanding.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: Strange as it may seem, I am in opposition to Mr. Nord on this when I've been supporting him throughout, but I will agree with Mr. Ford and Mr. Wanger that I think this is an entirely different issue, that when we are getting into the burden of the state and the civil, the difference is, you forget in the civil you have to prove damages. I will certainly stipulate as Mr. Ford has indicated — the 4 actions he has stated as libel, per se, presume damages. Beyond there you have a burden of proof for some kind of damages sufficient to collect something.

In this instance when it has been printed sufficiently to harm an individual, they have been able to go forward to such a degree that the individual who has been so libeled cannot say a retraction is sufficient because how many retractions have you ever seen that are as big and as blatant as the original publication? So I believe that this language should be best left as it is and in addition to that, again historically, this is rather well expressed, defined and understood.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, I rise to support Mr. Nord's amendment and to welcome him to the fold too. I think the truth should be a defense against the state or against an individual. I see no reason why speculation or guesswork about the motive should be indulged in. I think the amendment is proper.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment.

Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: I think the right question for me to ask is, how do I get into the Republican caucus? But I won't ask that question. (laughter) But I would like to answer Miss Donnelly. Miss Donnelly and I are usually in agreement and she says this time she is not and I hate to see a woman in the wrong. But she is. Not only that, she's wrong twice. I believe she said that damages need to be proved in a civil case of libel. I believe I understood her to say that. As I understand the law of libel — and I will say I looked this one up too — and it is not clear in Michigan but the common law — and I believe it is the same in Michigan, I've seen nothing to the contrary — is that no damages need to be proved in a civil case of libel nor do they, of course, in a criminal case. There is no difference as far as I can make out there.

I wouldn't like to deceive you. There is a difference someplace else. I think it would be unfair not to mention it now that I have mentioned this point. There is a difference, of course, and the difference is this: in civil law, libel does not require any wrongful intent whatever. It doesn't even require an intentional publication. It could be even a negligent publication. In criminal libel it is true that there is a higher requirement. You must have mens rea. That is to say, you must intend to commit the wrong. There is some difference but not on the point of damage.

Also, there is no difference with respect to retraction. Retraction is not a defense either in civil or criminal law. There are differences, of course, it's true, the main difference being that you cannot be convicted of a criminal libel if you didn't intentionally make the statement and if you didn't intend to do wrong. Actually you must intend to do wrong. There must be mens rea in libel. But nevertheless, the question still is: suppose you intend to do wrong. That really is what it boils down to. Suppose you do have an improper motive, intend to do wrong. Let's face it. You intend to do wrong but you tell the truth. Should the government be able to stop you from telling the truth even if you have a wrongful motive? That is really the issue. And I think if you think the reverse of the way I do, you could decide the opposite way. But the issue does boil down to that. If you have a wrongful motive and tell the truth, should you be put in prison or should you be subject to be put in prison?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, since Delegate Everett rose here it gave me a little courage because I raised this point in the judicial committee and was asked where I went to law school. I am in agreement with Delegate Nord. It seems to me inconsistent to have a higher burden of proof on the defense in a criminal proceeding than it is in a civil. The real question here is where the burden of proof is and the degree to which it is required.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the proposition advanced by Mr. Nord. (laughter) You know, we live across the street and we share a community of interest and geographical proximity in this convention and I can only say we have been very objective with each other all through the convention and we are trying to do so now.

The main idea, as I see it, is the area in which this particular problem most frequently arises, namely in relation to newspaper attacks upon individuals. It seems to me that newspapers could publish a list of those who commit a felony and then say, "Well, we were able to prove that the man committed a felony," and therefore they don't have to be put in a position of proving they did it with good motives and justifiable ends. And I think this is the main area in which we ought to appraise this particular problem, in the light of experience, and not merely the precise laudable logic that Mr. Nord has on this and many other matters.

I think that I would support the propositions that were advanced by Delegates Ford and Brown and urge that the committee recommendation be accepted in this connection.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, just a point of information of Dr. Nord, and of Mr. Van Dusen insofar as he spoke on the subject. Would the change in the language that you have talked to, change the burden of proof in a sense from ". . . and was published without malicious motive or intent, the accused shall be acquitted?"

MR. NORD: In my opinion, the burden of proof is still on the prosecution in any event. It has been stated here that the burden of proof is greater on the defense. There is no real burden of proof on the defense in a criminal case. The point is, though, that in order to succeed, the defendant will have to turn out, even though the prosecution has the burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt, and the prosecution will not have to negative as many things.

In the present law the prosecution only has to negative one thing, any one of those 3 things. It has to negative that the statement was true or that it was made with fair motives, or whatever the third thing is—justifiable purpose. It only has to negative any one of those beyond a reasonable doubt. Under the provision as we have it before us now, it would have to make it a negative one, one specific one, not any other one. True. So it is not a question of shifting the burden of proof.

I would say further in connection with the remarks of Mr. Norris, whom I was expecting to have dinner with this evening before he spoke (laughter) — that there is protection for people who are in the position that he mentioned. If a newspaper should make a list of persons who previously committed felonies with no reason whatever, Mr. Justice Brandeis has solved the problem, I believe, a long time ago. He invented a tort special for that kind of a case — the invasion of privacy — so the individual will have recourse in civil law. I think what we have to take into account is that there is a menace here with the state acting against an individual just because they don't like him when he has told the truth. I don't think we should ignore that.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: I am prepared to offer a motion, Mr. Chairman, if there is some chance of disposing of this briefly but I won't make the motion until I am satisfied that this section can be disposed of.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Three more delegates have requested to speak on the Nord amendment.

MR. POLLOCK: Briefly? (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair hopes.

Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I'll try to be brief. I'm inclined to agree with Professor Nord except that it seems to me that there is a definite inconsistency between the laws of criminal libel and civil libel and specifically I think that the area where the correction is needed is in the area of civil libel. Now, he has mentioned this right of privacy, which is an emerging field of law and I don't think it has emerged very far in the state of Michigan but perhaps there is hope in that area. My other comment was with regard to the burden of proof; of course, in a criminal case this is entirely different and negates much of what Dr. Nord said, but it was also brought to our attention by Dr. Nord. Beyond that, I don't think I'll prolong the debate. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the Nord amendment. As many as are in favor of the amendment will signify by saying aye. Opposed?

The amendment is not adopted.

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: What about the motion now on the section?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Will you wait just a minute, please? Are there any further amendments to section 18? If not, it will be passed.

Section 18 is passed.

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, would you correct me if I am wrong? I did not hear you put the final question on section 16 as amended. Do you have a record at the desk there of having done that? We adopted the Cudlip amendment and I didn't hear you put the final motion on section 16.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Section 16, as amended, has been passed.

MR. POLLOCK: Thank you. That means then that we have passed everything up to section 19.

DELEGATES: No.

MR. POLLOCK: Yes, we passed over one, I understand. And since section 19 is likely to be another field day for the legal profession, (laughter) I move, Mr. Chairman, that the committee do now rise and report to the convention.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Pollock, before we put the motion, are you going to prepare the revised comments for section 14?

MR. POLLOCK: Yes. That is in process now.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: As many as are in favor of the motion that the committee do now rise, signify by saying aye. Opposed?

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, Vice President Hutchinson assumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration a certain proposal. They made several amendments thereto and the secretary will make a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 15, made several amendments thereto, and come to no final resolution thereon.

The committee of the whole recommends that the reasons supporting Committee Proposal 15, relative to section 14 of article II, be revised by the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections.

This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the recommendation is concurred in and the revision so ordered.

The Chair would like to make one announcement. The Chair would like to announce that today our secretary resigned as secretary of the senate. Faced with the choice of serving us or serving the senate for a thirtieth year as secretary, Mr. Chase chose to continue as secretary of this convention.

[Whereupon Secretary Chase was given a standing ovation.]

SECRETARY CHASE: Thank you, ladies and gentlemen. After the vote that you gave me on October 3, I didn't see how I could do otherwise.

I have the following announcements:

The committee on executive branch will meet immediately following the adjournment of this session this afternoon. Dan Karn, first vice chairman.

The committee on public information will meet Monday immediately following the session. Ink White, chairman.

The committee on judicial branch will meet Friday at 8:00 in the morning. The meeting scheduled for today is cancelled.

The committee on local government will meet in room A Friday afternoon and evening, all day Saturday and all day Monday, if necessary. Arthur Elliott, chairman.

The committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E January 12, tomorrow, at 8:00 o'clock a.m. D. Hale Brake, chairman. In addition to its regular schedule, the committee on finance and taxation will meet at 9:00 o'clock a.m. on Wednesday, January 17 and carry through until 12:00 o'clock.

Due to the lateness of the hour, the subcommittee on metropolitan government, committee of local government, will not meet today. They have a meeting scheduled for tomorrow at 8:30 in the morning.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Beaman.

MR. BEAMAN: I would just like to make an announcement. I just had word from Jackson that Delegate Jim Thomson is feeling better today but will have to remain in the hospital for another week. He is at Mercy Hospital in Jackson.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Thank you, Mr. Beaman. Without objection, Mr. Thomson will be excused from the sessions of next week. The Chair hears no objection. It is so ordered.

SECRETARY CHASE: We have the following requests for leaves of absence:

Mr. Snyder wishes to be excused from the session of next Monday; Mr. Lawrence from the session of tomorrow; Mr. Bentley from the session of Monday. Mr. Nisbet would like to be excused from the session tomorrow. He is scheduled to speak at a state wide school administration meeting in Grand Rapids tonight and 2 groups in western Michigan tomorrow. Mr. Kelsey and Mr. Liberato request leave from tomorrow's session. Mr. McAllister wishes to be excused from the session of tomorrow to attend a special meeting of the Huron county board of supervisors to discuss constitutional questions.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the several requests will be granted. The Chair hears no objection and it is so ordered.

Are there any further announcements?

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the announcements, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. President, I would like to anticipate favorable action on the motion I am about to make. I do now move that this convention adjourn.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Farnsworth moves that the convention do now adjourn. As many as are in favor, say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The convention stands adjourned until tomorrow morning at 10:00 a.m.

[Whereupon, at 5:55 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 10:00 o'clock a.m., Friday, January 12, 1962.]

FIFTY-SIXTH DAY

Friday, January 12, 1962, 10:00 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: The convention will please come to order. Would the delegates please be seated.

The invocation will be given by the Right Reverend Monsignor Jerome V. MacEachin of St. Thomas Aquinas Church, East Lansing.

MONSIGNOR MacEACHIN: O God, divine protector of all who place their trust in Thee, accept this humble homage of our love and of our faith. Direct by Thy holy inspiration, this constitutional convention. Dedicate it to the noble purpose of preserving and extending the blessings of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness to all the people of this sovereign state of Michigan.

O Holy Spirit of God, grant divine wisdom to the delegates to know and to understand their duties to Thee and to the people whom they represent. Give them unflinching courage to humbly and effectively translate responsibility into dedicated work, to the final accomplishment of the unfinished task which they have so nobly begun. Protect them from vain complacency, from foolish compromise, from false enthusiasm, from loss of respect for human dignity. Inflame their hearts with such zeal for God's honor and glory and our country's welfare that in all their deliberations and endeavors they shall seek to render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's and to God the things that are God's. These blessings we ask through God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Spirit. Amen.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Thank you. The roll call will be taken. All those present, vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted?

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave:

Messrs. Garvin and Kuhn; from today's session.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Garvin, Kelsey, Mrs. Koeze, Messrs. Kuhn, Liberato, Martin, McAllister, Nisbet and Thomson.

Absent without leave: Mr. Marshall.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Without objection, Mr. Marshall is excused.

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Erickson, for the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, introduces Committee Proposal 21, A proposal pertaining to the division of the powers of government. Amends article IV; with the recommendation that it pass.

Claud R. Erickson, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 21 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 600.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Martin, for the committee on executive branch, introduces Committee Proposal 22, A proposal pertaining to state civil service. Amends article VI, section 22;

with the recommendation that it pass.

John B. Martin, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 22 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 637.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Brake, for the committee on finance and taxation, introduces

Committee Proposal 23, A proposal to prohibit the issuance of evidences of state indebtedness, except as authorized by the constitution, to authorize state borrowing and prescribe the method therefor, to limit the use of state credit and to permit the loaning of state funds to school districts under certain conditions, and covering the general subject matter found in sections 11, 10, 12 and 28 of article X of the 1908 constitution;

with the recommendation that it pass.

D. Hale Brake, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 23 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 602.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Brake, for the committee on finance and taxation, introduces

Exclusion Report 2007, A report recommending the exclusion of article X, section 27.

D. Hale Brake, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2007 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 707.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on administration, by Mr. DeVries, chairman, submits the following report to the constitutional convention and recommends its adoption:

1. That the budget be amended by adding item "0. Michigan constitutional convention handbooks — $2,086.60", that the Contingency fund of $23,897.68 be reduced by this amount leaving a balance of $21,811.08.

2. That the following transfers be made to the Contingency fund from:

B.	Office supplies and printed matter
	2. Journal (Speaker-Hines and Thomas)	$25,000
C.	Rental and lease of building
	1. Civic center	3,000
D.	Other contractual services
	5. Convention reporter	5,000
	6. Police	2,000
F.	Telephone
	2. Toll calls	5,000
G.	Fees and compensation
	1. Mileage and subpoena fees for persons called before convention committees	4,000
I.	Travel and subsistence
	2. Reimbursement for committee trips	26,000
J.	Educational supplies and library
	2. Additional materials	800
	Eisenhower fund balance	256.75
	Total transfers	71,056.75
	Contingency fund balance	21,811.08
	Total	$92,867.83

3. That the following transfers be made from the Contingency fund to:

A.	Rental, lease and purchase of equipment	$19,000
B.	Office supplies and printed matter
	3. Office supplies	7,500
D.	Other contractual services
	2. Sound system	4,000
	3. Clipping service	100
	4. Freight for chairs	700
H.	Maintenance services	1,500
	Total transfers	32,800
	Contingency fund balance	$60,067.83

Walter DeVries, chairman.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President and fellow delegates, the committee on administration, not to be outdone by Governor Swainson and President Kennedy, has prepared for you its "state of the budget" message. We are happy to report to you in the second annual budget message that: one, we have a balanced budget. Our appropriations are within our revenues. We have $920,000 earmarked for operations. We have spent as of December 31, $447,211.00, for a balance of $472,789.00. Our economy is sound and we have projected our budget to May 15, as we did at the beginning of the convention.

What we are asking you to do today is to transfer some line items in our budget in order that we can bring the budget into balance. We have overexpended in some line items. Item 2 in the report on your desk is designed to accomplish that, to take some money from the contingency fund and place it into these various items, so that the budget will be balanced.

The second thing we are asking you to do is to transfer into the contingency fund excess moneys which resulted from economies effected by the convention and the committee on administration.

Mr. President, I move the adoption of this report.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: The question is on concurring in the committee recommendation. All those in favor, signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The recommendation is concurred in and the budget changes adopted.

Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, I would further move that the budget analysis which accompanies this, that is in Secretary Chase's hands, be considered read and printed in the journal for the benefit and the information of the delegates.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Without objection, it will be so ordered.

Following is the budget analysis as submitted by the committee on administration:

Item Budgeted	Amount Budgeted	Transfer	Amount Expended	Balance
I. Salaries and wages—delegates	$1,080,000.00	$	$ 432,000.00	$ 648,000.00
II. Other salaries, wages, contractual services, supplies, materials, rent and equipment
A. Rental, lease and purchase of equipment	130,622.64	19,000.00	145,385.31	4,237.33
B. Office supplies and printed matter
1. Delegates' stationery (Wellman Press)	2,011.83		2,492.99	—481.16
2. Journal (Speaker-Hines and Thomas)	101,950.00	—25,000.00	12,115.90	64,834.10
3. Office supplies	8,175.00	7,500.00	9,769.51	5,905.49
C. Rental and lease of building
Civic center	114,200.00	—3,000.00	77,900.43	33,299.57
D. Other contractual services
1. TV—closed circuit	4,200.00		3,000.00	1,200.00
2. Sound system	8,000.00	4,000.00	3,889.00	8,111.00
3. Clipping service	400.00	100.00	112.26	387.74
4. Freight for chairs	458.48	700.00	1,115.70	42.78
5. Convention reporter	25,000.00	—5,000.00	1,636.05	18,363.95
6. Police	17,600.00	—2,000.00	8,169.37	7,430.63
E. Postage	15,000.00		8,007.30	6,992.70
F. Telephone	20,000.00	—5,000.00	3,843.70	11,156.30
G. Fees and compensation	6,000.00	—4,000.00	1,265.09	734.91
H. Maintenance services	450.00	1,500.00	1,289.31	660.69
I. Travel and subsistence
1. Delegates—2 monthly trips	46,012.40		23,044.60	22,967.80
2. Reimbursement for committee trips	31,000.00	—26,000.00	2,642.00	2,358.00
J. Educational supplies and library
1. Purchase for library	2,203.90			2,203.90
2. Additional materials	1,000.00	—800.00	76.00	124.00
K. Insurance and bond
1. Fire 2. Comprehensive general liability 3. Bond for finance clerk and secretary of the convention 4. Workmen's compensation on employees	4,455.00		1,963.25	2,491.75
5. Social security — employer	9,879.20		3,040.39	6,838.81
L. Other salaries and wages	329,306.52		129,880.08	199,426.44
M. Contingency fund balance—12/31/61	22,131.38		320.30	60,067.83
N. Office of public information	17,557.05	17,557.05	4,122.61	13,434.44
O. Michigan constitutional convention handbooks	2,086.60	2,086.60	2,086.60
Eisenhower fund	300.00	—256.75	43.25
Subtotal—Category II—12/31/61	920,000.00		447,211.00	472,789.00
Grand total	$2,000,000.00		$ 899,347.90	$1,100,652.10

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the standing committee reports, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Motions and resolutions. Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. President, in accordance with the desire of the convention in the discussion of section 14, the committee on rights and the judiciary committee have now worked over the language in accordance with the desire of the convention, and I should like to move the language which the secretary has in his hands. I might explain before he reads it that it merely eliminates the objectionable part and leaves in the part to which there was no objection. Will the secretary please read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Pollock moves that the journal of January 4, page 280, be corrected by striking out the comment relating to section 14 appearing between the language of sections 14 and 15 and inserting:

"Comment: The foregoing change in section 14 involves the substitution of the double jeopardy provision from the Constitution of the United States (except for the deletion of the obsolete words of "life or limb") in place of the original provision which merely prohibits retrial after "acquittal upon the merits." The former language, the committee points out, has been consistently construed by the Michigan supreme court to mean something quite different than the words on the surface appear to connote. Taken literally, the words appear to say that there is no double jeopardy until a trial has run its course complete to acquittal. In fact, however, the Michigan courts have followed the federal rule on double jeopardy. The new language thus appears to be consistent with the actual practice of the courts in Michigan.".

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Dr. Pollock has moved that the journal be corrected. Do you wish to speak on the motion, Dr. Pollock?

MR. POLLOCK: No, I merely wanted to explain that it was the last part of the comment that has been eliminated, as you will notice, if you followed the reading.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: The question is on the motion. All those in favor will signify by saying aye. Those opposed, no.

The motion prevails and it is so ordered.

[Correction made, see above, page 468.]

Do you have something to say, Mr. Prettie?

MR. PRETTIE: Not at this point, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Thank you, Mr. Prettie.

Any other motions or resolutions?

Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. President, yesterday I spoke concerning the appendix to the report of the rights committee as it is contained on page 283 of the journal of January 4 regarding Committee Proposal 15. I would like at this time to replace, under sections 16 and 19, the comment contained therein, with the following — and I might point out that this came about because at the time that we actually voted on this, the rights committee was awaiting anxiously our final determination to put forth their report. It was not an error but it was a time element.

I would move to strike out our comments regarding sections 16 and 19 under "Appendix" and insert the following, as I read yesterday when we were in the committee of the whole:

"Sec. 16. This committee concurs with the recommendations of the rights committee as they are contained in sentence 1 of said section.

The judicial committee concurs, in principle, with the recommendations set forth in the second sentence of this section but recommends that, in addition to the word "investigations", there should be included the words "proceedings and hearings". The committee was of the opinion, also, that the word "persons" might be expanded to include corporations and business entities in addition to natural persons.

Sec. 19. This committee concurs in the recommendations contained in this section and approves of the word "jurors" in place of the word "citizens" which latter word was the original choice of the committee on rights prior to consultation with the committee on judicial branch. It was the considered opinion of the committee that this would eliminate any confusion and would leave to the legislature the manner of determining the qualifications of jurors.

The following motion was likewise passed by the committee on judicial branch:

"That, by approving or concurring in the recommendations, or any part thereof, of the committee on rights, suffrage and elections, the committee on judicial branch does not necessarily concur in, or agree to, all of the reasons and grounds contained in the report of the committee on rights, suffrage and elections". ".

That should be printed and I request and move the correction be made and that it be printed in the journal.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: The question is on the motion. All those in favor, will signify by saying aye. All those opposed, by no.

The motion prevails and it is so ordered.

[Correction made, see above, page 470.]

Any other motions or resolutions?

General orders. Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, I move the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering certain proposals.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: I think that Mr. Prettie had the floor also.

MR. PRETTIE: For a point of order on the motion now before us, sir.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Will you state your point of order.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I rise to a point of order which I think is pertinent to the motion under consideration and more pertinent to the guidance of us in our future deliberations. To state this point, I must beg the indulgence of this body in referring briefly to excerpts from our journals.

In our proceedings of January 10, at the conclusion of the work of the committee of the whole, the journal reads:

> Mr. Pollock moved the committee rise.
>
> The motion prevailed.
>
> Acting President Romney having assumed the Chair in the absence of the president, the committee, through its chairman, Mr. Baginski, reported back to the convention that it had had under consideration the following entitled committee proposal, had adopted certain amendments thereto and had come to no final resolution thereon:
>
> Committee Proposal 15, A proposal to amend article II pertaining to the declaration of rights.

Passing now to page 308 of the journal of this convention's proceedings for yesterday, January 11, just below the top of the lefthand column, I quote:

> General orders.
>
> Mr. Baginski moved that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for consideration of the general orders.
>
> The motion prevailed, and the president designated Mr. Baginski as chairman.

There follows language which I think not pertinent to the point so I will omit until slightly below the middle of that column. I then quote:

> Mr. Pollock moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendments to section 10 were adopted by the committee of the whole yesterday.
>
> The question being on the motion,
>
> Mr. Van Dusen made a parliamentary inquiry as to whether the motion was in order inasmuch as under rule 40 a motion to reconsider in the committee of the whole shall be in order before the committee shall rise.
>
> The Chair ruled that a motion to reconsider may be made now or before the committee rise, since the committee of the whole has not completed its consideration of Committee Proposal 15.
>
> The question being on the motion to reconsider,
>
> The motion did not prevail on a division vote. (Yeas 67, nays 69).

I think the immediately following language is not pertinent to the point I wish to make. But passing to page 309 at the termination of the deliberations of the committee of the whole, about 2/3 of the way down the lefthand column, I quote:

> Mr. Pollock moved the committee rise.
>
> The motion prevailed.
>
> Acting President Hutchinson, having assumed the Chair in the absence of the president, the committee, through its chairman, Mr. Baginski, reported back to the convention that it had had under consideration the following entitled committee proposal, had adopted certain amendments thereto and had come to no final resolution thereon:
>
> Committee Proposal 15.

Referring now to rule 40, to which Mr. Van Dusen invited attention yesterday, which is found in the rules of this convention at page 47, the rule reads:

> A motion to reconsider shall be in order in the committee of the whole by a majority vote of those present and voting, before the committee shall rise.

Mr. President and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I will recognize that the problem with which we are faced as to whether this committee has risen or not derives from the fact that we have before us for consideration a proposal containing some 22 sections. The problem would not have arisen had we had a committee proposal containing one section.

I am not clear as to whether, as to sections 1 through 18, I believe, upon which we completed deliberations, we have, according to the record — the portions that I have quoted — risen as to those sections or whether if we have not risen. I question whether pending motion to resolve is in order.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: If the Chair understands you, Mr. Prettie, your point of order is that the motion to resolve is not in order?

MR. PRETTIE: That is the point of order that I raise because I am concerned as to whether we have risen under the ruling of the Chair in the committee of the whole as recorded in our journals and which I quoted.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: The Chair rules that the motion of Mr. Baginski to resolve into the committee of the whole is in order.

MR. PRETTIE: I then ask, sir, whether we are now about to resolve into committee of the whole for consideration of those portions of Committee Proposal 15 which have not already been considered adopted or adopted as amended or whether we are still open to consideration of all of the work that we have done in the committee of the whole this week.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: The Chair will rule that we are going through the proposal section by section. When we have completed each section in the proposal, then the entire proposal, as amended within the committee of the whole, is before the committee of the whole for any further action the committee of the whole may or may not wish to take.

MR. PRETTIE: I then wish to appeal from the decision of the Chair and request a division.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: An appeal from the decision of the Chair has been made. The question is: "Shall the judgment of the Chair stand as the judgment of the convention?" Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, speaking to the appeal, Mr. President, I would just like to caution the convention that in handling these appeals, you are writing precedents and it is good practice, let me warn you, to follow proper parliamentary procedure because if you, by your precedents, write some poor law, so to speak, it will come back to plague you on further matters in this convention.

I think that the ruling of the Chair is based upon sound parliamentary practice and it has been advised by our secretary, who is without doubt the outstanding parliamentarian in the state of Michigan. And while it is within the power of this body to overturn that ruling, if you do it and thereby write a precedent, then the next time your precedent now made will bind you and I say it can well come back to plague you.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: Mr. President, if I may, I'd like to ask Mr. Hutchinson a question, if he would be so kind as to answer. Mr. Hutchinson, I'd like to ask your understanding of the ruling of the Chair. As I understand the Chair, the Chair indicated that we were considering Committee Proposal 15 section by section and then when we had completed the consideration of Committee Proposal 15, section by section, then the proposal would be subject to reconsideration. Now, I am not clear whether that means that at any time during the consideration of Committee Proposal 15 we can move for reconsideration of sections previously acted upon or whether it means that at the conclusion of the consideration of all sections, the entire proposal is then subject to reconsideration. It would be helpful to me, at least, to know the meaning of the ruling in that respect.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, in answer to the inquiry of Mr. Romney, let us keep in mind the fact that the committee of the whole, by a majority vote of those voting on a question, can direct the procedure of the committee of the whole; that at any time during the consideration of a proposal or any part thereof, when another motion is not on the floor, a motion to reconsider and go back to a part already considered can be properly made and it can be done. The committee can go back at any time it wants to, to reconsider anything that it has done as to any part of a proposal so long as that proposal is before the committee of the whole.

The procedure is, however, that suppose you don't make any motions to return to any part of it. Then after you get through the whole thing, section by section, the question then is: are there any amendments to Committee Proposal 15? And it is then in order to make further amendments to any part of it.

Now, I don't think that there is an inconsistency there, Mr. Romney. I think the Chair's ruling means that, of course, the Chair recognizes that at any time while Committee Proposal 15 is before the committee of the whole, the committee may by a majority vote take any part of that proposal or go back to any part that it desires; and the meaning of rule 40 is, after you complete the whole proposal, the committee then has risen with regard to that whole proposal. The proposal then is reported back to the convention. Then, of course, the committee can do nothing further with it.

I hope I have made myself clear, Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: You have, and I appreciate that very much. It has clarified the meaning of the rule a great deal for me.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President —

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Mr. Hoxie had asked for the floor first, and then Mr. Bentley.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I am in sympathy with Mr. Prettie's position. I think it is the same question that I raised and received a similar ruling the other day from the Chair.

I also appreciate the importance of the remarks of Delegate Hutchinson that it is unwise for this body to start the practice of overriding the ruling of the Chair. I am not in sympathy with the idea of being in a position to rehash, redebate everything that has been done so far in this convention.

I would like to make a suggestion that we do not indicate our desire to override the Chair and that the rules and resolutions committee consider some possible solution to this question and that is, when we have a proposal with many sections, such as we have before us today, that there is a method whereby debate on those sections that have been considered and adopted by the committee of the whole cannot be reconsidered until a later date on third reading.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I think it might be helpful to call the attention of the delegates to rule 53 on page 51 of your handbooks, which says in part, "Any delegate may move for a reconsideration of any question at the same or next succeeding session of the convention. . . ."
The rest of the sentence is not pertinent.

> A motion to reconsider shall take precedence of all other questions, except a motion to fix the time to which to adjourn, a motion to adjourn and a motion to recess. No motion to reconsider shall be renewed on the same day.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: From a practical standpoint I would just like to point out to this convention that this is the first time that we have had a detailed article introduced as one proposal. You might be interested to know that as the chairman of the committee on local government, having talked to some of our subcommittee chairmen and the vice chairmen, you will not have this problem. We will introduce our article, proposal by proposal, with only 1 or 2 sections at the most within each proposal so that it can be taken care of on the day on which it is passed.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. President and fellow delegates, the astute remarks of persons far wiser than I in matters of parliamentary procedure have convinced me that, as Senator Hutchinson said, our action on my appeal may come back to plague us. The problem, as I mentioned when I raised the question, is one that arises through a committee proposal having many subdivisions. I am in accord with the suggestion made by Mr. Hoxie, whose legislative experience I respect and I request permission to withdraw my appeal and point of order.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Mr. Prettie has withdrawn his appeal and so the decision of the Chair stands.

The question now is on Mr. Baginski's motion that we resolve into committee of the whole.

Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, I just want to agree with Mr. Hoxie and join him in the request that we have a clarification of the rule, if that is deemed advisable by the rules committee. The committee on finance and taxation has before you for Monday night's discussion a proposal with, I think, 5 sections and we shall probably continue to report all those sections dealing with the given subject matter. We don't wish to go back and rehash every day when we meet what we completed the day before.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: The question is on the motion of Mr. Baginski. All those in favor, signify by saying aye. All those opposed, by no.

The ayes have it and Mr. Baginski will chair the committee of the whole.

[Whereupon, Mr. Baginski assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The committee of the whole will be in order. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, Committee Proposal 15, A proposal to amend article II pertaining to the declaration of rights.

The committee has progressed as far as section 19, having completed section 18 yesterday.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 15, see above, page 534.

Section 19.

[Section 19 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: This section will be briefly explained by our Vice Chairman Norris, but before yielding to him, I must say I didn't quite understand what Mr. Elliott meant. Our committee is not apologizing for giving you a whole article together.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, there are 2 changes in this section. I think the first one requires very little elaboration. It is merely to change the word "men" to "jurors" to take into account certain facts of political life in this nation and this state since the Constitution of 1908 and to recognize that women serve as jurors as they are electors in the state of Michigan.

The larger section of this particular matter now on our agenda relates to the right of appeal in a criminal case; and with regard to that, I think we ought to recognize we are dealing here with what is necessary to comport with the watchwords of our constitutional faith, namely, equal justice under law. Now, the defendant's right of appeal in a criminal case is basic to our system of justice. The opportunity for an appeal in a criminal proceeding is a basic feature which has been generally regarded throughout the country as a right. Professor Orfield in a leading study conducted at the Harvard University law school stated:

> In the conduct of a criminal proceeding certain steps are regarded as essential. The accused must be brought before the court. There must be a preliminary investigation to insure that the case is one which should be prosecuted. Notice must be given to the accused of the offense charged. He must have an opportunity to prepare for trial, procure witnesses, and make needed investigations. He should have a speedy trial. He should have a fair trial before an impartial tribunal. Finally, there should be one review of the case as a whole by a suitable appellate tribunal. The principle of the right to appeal in criminal cases is well established in the United States. It is not, however, a requirement of due process of law.

Incorporating the right of appeal into the constitution of Michigan would give greater effect to at least the following 3 functions of an appeal in a criminal case:

First, the chief function of an appeal in a criminal case is to see that justice is done to the public and to the appellant. An innocent defendant should be released. A defendant who did not secure a fair trial should have another trial. The mere existence of the right of appeal in a criminal case causes the trial judge to exercise greater care in the conduct of a trial and all proceedings in his court.

In other words, a criminal appeal should be one of the procedural safeguards provided by the law to protect the rights of the accused. The guarantee of a fair trial strengthens the confidence of the public in the administration of justice and in democratic government.

A second and important function of appeals is to determine and maintain consistent standards in the trial courts. The taking of appeals assures that the same rules of substantive and procedural law will be applicable in all courts of the state, and that the disparity in sentences is based on certain determination as to the substance. A criminal offense, or at least the wider range of disparity, may be reduced in cases involving substantially similar offenses and offenders.

A third function of appeals is to work out or develop the law of the jurisdiction. The maintenance of uniform interpretations and trial standards is encouraged by the right of appeal. Greater control over substantive and procedural law can be exercised by the appellate court with the appeal in a criminal case as a matter of right.

Now, one of the basic inequities that we find existing in the state of Michigan is the relationship between appeal in a civil case as against appeal in a criminal case. Under the present law in Michigan, the dignity and sanctity of a right is accorded to an appeal in a civil case involving the sum of $500 or more.

In Michigan, a person who is deprived, however, in a criminal case for a term of years, or for life, has no such right of appeal. This anomolous and inequitable condition requires amelioration. It is submitted that the most effective and enduring way to accomplish this is by accepting the recommendation of the right of a criminal trial and by amending section 16 as proposed by the committee.

Now, in addition to that, there is the fact that 4 states in the United States have in their constitutions the right of appeal as a matter of constitutional right. About 30 states have them both by statute and by court rule. I think these are probative with regard to our consideration of this matter.

I think some data with regard to the present instance of appeals in Michigan in a criminal case would be in order. You may have received a part of a series of memoranda that I distributed to each of the delegates. One of the memoranda dealt with criminal appeals. I received a communication from Mr. Donald Winters, clerk of the Michigan supreme court, with regard to a question I posed to him in November in regard to this fact. He reported that at present about 13 per cent of the applications for leave to appeal in criminal cases are granted by the Michigan supreme court. The most recent data, as expressed by his letter, for a 12 month period indicate that 29 out of 218 applications for appeal were granted. There is little reason to assume that the November 1, 1960 to November 1, 1961 period which Mr. Winters used was not a representative year.

Hence, if the past experience is at least a partial guide to the future, the number of appeals in criminal cases may not be said to be of such a quantity as to outweigh the probative reasons for granting an appeal in a criminal case as a matter of right.

In addition to that, there has been some ambiguity in certain recent decisions with regard to the relation of the supreme court to the right of appeal. You may recall that the judicature act was passed recently and there was some interpretation of it in a case called People vs. Stanley, and in that case the court stated as follows:

> At the outset, in consideration of the motion to dismiss, it must be made plain that the court is not passing upon the defendant's right of appeal, and to have in this court a review of his conviction and sentence. The question here relates to procedure. It involves the questions whether this court has constitutional (as well as statutory) authority to promulgate and enforce rules governing the procedure whereby we obtain jurisdiction to review a conviction and the sentence in a criminal case; whether we have made such rules; and whether their procedure has been followed in the instant case.

It may reasonably be argued from this statement that the court is of the opinion that it has the constitutional power over the existence, as well as the form, of criminal appeals. It is therefore reasonable to recommend that as to the existence of the right of appeal in a criminal case, the people through their constitution ought to vouchsafe for themselves this right so strategic to the administration of justice.

I want to invite your attention to the fact that while there have been many matters which are the subject of a great dispute in the state bar of Michigan, the matter of right of appeal in a criminal case has been the subject of considerable unanimous judgment over a period of years, both in the civil liberties committee of the state bar, the committee on criminal jurisprudence, by the board of governors of the state bar and also by the annual meetings of the state bar. As a matter of fact, the committee on criminal jurisprudence has put it this way:

> It had been widely felt that it was a striking injustice to allow appeal of right in civil cases from a judgment of $500.00 while leave was required in all criminal cases, however serious the penalty or sentence. . . . The need for review is not limited to serious felony convictions. Today's traffic convictions imperil one's right to drive and often involve his livelihood; a misdemeanor conviction for drunkenness or obscene conduct may cause one's discharge from a position of prominence and trust; and conviction for assualt and battery may be the springboard for a damage suit of staggering proportions. Denial to defendants in misdemeanor categories of leave to appeal may also be fraught with dire consequences.

While the committee on criminal jurisprudence of the state bar has advocated an intermediate court of criminal appeal, it is the recommendation of our committee that this particular insertion of this article II, section 19, be considered a constitutional right, independent of the means which this convention or the legislature might develop to implement the right.

It is possible to have an intermediate court of appeal; it is possible to have an intermediate court of criminal appeal; it is possible to increase the number of supreme court justices; it is possible to maintain the present number of supreme court justices and still deal with this particular problem as discretion and wisdom may so indicate.

We felt as a declaration of rights, bearing in mind the ancient and mandatory injunction that we have equal justice under law, that we ought to grant and record as one of the rights of the accused, in this particular section, the right of appeal in a criminal case, and the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections so recommends, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: Mr. Chairman and delegates, at this convention it has been suggested that some of us who have had some experience in these matters should make our views known. I, for one, am not opposed to an appeal as a matter of right but I wish the record to show that I do not subscribe either to the necessity for or agree with all of the reasons that have been assigned. I don't believe that they should appear as being influential upon any bodies who may have this matter under consideration in the future. I merely wish to state that I am not opposed to the right of appeal as a matter of right and I think the matter should stop there.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, may I direct an inquiry to Delegate Norris? The word "appeal" may be a general term or it may be a specific term. We have presently in our state system of courts 3 tiers; the federal system has 3 tiers. I wish to inquire of Mr. Norris whether it is the intent of the committee to give a convicted defendant, as a matter of right, an appeal throughout this entire system of courts which might mean 5 appeals, or whether it is the intent of the committee to give, as a matter of right, one appeal from the trial court in which he was convicted.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Leibrand, I believe the general theory that animates this proposal and the subscription of the committee is that there be one suitable appellate review of a conviction and to see that there is an appraisal of all the pertinent rules of evidence and that a fair trial was accorded; and I don't think it necessarily follows that you go through the entire tier of appellate review. It doesn't mean that in my judgment — I think I speak for the committee in that — and I stated that in the statement that I made before, when I referred to Professor Orfield as saying that there ought to be one suitable appellate review of a conviction in a criminal case.

MR. LEIBRAND: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. King.

MR. KING: I should like to direct a question to Delegate Norris, if I might. Delegate Norris, is it your understanding that under this constitutional provision providing for the employment of counsel, that this counsel must of necessity be provided for at the expense of the public in the event that the accused is not able to hire his own counsel?

MR. NORRIS: All I can say to that, Mr. King, is that there are certain supreme court decisions, United States supreme court decisions, particularly Griffin v. Illinois, with regard to the extent of the participation of the state in giving effect to the right in the federal constitution to assistance of counsel, and insofar as that particular right would be applicable, then it would have some effect on what you are now questioning. I don't think, however, there has been any state court decision which has gone farther than what the federal court has provided. So, no matter what we say here, it wouldn't go beyond what the United States supreme court now requires.

MR. KING: Don't you feel that the Supreme Court of Michigan has affirmatively taken a position with regard to this matter to the effect that counsel need not be provided to an accused who cannot afford to hire counsel?

MR. NORRIS: Counsel need not be provided for an appeal? Is that what you are saying?

MR. KING: Not for an appeal; for trial.

MR. NORRIS: Well, it doesn't apply to all cases. It applies to capital cases. It doesn't apply to misdemeanors. You don't have the right to assistance of counsel at county expense in misdemeanors.

MR. KING: How about felonies?

MR. NORRIS: Yes, it does apply to felonies, as I understand it.

MR. KING: That is not my understanding and I wondered if the committee had reviewed this particular problem. I can cite Michigan supreme court cases — People v. Williams and People v. Crandall — which both indicate that the provision of this section of the Michigan constitution securing an accused the right to have counsel for his defense is a guarantee of a right to employ and have counsel, but does not mean that he shall have counsel at public expense.

MR. NORRIS: All I can say is that under Powell v. Alabama, the United States supreme court and the practice as I have seen it in 15 years of practicing, that particularly in general practice, including criminal courts, is this is what has been followed and I understand it is required by the law.

The fact that a person has a right to employ counsel doesn't necessarily mean that persons who may be indigent don't also have the right to assistance of counsel as prescribed by law, and that has occurred.

But I think what we are talking about here is the right of an appeal in a criminal case — to carry forward what you are saying — those who have the right to employ counsel also have the right to proceed to an appeal. However, if you will notice the part of article II, section 19, which goes on to say something about the courts may assist: . . . "and in courts of record, when the trial court shall so order, to have such reasonable assistance as may be necessary to perfect and prosecute an appeal." To that degree there is an affirmative duty on the part of the court to assist persons who may have the right to an appeal.

MR. KING: I would agree with that. I was not directing my question as to what the committee has done so much as to what they have not done.

MR. NORRIS: What is it you wish us to do that we have not done?

MR. KING: Provide for counsel, whether the accused can hire counsel or not.

MR. NORRIS: If you wish to make an amendment on the floor, I suspect that might be one matter which the wisdom of this body might be called upon to express; but that isn't what the committee is saying here, sir.

MR. KING: That was what I was trying to determine. I don't wish to make an amendment if the committee has given careful consideration to what I think is a problem.

MR. NORRIS: This is as far as the committee wished to express itself, sir. I think what we are trying to say is that because of the reasons that were advanced in the comment, we want to have favorable consideration by this body of the right of appeal in a criminal case.

MR. KING: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Sharpe.

MR. SHARPE: Mr. Chairman and Delegate Norris, I would like to have you tell me if these words not having been in the constitution in the past has worked a hardship on a lot of people. Has this been a detriment to the criminal? (laughter)

MR. NORRIS: The question is whether or not this has been a detriment to the criminal. (laughter) I assume that what Mr. Sharpe is getting at is a fundamental question. Perhaps he phrased it inartfully but the question was very well taken, however, and that is: is there a particular showing of the need for such a constitutional right?

It seems to me that you have manifestly an iniquitous and "inequitous" condition where you can say that a person has a right to appeal in a civil case in a matter involving $500 but when a person is deprived of life, or given life imprisonment, or has a term of years visited upon him as a result of a particular adjudication, that he does not have that same right.

It seems to me what is involved here is a matter of equal justice under law and in order that we might accomplish that particular ancient and revered injunction, we ought to give persons who are involved in a criminal case a constitutional right of appeal in order to remedy this kind of condition.

I can only say to you that I am a bit disturbed by saying that perhaps there isn't any showing. You have, even within the statistics that have been given to us, quite a large number of people who just receive, on the basis of an appeal, a 2 word sentence from the Michigan supreme court when they appeal "Application denied," with no particular exposition for the reasons. It seems to me that a full, fair day in court includes not only the appraisal by the trial court but also by an appellate court.

As Judge Leibrand asked the question before, what is involved here is having one suitable appellate review of a conviction. I am certain that Delegate Sharpe would want, if he were so accused and convicted, the right to have one suitable review and that would apply to all the 8 million people in the state of Michigan.

MR. SHARPE: Just a minute, Delegate Norris. That wasn't my primary question. I'm sorry I phrased it the way I did. The thing that I am interested in is this, I can see where possibly this might be a burden on the taxpayers in our circuit courts. I can see also where this might possibly load the court docket up so that in my particular case we could no longer have a circuit judge from a 2 county circuit. We might have to have a circuit judge from a 1 county circuit. I am wondering if this is important as long as we haven't had this for 100 years in our constitution and if it might not lead to maybe some abuse. This was my primary question and I didn't expect that you were going to talk 15 minutes on the first one. (laughter) Maybe you can answer this one in less time.

MR. NORRIS: I appreciate the questions and they are equally pertinent and I think they ought to be answered, sir.

I think that it is reasonable to anticipate that there are always costs for justice. The very provisions of courts, jurors, of the rights of the accused; indeed, the very declaration of rights itself imposes certain costs to the taxpayers. The question is whether or not this is necessary for the administration of justice, whether or not this is necessary for equal justice under law. It is a question of a value judgment. We seek by this action — the committee does — to declare a constitutional right of appeal in a criminal case, because in our judgment it remedies inequitable conditions as they exist today and provides and enhances the greater prospect for a fair trial in criminal cases.

I might also say that you have, as I indicated, 4 states with this as a constitutional right. You also have some 30 states which have right of appeal in a criminal case as a matter of statute and as a matter of court rule. But if you put it in the constitution, then it cannot be altered by court rule and it cannot be altered by statute. It serves a very useful purpose in the judgment of the committee.

MR. SHARPE: Delegate Norris, does this pertain to circuit courts or does it not?

MR. NORRIS: Yes, it pertains to circuit courts.

MR. SHARPE: This was my understanding. Now, Delegate Norris, would you like to answer the question: is this quite liable to be a burden on the taxpayers and is it a possibility that it might load the court docket to the degree that would be uncomfortable?

MR. NORRIS: Whether it's a burden or not is a value judgment. There is bound to be some cost involved. But whether or not it is a burden depends upon whether or not you think, weighing the reasons for and against this particular proposal, the reasons outweigh in one direction or another. I don't think here that the committee makes an assessment of burden. What we say is that the reasons for this proposal far outweigh any particular cost that might be involved.

MR. SHARPE: Thank you. Now would you like to answer one more question for me and then I'll sit down. Can you give me any reason why in the last 100 years this has not been attempted to be put into this section before?

MR. NORRIS: Well, I'm not sure, sir, that your question is based upon fact. There have been numerous attempts to secure this as a matter of court rule and as a matter of statute. As a matter of fact, the statute that I cited was one which incorporated a right of appeal in a criminal case and it wasn't interpreted to permit that because of other infirmities in the inartful draftsmanship of the statute. They said that the statute didn't conform to the title of the act; People v. Stanley, the case I cited. There has been evidence that there has been the intent apparently of the legislature to move in that direction. I understand there also is some contemplation by the justices of the supreme court at present to deal with this matter as a matter of court rule, but it is the concept of the committee that this matter is so important that there ought to be the dignity and sanctity of a constitutional right accorded to the right of appeal in a criminal case.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Norris, if we set up an intermediate court of criminal jurisdiction, appeal from that court to the supreme court should certainly be by leave, should it not?

MR. NORRIS: I would agree, sir.

MR. BRAKE: Your language does not make that clear.

MR. NORRIS: I appreciate what you are saying, sir. I am not so sure that we can make provision for all the contingencies in the rights-of-accused section. What we talk about is to have an appeal as a matter of right. And I think that is about as far as we could go with regard to the matter. But I think it is the committee's understanding that if there should be an intermediate court of appeal or an intermediate court of criminal appeal, that the right would apply to this court; it would be one suitable appellate review. That appeal from the intermediate appellate court to the supreme court would be as a matter of leave.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 19?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Dehnke submits the following amendment:

1. Amend page 4, line 23, after "right" by inserting "to the court having immediate appellate jurisdiction"; so that the language will read, ". . . to have an appeal as a matter of right to the court having immediate appellate jurisdiction."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I think the amendment explains itself. It covers the point that was raised by Judge Leibrand and answered by Professor Norris. This will remove it from the field of doubt or speculation.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Wanger, do you want to speak on the Dehnke amendment?

MR. WANGER: No sir, I did not but I would like to ask a question regarding the amendment which is now before us. Does this mean that in every case an accused would have an appeal to the court above it?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: That is the simplest way that I could think of on the spur of the moment to cover that point. We have justice courts. This would give right of appeal to the circuit court. If we have an appellate court, the circuit court conviction — if that were the court of trial — would give appeal as a matter of right to the intermediate appellate court. As I understand it, it is not proposed that the intermediate appellate court shall try cases de novo, but that would still leave it possible to have an appeal to the supreme court by the present process of applying for leave to appeal. It may be possible that Mr. Danhof and others have language which clarifies this in a better way than my amendment. I have no pride of authorship in the wording.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Judge Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: I am in harmony with the amendment that has been proposed for the reasons stated. I wish further to state, supplementing what I said before, that I have no objection to a matter of right, but I have taken into consideration also the further language, ". . . when the trial court shall so order . . ." which has reference to the appointment of counsel. I believe that is an important matter and is one which I took into consideration in my first remarks. I believe that that is a matter that is of importance and of interest to the taxpaying public. The courts should have some control over the expenditures that are ordered by the court in these appeals and in the appointment of counsel.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I might state in answer to Mr. Brake that my committee viewed this matter right now as a rights problem; that this is a matter that the convention should consider as a matter of civil rights; that if it passes or is rejected the committee on judicial branch will bear this in mind when setting up a court structure and what impact it would have on the court structure as we now have it, or whether we should make allowance for additional cases. We subscribe to the view of Mr. Norris that the 2 are not necessarily tied together; that one is a matter of right; the other is a matter of setting up a facility to handle the right, and that it was therefore the recommendation or the thought of the committee, that we concur in the recommendation of the rights committee.

As to the matter that Mr. King spoke to, I think that there are additional sections that would cover this as to the assistance which could be ordered by the trial court.

Now addressing myself to Judge Dehnke's amendment — and as Judge Pugsley has stated, he is in sympathy — and I might state that this particular idea was again advanced in my committee on judicial branch. I think we had a motion, if I recall, in the committee to amend it very substantially, as Judge Dehnke has, and wanted to make it one appeal, and we finally went back and concurred in leaving the matter as it now stands.

The basic consideration at least in my opinion, was this: that it is possible that the matters which will be handled by a court, which we will now just designate as a municipal court, might at some future date, by reason of legislative action or action of this convention, contemplate more serious matters and have a greater degree of severity than is now handled by our so called inferior courts. And by inferior, I do not mean the personnel thereof. That in addition, when an appeal is taken now from a municipal court to a circuit court, it is an appeal de novo. In fact, it is a retrial. It is not an appeal on the record.

If this language were inserted and you had an appeal from a so called high misdemeanor, which could carry a fairly substantial sentence, it might be interpreted that after the case were tried in a municipal court or some type of court of inferior jurisdiction, and retried then in — as what we know it now to be — the circuit court, the appeal would be taken care of, although you would have had actually a trial de novo in the circuit court and there could arise, in the trial de novo, error which perhaps should be scrutinized by an appellate tribunal who was not reviewing the trial de novo on the facts and sitting perhaps with a jury but strictly on the record. That by leaving the language as it is now constituted, it would leave it to the legislature or to the supreme court rule.

I submit that a procedure of appealing cases could be promulgated which would meet the standard of granting an appeal as we know it. I have no great quarrel with the amendment but I do feel that if we allow it to stand as it now is written, we will allow to the supreme court, the rule making power, and to the legislature, a method of setting forth the procedure which will comply with the mandate of the people or of the constitution. And for that reason, I would concur in the recommendation of the rights committee to allow the language to remain as they have written it. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, speaking to the Dehnke amendment, I have an amendment on the desk of the secretary, which would read as follows for the language in question. It would be to have a suitable appellate review as a matter of right. It seems to me that this is language that has been used here. It is the understanding of the learned jurists who are here that it would leave to the legislature or to the judiciary, or by court rule, determination of whether a suitable appeal is a trial de novo or one in the nature of an appeal, as we know it, to the supreme court. It also does not in any way determine which court it shall be, such as the immediately higher court, and I think that it better states the substance and the thinking of the delegates here that have spoken on this question by saying a suitable appellate review, and then through these things, through the legislature, the judiciary, or by court rule, that suitable appellate review can be determined. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 19?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Dehnke has offered the amendment to amend page 4, line 23, after "right" by inserting "to the court having immediate appellate jurisdiction".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Rush.

MR. RUSH: I have a question. Sometimes we have had rather lengthy explanations of these various articles and to a layman they may convey just a little different meaning than the section may indicate. My question is this: just how much weight or consideration will these explanations get in the interpretation of the constitution we write? I understand these explanations are all being recorded and I'd just like to have somebody answer that question for me.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Does anyone care to answer Mr. Rush?

Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: Yes, I'll answer. Well, if the language is clear and unambiguous — and the supreme court decides whether the language is clear and unambiguous — they do not go back of the language. You mean what you say and you say what you mean. If the supreme court says the language is not clear or is ambiguous, then they can go back of the actual language, to the committee report, or any of the other proceedings.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair is informed that Mr. Brown offered an amendment that might perhaps clarify the language that Judge Dehnke offered and we are asking Mr. Brown to confer with Judge Dehnke to see if they can't get together on this amendment.

Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Has it been submitted to the desk?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. G. E. Brown has filed this amendment for consideration following Judge Dehnke's amendment,

1. Amend page 4, line 23, after "have" by striking out "an appeal" and inserting "a suitable appellate review"; so the language will read, ". . . to have a suitable appellate review as a matter of right . . ."

MR. DEHNKE: I wondered, did he also state under rules adopted by the supreme court?

SECRETARY CHASE: He did not.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Brown is right in back of you, Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Would that be acceptable under the rules of the supreme court, Mr. Brown?

MR. G. E. BROWN: Judge Dehnke, I have no great objection to this but I think through the judicature act and other things that the legislature may be acting upon, that we may not want to limit this suitable appellate review to the supreme court rule. I think this leaves it free to the legislature. This is a fundamental law. Let's leave to the legislature, to the judiciary, to court rules, and so forth, the determination of a suitable appellate review.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman, if it is agreeable to Mr. Brown, I am agreeable to accepting the addition of his language to my amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The secretary will read the new matter.

SECRETARY CHASE: The matter seems to the secretary to be that in addition to Judge Dehnke's amendment, which is after the words "matter of right" to insert "to the court having immediate appellate jurisdiction". Mr. Brown's amendment is to strike out the words "an appeal" and insert "a suitable appellate review" so that if both amendments were adopted, the language would then read, ". . . to have a suitable appellate review as a matter of right to the court having immediate appellate jurisdiction".

MR. DEHNKE: I am asking leave, Mr. Chairman, to withdraw my amendment and I will support Mr. Brown's amendment.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Thank you, Judge Dehnke.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Dehnke withdraws his amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. G. E. Brown has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend page 4, line 23, after "have" by striking out "an appeal" and inserting "a suitable appellate review"; so the language will then read, ". . . to have a suitable appellate review as a matter of right. . . ".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the Brown amendment. The Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I rise simply to say that I was persuaded by the remarks of Mr. Danhof on the Dehnke amendment that it was wise to support the committee report as submitted. I have not changed that view with respect to Mr. Brown's amendment, though I have great respect for the sponsors of both amendments. In my judgment, the committee on declaration of rights and the committee on judiciary have both given careful consideration to the language, which is clear and unambiguous. I support the committee proposal and would vote no on the amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, delegates, as I understand the Brown amendment then, either the legislature or the supreme court could grant an absolute right or make rules for an absolute right of appeal through 4 or 5 or 6 tiers of courts, with the public, in indigent cases, paying the shot.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: I don't think that's a fair interpretation of it. This is a suitable appellate review. Now, I can't believe that this connotes suitable appellate review. If the legislature and the courts should so determine and that becomes the law, then I think that's when it should be the law. And if we have by judicial interpretation later on through once again maybe federal enactments — there may be something more than a simple review — a denial of an application for leave to appeal is all that is necessary — if something more is done, something should be done. I don't think our constitution should go so far as to attempt to detail legislatively in effect on every possible situation that might result out of this or stem from this language.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, might I inquire of Mr. Brown? Mr. Brown, would you define your word "suitable"? Could it not be extended to mean 4 or 5 or 6 appeals?

MR. G. E. BROWN: I think, Judge Leibrand, it certainly could. I think it is very possible. But I think an appeal as drafted by the committee could also be interpreted as meaning 4 or 5 appeals because an appeal is an appeal is an appeal. A suitable appellate review, I think, only leaves it a little bit more in the discretion of those who have jurisdiction over these matters insofar as the writing of details is concerned. This is a fundamental law. This is not a court rule.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Ford on the Brown amendment.

MR. FORD: Could I have the language of the section as it would read in full now with the Brown amendment?

SECRETARY CHASE: The language of the section with the Brown amendment would read as follows:

> Section 19. In every criminal prosecution, the accused shall have the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury, which may consist of less than 12 jurors in all courts not of record; to be informed of the nature of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor; to have the assistance of counsel for his defense; to have a suitable appellate review as a matter of right; and in courts of record, when the trial court shall so order, to have such reasonable assistance as may be necessary to perfect and prosecute an appeal.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: The only question I raise is, that to have a suitable appellate review as a matter of right becomes so broad that I question whether we ought to add anything at all to this section. If we amend it as Mr. Brown now proposes, it doesn't do anything that we don't have. We now in Michigan have a suitable judicial review as a matter of right and it has been determined up until now that suitable appellate review — and I don't think anybody questions the constitutionality of the law as it is now in Michigan, unless we change this constitution — that in civil matters involving $500 and upwards you can appeal to the supreme court as a matter of right. But in a criminal matter, you must first apply to the court for its permission to appeal. This is a suitable appellate review now, and it could be a suitable appellate review with the proposed committee language adopted with the Brown amendment but if you adopt the Brown amendment you will vitiate what the rights committee was trying to do and what we concurred in on the judiciary committee. I advocate that you bear with us on this one and support the position of the rights committee and the judiciary committee in the language as it is in the committee report.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Speaking against the Brown amendment and for the committee report, I think we are losing sight of some things here. First of all, right now the legislature or the courts, by rules, can give all the appeals they want, if they want to change the rules. So, answering Judge Leibrand's criticisms, I don't think, really, it pertains to this. What we are interested in is the right to appeal as a matter of right, one time at least. We have made this intent clear. I think it can be made clear through the proceedings of this convention that this is the intent of this convention and I don't think we have to try and find lengthy descriptions of this or try some way to explain it in the body of the constitution. This can be done by intent.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. King.

MR. KING: I rise to support the committee recommendation and point out that my understanding of the constitution is somewhat similar to Mr. Hutchinson's understanding of the constitution. It is a limitation upon what the legislature can do.

In the area of the bill of rights we are particularly trying to say that human beings, individuals, have this much right. I find myself in a position where I can't understand someone who wants to say in the bill of rights we will limit the rights of the individual. Let's provide for at least one appeal. If the legislature wants to provide for 5 appeals — I don't think they can do that because the supreme court of the United States would have something to say about appeals to the federal court — then, let them go ahead and do it, but basically, what we are talking about is providing for at least certain rights in the bill of rights for the individual citizens of our state, and I think we have gone far afield from that point.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Sharpe.

MR. SHARPE: Mr. Chairman, I have asked Delegate Norris a couple of questions to clarify in my mind, and I'd like to ask him to clarify it on the record. Delegate Norris, would this phraseology permit a complete new trial?

MR. NORRIS: Delegate Sharpe, I believe the general observation is not necessarily germane to the amendment but to the whole concept of an appeal.

Delegate Sharpe suggests that to some minds the idea of an appeal means a new trial; that is, an entirely new proceeding. All I can suggest to him is that an appeal in terms of what we have stated on the record here is a suitable appellate review, which means an appeal on the record, that is that which comes before an appeal court, a transcript, statement of facts, opinion of the court below, and it is appraised by the appellate court in terms of whether or not there is a fair trial and the general conduct of the trial in accordance with law. It is not a new trial, that is, in terms of new evidence, what we call in law, a trial de novo. That doesn't mean another trial.

I understand that Mr. Sharpe was concerned about duplicating the performance, so that would mean additional expense. That is not what we are contemplating by virtue of an appeal. It may be, however, that as a result of an appellate review the court might send it back for a new trial but that does not necessarily mean that every time you have an appeal you have a new trial.

I don't know whether I can speak for the committee with regard to it, except to say that I am certain the committee would support its own report and the observations made by Mr. Danhof as chairman and Mr. Ford as vice chairman of the judiciary committee, which I believe is the substance of our position, and that the wording recommended by the declaration of rights report is earnestly recommended to this body.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Youngblood.

MR. YOUNGBLOOD: Up until now I notice that the majority of the speakers are attorneys. I, as a layman, think that I understand very clearly the original language put out by the committee. Therefore, I wish to support the original language.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments? Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I'll be very brief. I have no great brief for the language that I have suggested because it is my language. The only thing that I would like to draw to the attention of those present is that an appeal as such — that the criticisms that have been raised here to the wording "a suitable appellate review" are just as applicable to an appeal. You now have an appeal to the supreme court. Of course, this is in the form of an application for leave to appeal. Appeal is an artful word. It doesn't constitute a review. Other than that, I shall be quiet.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment by Mr. Brown. As many as are in favor of the amendment will signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Madar offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 4, line 23, after "have" by striking out "an" and inserting "one"; so that it will read, ". . . to have one appeal as a matter of right;".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to bring this up because it seems we've been having an awful lot of discussion here on just what we do want. It seems that everybody agrees that we have one appeal. Now, it seems that they just don't seem to understand this so, in good laymen's language, let's just include the word "one". Then we're certain of what we're doing; everybody understands it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Speaking in opposition to the Madar amendment, I think we again find ourselves with the same problem. We would be limiting the legislature's right to set up further appeals if they want. We are not here in the bill of rights trying to set up limitation of rights but rather to give rights. We are setting a floor here by saying an appeal is a matter of right. If the legislature wants to give more than one later on, that's their prerogative. What we are interested in is giving an appeal as a matter of right.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Madar's language is certainly clear and it occurred to the judiciary committee almost immediately when we had this before us and it was dispatched almost immediately for the reason that when you start talking of one appeal, we all agree that we wanted one appeal and I think there is pretty much general agreement on the judiciary committee that we want that one appeal when you finally get to a court of record.

But the difficulty is that you overlook the fact that you have another stratum below the court of record, the justice court now, and municipal court, and we may call it a county court or something else in the future, but there isn't any question that there will be in the court strata some sort of a local court or court inferior to the circuit court.

Now, it is our desire not to limit this right of appeal to a point where the taking of the appeal that you now have as a matter of right from this lower court or middle court into the first court of record of trial jurisdiction would satisfy the requirement of the constitution and thereby stop you. So we wanted to leave it to the wisdom of the supreme court, within the framework set by the legislature, to determine how this appellate process would work. I think really, Mr. Madar, we mean one appeal but we mean one appeal after you get to a certain level and if you just use the word "one" the way you are doing it now, it's going to lead to confusion about what happens to these cases that originate below the court of record level.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I support the committee recommendation in the comment that says, "We desire to grant status of a categorical constitutional right to at least one appeal in a criminal case."

I was one of those on the judiciary committee to whom it occurred that we might include the words "one appeal" and upon reflection, I prefer the committee language because it occurred to me that the appellate review might order a new trial and upon the second conviction I don't think I'd want to restrict the defendant from having an appeal from the second conviction upon a new trial. I think the committee language is fine.

In response to an inquiry of Mr. Rush, I don't think it was answered and I think Mr. Van Dusen can answer it. I've been looking through the resolutions, I do know we have a resolution — and I can't find it immediately — that states that the committee report shall be determinative of constitutional intent. I think it is a very important resolution and perhaps we can put our finger on it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment by Mr. Madar. As many as are in favor of the amendment will signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted.

Mrs. Hatcher.

MRS. HATCHER: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise to speak to the point of the change in words of "12 men" to "12 jurors." It may not be considered necessary by some of the delegates here but for the purpose of clarification and acknowledgment of the progress made in the last 50 years, I would like to make these few remarks.

In several places in our constitution we have found similar language stating 12 men or men or women who are property owners may have the right to vote. There have been several proposals submitted to change the wording, since presently in Michigan women do have the right to serve on jury duty and to exercise their full political rights.

Significantly, it is now taken for granted that women have political rights in Michigan and throughout the United States. And of course, I am very pleased to see that this is not a controversy in this convention and especially under this section that we are discussing presently.

Unlike the Constitution of 1908, women had not received the franchise; therefore none were delegates to the convention in 1908. I am gratified with the equality of participation in this convention and it has been a true expression of democracy through our deliberations.

To recognize the subject further, on December 14, 1961, President John Kennedy issued an executive order to establish a commission on the status of women. With your indulgence, I would like to read 2 excerpts from the president's statement in establishing this new commission on the status of women. These 2 excerpts are taken from a release issued by the white house press secretary. The first excerpt is:

> Forty-one years have passed since the first national election in which women were permitted to vote.
>
> As was foreseen by the early leaders, women have brought into public affairs great sensitivity to human need and opposition to selfish and corrupt purposes. These political contributions and the manifold activities of women in American communities are the outgrowth of a long tradition of pioneering by American women. They stand as an encouraging example to countries in which women are only now achieving equal political and social status.

The second excerpt is:

> Women have basic rights which should be respected and fostered as part of our nation's commitment to human dignity, freedom and democracy.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I felt moved to share with my delegate friends here this information because I honestly feel that no American citizen in America or in this troubled world can afford ever to take his or her rights for granted.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any further amendments to section 19? If not, it will be passed.

Section 19 is passed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 20.

[Section 20 was read by the secretary. For full text see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: I will ask Mr. Norris to explain this section briefly. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, the general idea here is to reaffirm the prohibition against imprisonment for debt and to elaborate upon the fact that the imprisonment for debt ought not to be effected on the basis of an action or a debt that was founded upon a tort, that is, a wrong or a judgment that was entered by a court on behalf of an actionable wrong. And I believe the description here in the comment is self-explanatory and it is merely a carrying forward of all the kinds of considerations that motivated the inclusion of this particular section in the 1908 and previous constitutions.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 20? If not, it will be passed.

Section 20 is passed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 21.

[Section 21 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 465.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this is the same wording you find in the United States constitution except, of course, this applies to the state of Michigan rather than to the United States.

We realize that the matter of treason against the United States is probably not within our jurisdiction. That is not the point. We still believe there is a possibility, though not a probability, that under certain unusual circumstances which we may not now be able to determine, this possibility still exists.

The reason for having this in the bill of rights is to reduce the treason as it existed in common law. It limits the meaning of treason in common law. That is the purpose in the United States constitution; it is the purpose here and I see no point in belaboring this longer. I think you understand it, so I'll say no more about it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 21? If not, it will be passed.

Section 21 is passed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 22. The language of the section has been deleted completely by the committee on rights, suffrage and elections.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this is not such a simple question as section 21. We considered this matter carefully. We looked at the wording as it was. We were confused as to its meaning. We found it impossible to know exactly what it was intended to say.

It was not difficult to know what the legislature and the people wanted to do. It was to provide a law which would make subversion a crime and to define subversion. This, we believe, is the function of the legislature. It has the power to do that and probably undoubtedly the duty to do it.

In the latter part of this provision, however, it provides that the right of freedom of speech as provided in our state constitution shall not be abatable as a defense in this action. The difficulty here is to interpret what is meant by this provision. Certainly, there is and has been a limitation upon the right of freedom of speech. People have been put in jail for interfering with the draft in federal cases. I don't know that there are any Michigan cases. There haven't been any Michigan cases under this provision. But it is clearly determined that a person, by his speech under certain circumstances, may be convicted of sedition in the federal courts. If that is what the provision is intended to say, it isn't necessary. If it is intended to say that a person may not introduce into evidence his right to freedom of speech at the time the charge is brought against him, then, of course, the thing which is to be tried, was his speech the cause of this action or was it the cause of subversion or was it the cause of a riot or something else? The question is: was what he said the cause? Well, if you can't use that defense at all in the beginning, how are you going to determine the fact as to whether or not it was the cause?

It is quite clear under many court decisions — at least in the federal courts and presumably in the state court, if a matter should come before it — that there is a limitation to the right of freedom of speech in this respect. Therefore, we believe that what should happen is that this should be deleted and that the legislature should do this.

Now, in regard to this, we intend to offer at the proper time a resolution. In this resolution we shall ask that it will be sent as a memorial to the legislature. The resolution which we shall offer at the proper time is:

[Mr. Stevens read the resolution. For text, see above, page 471.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Stevens has partly anticipated the question that I intend to ask. He has been reading, of course, the text of the proposed memorial attached to the report of the committee on Committee Proposal 15. I just want Mr. Stevens, if he will, to corroborate the fact that this proposed resolution will be introduced separately and presumably referred to the rules and resolutions committee before the convention takes action. It is merely included here as a part of the comment on the proposed deletion of section 22 and the action of the committee of the whole now on section 22 will in no way construe approval or disapproval of the proposed resolution. Is that correct, Mr. Stevens?

MR. STEVENS: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: I support the deletion of section 22 as a useless appendage.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any objections to the deletion of section 22? If not, it will be deleted.

Section 22 is deleted.

SECRETARY CHASE: At the end of Committee Proposal 15:

Sec. —. The enumeration in this constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I think most of you will recognize — if you don't recognize, you should — that this is taken from the federal constitution. The enumeration of these rights shall not be construed to disparage others retained by the people.

This is for perhaps 2 reasons. First, we cannot anticipate in any declaration or bill of rights all of the things which perhaps should be said. Second, we do not intend that the statements that we have made here as to the rights of our people shall be limited by the fact that we did not state something which has always been considered such a right. We have put no section number on this because this is to be a new section in the declaration of rights if it is passed.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to this section? If not, it will be passed.

The section is passed.

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, this now completes the list of so called traditional rights and I just want to raise with the Chair the first paragraph which the committee has in its report, in which we recommend that this former article II now become article I in the new constitution. We do not want to preempt the powers of the committee on style and drafting but we do think that by elevating it to position as article I it would be in its proper place because of the importance of the subject. Is it necessary to make a motion or is the record sufficient direction to the committee on style and drafting so that it can act?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: I am advised, Dr. Pollock, by the secretary that the committee on style and drafting will take that into consideration. However, I want to call the attention of the delegates that we did pass over one section. Section 14 was temporarily passed.

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: No. It was only the comment that was passed over and I corrected that this morning by bringing in a new comment. Section 14 itself was passed. It was the language of the comment that the committee objected to. However, if there is any doubt, let's go back to section 14 and pass it.

I am advised the journal shows this is passed.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to mention that I was the mover at that time and it was my understanding that we were passing over 14 and we would not consider 14 until we had the corrected committee comment in the journal. The corrected committee comment was read to us today but this was not the intention of the motion at the time.

SECRETARY CHASE: May the secretary call the attention of the committee to page 308 of the journal, column 2:

Mr. Lundgren moved that consideration of section 14 be passed temporarily.

Without objection, it was so ordered.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: I move it be put again.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Any amendments to section 14? If not, it will be passed.

Section 14 is passed.

Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Nord offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 5, after line 20 by inserting a new section to read as follows:

"Sec. —. In the event that any officer or agent of the state or its political subdivisions shall in the performance or under color of authority of his duties violate the rights of any person under this article, said officer or agent shall be liable in an action at law for the damages proximately caused thereby, and the corresponding unit of government shall be jointly and severally liable and have no immunity from such liability: Provided further, That the court in any such action shall also have the power and discretion to prohibit said officer or agent from wilfully committing similar violations against any person in the future under pain of penalty for contempt of court and of the Constitution of the State of Michigan.".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I realize that this is quite a lengthy amendment and if there is a procedural way of getting this considered in more detail, I will try to find that method. I might say that I have prepared copies for all the delegates which can be distributed but even with that, I don't think that we are in a position to fully weigh the merits of this provision entirely at this point. What I would like to do is to explain briefly what the object is without going into any details at this point and try to find a procedure whereby the delegates can have a complete opportunity to examine the text.

What I do have in mind eventually — I don't want to move it yet — but I do have in mind that this particular amendment be offered to the committee on rights and that they consider it. I would simply like to state at this point the purpose of it so we will be clear on that.

I will say frankly that the object of this thing and my feeling is that we should heal up the division that we created during the week on the search and seizure provision. I think it would be a healthy sign if we could find a way to do that. I would not want anyone to have the feeling that we were playing cops and robbers: on the one side was the cops and on the other side the robbers; on one the good guys and the other, the bad guys. I want everyone to know my feeling in this matter is that there is great merit on both sides and that is the reason there was such an even split. If there had been no even split, it would probably be because we were not thinking.

The difficulty with the search and seizure problem is this, the logical difficulty is when a police officer does something wrong, the remedy that is provided is a wrong remedy. The remedy provided by the United States supreme court is to prevent the evidence from being admitted and that injures the public. The right remedy should be to try to prevent the search and seizure. Now, that hasn't been possible to do. My idea here — and I know a number of people are thinking along somewhat similar lines — is to see if there is any way that we could provide a real remedy, an effective remedy.

The object of this amendment that I am offering would be simply, first of all, to restate the fact that the police officer is liable but, in addition to that, to state further that so is the unit of government which has employed him. Now, that never has been the law until recently. The recent decision of the United States supreme court which removes the immunity of municipalities, it seems to me, opens up this possibility but it isn't certain whether they will go that far or not. We could make that certain if we were to enact this provision, that not only is the officer liable, as he is now, but so is the municipality or county, whatever it might be, that has employed him. The reason for doing that is, of course, in that case the person bringing the suit has real hope that he can make a collection, that he can recover judgment and collect, because a jury would not be so unsympathetic in a case like that when they know the community will pay the damages, and not the officer.

Mr. Chairman, is it in order to move that this amendment be referred, or that the committee of the whole recommend that this amendment be referred to the committee on rights, suffrage and elections?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I move this amendment be laid on the table.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the motion by Mr. Bentley. As many as are in favor of the motion will signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. A. G. Elliott offers the following amendment to the body of Committee Proposal 15:

1. Amend page 2, line 6, after "radio" by striking out the comma and inserting "and" and after "television" by striking out "or other means of communication"; so the language will then read, "or of the press, radio and television."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Elliott, do you care to talk on it?

Mr. Heideman is recognized. I understand you want to ask to be excused?

MR. HEIDEMAN: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I do not stand to ask for a constitutional right, but to pray for your indulgence. I would like to board a plane for the north country. I have not seen my family in 2 weeks. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I don't wish to raise any objection to Mr. Heideman's request, but I would like to point out that the committee of the whole has no power to grant an excuse, so if he just leaves — have a good time. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Mr. Chairman, I was persuaded by the debate that we had on this particular section 2 or 3 days ago that these last words confuse the issue and confuse the minds of a major percentage of this committee, and it is on that basis that I submit the amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment.

Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, I am not quite sure of my parliamentary procedure but I would like an interpretation from the Chair as to what is the effect of Mr. Bentley's motion to lay on the table in the committee of the whole? Is my understanding correct that when the committee rises, the amendment is dead?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The answer to this, Mr. King, is when the committee rises, it will recommend that Dr. Nord's amendment be laid on the table.

MR. KING: I'd like to hear Mr. Bentley speak to the point.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I believe that at any future time any delegate has the privilege of moving that this be taken from the table of the committee of the whole. Is that not correct?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: In answer to Mr. Bentley, the Chair would like to address himself to Mr. Nord and ask that he withdraw his amendment and present his amendment or your section, whichever it would be, to the committee on rights.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I have just completed writing a note to the chairman of the committee on rights, suffrage and elections as a suggestion to the committee but I am not withdrawing my amendment from the floor on the basis that I was advised by Mr. Bentley that my amendment is tabled and can be referred to at a later date.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The reason the Chair offers this advice is there is some doubt here as to whether an amendment can be tabled while we are in committee of the whole. I wonder if Mr. Van Dusen can give us some help on this.

MR. VAN DUSEN: One means, Mr. Chairman, in my opinion, for accomplishing the result suggested by Mr. Bentley is for the committee of the whole to recommend that when the committee rise, the proposed amendment lie on the table. In that event it would be lying on the convention table and any member of the convention could move to take it from the table and refer it to the committee of the whole.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are you referring to any particular rule at this time, Mr. Van Dusen?

MR. VAN DUSEN: I am referring to that penultimate authority, Mr. Hutchinson, who happens on this point to agree with me, I think. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Nord, the Chair would like to address you again. The question seems this: that since this is your amendment, if it is tabled, you take the entire proposal with it.

MR. NORD: I don't want the entire proposal to be tabled with this and I would like to ask the Chair, would it be possible for me to withdraw the amendment until we get back into the convention session, make the motion to amend at that point and have it tabled at that point and so on? Would that be in order?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That can be done.

MR. NORD: With that understanding, I will withdraw the amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: After we get back into convention, Mr. Nord, what are your intentions with regard to this?

MR. NORD: I would offer the amendment in the convention and then if there were a motion to table it, it would be tabled at that point.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Then you table the entire proposal there.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, suppose I were, in the convention session, to offer a certain amendment and move to refer the amendment to the committee of the whole whenever the committee of the whole shall be sitting?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair might advise Mr. Nord that when the committee rises, we get back in the convention, and you could then move that this amendment be referred to the committee on rights.

MR. NORD: If that is the decision of the Chair, that is what I will do.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Then are you withdrawing your amendment?

MR. NORD: I do, yes.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any further amendments to the body of the proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. A. G. Elliott has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 6, after "radio" by striking out the comma and inserting "and" and after "television" by striking out "or other means of communication"; so the language will then read, "or of the press, radio and television."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. Chairman, I rise to make a statement because too many people are concerned about the possible length of the section with which we are now involved. I feel, as I am sure all of us do, that it was unfortunate that we have had as much feeling exhibited in some of the sessions this week as we have. It has been called to my attention that there is a possibility that the judiciary committee or some group of this convention may be able to work out in the next day or two some agreement that will answer the desires of both of the groups that are disturbed, and when this committee rises and we return to the convention, I propose to move that we defer consideration of the vote on the amendments offered to section 10 on Wednesday until the session of Tuesday.

I make this statement at this time so that we may plan our procedure for the rest of the day, hoping that this may result in a better situation all the way around.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hannah, you will then make that motion after we rise?

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Yes.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Leppien.

MR. LEPPIEN: Mr. Chairman and delegates, for the record, shouldn't Mr. Bentley's motion to lay on the table be withdrawn also?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Unless there is objection, it will be so ordered.

The motion to table is withdrawn.

Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Speaking in opposition to the Elliott amendment, I voted against the original amendments to the committee report because I felt that what was happening by specifying here, we were restricting the possibility of rights. I felt that when the committee put the word "express" in, the purpose was to encompass the various means of communication that have arisen and will arise in the future.

I am not happy with the amendments that have been made but, certainly, I think Mr. Elliott's amendment again makes further restriction in it by putting in the words "other means of communication." We are realizing that in fact today there are other means of communication besides radio and television and printed matter and that in the future there may be even more and I don't think that when we are writing a constitution that we hope will exist for some time to come, we should further restrict the rights. Again, I think what we should be interested in is broadening rights, not restricting them. Although I think that the intent of Mr. Plank's amendment was to broaden it, I fear this will not be done.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, could I ask the secretary to please read the section as it would read if this amendment is adopted?

SECRETARY CHASE: There were agreed to by the committee of the whole 2 amendments, one by Mr. Wanger and one by Mr. Plank. Mr. Wanger's amendment, after the word "press" inserted a comma and the words, "which liberty shall include". Following that, Mr. Plank's amendment added the words, "radio, television, or other means of communication"; so that, as amended presently, section 4 now reads:

> Every person may freely speak, write, express, and publish his views on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of such right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press, which liberty shall include radio, television, or other means of communication.

Mr. Elliott has offered an amendment to strike out the comma after the word "radio" and insert the word "and" and after "television" strike out the words "or other means of communication"; so the language would then read in part:

> . . . and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press, which liberty shall include radio and television.

MR. WANGER: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I have offered an amendment to Mr. Elliott's amendment, to which he has agreed, as has Mr. Plank. It is essentially what Mr. Upton suggested; that we amend this to read, "including radio or television or other news media." This will allow for the development of other news media in this constitution. I think it removes some of the doubt of the present language since it removes doubt of methods of communication.

SECRETARY CHASE: Does the secretary understand that Mr. Elliott has agreed to the amendment to strike out the words "or other means of communication" and insert "or other news media"? The amendment, as revised, would be as follows:

1. Amend page 2, line 6, after "radio" by striking out the comma and inserting "and"; and after "television,", by striking out "or other means of communication" and inserting "or other news media"; so that the language will read, ". . . . or of the press, radio and television, or other news media.".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Lesinski on the Elliott amendment, as revised.

MR. LESINSKI: I don't know if this is on the Elliott amendment but this is a query. Since this section has been opened for debate, I'd like to know what are the definitions of the words "speech and press"? I believe the words "radio and television" are not germane with the word "press", as radio and television are only methods of conveyance of the spoken word.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Well, briefly a remark to Mr. Lesinski, I would agree with his remarks but I am again in opposition to the new language because it is restrictive. Not everything that is communication is news media. We are trying to protect the rights of individuals to express themselves and, if we are going to try limiting it to a court to define it only in terms of news media, we are giving ourselves some problems and I think we should vote this amendment down.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, speaking very briefly on this, I certainly subscribe to the general purport of the Elliott amendment as revised, which eliminates the rather vague language "or other means of communication." I don't think that the committee was fully aware the other evening when this amendment was adopted just exactly what we were saying. The language as amended would read:

> . . . and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press, which liberty shall include radio, television, or other means of communication.

In the last session of the legislature I think you will recall some rather considerable dispute and discussion and controversy over a bill regulating billboards along the highways of this state. That discussion and controversy would have been completely a nullity had this language been adopted because the legislature could not have passed a law which would have restrained billboards. They are a means of communication.

Mr. Gover the other night, I believe, made the very valid point that no municipality could, if this language were adopted in its present form, restrain the use of sound trucks on the streets. Those are means of communication. And I could lengthen the list considerably, indicating the type of perfectly valid legislative or municipal restriction on the means of communication adopted for the benefit of the people as a whole without in any way restricting the freedom of speech or of the press as we have known it for many years. For that reason, I would heartily support the Elliott amendment as revised and urge its adoption.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Brown.

MR. T. S. BROWN: I would like to speak in favor of the Elliott amendment with the DeVries revision and concur in what Mr. Van Dusen said for these additional reasons: I think historically and currently the idea of freedom of the press is to encourage a free reign in the traditional means of communication so that ideas of the significance and the progress of mankind should not be curtailed.

In the traditional methods of communication originally with the press, and now through radio and TV, we have an open type of communication in which people have ideas or view news events and attempt to portray them to us in a somewhat open manner.

Now, recently, with the advances in science, in the field of communication — and if you've read about cybernetics, and if you know what the boys at the IBM corporation are doing, and if you know what is going on in the top drawer levels of MIT and similar institutions — you realize that the possibility of several things elucidated in the novel, "1984", for instance, and so on, is rather close to us, and the probability that the actual thought of mankind and the actual thought of us as individuals can be controlled by methods, the exact mechanism of which we are unaware, is very close. And it is possible, as I mentioned the other night — more in jest than anything else — the idea of subliminal communication. This and other fields are proceeding at such a rapid rate that I wonder if we should not draw a distinction between traditional, open, conscious, obvious means of communication and those means of communication which may possibly be used in derogation of our individual and collective rights.

Now, if we continue with the terminology that we have presently, which says ". . . and other means of communication," I think this would open the door to any group or any organization that were to actually seize upon the exact secret of thought-think to perpetuate their ideas at the expense of the rest of us without our being aware of it. And I do want to indicate the scientific possibility of means of communication of which we are unaware being used against the total good of society. Therefore, this terminology seems to me a little dangerous.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman, I also would like to speak in favor of the Elliott amendment. I think that the constitutional guarantee as it stood probably was adequate because the word "press" referred to the printed word and the word "speech" to the spoken word and "radio and television" are either the printed or the spoken word. However, I think that the new industry of television and radio had a point in wanting to be recognized and the amendment which was passed did do it. But it bothered me because it added this phrase which the Elliott amendment would take out, "and other means of communication."

I know in our city of Kalamazoo — and this is true in all cities — we have had reasonable regulations on the use of sound trucks and if we hadn't had them we would have sound trucks running up and down our streets blaring all the time. We also have — and other cities have — reasonable regulations on the use of placing loudspeaking devices in store windows or store doorways which blare out in the street. Now, the courts have allowed us, under today's law, to make these restraints but the courts have also used the existing provisions of the state constitution to see that a city or a municipality could not do this so it would abridge the freedom of speech.

Now, I have been afraid that when we added the phrase "and other means of communication" we would take away the right to protect the public from this type of regulation which has been done in the public interest, has been sanctioned by the supreme court, and yet we haven't deprived anyone of any liberties.

So, Mr. Hodges, I don't think we are taking anything away here. We may be granting something in addition by what we have done. I am not so sure that we have but I think what we will be doing by adding the words or keeping the words in, "other means of communication," we really will be taking a right away from the public to be protected in its right of privacy.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Elliott amendment, as revised, and the Chair will recognize Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: I am certainly glad to hear all the support we are receiving on this news media. The other night I thought it was the most important thing for us to consider. As Glenn has said, you must protect the public as well as the individual's rights. We are working for the entire state. I believe this amendment of Mr. Elliott's will do this. In our means of communication we are talking about the news media, which we are protecting and granting to the rights of the people. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: First a question, Mr. Chairman. I have a further amendment. Will this be read before the Elliott amendment is passed on or will the Elliott amendment be disposed of?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: We will first dispose of the Elliott amendment.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I would like then to support somewhat Mr. Hodge's position. I am worried about the right of the pamphleteer or the individual, and the word "press" as we are now attempting to describe it as being limited, I am afraid, to the established news media. I am certain that the original use of the word "press" meant the printed word. My amendment — and I merely want to call it to your attention — simply strikes out "of speech or press" and after the word "abridge" says that no law shall ever be passed to restrain or abridge these liberties, leaving it that no law ever will be passed interfering with the right to speak, write, express or publish one's views.

I am sure that this is the classical concept of our freedom of speech. It is not limited to news media but is limited to my right to write an individual letter or individual pamphlet. And if we insert the words "news media", we are tending to get into the field of limiting the right of Thomas Paine and others, and I respect that right, subject to reasonable police regulation, as city ordinances go, that I can't dirty the streets or plug your ears with sound media.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: I was only getting up for the purpose of replying as a point of clarification of my remarks since my name was mentioned. I was going to point out that sound cars can be used for news media too. So this doesn't really answer that problem.

I am totally concerned again — and I understand there is an amendment on the secretary's desk which would go back to the original language of the committee which I think is wise — because I think we are now seeing the complexities we get ourselves into when we are trying to specify these various means of communication.

Again, I just point out for all practical purposes, everything under radio and TV are handled by the federal government and we would have very little that we could restrict anyway.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, this discussion almost convinces me that I should move a reconsideration of the vote by which this section was adopted so we can go back to the language which the committee very carefully recommended to you. If there is a strong sentiment in this direction, I would be glad to make such a motion. In other words, we have already indicated here that we are getting into trouble by the amendment which was put in. The committee advised that that is exactly what we were doing. Now it seems it is pretty well demonstrated here on the floor.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair would like to advise Dr. Pollock that we have a number of amendments here. We would like to dispose of those first before we take up your motion to reconsider.

Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the secretary to read the section as amended by Mr. Hanna's amendment?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hanna has filed an amendment, which is not now for consideration. It will be taken up a little later. His amendment would, on page 2, line 6, after "abridge" strike out the remainder of the language in the section and insert the words "these liberties"; so the language would then read, ". . . and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge these liberties." Presently pending, however, is the amendment offered by Mr. Elliott and revised by Mr. DeVries.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment, as revised, offered by Mr. Elliott.

Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: I would like to support Delegate Hodges in his thought that there are other forms of news media and I want to take into consideration something that's happening right here at the present time. I, for instance, have introduced a proposal within a subcommittee which will affect the public utilities and the rate payers of these utilities' services. Now, I have submitted copies of my proposal to the news media — newspapers, radio stations and various others. Now, this started approximately a week or 10 days ago. I haven't seen a line nor a word regarding this proposal, though this proposal is as important to the people as I would say 98 per cent of the proposals which they have published.

I realize that if this proposal is published and if the people — and I am now talking of the citizens of this state — were to see, they would storm down on the delegates of this constitutional convention and insist that the proposal be passed. I can see how this would not be very good for advertising agencies or things of this sort.

Now, I want to say this: that I would like, so that I could get this across to the people at least in my district, to get out my loudspeaking system — and possibly I don't need one with as good a voice as I have — (laughter). However, I am going to try to take care of my throat by using that loudspeaker, if I can. However, cities like Grosse Pointe say, "Oh no, Mr. Madar, you can't use a loudspeaker in our town, no matter if it is news media." And so they are immediately cutting off free speech. (laughter)

Laugh, if you will, gentlemen and ladies, but just think about this. This may occur to you some day and let's not stifle free speech.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Elliott amendment, as revised.

Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, I can't refrain from commenting that perhaps the news media felt that Mr. Madar's remarks did not require further amplification. (laughter)

The reason I rise, however, is to say that while I would prefer the committee language, or the language suggested by Mr. Hanna, to the language of the Elliott amendment, I nevertheless greatly prefer the language of the Elliott amendment to the section in its present form. Therefore, I would urge you to vote yes on the Elliott amendment and then if you can further improve it, proceed to do so.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Lesinski.

MR. LESINSKI: Mr. Chairman, perhaps we are confused because we are chiefly concerned with basic rights and not with the media used for these basic rights.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, we have before the secretary a jointly sponsored amendment by Mr. Danhof and myself that would strike all of the verbiage that has been added to this section and go back to the language as recommended by the committee and I'd like to offer it at this time.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I move the committee do now rise and report to the convention.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the motion that the committee rise. As many as are in favor, signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, Vice President Downs resumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has under consideration one proposal and made certain amendments thereto. The secretary will make a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 15, A proposal to amend article II pertaining to the declaration of rights. It made several amendments thereto and has come to no final resolution thereon.

This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Dr. Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. President, would it be in order for me at this time to make the motion that I indicated I wanted to make earlier or is it necessary to wait until the whole section is concluded?

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: I am advised that that would be in order when the committee of the whole has reported the entire article or proposal to the floor and not at the present time.

Are there any announcements?

Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Mr. President, I merely wish to remind the committee on local government that under our schedule, when we do adjourn we will reconvene for lunch 15 minutes thereafter, across the street at the Mason cafeteria, and that provisions have been made for a separate table for our committee.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I think a word of explanation is needed. You have noticed on your desks a committee proposal and comment thereon. Our report was submitted this morning. It involves state credit and state borrowing and is a matter of some slight consequence. Members of the committee reminded us that this will not appear in the journal until Monday. Many of you will not get back until late Monday. It will be eligible for consideration Monday night and yet you will have had no opportunity to examine it. Therefore, we have placed on each of your desks an exact copy of what will appear in the journal on Monday, so that if you wish to amuse yourselves in the field of finance over the weekend, you have the opportunity to be prepared for whatever may happen Monday night.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. President and gentlemen and ladies of the convention, I intended to make this statement yesterday and did not get the opportunity. I desire to clarify the record of Wednesday's proceedings in order to guard against possible misinterpretation. My observations were not occasioned by anything that had been said by my long time and good friend Delegate Bledsoe; quite the contrary. The protests which were voiced by several other delegates arose out of statements emanating from an entirely different source. Mr. Bledsoe spoke with eloquence, warmth and persuasiveness, but free from anything that could reasonably be considered offensive, and I wish to make sure that the record is clear on this point. Thank you.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Are there any other announcements?

SECRETARY CHASE: Following the announcements of the committee meetings that the secretary has at hand, he also has available here the latest weather report.

The committee on administration will meet in the conference room next Wednesday, January 17, at 1:00 o'clock. Walter DeVries, chairman.

The committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E January 15, Monday, at 6:00 o'clock.

The committee on judicial branch will meet in room B Monday, January 15, at 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon. Mr. Danhof, chairman.

The meeting of the subcommittee on higher education is invited to meet with the subcommittee on primary and secondary education at 4:00 p.m. Monday in room J to consider matters relating to the state board of education. Roscoe Bonisteel, chairman.

The committee on education will meet Tuesday, January 16, at 8:30; Wednesday, the seventeenth, immediately following the session; and Thursday, the eighteenth, at 10:30 in the morning. Full committee meetings to consider subcommittee reports.

The weather report: fairly clear; snowing over most of the lower peninsula. Route 131 is questionable; bad in spots only. Driving conditions are generally fair.

Those are all of the announcements, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Dr. Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Mr. President and fellow delegates, for the last 3 days we have had some very interesting discussions on a very fundamental basis of our American life. I think we should pay tribute to a person who brought about, or helped to bring about, this convention. I am referring to Paul Revere and his ride. To refresh your memories of that ride, I quote the words of the youngster who wrote the essay on Paul Revere. He described it as follows:

Clopp, clopp, clopp — knock, knock, knock.
Who's there?
Paul.
Paul who?
Paul Revere.
Come in, Paul. Hello, Paul.
Hello, Sam.
Have a cup of coffee?
No, I'm in a hurry.
You're in a hurry?
Yeh. The British are coming.
The British are coming?
Yeh.
Goodbye, Paul.
Goodbye, Sam.
Clopp, clopp, clopp. (laughter and applause)

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Thank you, Mr. Anspach. Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Before I make the customary motion at this time, I want to announce that one of our delegates has just had another grandchild. Mrs. Lillian Hatcher has a baby grandson who was born last week, the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Williams, Mrs. Williams being the daughter of Mrs. Hatcher. I know you can't believe that she could actually have any grandchildren because she always looks so young. (applause)

In view of Mrs. Hatcher's statement on the women earlier, I just thought I'd mention that on this day in the year 1932 the state of Arkansas elected Hattie Carroway the first woman senator to serve in the senate.

With that comment, I move that we adjourn.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: All those in favor, signify by saying aye. Opposed, by no.

The convention is adjourned until next Monday at 8:00 p.m.

[Whereupon, at 12:40 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 8:00 o'clock p.m., Monday, January 15, 1962.]

FIFTY-SEVENTH DAY

Monday, January 15, 1962, 8:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

The invocation tonight will be given by one of our delegates, Mrs. Koeze.

Will you please rise.

MRS. KOEZE: Almighty God, who has given us this good land for our heritage, we humbly beseech Thee that we may always prove ourselves a people mindful of Thy favor and glad to do Thy will. Bless our land with honorable industry, sound learning, and pure manners. Save us from violence, discord, and confusion; from pride and arrogancy, and from every evil way. Defend our liberties, and fashion into one united people the multitudes brought hither out of many kindreds and tongues. Endue with the spirit of wisdom those to whom in Thy name we entrust the authority of government, that there may be justice and peace at home and that, through obedience to Thy law, we may show forth Thy praise among the nations of the earth.

In the time of prosperity, fill our hearts with thankfulness, and in the day of trouble suffer not our trust in Thee to fail; all which we ask through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present, please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The voting machine is now locked, and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave:

Mr. Anspach called from Mt. Pleasant to report that Mrs. Anspach caught her heel, fell down some stairs, and is presently in the hospital. The surgeon thinks there are no fractures, but he wishes to make sure. He wishes to be excused from tonight's session.

Mr. Heideman called from Hancock. His scheduled plane, which he expected to take in time to be here, will not take off until 7:25 because of weather conditions. He wishes to be excused.

Mr. Woolfenden phoned from Detroit. He has a previous speaking engagement that must be filled and asked to be excused.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Anspach, Bentley, Heideman, Snyder, Thomson and Woolfenden.

Absent without leave: Messrs. T. S. Brown and Gust.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the delegates are excused.

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no standing committee reports on file, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, may I make an oral report on behalf of the committee on administration? Upon the request of many of the delegates, the committee on administration is happy to announce the opening of the constitution hall restaurant service for delegates and staff. It features international cuisine of sandwiches, milk and coffee. The hours are as follows: Monday, 5:30 to 7:30, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 11:30 to 1:30, and 5:30 to 7:30 in the evening and on Friday, 11:30 to 1:30. That concludes our report.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you, Mr. DeVries.

Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Pollock, on behalf of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections offers Resolution 64, A resolution to memorialize the legislature in the matter of the deletion of section 22 of article II of the 1908 constitution.

Following is Resolution 64 as offered:

Resolved, That the legislature be informed that the deletion of section 22 of article II is not to be construed as opposing the definition of subversion by the legislature, or providing a statutory crime of subversion; and be it further

Resolved, That the last paragraph is held to be of extremely doubtful constitutionality as a denial of due process of law and that such a provision would not, in any case, be within the powers of the legislature; and be it further

Resolved, That the provision is held to be so poorly drafted that its exact meaning cannot be determined; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the legislature.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on rules and resolutions.

Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, I move that the reasons submitted by the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule in support of Committee Proposal 19 as appears on page 301, Journal 54, paragraph 5, be corrected in the following manner. The report reads: "While the power for a sovereign state to defend itself is clear, . . ."

We would like to strike out "even absent provision in the constitution, without" and then insert "without a constitutional"; so that the language will then read, "While the power for a sovereign state to defend itself is clear, without a constitutional provision it would not be clear in what branch of government the power resided."

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unless there is objection, a correction will be made in the journal. Hearing no objection, it is ordered corrected.

[Correction made, see below, page 593.]

Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders.

Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, I move the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering proposals on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Baginski. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, Mr. Baginski assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The committee will be in order. The Chair recognizes Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, if I am in order at this time, I would like to move that consideration of section 10 of the first order of business on general orders be placed on special orders for Friday of this week. If I am not in order, I will move that further consideration of the whole article be placed on special orders for Friday of this week.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Section 10 has already been considered. The motion to reconsider was turned down. So I am afraid I don't understand Mr. Iverson's motion. Could he give some reason why this should be done?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Do you care to explain, Mr. Iverson?

MR. IVERSON: I think this matter was explained to the chairman of this committee. The delegates will remember that at the close of the session, I believe, Friday, Mr. W.F. Hanna suggested that this matter ought to be discussed as to whether or not there was a possibility of a compromise which would be satisfactory to everyone, and I would certainly see no objection to surveying that possibility.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Iverson, the Chair might suggest that this motion be made after the committee of the whole rises.

MR. IVERSON: I don't think so. I think that is improper because we have this matter before us at this time. I think it is entirely proper at this time as to whether or not the committee of the whole takes action to place this on special orders on Friday, as I have requested.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Why Friday? Why not Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday?

MR. IVERSON: Make it any time you want to.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair would like to ask Mr. Iverson: Mr. Iverson, do you want to preclude any further consideration of the other sections of the body of the Proposal?

MR. IVERSON: I made the first motion, if it were in order, that the consideration of section 10 be placed on special orders for Friday. If that is not in order, then I move that further consideration of the entire article be postponed until Friday on special orders.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Iverson, I am advised that if you will permit consideration of all the other parts of the proposal, then, after we are through, we will take up the matter of section 10 and make that a special order for a certain day.

MR. IVERSON: I have no objection to that. I would assume, then, that the complete article would not be voted out of the committee of the whole.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: No, because you would have section 10 under consideration and that would take it with it.

MR. IVERSON: I have no objection.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: I wonder if I could ask, through the Chair, if Mr. Iverson would agree to either Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday instead of Friday. My reason for asking it, Mr. Iverson, is that I believe Delegate DeVries had a rather unfortunate experience presenting something to the convention on Friday. I thought it may be better to do it on one of the other days. I have no objection to the matter being held over.

MR. IVERSON: I have no objection, except that I don't want to delay it any longer than necessary.

MR. DOWNS: I meant Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday before this coming Friday.

MR. IVERSON: I would agree to some date next week.

MR. DOWNS: No. That would be this week. I think your suggestion was Friday of this week. Could I ask of Mr. Iverson if he would agree to Thursday of this week?

MR. IVERSON: I thought you said of next week.

MR. DOWNS: No. I am sorry. I misspoke myself if I did. I meant one of the days before Friday of this week.

MR. IVERSON: No, I have no objection.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Could I inquire then, if either Wednesday or Thursday is agreeable to Mr. Iverson?

MR. IVERSON: In view of your suggestion, Tom, I would suggest Thursday, but we will renew the motion when consideration of the rest of this article is made.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, Committee Proposal 15, A proposal to amend article II pertaining to the declaration of rights.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 15, see above, page 562.

This has been under consideration in the committee of the whole, and at the time the committee rose last Friday there was an amendment pending to section 4, on page 2, line 6. The language of the amendment offered by Mr. A. G. Elliott had been revised and was as follows:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 571.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment by Mr. Elliott as revised by Mr. DeVries. As many as are in favor of the amendment will signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment, as revised, is not adopted.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: There has been filed with the secretary an amendment by Messrs. Ford and Danhof as follows:

1. Amend page 2, line 6, after "press" by striking out the remainder of the section and inserting a period; so that the language will then read:

> Sec. 4. Every person may freely speak, write, express, and publish his views on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of such right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment by Messrs. Ford and Danhof.

Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I would like to bring to the attention of the delegates that there is on their desks—at least I found one on mine, and I think all of them have it—a memorandum prepared by Dr. Kelly regarding this particular section.

I would imagine that this matter was prepared somewhat indirectly at the behest of myself when I spoke to Mr. Stevens and suggested that, after the committee of the whole had adopted the previous amendment, it would be well to have somebody research the matter, and particularly to endeavor to point out to this committee that there is an historical difference between radio-television and the spoken and written word. Dr. Kelly is quite frank to admit that it is the argument of the paper that this is of dubious value.

I state this not because of any matter or any animosity that I have for the radio and TV; quite the contrary. But I do feel that if the committee does not delete the language we added previously, we will, in effect, be doing a great deal of harm rather than good. It seems clear to me at the present time that radio and television are controlled almost completely, if not 100 per cent, by the federal government. However, the time may arrive, that none of us can foresee, when the states may be returned a certain part of control of the radio and television media and that regulatory laws and statutes will become necessary.

You will note that in the federal government field there has always been a great deal of restraint over radio and television which has not been present pertaining to newspapers, books, periodicals, and magazines; that due to the nature of the media and the monopolistic status of the same, the fact that there are only so many television channels available, and the fact that there are only so many bands available on the radio, it is felt that rather than have open competition, there is regulation. I feel that rather than to raise television and radio, as I think the hopes of this amendment were, we might well be allowing for regulation of the press by putting them all on an equal plane.

I submit this is a long memorandum but, if you will read the first and second sentences and glance through it, you will find that there is a great deal of difference.

You can write and you can speak many more things than you are able to transmit over the air waves. Radio and television are required to give equal time to various sides of a political question. This is not true historically as applies to the press. I think this committee should realize that press is not to be construed in the narrow sense as we sometime use it, meaning only the commercial newspaper industry in this country. The press means the right of you and I to write a pamphlet and prepare a brochure in any particular field. I think that this memorandum sets it forth in very precise terms and I would urge a favorable vote.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment.

Mr. Plank.

MR. PLANK: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, inasmuch as this was just now placed on my desk, I would like to have further time for consideration of it. With all due respect to Dr. Kelly, he and I disagree in several sections of this paper. But if the committee would prefer, I think I would subscribe to Mr. Hanna's amendment and would urge that you support that if you don't want to give me further time to give a little study to Dr. Kelly's release.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, the purpose of the amendment was to return us to the language originally proposed by the committee, which was considered by the body before the amendments were made to it, and this would bring us back closer to the language of the federal constitution.

It is the view of some of us that by adding the language that has been proposed here, rather than broadening the protection of free speech, we would be limiting it because we would be identifying it with the rather narrow concept of communication rather than the broad concept that it now has by reason of the many favorable decisions which have been rendered with respect to the federal provisions and decisions rendered with respect to state laws. For this reason we feel that this is a move toward returning to a well defined area of the law, and is the safe course in view of the fact that radio and television have been ruled upon in numerous cases and have been more than adequately protected in the same manner as the press and other means of communication under the present language.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I wish to say that I think the committee report which the Danhof and Ford amendment would have us support is preferable to the additions we made. I feel that by adding radio and television and the other terms, we may have inadvertently weakened the original intent. This does have the historic terms "liberty of speech and press." I am inclined to think that Delegate Hanna's amendment, using the word liberty, is grammatically a little better form, though I do have an emotional attachment to the "liberty of speech or press" term.

If Mr. Plank wishes to carry this over and have an opportunity to read the memo, I certainly would have no objection to that but I think either the Danhof and Ford amendment or the Hanna amendment will get at the intent of what we were trying to discuss last week.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Plank.

MR. PLANK: As I said earlier, if the committee would like to vote favorably on Mr. Hanna's amendment, I believe I would rest my case there.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Ford and Danhof amendment. As many as are in favor of the amendment will signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

Mr. Plank.

MR. PLANK: Mr. Chairman, I believe I would like a division on that last vote. From where I sit it didn't seem like it carried.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Is there support for division? Will you rise? Sufficient number up. As many as are in favor of the Ford and Danhof amendment will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Seventy-four.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Those opposed. I am advised 74 is a majority of the complete membership.

Therefore the amendment is adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. W. F. Hanna has filed the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 6, after "abridge" by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "these liberties."; so the language will then read, "...and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge these liberties.".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, the reason for doing this is not to change the intent of the federal constitution, but to solve what has developed historically now that we have means of communication other than speech or press, to-wit: the dramatic arts or movies and television.

Now, the words "these liberties," refer back to the words in the first, in the third and fourth lines, "speak, write, express, and publish", and we eliminate the egotistical argument that radio and TV should be treated equally with press, when press is construed purely as newspaper. I think the liberties that we want to protect are my right as a rebel to speak, write, express or publish my views at any time and I believe that if the founding fathers were faced with the various means of communication that we are now confronted with and the development of the newspaper as a commercial enterprise, as we now have it, rather than the private newspaper of the period of the revolution, this language might well have been written by our founding fathers rather than the words "speech or press."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment.

Dr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the Hanna amendment because I believe the words which are sought to be stricken are words that have been the ancient liberties of the American people and the people of England. They indicate not so much speech and press in a technical sense as they indicate the spoken word and the written word and I think that by limiting them we do not declare this as a declaration of rights, we limit this as a declaration of rights. And for this which I believe a cogent reason, we ought to vote against the Hanna amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is now on the Hanna amendment. As many as are in favor of the amendment will signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The Chair is in doubt. Those in favor will—

Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, it occurs to me, in accordance with the order of the Chair previously, that this amendment, although I may be sympathetic to it, is not in order due to the fact that it is contradictory to the one just adopted.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Would you explain that further?

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, having adopted the Danhof and Ford amendment, it is inconsistent with the Hanna amendment, and therefore would not be properly before the body, since it is in conflict with the Danhof and Ford amendment just adopted.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Brown, will you tell us more about this? (laughter)

The question was on the amendment.

Mr. Plank.

MR. PLANK: Did the Chair rule we are going to vote on the amendment?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Well, we did vote on the amendment—not on the Hanna amendment. The Chair rules the Hanna amendment is in order.

Now the question is on the adoption of the Hanna amendment.

MR. PLANK: Mr. Chairman, would you be kind enough to have the secretary read the amendment again, please?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hanna has offered the following amendment:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 577.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Those that are in favor of the Hanna amendment will please rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Sixty.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Those opposed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Fifty-six.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The amendment is adopted.

Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon has filed the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 6, after "abridge the" by striking out "liberty" and inserting "freedom".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Fellow delegates, I just insert this word because we do talk about this in terms of freedom of speech and freedom of the press. The federal constitution refers to it as freedom of speech and refers to this as freedom. The other constitutions of the states that made up the old northwest, Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin and Illinois, refer to it as freedom and I think it is much more consistent with the language to refer to this in terms of freedom rather than liberty.

It is a small point, but I though we might consider it here. Freedom is the word that has been used more frequently and we do talk about this as freedom, the freedom of speech. That is all.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, the committee has no strong feelings on this point. We simply used the word that was in the Michigan constitution. We have felt all along that there is no point in changing words unless there is some strong reason for it. Our only point is that if Delegate Faxon thinks this is a better word, the burden is upon him to prove that it should be freedom and not liberty. I don't think it is going to change the meaning in any respect.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, a point of order. I am not exactly sure what Delegate Faxon now asks us to vote on in view of the action of the committee in adopting the Hanna amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I think now it would be freedoms rather than the freedom of speech as I had originally thought it would be if the original committee report were adopted. So it would be "abridge these freedoms."

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon has revised his amendment to read as follows:

1. Amend page 2, line 6, after "abridge these" by striking out "liberties" and inserting "freedoms"; so the language will then read, ". . . and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge these freedoms."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Senator Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Van Dusen raised the same point I wanted to.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: A point of information. I am now confused as to exactly where we stand. As I recall, we adopted the Danhof amendment by 74 votes. We have now adopted the Hanna amendment by 60 votes. Where do we stand on this proposal at this particular moment?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: It is a very simple matter. Delegate Faxon likes the word freedom rather than liberty, so he wants to change the word liberty to freedom. I don't think it would change the meaning. He wants to follow the federal constitution and some other states. The committee saw fit to follow the Michigan constitution which has used this word all these years, we thought, with satisfaction. That's all there is to it. Do you want to change the wording from the word liberty or liberties, as it is in the journal, to freedom? The committee sees no point to it unless Delegate Faxon wants to support his argument by sufficient reasons.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I rise to support the suggestion made by Mr. Faxon. I believe there is a syntactical question here. You are creating a right of freely speaking, freely writing, freely expressing, freely publishing, and certainly it seems to be consistent with the spirit of the Hanna amendment to change the terms in the first sentence of this particular section, because you are thinking in those terms in the first sentence of this particular section.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Just an additional word: liberty, of course, is from the Latin liber, and freedom is from the anglo saxon derivation, and so it is more in our tradition of American anglo saxon tradition to use the word freedom of speech. I think this can be shown as you go a little further back.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to suggest to the committee seriously—when we now spend all of our time arguing about the meaning of words—that we have a committee on style and drafting for that. Why waste the time of the committee of the whole arguing on a point of this nature? Make your argument before the committee on style and drafting and then it will come back for a second reading and you can debate the substance of it then.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Faxon amendment. Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, the committee supports Delegate Hutchinson's idea that these things should go to the committee on style and drafting and be reported back, at which time, if the words aren't satisfactory to the delegates, they still have another chance.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Faxon amendment. All in favor signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted.

Any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the amendments that have been filed, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any further amendments to the body of the proposal?

Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: I renew my motion at this point.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Iverson moves that any further consideration of this proposal be postponed until Thursday, January 18. As many as are in favor of the motion, signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: In the adoption, or in the proposed amendment, should we not have passed upon that section before? You didn't rule that that section had passed, as I understand it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Section 4?

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Yes, section 4 as amended.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to section 4, as amended? If not, it will pass.

Section 4, as amended, is passed.

The Chair will advise now that the motion to postpone until Thursday has prevailed.

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman. Does that mean this committee does not report out to the convention the proposal as finally amended?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That is correct.

MR. POLLOCK: Section 10 of article II?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That is right.

MR. POLLOCK: In other words, that remains in the committee of the whole?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That is right.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 16, A proposal to permit the governor to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons and to delegate this power according to law. Amends article VI, section 9.

Following is Committee Proposal 16 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

[He may] THE GOVERNOR SHALL HAVE POWER TO grant reprieves, commutations and pardons after convictions for all offenses, except [treason and] cases of impeachment[,]. [upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations as he may think proper, subject to regulations provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons.] HE MAY DELEGATE SUCH POWERS SUBJECT TO SUCH PROCEDURES AS PRESCRIBED BY LAW. [Upon conviction for treason, he may suspend the execution of the sentence until the case shall be reported to the legislature at its next session, when the legislature shall either pardon or commute the sentence, direct the execution of the sentence or grant a further reprieve.] He shall communicate to the legislature at each session information of each case of reprieve, commutation or pardon granted and the reasons therefor.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 16:

It is felt that the governor should not be required personally to handle all applications for reprieves, commutations or pardons; but should be allowed to delegate this to a statutory authority. In fact, that has been the method of procedure since 1893 when a board of pardons with advisory functions was established in Michigan by statute. The general functions of this board are now carried on by the parole board in the department of corrections. While its powers are still advisory, its hearings and recommendations to the governor are generally accepted and followed. The governor's duties are too strenuous to require him to handle all the details of this function in person.

The crime of treason is defined by the present state constitution (article II, section 21), and the committee on rights, suffrage and elections has recommended retention of this provision. The legislature has full power to provide for the punishment of treason. The federal government does, however, operate almost exclusively in this area. The definition of treason in the United States constitution and the Michigan constitution are essentially the same. The committee believes that treason should be treated in the same manner as other crimes and offenses, insofar as reprieves, commutations, and pardons are concerned, and has so provided.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the committee on executive branch feels that the present provision in the constitution is unduly detailed and restrictive so far as questions of parole and commutation of sentences are concerned.

The general practice is today, and has been for many years, to delegate these functions to another body so that the governor doesn't have to carry out all these detailed functions himself. The committee felt that this practice should be recognized.

The committee also felt that the crime of treason, which is defined in the constitution in the same way as it is in the federal constitution, and with respect to which the legislature has full power to provide punishment, and also power to provide a limitation on pardons if it wishes to do so, might properly be left to the decision of the legislature.

That is the reason behind the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to Proposal 16? If not, it will be passed.

Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to raise one point in regard to this. I am a little bit disturbed about this idea that the governor shall be permitted to delegate his power of pardon. I recognize the problem; that is that in this day and age the governor has to receive the recommendation of a parole board and whatnot. That's already contemplated in our present constitution, where it says: ". . . subject to regulation provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardon." But the constitution doesn't, at least in its present language, connote in my mind that the governor has the power to delegate this responsibility. If he delegates the responsibility to some other person or body, then, of course, he escapes the responsibility himself.

I admit I haven't had the benefit of the careful examination and the thought the committee gave to this but I wish that Mr. Martin could elucidate a little bit further about the wisdom of permitting the governor to delegate a responsibility. As I say, once a responsibility is delegated to others, then it is no longer his.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Hutchinson, the authority is permissive. The legislature can provide as it sees fit in that regard and the governor is not required to delegate in any given instance. If he wishes, however, to delegate, he would be permitted to do so under this provision.

MR. HUTCHINSON: That is what I understand, Mr. Martin. My point is I don't think it is a good policy to permit him to delegate. I think it is a very necessary policy to provide that he shall have a board or some other group making recommendations to him but I don't think that that constitutes a delegation of power and I feel quite strongly at the moment that to delegate the power, using the word delegate in the constitution, would go much further than we go now. I wonder why it is necessary to go so far.

MR. MARTIN: Well, the thought of the committee was that thorough and careful study is given to these problems by people who are assigned to them and work with them all the time and that the question should rest with those who are most familiar with the background of the individuals involved and their response to treatment and their general evidence of rehabilitation and of repentance.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, it would appear that what is in mind here is that there will be and continue to be a parole board which, working with the prison officials and examining all these records in detail, will make recommendations to the governor. My question is whether, in Mr. Martin's mind, the words "recommending to the governor" mean the same thing as a delegation by the governor to the parole board in this regard. Do we have the same thing in mind, and are we using different words?

MR. MARTIN: I am not sure that we do. I think that your interpretation is correct; that the governor could delegate, particularly with respect to lesser offenses—if he saw fit to delegate—the full responsibility to the parole board, and to take action with respect to parole or reprieve and commutation.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Martin, is this the concept that is common in many state constitutions?

MR. MARTIN: I can't answer that, Mr. Hutchinson, as to whether it is a common concept. The committee did feel, after considerable discussion, that we have had extensive experience with the course of reviewing the backgrounds of those who have been committed to prison and that we have enough experience with that so that we can properly entrust this responsibility to those people who are most familiar with the backgrounds of the individuals involved.

---

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, it occurs to me that we are here making a departure from a very historic function of the chief executive; that the power of the chief executive, the governor, or the president in the federal system, over the function of paroles and pardons—well, it goes way back to the very beginning. I wonder whether we want, in this day and age, to remove from the governor that final responsibility in this area. I am frank to say at the moment that I am not persuaded that we should do it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any amendments to Committee Proposal 16?

SECRETARY CHASE: Miss Donnelly has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1 and the language of lines 8 to 11 by striking out of line 10 the words "He may delegate such powers subject to such procedures as prescribed by law", and reinserting the language as it appears in lines 8 and 9, which read, "Upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations as he may think proper, subject to regulations provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Norris, do you care to speak on this amendment?

MR. NORRIS: No, Mr. Chairman, my original point in standing was to ask a question of the committee chairman which may have some relevance to the Donnelly amendment. I wondered if I might ask her, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, just what kinds of cases or what kinds of problems has experience indicated to justify the proposal?

I appear to understand, in terms of your colloquy with Mr. Hutchinson, that it is just a general proposition here that you address yourself to, a general principle. I wondered what pragmatic history has led to this proposal. Is there a set of facts or set of cases, particular conditions involved in situations where perhaps the power of pardon wasn't properly exercised?

MR. MARTIN: No. The matter is not addressed to any particular case or series of cases or particular injustices. It relates to the experience of the state government over the past 60 years in the handling of these matters and the fact that we have had rather extensive experience in handling the matter through a parole board.

It is possible Mr. Millard may be able to give us more information and may want to make some comment on this. While he was a member of our committee he was chairman of the subcommittee which worked on this proposal. Mr. Millard, do you want to enlighten the delegates any further on this point?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, it was felt by the committee that since the power of commutation of sentences and reprieve is something that is extra curricular for the executive, it primarily should be more in the judicial area. However, according to most of the states, this power of pardon, reprieve and commutation of sentences is lodged in the executive. The executive, however, doesn't have the time to investigate all of the circumstances surrounding the sentencing of any person and consequently doesn't have the time to make such an investigation. Therefore it has been delegated since 1893 to a pardon and parole board, which makes the investigation and reports its facts and findings to the executive. He takes that and acts on it in a position of advisory capacity. Now, he has been doing this all these years, and the committee felt when I was with them—and I am just talking now; I haven't reviewed this since I discussed it in the committee—but the committee felt that inasmuch as the pardon and parole board does the actual work, that it should have the power, or the power should be delegated to it officially to do it. It doesn't have it now except by statute, but it certainly would give it constitutional status so that it will be in a better position to be an adviser to the governor.

As stated in the proposal, it is subject to legislative action, and the legislature will set forth all the necessary rules and procedures governing this pardon and parole board.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Stevens on the Donnelly amendment.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, I wish to ask—

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens, just a second. There is a correction to be made.

SECRETARY CHASE: The secretary asks Miss Donnelly's pardon for misinterpreting the amendment she offered. Her amendment is:

1. Amend page 1 by striking out all of lines 6 through 15 and inserting the original language of section 9, article VI of the Constitution of 1908.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Well, perhaps this would not be on the Donnelly amendment. I wanted to ask why, in the case of something so important as pardon, we should deviate from the usually accepted practice both in the state and federal government of making the chief executive responsible for these things. He doesn't do the work but he does have the responsibility. I agree with things Delegate Hutchinson said about this. I think the governor should keep that responsibility. If that is the nature of this amendment, I would support it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Mahinske on the Donnelly amendment.

MR. MAHINSKE: First of all, a point of information. Does the Donnelly amendment attempt to reinsert the language of lines 11, 12, 13 and 14?

SECRETARY CHASE: Miss Donnelly's amendment was to strike out the new material printed in capital letters in the proposal and reinsert the entire present language of the section as it appears in the Constitution of 1908.

MR. MAHINSKE: Now, before I can decide which side of this I am on, I would like to ask either Mr. Millard or Mr. Martin a question relating to the mechanics of instituting this new language. Which would come first, the delegation of powers absolutely and then the legislative act, or a tentative delegation of powers subject to review of the legislative act, and then an absolute delegation of powers in conformance with the legislative act, or just exactly what are the mechanics you had in mind here?

MR. MARTIN: I believe that, under the language you now have proposed, the legislature would have to pass legislation providing for the procedure to be followed and under such legislation the governor would then have the authority to delegate action on such cases as he thought desirable.

MR. MAHINSKE: My question is, would the legislation be binding on the governor if it came back objectionable to the governor?

MR. MARTIN: The legislation would be binding on the governor if passed and approved by the legislature and approved by the governor; not vetoed by the governor.

MR. MAHINSKE: In reality, what we would have is the governor saying to the legislature, I want to delegate my power of parole and you take it from there, and they could delegate this to something other than the parole board—the probation department. They could set up a new kind of commission, if they wanted to, or handle it themselves.

MR. MARTIN: No, I think the governor is not obligated. The legislation, the provision, is permissive. It says he may delegate. It doesn't require him to delegate. Unless there was some implementing legislation, it would not now be possible to delegate.

MR. MAHINSKE: Should the governor specify in his delegation prior to the legislation being enacted, exactly what program he had in mind?

MR. MARTIN: He could make recommendation to the legislature as to what kind of legislation he wants but he couldn't prescribe the legislation.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Hubbs on the Donnelly amendment.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, my fellow delegates, in the event this question should revolve on a legal proposition, I would like to bring this to the attention of the delegates who are not attorneys. I have come to the conclusion that the committee, although seriously interested in doing a good job, has overlooked the condition whereby, in the event somebody was applying for a pardon or reprieve, they might apply to this board or commission and be turned down; but since this consists of a number of people, they would never be able to put the finger right on the any particular man and say, "Are you for this thing or against it?"

I think even though this board or commission does all the work in deciding whether a man should be pardoned or reprieved, the final say of yes or no should rest with one man so the buck could not be passed any further than that. And at this point I think the governor should say yes, this man shall be pardoned or no, he shall not be pardoned. And my point of view is from the standpoint of getting a final say-so, and the final authority should rest with one man; in this case the governor. And I therefore support the Donnelly amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: I pass.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Senator Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: I pass.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I would like to ask Miss Donnelly a question.

MR. DEHNKE: I have asked for the floor.

MR. FAXON: I yield.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: You yield to Judge Dehnke?

MR. FAXON: Yes. I just wanted to ask Miss Donnelly a question. I will yield to him.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I am afraid I cannot interpret this language in the way it has been interpreted here now, that the legislature could restrict the governor. This says he may delegate such powers subject to such procedures as may be prescribed by law. In order to provide for the other, it should read he may delegate such powers subject to such restrictions as may be prescribed by law.

It occurs to me that it may be safe enough to delegate this power relative to those who are serving short sentences but it would hardly be advisable to take this responsibility from the governor's shoulders as to life terms or terms for long numbers of years.

It has been said that, under the procedure as we have it now, the governor usually acts upon the recommendation of the parole board. Nevertheless, he must, under our practice, take the final responsibility. On that same theory we have probation officers who make investigations for the courts and recommendations as to what they think the sentence should be. On this theory, they might be asked to delegate to the probation officer the imposition of the sentence.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I would like to ask Miss Donnelly a question through the Chair: why she is including lines 11, 12 and 13, and part of 14, if by line 7 there is a deletion of the word treason? Why include that in her amendment?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: Because your preface is incorrect. There is no deletion of treason in line 7 in my amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I thought I would bring to your attention a couple of paragraphs from the Comparative Analysis of the Michigan Constitution which might shed some light on the discussion. I have no particular point of view I am supporting. It states:

> The important powers here dealt with are somewhat judicial in nature, although usually conferred upon the executive with or without restriction. They are generally unrelated to the governor's major area of responsibility in executive administrative matters.

Then it gives a brief rundown of how it is handled in other states. In approximately 1/3 of the states the governor alone may not exercise the power. In most instances it is shared with the board. In some 14 states the legislature may regulate the procedure by law. In the remaining ones—that is, the states—16 including Michigan, the governor's power is relatively unrestricted, with the lawmaking process governing only the manner of applying the pardons.

I don't think it was the intent of the subcommittee, of which I was a member, to take any power away from the governor and I don't think we have done that. We have only provided that power may be delegated and then not by the governor alone but by the legislature.

Now obviously, if the governor wishes under the present system to delegate this power, he can. He can delegate it to his brother-in-law and all he has to do is, when his brother-in-law comes up with the final recommendation, accept it and read it and endorse it. Now, if it is merely a matter of fixing a final responsibility, say in capital cases, upon the governor, I certainly would not object to that, if that is what a majority of the committee would want.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is now upon the Donnelly amendment.

Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Miss Donnelly's amendment covers 2 matters. It covers the question of whether the legislature should have authority to determine the handling of treason cases as it does murder cases and other cases of serious type, and it also deals with this question of delegation of powers to grant reprieves and pardons. I wonder if it would be possible to consider those 2 questions separately?

If the delegate wishes to do so, lines 8 and 9 relate to this problem of delegation relating to the new language inserted in the middle of that section. The rest of the provision relates to the problem of whether you should treat treason on an entirely separate basis.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Any comments, Miss Donnelly?

MISS DONNELLY: If I understood him, and I am not sure I did, his thought was, one, decide whether this committee wishes the governor to have any power to delegate; two, how they are going to treat treason. Is that correct?

MR. MARTIN: That is correct, yes.

MISS DONNELLY: I am not at all sure why he feels that this is proper, necessary, or even worthwhile. In other words, I am somewhat opposed to it. If you could give me a better argument, I might have to go along, but on the face of it, I cannot see any justification for it. I am sorry if I misunderstood the point.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, is it possible to divide the question in that way?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair wishes to advise it is Miss Donnelly's amendment and she doesn't care to divide the question.

MISS DONNELLY: I don't care to at this point because I cannot see any reason for it. If he can enlarge upon his grounds, I might be perfectly willing to go along with it. Right now I cannot see any reason.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the amendment of Miss Donnelly. The Chair recognizes Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Question, Mr. Chairman, of Mr. Martin. Mr. Martin, if an amendment were offered to the committee report to clearly put before us the question of the governor's power, if you change on line 10 the words "may delegate" to "shall exercise", so that it would read "He shall exercise such powers subject to procedures as prescribed by law," would this clearly put before this committee the issue posed by Mr. Hutchinson and yourself, and yet retain the better language of the committee?

MR. MARTIN: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is now on the Donnelly amendment. As many as are in favor of the amendment signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: A division has been called for. Is there support? A sufficient number are up. As many as are in favor of the Donnelly amendment will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Fifty.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Those opposed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Seventy.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The amendment is not adopted.

Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: I sent an amendment to the secretary's desk which I will ask him to read.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any further amendments to Committee Proposal 16?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Dehnke offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 10 after "to such" by inserting "limitations and"; so the language will then read, "He may delegate such powers, subject to such limitations and procedures as prescribed by law."

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman, that will accomplish, I think, very clearly what the committee seems to have had in mind. It removes any possibility of this amendment being adopted with the thought in mind that the legislature could control it. As it is now worded, they can control only the procedure. With the amendment that I have offered it will read, to repeat: "He may delegate such powers subject to such limitations and procedures as prescribed by law."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the committee would have no objection to that amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the Dehnke amendment. The Chair would like to make this statement before it calls for the vote.

It is very difficult here at times to make an exact determination whether the ayes or nays have it because of some state of lethargy that we get into as we vote and then when the division is called for we get a different situation. So when we call for the vote, let's have the ayes and nays.

Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, I am somewhat confused on this, myself. I would like to ask—of Judge Dehnke, perhaps—does this mean then, that a governor could decide to delegate power, the legislature passes statutes to that effect—for example, anything excepting capital offenses could be decided by a parole board without the governor being involved—and then this would be a limitation on the governor that from here on out he would not have the inherent power to provide a pardon or anything the legislature provided he could delegate?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: It would restrict only his authority to delegate. It says he may delegate these powers to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons subject to such limitations and procedures as the legislature may require.

MR. HODGES: This would in no way affect the inherent power of the governor to at any time, at any place, grant a reprieve, commutation or pardon?

MR. DEHNKE: I don't see how that question could possibly be raised.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on Mr. Dehnke's amendment.

Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Judge Dehnke, this is not a delegation of the power but a sharing of the power, is that correct? The governor would still retain his inherent power to pardon?

MR. DEHNKE: Yes, but his authority to delegate would be subject to such limitations as the legislature might prescribe or impose.

MR. MAHINSKE: Then we could have the situation where the legislature could tell him he could not delegate power.

MR. DEHNKE: Then he would have to act on his own responsibility in that case and in that type of case.

MR. MAHINSKE: Under the wording of this provision here, would he be able to recall any power once delegated?

MR. DEHNKE: I think that could be construed. That is an entirely different question.

MR. MAHINSKE: In the event he would delegate his power and it was being abused, he would have no right to recall his power?

MR. DEHNKE: I think where he is authorized to delegate powers, he can take them back. That is the general rule. No limitation here.

MR. MAHINSKE: It certainly doesn't say that. It says he shall delegate his power or be empowered to delegate it.

MR. DEHNKE: It says he may.

MR. MAHINSKE: He may; but then, I am asking, if he does, can he absolutely recall his powers?

MR. DEHNKE: I would say so. I don't see any possibility of that being questioned. He probably would delegate that power in any individual case.

MR. MAHINSKE: At the same time retain the exact power that he has delegated. In other words, if a so called commission had refused to commute a sentence, the governor could override the commission and commute the sentence on his own inherent power?

MR. DEHNKE: I would say yes, in the light of the history of that power in the federal government and the state government. His power to grant pardons, reprieves and commutations is supreme. The only thing this would do would be to provide that in certain types of cases he could delegate that to other boards and individuals within such limitations as the legislature might prescribe.

MR. MAHINSKE: If the legislation prescribed an absolute spectrum here for him to delegate and he delegated an absolute power of commutation and pardon, at the same time you are saying he retains an absolute power, inherently.

MR. DEHNKE: I think I have answered this to the best of my ability, Mr. Mahinske. I think the power is supremely in the governor. This is an attempt to authorize him to relieve himself of that responsibility, at least to some extent, and the committee, by voting adversely on the Donnelly amendment, indicated that it was not out of sympathy with such an attempt.

This motion is made for amendment so as to give the legislature some authority to impose limitations. This is an important power of the governor. In my experience, at least one governor, I think admittedly, was defeated for renomination by his own party because of the public's dissatisfaction with the manner in which he had handled this power. I question very much whether the people of the state want to have this question administered in such a way that the responsibility will rest on a board or a group or some other individual rather than on the governor himself.

MR. MAHINSKE: But then, under the proposed change in the constitutional article itself, subject to your amendment, the governor would still have this power himself?

MR. DEHNKE: I don't think there is any doubt about it.

MR. MAHINSKE: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Judge Dehnke, if the current governor, under this provision of the constitution, asked the legislature to pass a bill—it says in here as by law—that all persons sentenced to 10 years or less could be handled by the power of pardon to be granted to the board of pardons; my first question is, could a subsequent governor, without a new enactment of the legislature, get this power back?

MR. DEHNKE: The form of the statute would be that the governor be authorized to delegate this power as to those cases where the sentences are less than a certain number of years.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Supposing that the governor asks that the legislature authorize him and the bill is so passed that this power is delegated to the board of pardons and parole and a subsequent governor wants to get the power back; can he get it back without a new enactment of the legislature?

MR. DEHNKE: I think all the legislature can do is authorize the governor to delegate if he wishes to.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Second question. If he delegates the power, can he override the board of pardons if he feels it made a mistake either by granting a pardon or refusing to grant a pardon?

MR. DEHNKE: That, I think, would be left to us as in the nature of work for lawyers to do.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. Chairman, this is a little bit mixed up to me. We are supposed to be dealing with the constitution, about a government that is divided into 3 parts. Article IV seems to indicate that and it also says that there may be some intermingling.

Here is a man who is convicted in a court of law under the judicial branch. Now the governor, under the executive branch, is going to pardon him but the legislature is going to tell him what to do and how to do it. I suspect we ought to leave this to the executive branch. If he wants to delegate the power, let him. But Mr. Dehnke's amendment would not be a procedural amendment as it is in the committee's report, but would also be a matter of substance, and the legislature could bar his right to delegate.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: I am inclined to agree with Mr. Tubbs. I think that we are confusing the power and the responsibility of pardons with the mechanics of carrying it out. We all recognize that the governor does use the assistance of others in determining when to grant pardons and when not to. I note on page 345 of this large volume that as long ago as 1901 the attorney general of the state ruled that the governor had implied power to employ such assistance as may be required to carry out the pardoning power by investigation and the like; indicating that without this language the governor has the power to use assistants in arriving at a decision without yielding his power or his responsibility.

I agree with Mr. Tubbs that this would give a division of responsibility. It seems to me that it would be better to strike the language entirely, because he has the power to use assistants, and yet the responsibility remains with him, where it should.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I think that brings us back to the very point Mr. Hutchinson raised in opening the discussion. This is not an easy duty and it is not one that would look attractive to any governor. And to pass this in the way it is presented would enable the governor to shift the responsibility in all cases, without qualifications, to somebody else or to some board. The only authority given to the legislature is to prescribe the procedure. That is as far as that goes in the form that it is presented. I think if we are going to adopt it at all, we should have some restriction on it so that he cannot delegate it in all cases, at least.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the Dehnke amendment. The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The Dehnke amendment is as follows:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 582.]

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the Dehnke amendment. As many as are in favor may signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

Are there any further amendments to Committee Proposal 16?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hutchinson has filed the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 10, after "may" by striking out "delegate" and inserting "exercise".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Senator Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I offered this amendment because I sense that in this modern day and age a good many people think that the governor hasn't got time to do this and they want to delegate the power. I don't think the power should be delegated. I think that if the legislature is to provide the restrictions and the procedures, then the governor should exercise the power only in accordance with these restrictions and procedures.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this word "exercise" bothers me a little bit. It seems to me now that we are limiting the power of the governor and I don't think that is what Senator Hutchinson intended, but that is the way I understood it, and I would like to have him explain it, if he would.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, as I read this, it starts out with one sentence that says, "The governor shall have the power to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons after convictions for all offenses, except cases of impeachment." Now he has that power. As it stands now, the proposal says, "He may delegate such powers subject to such limitations and procedures as prescribed by law."

My feeling is that he ought not to be permitted to delegate the power. If he is going to be governed by restrictions and procedures as prescribed by law, then—if those restrictions and procedures are to mean anything at all—he will have to exercise his power only in accordance with them. If you don't do that, why, there isn't any use in writing a lot of statutes having to do with restrictions and procedures. If you write a lot of statutes relative to restrictions and procedures and then say, well, the governor has the power to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons irrespective of them, we would be much better off to simply say he has the power to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons period, and recognize that it is his power.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Maybe the confusion lies in this:

Senator Hutchinson, on line 10 are the first 2 words on this sheet he may or he shall?

MR. HUTCHINSON: He may.

MR. MAHINSKE: Then if we institute your amendment, we are taking the power away from the governor now, isn't this true?

MR. HUTCHINSON: My sheet says he may delegate. I want to say he may exercise.

MR. MAHINSKE: If we say he may exercise such powers, are we making him subject to the legislative limitations as of the adoption of this new language?

MR. HUTCHINSON: That is absolutely true, Mr. Mahinske, but the committee has already, apparently, indicated support for language which is going to provide for restrictions and procedures.

MR. MAHINSKE: But, as I understand it, the restrictions are on limitations of procedures and will only come into play in the event that the governor would exercise his discretionary power to delegate the power. He may now exercise the power but under this language we are taking the power away from him.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Well then, in that case, Mr. Mahinske, if the legislature should set up a parole board, as it has, and if the legislature has provided that the parole board shall make all these investigations and these recommendations and whatnot to the governor, then, under the language as it now stands, there wouldn't be any place in the picture at all for a parole board, because the only place in which a parole board enters into the picture under the language as it is now proposed would be only as to whether the governor should delegate the power or not.

MR. MAHINSKE: That is the understanding that I have.

MR. HUTCHINSON: I don't think that is a very good policy, Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Isn't this the existing procedure we now have, that the parole board only makes recommendations to the governor?

MR. HUTCHINSON: Yes, they make recommendations but they don't recommend to him whether he delegates his power or not. They recommend to him as to whether or not he issues the pardon.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, I wonder, on this last point you make, if this is the intent of the committee, that the parole board has any say-so as far as the governor is concerned in the delegation of his power.

MR. HUTCHINSON: I would submit to you that if the proposal stands as it is now, that is where you would be relegating the function of the parole board, because under the present constitution the governor has the power to grant these things, subject to such limitations as he may think proper, subject to regulations provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons; now, then, that is the basis for the present power of the parole board, to make recommendations; but then, you strike all that out and you end up with saying that the parole board shall have power to advise the governor whether he should delegate his power to somebody else.

MR. MAHINSKE: I don't have this understanding, myself. The understanding I have now is the governor may, subject to limitations on procedures and so on, set up by the legislature, delegate the power of parole; in this particular instance we would say to the parole board itself; that the parole board could pardon or parole a person without any further contact with the governor at all. This is the understanding I have.

MR. HUTCHINSON: I don't think they should be given that power, to grant that without any further contact with the governor. I think it is necessary to keep the governor in the picture. I feel that, very clearly, the power of the governor in this field admittedly is not executive; admittedly it is judicial, but it is one of those historic checks and balances in our system and I would want to keep it there.

MR. MAHINSKE: This is exactly my feeling on the subject but, with respect to the new words that are put in here, I would hate to go any further than we are going now. With your alteration of going further, we are taking it absolutely out of his hands. Would you agree that possibly we should strike all of line 10 and the first 2 words of line 11 as proposed by the committee here?

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, who does Mr. Mahinske direct his question to?

MR. MAHINSKE: To you, yourself.

MR. HUTCHINSON: To me. You ask if we should strike out the new language?

MR. MAHINSKE: I mean, would this be your sentiment?

MR. HUTCHINSON: And that leaves nothing, just strike it out entirely and say nothing else?

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, I think we possibly both voted the same way here, to strike this language.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Well, we did.

MR. MAHINSKE: Correct. I am not satisfied with what we have here over and above what we voted for and I think that your alteration would go even further than we have gone now; which is distasteful to you and me.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I don't suppose it is my responsibility to clarify Mr. Hutchinson's point but I think his amendment clearly presents the difference of opinion; because if we do not have the word "delegate" in there, the governor obviously cannot delegate. Therefore, his amendment, which would insert the word "exercise" states the difference of opinion clearly, and I think that if the committee can vote on that point it will arrive at a sound solution; either his or the committee's original report.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Hutchinson if I understand his reasoning correctly. As I see the present constitution, the governor has absolute power to grant these pardons and so forth, with the only limitation being the regulation by law as to the manner of applying for a pardon. Or, it is assumed that the legislature could not prohibit the application of pardon but could make appropriate regulation.

If we change "may" to "exercise" it would seem to me that then the governor could exercise only those powers that he now has, subject to procedures that go beyond the manner of applying for pardons. In other words, changing "delegate" to "exercise" would make a limitation on the governor he does not now have.

I can see that this is difficult language to construe, but I just wanted to get Mr. Hutchinson's further thinking, if he would care to give it.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to reply to Mr. Downs in this way. As I understand the practical meaning of the present provision, the governor, while he may, as a theoretical thing, have the power to simply sign a pardon without any previous investigation, or whatnot, still the law says—the laws which have been enacted to carry out this phase, subject to regulations provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons—that since there is a law regulating the manner of applying for pardons, the governor's power is thereby limited. He can act upon an application for pardon only if that application has been submitted in accordance with the procedures set forth in law. That is what it says here now.

MR. DOWNS: Isn't there the additional limitation where your language says he may exercise such powers which provide for legislative limitations beyond the manner of applying for the pardon?

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, of course, here we are. We are writing a constitution, and it is very wise to consider these things in every aspect. It really should require a lot of very serious thought. All I can say is that, as I see it right now, and after listening to the debate, and after reading what we have here, and after remembering what the statutes have to say implementing the present provisions, I do not think that the actual power of the governor under my proposed amendment would be any less than it is today.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Hutchinson, before you sit down. Would not the language be better if it read that he "shall" exercise rather than "may" and strike out the language added by Judge Dehnke's amendment, so that it clearly reads that he shall exercise such power according to procedures established by law? Isn't this clearly stating your position; that he shall exercise them; that it is his sole power and responsibility; that the sole power of the legislature is to prescribe procedures?

If the legislature is also allowed to prescribe restrictions, I would agree with Judge Dehnke's amendment if we delete the word delegate, but if we say he will exercise or shall exercise subject to restrictions by law, it is conceivable that the restrictions make the power a nullity. All we want to do is give the legislature power to provide for orderly procedures, not restrictions. Am I correct?

MR. HUTCHINSON: I think you are stating my case very clearly. I am impressed with the persuasiveness of your argument. However, as the ball bounced here, Judge Dehnke's amendment came up ahead of mine.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Hutchinson, I have an amendment here which is very similar to yours, and that is why I raise it.

MR. HUTCHINSON: I will withdraw mine.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mine merely says "shall". If you would consent to amend yours, we could dispose of the 2 of them at once.

MR. HUTCHINSON: How would you take care of Judge Dehnke's amendment?

MR. W. F. HANNA: I would ask Mr. Chase to quickly write in to remove the language added by Judge Dehnke. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: In honesty to the committee, I have to say if you adopt the amendment prepared by Mr. Hutchinson you should strike out my amendment because, if it is left in that form, you would enable the legislature to take away the governor's power to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons.

SECRETARY CHASE: Does the secretary, then, understand that the agreement is between Messrs. Hutchinson and Hanna to revise the amendment so that it will read:

1. Amend page 1, line 10, after "He" by striking out "may delegate" and inserting "shall exercise"; and after "to such" by striking out "limitations and"; so the language will then read, "He shall exercise such powers subject to such procedures as prescribed by law.".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Does the Chair understand that Senator Hutchinson withdraws his amendment and we are now on the Hanna amendment? It would be Hanna and Hutchinson in the revised form.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, calling your attention to page 129, respecting the case in article VI, section 9, in 334 Michigan 306, it says, "The power of pardon and commutation of sentence is vested exclusively in the governor, and any law restricting such power is unconstitutional." Would not the committee's proposal weaken the power of the governor in this area, Mr. Martin?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: The committee's proposal, in our opinion, does not weaken the governor's authority but it does give the governor authority to delegate. Mr. Hutchinson's amendment has been perfected by Mr. Hanna's amendment, and clearly presents the other point of view which would not permit the governor to delegate but would allow the legislature to provide procedures as to whatever action he does take within the scope of his power.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Well, Mr. Martin, are you implying that the attorney general's opinion is wrong in that the governor does not have the implied power to seek assistance in this area?

MR. MARTIN: I think he has the implied power, but the original amendment, the original provision had specifications to make it clear as to what authority he has to get additional information and dig into the thing. I see no harm in that.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Well then, is the committee's proposal to give the legislature more power and authority in this area, which they did not have?

MR. MARTIN: The committee didn't put the provisions of limitation in, but the committee's proposal did give the legislature general authority to lay down the procedures if the governor is allowed to delegate that authority.

The difference is that, in the one case, he can actually delegate some portion of that authority; he could delegate it all. We want to make that clear. Under Mr. Hanna's amendment he could not delegate the ultimate responsibility, but he could operate through the parole board and have them gather whatever information he needs.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Martin, there is a difference between power and authority, and I am wondering if the terms are being confused, or am I being confused by the use of these terms?

MR. MARTIN: I don't think so, but I do think Mr. Hutchinson and Mr. Hanna's amendment clearly states the question.

MR. BINKOWSKI: On the basis of what has been said, I would favor the Hutchinson-Hanna amendment.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: I would like to ask Mr. Martin if his committee can inform the delegation as to where the applications are filed now under the present system.

MR. MARTIN: I believe they are filed with the parole board.

MR. BLEDSOE: And from there where do they go?

MR. MARTIN: Well, they go into a process of investigation. I am not an expert on this procedure.

MR. BLEDSOE: Don't you think that is the answer to our problem?

MR. MARTIN: I think a recommendation is made to the governor.

MR. BLEDSOE: That is right. The governor exercises the authority if the petitions are filed with the correct institution, the parole board. That's your procedure. Isn't that taken care of now, presently, by legislative enactment?

MR. MARTIN: We wanted to make it clear that the governor has authority to lean on the parole board in this way. I don't think this takes any power away or adds any power.

MR. BLEDSOE: Not at all.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman, I hesitate to arise because of all this debate, but let's get the issue before us again. The committee, in its report, states clearly, and that is its privilege, that it desires that this power be delegated by the chief executive to another body to determine the matter of reprieves and commutations. That is not now the law. The only thing, they say as prescribed by law.

The present constitution only gives the legislature the power to determine the law with respect to the manner, the mechanics of applying for the pardon. Otherwise, the chief executive is supreme in the field, just like Governor Pat Brown was when he labored those many nights and days in connection with that famous California case. Mr. Hutchinson started this debate by saying he thinks that power should be retained. The committee believes to the contrary.

We have had a lot of discussion, and good discussion, about what these words do in lines 10 and 11. There have been amendments; they have been withdrawn, as was in the case suggested by Judge Dehnke—withdrawn in view of the Hanna amendment—because that would limit those that wished to have the governor retain this fundamental power, and keep awake nights deciding the fate of man or woman.

It seems to me that there is no answer to this thing, and we've got to grind these things out; to say that if you take out the word "limitations" and leave in the words "procedures as prescribed by law" in lines 10 and 11, even though you insert the word "exercise," because it stands for new meaning as to the right of the legislature to curb the power of the chief executive, if you want him to have that life and death power. Because, as I pointed out, in lines 8 and 9 of the present constitution the legislature has no such power. It is limited to prescribing some rules as to how a man applies mechanically for a pardon.

Now, as to treason, the committee's report clearly states that we should deal with that crime—and I don't say the recommendation is wrong—as we do any other crime, because it is taken care of by federal law, et cetera. But that is the point the committee makes with respect to treason. So, putting that aside for the moment, we are down to a question, as I understand the progress of this debate, as to whether we can settle this by leaving in the words, for example, "the governor," or "he may exercise such powers subject to such procedures as prescribed by law." We have eliminated—we will assume we have—the word "limitations," but that still leaves me in a cloudy position if I were on the side of the chief executive having the full final responsibility, because it changes the meaning of the present constitution, which now gives the legislature only that power as respects the mechanical procedure as to how one gets a pardon.

I am simply again making an observation as I understand the facts.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: Mr. Chairman, as a layman, I am a little confused by all this discussion. I personally hope I am never called before the pardon board, and I think that in my terminology and thinking the governor should and shall have the right of pardon and not have to be restricted by the legislature, which I feel this amendment does.

Personally, I would rather see lines 10 and 11 taken out altogether, and I have an amendment with the secretary on this matter. Therefore I would oppose this amendment, which I feel does water down the governor's power of pardon.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: I pass.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Fellow delegates, I believe that I would support the committee's proposal as amended by Judge Dehnke, and I think he stated it fairly clearly when he was explaining it the first time. As I understand it, this does not limit the power of the governor to pardon; it only limits him if he chooses to delegate it. It limits the power to delegate, not the power to pardon. If he chooses to exercise, in his discretion, the power to delegate, then he only can do so upon such limitations and procedures as prescribed by the legislature, which I think is proper. I think also that the governor could certainly say to the legislature: This is the kind of a law that I want, because if I don't get it I won't exercise my power to delegate it.

I think the governor would have a very strong voice in determining the type of legislation that would be passed, because if the legislature did not pass the kind of procedures that he wanted, then he could choose not to exercise his power to delegate.

But if I am correct in understanding Judge Dehnke's explanation the first time—am I correct, Judge?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Higgs, the conflict of ideas on this amendment is whether or not the governor shall be allowed to delegate the power to pardon in any case.

If you put in the language now proposed, that he may exercise such power subject to such procedures as prescribed by law, then the procedure is prescribed, but he has no authority to delegate even with the consent of the legislature. That is the real issue on this amendment, as I see it. Do we want to give him the power to delegate it in such cases as the legislature approves, or do we want to require him to take the full responsibility in all cases, subject merely to the procedural rules the legislature may adopt?

MR. HIGGS: Then, Judge Dehnke, I think what you are saying is that, in speaking to the Hutchinson amendment, this would be the effect of changing the word "delegate" to "exercise," but if we retain the words "he may delegate," then we are not actually restricting the power of the governor at all; we are enlarging his power.

MR. DEHNKE: The Hutchinson amendment is withdrawn; but I understand the amendment that is now pending is essentially the same thing. That is the real issue, whether he is to be required to exercise the authority on his own responsibility in every case, or whether he shall be allowed to delegate it in such cases as the legislature authorizes.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair feels there may be some misunderstanding as to the wording in this amendment. The secretary will read it.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment as proposed by Messrs. Hutchinson and Hanna is as follows:

1. Amend page 1, line 10, after "He" strike out the words "may delegate" and insert "shall exercise"; and after the words "to such" strike out "limitations and"; so that the language will read, "He shall exercise such powers subject to such procedures as prescribed by law."

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I would like to take issue with Judge Dehnke and agree with Bill Cudlip. Under the language herein contained, "He shall exercise such powers subject to such procedures . . .", the legislature could enact procedures which would make it almost impossible to perfect an application for a pardon, or whatever instrument you are interested in, for reprieve or commutation of sentence.

I wonder if Mr. Hanna would feel it would do great harm to his amendment to reinstate the original language and in line 9 say, "He shall exercise such power subject to regulations provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardon." That is one place in our law which is subject to such procedures. You could have so many procedures you couldn't do it.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Miss Donnelly, I think "procedures" is one word for all of line 9.

MISS DONNELLY: You don't think the word procedure is broader than the language in line 9? I can't agree.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, could I reply to Miss Donnelly's question? The word "procedures" is a little broader than the provision "manner of applying for pardon", but it does give the legislature clear authority to set up a parole board. Now if the words "shall exercise" are put in there, then clearly the governor cannot delegate his authority, but he can use the parole board and whatever machinery the legislature wants to set up for it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I would like to ask Mr. Martin one thing. Is there anywhere in this language any limitation on the setting up of a parole board? I think we are going off on this parole board and that isn't the issue. The issue before us is shall the governor delegate or shall he not be allowed to delegate? The parole board, I think, takes us off the main issue. This doesn't limit the establishment of a parole board, does it?

MR. MARTIN: It clarifies a situation in which the position of the parole board has always been under some question.

MISS DONNELLY: You mean without your language you think there is a question about whether we could have a parole board or not?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I want to agree with Bill Cudlip without taking issue with Judge Dehnke. The real problem that is presented by Mr. Hutchinson's change in wording is that presently the provision as presented by the committee would say that in addition to his general powers of pardon the governor shall be able to delegate this power subject to restrictions set by the legislature. But now, when we take out the words "he may delegate" and say "he shall exercise", then the modification contained later in that sentence says that the legislature has the power to prescribe the manner in which he shall exercise his power for the granting of pardons and paroles.

Now, what this means is the legislature could conceivably pass a statute saying the governor can only pardon somebody after he has done steps 1, 2 and 3, or after the man has done steps 1, 2 and 3 or any number of conceivable conditions that would be stricken down by the court as being totally unreasonable, and, as a matter of fact, not only are we taking away the governor's power to delegate—or not giving him the power to delegate, rather, as the committee originally intended—but we are, in addition to that, limiting the present power that the governor has to pardon on the spot, so to speak, by saying he shall only be able to pardon under such conditions, and this means upon such rules as the legislature may prescribe. This is a lot less than the power of the governor presently to grant pardons and paroles, and this is very dangerous.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Pellow.

MR. PELLOW: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Martin a question. Am I correct in assuming that Michigan would be the only state in the union to shift the burden of responsibility from the governor to a parole board if this committee's proposal is adopted?

MR. MARTIN: The answer to that is no. This is the case in several states. In certain states it is the responsibility of the board of pardons, of which the governor is a member, and in 2 states it is a matter for the board of paroles. In one or two states it apparently is the power of the legislature.

MR. PELLOW: Apparently we have different authorities on that. That is why I raise the question. However, it seems to me, also, that this is going to establish a dangerous precedent. If, for example, you have a first degree murder conviction and you are going to allow a parole board to assume the responsibility of the governor, who is elected by and responsible to the people of the state of Michigan, I can see cases where a weak governor takes office, and wants to shift the burden of responsibility from himself to another body, and I think for that reason this proposal should be defeated.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: I spoke earlier in support of the Donnelly amendment and apparently, I gather since, the reason her amendment didn't carry was because it was somewhat too sweetened and it left in the reference to treason and upon conviction of treason. I think that if we here could settle down on the words starting with

> The governor shall have power to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons after convictions for all offenses, except cases of impeachment, subject to regulations provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons. He shall communicate to the legislature . . .

and so on. In other words, Mr. Cudlip stated it quite forcefully that we have got to leave that part in, I think, and prevent the governor from delegating away his pardoning authority.

When we can reach words to that effect, I would vote in favor of it.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, first of all, I would like to point out that it is not so clear in my mind that we have reached the issue in the form we wish to get to it.

I think there is no doubt that the issue is, should the governor be allowed to get rid of his responsibility absolutely as he wishes to? I believe that most of us do not wish him to have that power. We wish him to have an absolute power to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons, and we wish him not to be able to get rid of it and I think we all got what we wished. I believe that is the question, whether that is what we wish or not.

Now, the question that is before us is not quite the same question. The question that is before us in the Hanna amendment is whether the language now proposed will do that—whether we raise that exact issue. Mr. Martin has said that it will. I believe some other people said that it will, also. But others have said, and I believe quite correctly, that the issue as framed now would only strike a glancing blow at the main issue, and do a lot of harm. The language that is proposed now is that he shall exercise such powers subject to something or other. That means that he can only exercise such powers subject to something or other, and not otherwise. Therefore, there is no question in my mind that there is some limit now, if the Hanna amendment is adopted, that the governor would have less power than he had before. His power would be limited. It is true, presumably, it would only be limited procedurally, but we don't exactly know how many procedures might be placed on the governor.

In any event, it certainly is not enlarging the governor's power, and it is not even keeping it even. It is definitely reducing it. That is, I believe, not what we wish to accomplish. What we wish to accomplish is to keep the governor's power exactly where it was; not to reduce it and not to increase it, but to make sure that he has the responsibility and that he bears it.

The reason I rise at this point is not only to point out that the Hanna amendment would not quite do it, but there is another way which would quite do it. I think Mr. Hubbs hit the nail on the head when he spoke a minute ago, and Mr. Cudlip, too, that when we voted, we voted on a double issue. When Mr. Martin asked Miss Donnelly whether she would divide the question and she refused to do so, we had to vote on 2 issues at once. We are not positive what the results would be if we had voted on the only issue we debated for about 2 hours.

I believe the correct procedure at this point, if we can get to it, is to do what Mr. Hubbs suggested—and, I might add, I have an amendment pending, or it will be pending soon, which will do the same thing. That is, it will strike all the language as it is presented in lines 10 and 11 and reinstate all the language in lines 8 and 9. That would give us a chance to vote exactly on the issue that I believe we wish to vote on, and I believe that if we settle for the language that is now before us, we would actually be doing harm. It seems to me we ought to have a right to vote on that issue in a bare sense, so to speak.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Senator Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, in order that we might get to this—and I know there is an amendment presently on the desk to accomplish just what Mr. Nord mentioned because Mr. Hubbs sent it up—I would like to ask Mr. Hanna if he would agree with me that we can, at this time, withdraw this joint amendment that we offered and remind Mr. Hanna that if the reinsertion of the present language in lines 8 and 9 are, in his opinion, unduly wordy, that both he and I are on the style and drafting committee and we can argue it out there.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Hutchinson, I have no objection to withdrawing mine. We could withdraw the amendment which we styled and drafted on the floor here by substituting "subject to such regulations as shall be prescribed," in line 9, so that it would read, simply, "grant reprieves," and so forth, "subject to regulations provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons."

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would just like to suggest that, in an effort to get on with this—and keeping in mind there seems to be quite a lot of sentiment on the floor, at the moment at least, for reinstating both lines 8 and 9—if we would agree to let that go through, Mr. Hanna, and then if you think that the wording in line 8 is unnecessary for some reason or other, we can draft this thing in style and drafting like we think it ought to be. (laughter)

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Hutchinson, I cannot understand. In line 8 you say "upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations," and then it says, "as he may think proper." Now, if those refer strictly to the governor—I think the issue we want to place before the committee is—the governor alone shall have the power, and the legislature shall only have power to make regulations as to the manner of applying for a pardon.

MR. HUTCHINSON: You are right.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I object to the language in line 8, "upon such conditions and with such restrictions."

MR. HUTCHINSON: Now if you want to debate upon the value of the language in line 8, "upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations as he may think proper,"—

MR. W. F. HANNA: I think that language is superfluous.

MR. HUTCHINSON: If it is superfluous, wouldn't you think you and I can knock it out in style and drafting?

MR. W. F. HANNA: And then somebody will accuse us of changing the substance of the meaning of the committee's report.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Well, it wouldn't be if it is superfluous.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair recognizes Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I will withdraw my amendment which is on the secretary's desk to get the position clearly before the body.

SECRETARY CHASE: The secretary, then, understands that the amendment offered by Senator Hutchinson and Mr. Hanna has been withdrawn.

The next amendment on file on the secretary's desk is one offered by Mr. Everett.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: I will withdraw that.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Everett withdraws his amendment.

Mr. Faxon has offered an amendment:

1. Strike out lines 10, 11, 12 and 13, and the first 2 words of line 14, and reinsert lines 8 and 9.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: After all this discussion, I think this is the direction in which we ought to go. I filed this amendment after Miss Donnelly didn't want to split the question.

I think the wording in the 1908 constitution, in lines 8 and 9, is really the subject in which we seem to be interested, and I think this language is quite clear.

In a comment made by a previous speaker, reference was made to the fact that since 1894 this power has been with the parole board. It was in the light of that experience that the delegates to the 1907-08 Constitutional Convention inserted the language which my amendment would reinsert in the committee proposal. Since this has been the practice in Michigan for so many years, I don't see any need for changing this provision now and would therefore urge you to reinsert the old language contained in lines 8 and 9.

SECRETARY CHASE: May the secretary point out that the language of Mr. Faxon's amendment on the desk is incorrect, in that the stricken language in lines 11, 12, 13 and 14 is already out of the section, so the amendment should read:

1. Amend page 1, line 7, after "impeachment" by changing the period to a comma, and by striking out all of lines 10 and 11 and reinserting "upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations as he may think proper, subject to regulations provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons.".

MR. FAXON: Yes, and in the last sentence too. I didn't do anything about that. I still have the last sentence.

SECRETARY CHASE: The last sentence, of course, as printed in lines 14 and 15, still remains in the section.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Faxon—the thing is, there are other amendments that are identical to his except in one instance—if he is willing to strike in line 7 the words "treason and"?

MR. FAXON: That I agree to.

MR. MAHINSKE: Then you want lines 6 and 7 to remain as proposed, and reinsert 8 and 9, strike 10, 11, 12 and 13, and the first 2 words in 14, and leave the remainder of 14 and 15 in?

MR. FAXON: Yes, that is correct. Just reinsert lines 8 and 9 and delete the rest.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, I believe that Mr. Hubbs would agree that the language of Mr. Faxon's amendment is in substance what he proposed. May I further point out that I believe the words in line 8 are important and should be left in.

Let me call your attention to certain conditions and restrictions which the governor may want to place upon a pardon or a reprieve or a commutation. Particularly on pardons, he may pardon a man for the purpose of being sent back to another country. On reprieves or commutations, he may place conditions upon those reprieves or commutations by way of certain methods of conduct on the part of that prisoner, and I think it is important that that language remain in there. I don't foresee any possibility that style and drafting will have any trouble with respect to that language. I rise to support this amendment.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is on the Faxon amendment. Mr. Marshall, do you want to talk on that?

MR. MARSHALL: No. This is identical to the amendment that Mr. Mahinske and I had, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the Faxon amendment. As many as are in favor of the amendment will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

Any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: That likewise takes care of the amendment offered by Mr. Upton, which is now withdrawn; Mr. Nord's amendment; and the amendment by Messrs. Marshall and Mahinske; and by Mr. Hubbs. I believe that is all the amendments that are on file for this particular proposal.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Are there any further amendments to Committee Proposal 16? If not, it will be passed.

Committee Proposal 16, as amended, is passed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Committee Proposal 17.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: As many as are in favor of the motion that the committee do now rise, will signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration certain proposals and made several amendments thereto, and the secretary will make a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 15, A proposal to amend article II pertaining to the declaration of rights; has adopted an amendment thereto, and in committee has postponed consideration of this proposal until Thursday, January 18.

The committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 16, A proposal to permit the governor to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons and to delegate this power according to law. It reports this proposal back to the convention with an amendment, recommending the amendment be agreed to and the proposal as thus amended be passed.

[The following is the amendment recommended by the committee of the whole:

1. Amend page 1, line 7, after "impeachment" by changing the period to a comma and by striking out all of lines 10 and 11 and reinserting "upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations as he may think proper, subject to regulations provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons.".]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment recommended by the committee of the whole. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is agreed to.

Committee Proposal 16, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 16 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

The governor shall have power to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons after convictions for all offenses, except cases of impeachment, upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations as he may think proper, subject to regulations provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardon. He shall communicate to the legislature at each session information of each case of reprieve, commutation or pardon granted and the reasons therefor.

SECRETARY CHASE: That completes the report of the committee of the whole, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on judicial branch will meet in room B tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. Robert Danhof, chairman.

The meeting of the committee on public information scheduled for this evening after the session has been postponed.

The committee on legislative powers will meet in room H immediately following this evening's session and tomorrow in room H immediately after the session. T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

The committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E tomorrow at 8:30 a.m. D. Hale Brake, chairman.

The other meetings scheduled on the composite calendar are as stated, except that the select committee on the visits of the former presidents scheduled for after the session tonight has been cancelled.

Mr. Buback and Miss McGowan have a 3 hole paper punch they loaned. They do not recall whom they loaned it to. Will the users please return it.

The following announcement will be of interest to all the delegates. Tomorrow afternoon, Tuesday, at 1:30, Mr. James Hare, secretary of state; the Michigan historical commission; members of the Michigan historical society; and others will be present in the lounge of the convention hall to unveil the original copies of the 3 previous constitutions of the state of Michigan. These documents will be housed in the newly constructed case in which they will be permanently kept. They will be on display in the lounge until the conclusion of the convention. All delegates interested in viewing this unveiling are invited to be present at 1:30 tomorrow.

Mr. Lawrence asks to be excused from the session of tomorrow, January 16.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, he will be excused.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all the announcements and requests for leave of absence, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Finch.

MR. FINCH: Mr. President, I move the convention adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion to adjourn. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The convention is adjourned until 2:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

[Whereupon, at 10:15 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 2:00 o'clock p.m., Tuesday, January 16, 1962.]

FIFTY-EIGHTH DAY

Tuesday, January 16, 1962, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation today will be given by the Reverend Floyd Fitch, Pastor of the Central Methodist Church, Lake Odessa. Will you please rise.

REVEREND FITCH: Our heavenly Father, we come to Thee because Thou art the source of all righteousness and good will, Thou who holdest the security and destiny of men in Thy hand.

We thank Thee for our state in the commonwealth of the nations, for her beauty, her natural resources, and her people. We thank Thee that we can call it home.

We would ask Thy blessing on our state, and on these delegates charged with a grave responsibility. Help them to put away selfish interests and personal ambitions and to give themselves to the just and honorable task that is before them. Help them forget themselves in their concern for the welfare of the people of our state.

Strengthen those who need special help, we pray, and give to us all, delegates and people alike, a sense of Thy presence as we alike live and serve for the good of our fellowmen. We ask all in the name of God our Father and of Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. All present, please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted?

The voting machine is now locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Absent with leave: Messrs. Lawrence and Thomson.

Absent without leave: Mr. Binkowski is the only unexcused delegate, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection he will be excused.

There was a rather interesting event happened this noon — I am sorry more of you were not able to be present — and that was when the secretary of state presented to the convention the 3 former state constitutions that will be housed in this building during our convention. I have asked Mr. Hare, who is the custodian of these documents, if he will say a word to us at this time about them and about his entrusting them to us.

Mr. Hare. (applause)

SECRETARY OF STATE HARE: Thank you, President Nisbet.

Some 3 or 4 months ago some officers and members from both the convention and from the Michigan historical commission met in my office to discuss the possibility of bringing the 3 existing constitutions, as they were originally written, out of our archives vault and putting them in a showcase for people to see. After some substantial difficulties and, indeed, some slight financial problems, we did raise enough money to bring forth a case that you will see out in the foyer.

Steve Nisbet, in accepting the display for the convention, promised me one thing that I hope will come forth. He promised me that, while we are delivering to you in the case 3 copies of the existing constitutions, when it is returned back to the archives of the state, it will be returned with 4 of them in there, and I hope this is true. I know I can commend this to your care. Thank you very much. (applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: I hope you will help me to live up to that.

Mr. Walker.

MR. WALKER: I had no comment on this, Mr. President, but I did want to ask that Mr. Binkowski specifically be excused today; that he was speaking in Eaton Rapids on the constitutional convention and expected to be back in time, and therefore did not ask to be excused.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you, Mr. Walker. He is excused.

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on rules and resolutions, by Mr. Van Dusen, chairman, reports back to the convention Resolution 62, A resolution expressing appreciation of services provided by the Michigan state medical society and the Ingham county medical society; without amendment, and with the recommendation that the resolution be adopted.

R. C. Van Dusen, chairman.

For Resolution 62 as offered, see above, page 409.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, members of the convention, the resolution has the authorship, which some of you may have recognized, of Dr. DeVries. His prose is typically delightful and, I think, suitably laudatory of the activities of the 2 medical societies. The committee urges the adoption of the resolution.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the resolution. Those in favor say aye; opposed, no.

The resolution is adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only standing committee report, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I regret to report, and I am sure you will regret to hear, that our expectation of hearing all the former presidents of the United States has not materialized. I would like to read to you the 2 letters received by President Nisbet following the extending of an official invitation to former President Truman. Mr. Truman wrote on December 26:

> Dear Mr. Nisbet:
>
> I have not, as yet, been able to straighten out my schedule for the appearance before your convention.
>
> I sincerely hope that that can be done after the first of the year. As I told you before, I would appreciate it if you will get in touch with me again sometime after the first of the year.
>
> Sincerely yours, Harry S. Truman.

And then on January 12, Mr. Truman wrote Mr. Nisbet:

> Dear Mr. Nisbet:
>
> It is unfortunate that so much confusion and misunderstanding should have arisen with regard to my hoped for appearance at Detroit and the Michigan constitutional convention.
>
> My normally crowded schedule became even more complicated, by reason of some personal circumstances, and I have had to beg off of some firm commitments that I had previously made and to decline all tentative commitments.
>
> I hope that this will clear up the situation for all concerned.
>
> Sincerely yours, Harry S. Truman.

I am sure we all regret that personal considerations have prevented him from accepting the official invitation, and to my knowledge, Mr. President, this would complete the assignment of our committee under the circumstances; Mr. Hoover having previously indicated that because of his advanced age and doctor's orders he was not in a position to travel as he had been doing in previous years. Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the Office of the Governor, Lansing, January 16, 1962:

The Honorable Stephen S. Nisbet, President
Michigan Constitutional Convention, Constitution Hall
Civic Center, Lansing, Michigan

Dear Mr. President:

Transmitted to you with this letter is my Message to the Fifth Michigan Constitutional Convention on the subject of economic development.

Sincerely yours,
John B. Swainson, governor.

Following is the message from the governor, as received:

January 16, 1962.

Ladies and gentlemen of the constitutional convention:

In the days that have passed since the opening of Michigan's constitutional convention, you have received officially a great many proposals for your consideration in reconstructing an acceptable constitution for the people of our state. These proposals have embraced an almost endless range of constitutional policy matters, each of which adds additional weight to the tremendous public responsibility borne by you as convention delegates.

This agenda of proposals will continue to grow, I am sure, with the progress of the convention, as will the growing appreciation of the magnitude of your labors in behalf of Michigan's citizens.

With full appreciation for the scope of your task, I commend to your attention for consideration certain proposals bearing on the relationship of public policy and economic development. The present and future vitality of the Michigan economy has been a subject of great importance in recent years.

The fact that our economy is in a stage of transition from one based heavily on the manufacture of durable goods to one of greater diversity is well known.

The fact that our economy has been hypersensitive to the fluctuations of the national economy is equally well known.

In addition to current efforts to speed economic growth and diversification, certain legislative measures have been proposed to provide added strength to these efforts. These measures are, however, impossible to implement under the present constitution. It is for this reason that I commend the following proposals to you:

1. Amendment of the existing article X, section 12, to the end that the credit of the state might be granted to or in aid of nonprofit public benefit corporations with legislative approval for the purpose of financing industrial, manufacturing and/or municipal development projects.

Implementation of this proposal would open a variety of avenues of public efforts toward the ultimate goal of full employment. Under such a constitutional provision the state could establish a program to insure mortgage payments on property devoted to manufacturing projects and industrial research projects.

The repayment of loans to industry made by private financial institutions could be insured with the state acting as guarantor on the loan. State operating funds for the program would be provided through premiums collected by the state. The purpose of such an operation, commonly referred to as an industrial FHA program, would be the encouragement of private investment for the expansion of Michigan's industrial base. The overall goal would be the achievement of full employment.

Another possibility presented by such an amendment to article X, section 12, is that of direct state participation in the financing of private industrial expansion. This type of approach was recommended by me to the 1961 session of the legislature in the form of the greater Michigan authority. This authority would administer state financial participation in development projects, drawing upon funds deposited by the state in a greater Michigan revolving fund which would be maintained through appropriations by the legislature.

Loans could then be made from such a fund to nonprofit community industrial development corporations, to regional industrial development corporations and to local units of government in critical economic areas of the state. As in the case of the industrial FHA proposal, the overall goal of this type of assistance would be the achievement of full employment.

A third possibility would be that of granting the legislature authority to permit local units of government to purchase land and effect improvements thereupon for the purpose of developing industrial parks. This type of approach has received a great deal of attention in recent years in Michigan and certainly deserves serious consideration. Perhaps the strongest argument in support of such an approach is that it would provide communities a tool behind which local initiative for economic development could be mobilized.

2. Elimination of existing constitutional article XII, section 5, which restricts corporate real estate investment in Michigan.

Currently, this section of the constitution provides that "No corporation shall hold any real estate for a longer period than 10 years, except such real estate as shall be actually occupied by such corporation in the exercise of its franchises." The original intent of this provision, it appears, was to prevent excessive real estate holdings for other than corporate purposes.

Today, however, in view of the changes in land values, the cost of acquiring and paying taxes on excessive real estate holdings serves as an effective ban against such holdings. On the other hand, the existing constitutional limitation is now discouraging certain investments necessary for our continued economic development.

Because of this restriction, Michigan is at a competitive disadvantage in terms of attracting corporate investment of equity capital in the financing of housing and urban renewal projects and other kinds of longterm capital projects. Certain corporations, particularly insurance companies, have been extremely reluctant to involve their capital in Michigan real estate holdings as a result of this restriction.

Elimination of the present article XII, section 5, certainly holds a potential for additional stimulation of our economy and it is for this reason that I commend this proposal to your attention.

Each of the proposals suggested herein has received careful study and subsequent favorable recommendation by the governor's special commission on industrial development legislation, a fine group of Michigan men and women from the fields of industry, finance and government and active in civic affairs. This special commission was appointed March 16, 1961, to assist in the expansion of opportunities for employment in our state — to study and recommend the necessary tools of the industrial development trade. In performing this public service, they have had one goal in mind, that of insuring that Michigan has and will continue to have a vital, thriving economy. Their recommendations are certainly worthy of your attention.

Although it has been stated before from various platforms, I would like to express once again my sincere conviction that there is no task of greater urgency than that of putting our vast resources and capabilities to work toward the achievement of economic strength and well being. To the extent that this task can be accomplished under constitutional provisions without jeopardizing the priority that must be retained by the public interest, your consideration is respectfully directed to the suggestions contained in this message.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The message will be printed in the journal.

Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: No special orders.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders of the day.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, I move the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole to consider matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Hutchinson. All in favor say aye. Those opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Hutchinson, will you please come forward.

[Whereupon, Mr. Hutchinson assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The committee will be in order, and the secretary will read the first item of business for today, item 2 on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 17, A proposal respecting eligibility for the offices of governor and lieutenant governor. Amends article VI, section 13.

Following is Committee Proposal 17 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

[No person shall be eligible to the office of governor or lieutenant governor who shall not have attained the age of 30 years and who has not been 5 years a citizen of the United States and a resident of this state 2 years next preceding his election.] ANY REGISTERED VOTER OF THE STATE WHO IS AT LEAST 30 YEARS OF AGE SHALL BE ELIGIBLE TO THE OFFICES OF GOVERNOR OR LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 17:

The committee on executive branch proposes to delete the present requirement that only persons who have been citizens of the United States for 5 years and residents of Michigan for 2 years preceding the election be eligible for the office of governor or lieutenant governor. The committee feels that such eligibility requirements are unnecessary and that it is sufficient to require a candidate for governor or lieutenant governor to be at least 30 years of age and in addition that he be a registered voter in lieu of requirements with respect to citizenship and residence within the state.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: On the proposal, the Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the committee proposal before you is in the journal on page 300, and is brief.

The committee considered the eligibility rules of governor and lieutenant governor, and it felt that it was not necessary to specify in quite as much detail with respect to citizenship and with respect to a long period of residence in the state, but rather that it was sufficient to provide that any registered voter of the state who is at least 30 years of age shall be eligible to the office of governor or lieutenant governor.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

There was some discussion in the committee, and some members of the committee inclined to the view that it was not necessary to specify 30 years of age. It was pointed out, I believe, that the first governor of Michigan was considerably younger than this. But the committee did conclude that there should be an age limit, and retained the 30 year provision.

Although it was not placed there for that purpose, the requirement that any person to be eligible must be a registered voter does, in effect, provide a citizenship requirement, because he could not be a registered voter unless he was a citizen; and it also, in effect, provides a 6 month residence requirement, because he could not be a registered voter unless he had been a resident of the state of Michigan for at least 6 months.

So that there is in the provision that he be a registered voter, a citizenship and residence requirement, in addition to the 30 year requirement.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: I wonder if the chairman would advise as to whether or not that eligibility could be met by the time that he actually took office? Would that be appropriate? In other words, he would not have to be a registered voter technically, perhaps, even when he filed his petition, but if he was a registered voter at the time he took office the requirement of the provision would be fulfilled.

MR. MARTIN: It is possible, but I believe the requirement really requires that he be a registered voter at the time he files his petition, because I think it is now required that this be stated on the petition.

MR. BENTLEY: Thank you. I wanted to bring that point out.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Perras offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 9, after "age" by inserting "and who has been a resident of this state for 5 years"; so the language will read:

Any registered voter of the state who is at least 30 years of age and who has been a resident of this state for 5 years shall be eligible to the offices of governor or lieutenant governor.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I speak against the wording of Committee Proposal 17 because I think that we are leaving this thing too wide open. I believe that any man who is going to become the governor of this state should have lived here at least 5 years so he would know the problems of this state. This leaves it where anyone can come in within 6 months and be elected a governor. That is why I rise against this proposal.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Perras.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the committee considered that question, and the committee's action was unanimous. It felt that the voters could adequately judge whether the candidate had the necessary knowledge of state affairs or not. Incidentally, this amendment would increase the residency requirement, even the residency requirement of the present constitution. It would increase it from 2 to 5 years.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Perras that the qualifications for governor include also residence in the state for 5 years. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct a question to the committee. I notice that in section 1 of article III the qualifications of an elector of the state are set forth, and there have been numerous decisions in this state making a finite but definite distinction between an elector and a voter, and I wondered if the committee had considered the use of the word "elector" rather than the word "voter."

MR. MARTIN: The committee did not consider the word "elector," but it did consider, however, the use of the term "qualified voter" and decided against that in favor of the language used here.

MR. FORD: In that case, if we don't amend it here, I suppose this is probably something that style and drafting could do, but I would like to commend to their attention the court interpretation of the meaning of these 2 words, "elector" and "voter," which sometimes gets us in a little trouble.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Well, the question is upon Mr. Perras' amendment. If there is no further discussion upon that amendment, all those in favor will say aye—

Pardon me. Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I feel moved to express my judgment with regard to this particular proposal. I rise to support the Perras amendment. I do believe that the requirement of residence should be a requirement for selection to this office. I don't see how any person can familiarize himself with the problems even to present himself to the voters. I do think that this is a matter which indicates an important indicia of qualifications for this office, and I therefore support the amendment.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Martin, do you desire to speak further?

MR. MARTIN: No.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: All those in favor of the Perras amendment will say aye. Those opposed, no. The Chair is in doubt. As many as are in favor will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Sixty-six.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Those opposed will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Sixty-six.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The amendment is not adopted on a tie vote.

Are there any further amendments to the body of the proposal? Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: I have a question which is bothering me a little bit—perhaps some of my legal brethren will help me—and that is the distinction between the words "resident" and "resident voter", which is a matter of election on the part of the individual if he can claim that he receives his mail at a certain location or he hangs his hat there on occasion, and may actually, constructively, reside in some other area outside the state of Michigan. I am wondering, Mr. Martin, did the committee, in their consideration, consider any distinction between the word "resident", by which most of us mean that that is where we reside permanently, and the matter of a registered voter who may not constructively or actually reside within the state of Michigan?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Hoxie, the question of residence, of course, from a legal standpoint, is simply a question of where the voter intends to reside and does in fact reside. The requirement, however, is no different for residence for a registered voter than it is for someone who is just a resident. Again the requirement is exactly the same. It has been said, of course, that some people who claim residence are not really residents here; they may have claimed residence for years and actually not been in the state for years. But, they may, of course, still vote here.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Well, the question has been decided by the committee. Are there any further amendments to the body of the proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 9, after "age" by inserting "and who has been a resident of this state for 2 years".

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon to require that the governor be a resident of this state for 2 years prior to his election. Any discussion upon that amendment? Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: This is the provision that was in the 1835, 1850, and 1908 constitutions. It seems to have served well over the past 100 years, and I don't see any need to delete this passage from the present. So I insert the original language of 2 years' requirement.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Speaking in opposition to the amendment, and in support of the committee's report, I think that the voters are the best judge of this, and it seems to me there may be conceivable circumstances in which a person might be holding—conceivably even the president of the United States or some other federal official might come back to his state, where he had been out of the state for the preceding years, and yet still would be an attractive and eligible candidate. I think the voters are the best judge of this, and it can be left to their discretion. It seems very doubtful that a candidate who had not been living here would be able to get sufficient support.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon.

Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: I would only add that there are numerous provisions in the constitution that have been there a long time. The length of time they are there is not necessarily a reason for or against the retaining of them. The question is, are they desirable as of this date?

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: All those in favor of the Faxon amendment will say aye. Those opposed, no. The Chair is in doubt. All those in favor of the Faxon amendment will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Fifty-three.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Those opposed will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Sixty-eight.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The amendment is not adopted.

Are there any further amendments to the body of the proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Ford and Iverson offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 9, after "registered" by striking out "voter" and inserting "qualified elector"; so the language will read, "Any registered qualified elector of the state who is at least 30 years of age shall be eligible to the offices of governor or lieutenant governor."

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: On the Ford amendment, Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: The only reason for this change in language is to make this section, which formerly did not refer to either a voter or elector, consistent with section 1, article III, which very clearly and definitely defines the language that we would now be using, so there would be no confusion in the future. For those who do not have the constitution before them, I might read:

> In all elections every inhabitant of this state being a citizen of the United States; and every inhabitant of indian descent, a native of the United States, shall be an elector and entitled to vote; but no one shall be an elector and entitled to vote at any election, unless he or she shall be above the age of 21 years and has resided in this state 6 months, and in the city or township in which he or she offers to vote 30 days next preceding such election: Provided, That a registered qualified elector who shall move into another city or township in this state within said 30 day period. . . .

and so on through the section these words are used repeatedly.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: On the Ford-Iverson amendment, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the secretary would read that as it now is.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Ford and Iverson have offered an amendment to line 9, after "registered" by striking out "voter" and inserting "qualified elector"; so the language will read, "Any registered qualified elector of the state . . . ."

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I think the committee would have no objection to that amendment.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the Ford-Iverson amendment. All those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

Are there any further amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 17, as amended, is passed.

The secretary will read the next proposal.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 3 on the calendar, from the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 18, A proposal to provide for a great seal of the state and to authorize its use. A substitution for article VI, sections 11 and 12.

Following is Committee Proposal 18 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

THERE SHALL BE A GREAT SEAL OF THE STATE OF MICHIGAN AND ITS USE SHALL BE PRESCRIBED BY LAW.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 18:

Both sections 11 and 12 in our present constitution provide for the use of the great seal of Michigan in great detail. Both sections are unduly mandatory in their provisions as to the use of the seal. Most states provide for a great seal in their constitutions and the committee felt that a great seal of Michigan is necessary and it should be given the dignity of a constitutional provision. It is believed, however, that the use of the seal should not be so explicitly detailed as in the present sections 11 and 12 and that the use of the seal should be prescribed by law.

The committee believes that the legislature can and will provide for the use of the great seal in a proper manner.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: On the committee proposal, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the sections which are involved here are sections 11 and 12 of the present constitution, and they deal in considerable detail with the use of the great seal. The committee gave this considerable attention. They felt that the state certainly should have a great seal as it now hangs on the rostrum wall above the chairman's head, and that there may be other uses to which the great seal should be put than those specified in the constitution. The committee felt that it was sufficient to provide that there shall be a great seal of Michigan, and that its use shall be prescribed by law. This would permit the legislature to provide for its use in the various ways in which it is now specified in these 2 sections, and in such other ways as it may think necessary and appropriate.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any amendments to the body of this proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 18 is passed.

The secretary will read the next proposal.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 4 on the calendar, from the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, by Mr. Erickson, chairman, Committee Proposal 19, A proposal to provide for a state militia. A substitute for all of article XV.

Following is Committee Proposal 19 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

THE MILITIA SHALL BE ORGANIZED, EQUIPPED AND DISCIPLINED AS PROVIDED BY LAW.

Mr. Erickson, chairman of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 19:

The committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule recommends the adoption of the proposed single sentence in lieu of the existing article XV. It is felt that there is need to provide for a militia in the proposed constitution, but the present language is too inflexible and contains several matters which are strictly of legislative concern.

The need for a militia is clear. Even though the state is not or may not be in danger at the present time the need may arise at any time in the future.

While the power of a sovereign state to defend itself is clear, without constitutional provision it would not be clear in what branch of government the power resided.

There are sections on the executive branch which declare the governor to be commander in chief. The proposed provision would indicate that while the governor has the power to call out the militia, it is the duty of the legislature to provide laws for its organization, composition, equipment, and discipline. The proposed section would then vitiate any possible conflict of executive and legislative powers on the subject.

The present provisions of article XV tie the legislature down to an outmoded concept of what the militia should be. In the interest of flexibility and with the distinct possibility that concepts of the militia will change in the future, the legislature should not be forced to recognize requirements such as age, which are geared to 1908 conditions.

The proposed amendment would in no manner interfere with the federal constitution and law empowering congress to call forth the militia. The United States supreme court has held that jurisdiction in the area is concurrent.

It is suggested by the committee that the committee on style and drafting should consider a proposal incorporating the proposed section, if passed, into article V, since it deals with legislative power and there is little to be gained in allowing the single proposed sentence to stand alone.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: On the proposal, the committee chairman, Mr. Erickson.

MR. ERICKSON: This report contemplates reducing 117 words in the present constitution down to 12, and I would like to yield at this time to Delegate DeVries, along with other members of the subcommittee who prepared this report.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, the subcommittee on militia consisted of these former enlisted men: Corporals DeVries, Binkowski, Mahinske and Chief Petty Officer Leppien, and Miss Donnelly.

The subcommittee heard or solicited testimony from about 15 witnesses, including 5 generals and 1 colonel. After viewing the whole problem with Olympian detachment, we decided on 1 of 3 alternatives: 1, to delete the entire article — no reference at all to militia; 2, to revise the language of the article into a compact sentence — this is what we have done in order to give us flexibility — or 3, to retain the article with the amendments suggested by the military establishment.

The subcommittee decided on the second alternative. You will find the report in the journal on page 301, and I will just briefly read it to you:

[The supporting reasons were read by Mr. DeVries. For text, see above.]

I would urge the support of the committee's report and its recommendation.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, may I address a question, through the Chair to Mr. DeVries?

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: If the gentleman cares to answer, you may.

MR. NORRIS: I note that there is omitted, both from the section to which the report is addressed and from the comment, any reference to the right — or at least the privilege — which is stated in section 1:

> . . . but all such citizens of any religious denomination, who, from scruples of conscience, may be averse to bearing arms, shall be excused therefrom upon such conditions as shall be prescribed by law.

That section is omitted, and, as I say, also omitted from the comment. I wondered if it is the intent of the committee that this provision shall not be accorded the same weight as it has been accorded under the 1908 constitution, which is that these rights of conscience be respected also as prescribed by law, by the legislature.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: It is the committee's intent, Mr. Chairman, Dr. Norris, that this would be covered in legislation, as I believe it is in the 1909 act, and in no way is this an attempt to take away the rights of a conscientious objector.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal?

If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 19 is passed.

The secretary will read the next item.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 5 on the calendar, from the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Exclusion Report 2003, A report recommending the exclusion of article X, section 20.

Following is Exclusion Report 2003 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on finance and taxation recommends that article X, section 20, of the present constitution be excluded entirely from the new constitution.

Mr. Brake, chairman of the committee on finance and taxation, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2003:

The committee on finance and taxation, as to section 20 of article X of the constitution, says that from the reading of this section it is apparent that it was designed to meet a specific problem existing at one time in the state's history but that the problem no longer exists and that therefore there is no reason for continuing it in the constitution.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, I don't know how we got back into this. The last I heard of this report it had been referred by this committee of the whole to the committee on legislative powers. How we got it back, or when, I know nothing about.

SECRETARY CHASE: Perhaps the secretary could interpolate here by stating that the exclusion report, on its face, came originally from the committee on finance and taxation, and the secretary neglected to point out that the committee on legislative powers had reported it back.

For last previous action on Exclusion Report 2003, see above, page 430.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The secretary will read the report, unless Mr. Hoxie wants to consider it read, and I will recognize Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I do so move, and at this time I would like to call on Mr. Wanger to give a report of our findings to the committee.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the exclusion report will be considered read, and the Chair recognizes Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I direct your attention to that part of the constitution which is section 20 of article X. It is perhaps a unique section, and its scope of operation is admittedly very narrow. It says

> It shall be competent for the state to acquire, purchase, take, hold and operate any railroad, or railroad property, belonging to any railroad or railway company in this state heretofore organized under a special charter still in force and effect and constituting a contract between the state and said company, wherein the right to purchase or acquire has been reserved to the state, whenever in the judgment of the legislature such acquisition or purchasing is necessary to protect and conserve the rights and interests of the state under such charter or contract. Any and all debts or obligations of such company constituting a lien upon such railroad, or railroad property, may be assumed by the state, and such road or property may be leased, sold or disposed of in such manner as may be provided by law.

This was amended into our constitution by a vote of the people on April 2, 1917.

I call your attention to the fact that it is very narrow in its operation. It says, of course, that the state may buy or operate and subsequently sell railroad property belonging to any railroad company, first in this state, second, heretofore organized — that is prior to the 1917 vote — third, under a special charter still in force and effect, fourth, which constitutes a contract between the state and said company, and fifth, wherein the right to purchase or acquire has been reserved to the state.

Over the holidays, when we were at home, I asked Dr. George May, of the Michigan historical commission, to prepare a history of this section for me. I quote from his signed memorandum:

> This amendment to the Constitution of 1908 originated with the attorney general, Alex J. Groesbeck.
>
> An article in the Lansing State Journal, January 24, 1917, explained the amendment was directed at the Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee branch of the Grand Trunk.
>
> Under its charter, which dated back to 1834, the DGH&M paid an annual tax of 1 per cent of its capital stock. The railroad for years has successfully resisted efforts of the state to tax it on an ad valorem basis, as other railroads were taxed.
>
> As a result, the railroad was paying an annual tax of only $25,000 in Michigan, whereas the state claimed it should be paying $150,000.
>
> When he became attorney general in January, 1917, Groesbeck took an active interest in this controversy. He noted that the said charter of 1834, which the railroad was using to protect itself from having to pay more taxes, also provided that after a period of years the state of Michigan could purchase the railroad at a cost to be set by a commission to be appointed by the governor and the legislature.
>
> Groesbeck reasoned that if the state threatened to assert the right given it by the charter to purchase the DGH&M, the railroad would relinquish its special privilege as regards to taxation. If the railroad did not do this, however, Groesbeck declared the state could purchase the railroad, sell it to private operators, and then collect taxes on an ad valorem basis.
>
> However, under the 1908 constitution the state could not acquire public utilities. Thus, Groesbeck proposed that the constitution be amended to enable the state to take advantage of this clause in the DGH&M charter.
>
> The State Journal, on the following day, January 25, reported the Groesbeck proposal had met with excellent and enthusiastic reception among the state officials and members of the legislature.
>
> Groesbeck further explained his position. His proposal, he emphasized, "is not intended to change the constitution so as to enable the state to own and operate and pledge railroads within the state, nor is it intended to authorize the building of railroads."
>
> His proposal, if approved, "will merely place the state in such a position that it can, with the necessary supplementary legislation, avail itself of its contractual rights, and thus protect the public interest."

At the conclusion of that memorandum, Dr. May states:

> Although this amendment was proposed and adopted during the period of world war I, the United States was not yet in the war at the time of its adoption and there does not appear to be any evidence that the amendment, as Roy Barlow asserts in Taxation and Fiscal Policy in the Michigan Constitution, was at all related to any wartime "concern over a possible need for public operation of railroads." Rather, it was an outgrowth of a long standing dispute between the state of Michigan and the grand trunk railroad over the taxes of that railroad branch line, the Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee.

Upon your desk yesterday you found copies of 2 letters. One was from the attorney or general counsel of the Grand Trunk Western railroad company. In part, that letter said:

> About the middle of the nineteenth century when the state of Michigan was interested in having an east-west railroad built across the state, the legislature decided to give some incentive to the promoters and builders of such a road by way of a tax concession.

The letter, as you know, goes on to point out the history of the situation, and finally states, on page 2:

> So far as I know, the mentioned section of article X of the 1908 constitution was specifically adopted to cover the Milwaukee railway company. Mr. H. V. Spike, my predecessor with the railroad company, was intimately connected with these matters for many years, and I have checked with him today, and he advises me that, so far as he knows, my understanding is correct and that there is no other railroad company in the state of Michigan involved in this particular kind of situation.

As the letter also points out regarding the special charter:

> The charter was surrendered and ever since that time the regular taxes have been paid.

That letter is personally signed, and I also have a signed letter from the aforesaid Mr. H. Victor Spike. I quote in part from that, from page 3:

> "On January 1, 1949, the properties became subject to the general railroad tax laws of the state."

I have no hesitancy in saying that the special charter of the Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee railroad company has completely gone out of existence, and neither the state nor the railroad company nor its successor, Grand Trunk Western railway company, have any rights or privileges whatever thereunder, or under section 20 of article X of the constitution, and I do not know of any other railroad in this state which was organized under a special charter prior to the adoption of section 20 of article X of the Constitution of 1908, which charter constituted a contract between the state and such company, wherein the state has a right to purchase for acquisition, as stated in said section 20. In other words, section 20 of article X can safely be left out of the proposed new constitution.

You also have a letter to a similar effect from James Inglis, which was prepared and placed on your desks yesterday, dated January 4.

Finally, I have received a letter from Mr. Edward W. Kane, secretary of the Michigan state tax commission, dated January 11. I quote in part, as follows:

> There is no cognizance taken by the state board of assessors of the provision of section 20, article X, in evaluating railroads for taxation purposes.

At another point I quote, selectively:

> There is no further purpose in retaining the provision of section 20, article X of the Constitution of the State of Michigan.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any amendments to the body of the exclusion report? If not, it will pass.

Exclusion Report 2003 is passed.

The next item.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 6, from the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Committee Proposal 20, A proposal to provide that no law shall be enacted providing for the penalty of death. Amends article V by adding a new section.

Following is Committee Proposal 20 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. NO LAW SHALL BE ENACTED PROVIDING FOR THE PENALTY OF DEATH.

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 20:

Michigan in 1846 was the first American state and the first governmental jurisdiction in the English speaking world to legislate against capital punishment. Except for treason, which today is clearly more a matter of federal rather than state significance, our state has not had the death penalty since that time.

The compelling arguments against capital punishment were succinctly restated in the Journal of the American Judicature Society of October, 1958, as follows:

1. The evidence clearly shows that execution does not act as a deterrent to capital crimes.
2. The serious offenses are committed, except in rare instances, by those suffering from mental disturbances; are impulsive in nature; and are not the acts of the "criminal" class.
3. Conviction of the innocent does occur and death makes a miscarriage of justice irrevocable. Human judgment cannot be infallible.
4. When the death sentence is removed as a possible punishment, more convictions are possible with less delays.
5. Unequal application of the law takes place because those executed are often the poor, the ignorant, and the unfortunate without resources.
6. The state sets a bad example when it takes a life. Imitative crimes and murder are stimulated by executions.
7. Legally taking a life is useless and demoralizing to the general public. It is also demoralizing to the public officials who, dedicated to rehabilitating individuals, must callously put a man to death. The effect upon fellow prisoners can be imagined.
8. A trial where a life may be at stake is highly sensationalized, adversely affects the administration of justice, and is bad for the community.
9. Society is amply protected by a sentence of life imprisonment.

Since 1926 there have been 8 times that a majority of one of the houses of our legislature voted in favor of the death penalty. Thus there is potential danger, particularly after a sensational crime, of such legislation being adopted.

The committee believes that it is both fitting and opportune for Michigan to step forward in the tradition which we began over 115 years ago and that the adoption of this provision would be a significant contribution to the concept of civilized justice which all of us seek to serve.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this, to me, is one of the most serious proposals that we will have before this committee. It is not only clear but it is concise. There cannot be any misunderstanding as to its intent and purpose.

To me it is twofold. The question that you have got to settle in your minds is: do you think it is right for the state to take a human life? The other is: do you feel that this is an undue restriction upon the legislature?

Our committee considered this. We have secured a lot of data on it, both the arguments pro and con, and at this time I would yield to Mr. Millard, who will furnish that information to the delegates.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, this is a proposed new section to the proposed new constitution, but it is not a new concept in the jurisprudence of this state. In 1848 the first statute was passed prohibiting execution of the death penalty in the state of Michigan. There are a great many reasons why the committee voted to put out this proposal, and one was for the many times that this question arises and is proposed as a legislative matter to our state legislators.

---

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

I might say that in my own personal experience over a great many years as a practicing lawyer, each time a heinous and atrocious crime was committed in the state of Michigan there were some people who immediately advocated the death penalty, even though it wouldn't be retroactive and take charge of that particular case. And so many, many, many times there have been bills presented to the legislature to provide for the death penalty.

When I was attorney general there was a bill introduced every single year, and I think we will have that discussed by one of the other members of the committee to give you just an idea as to how far back these legislative proposals have gone. However, I heard a great many of the arguments both for and against capital punishment in those days, and as you probably all know the elective officials in those days would go around to "government days" held in high schools all over the state, and generally one of the questions that was asked was: "What do you think of capital punishment?" and it fell upon me to make the answers. So I had to look up some of the statistics, some of the things that prompted me to come to the conclusion that capital punishment is not the solution to crime.

In fact, all of these statistics show that crime is greater in a percentage factor according to population in states that do have capital punishment than those that do not.

I want to read here some of the compelling arguments which have been compiled and restated in the Journal of the American Judicature Society of 1958 as follows:

1. The evidence clearly shows that execution does not act as a deterrent to capital crimes.

2. The serious offenses are committed, except in rare instances, by those suffering from mental disturbances; are impulsive in nature; and are not the acts of the "criminal" class.

I believe if all of you will think back to some of the worst crimes you know, you will find that the statement will be verified in your own experience.

3. Conviction of the innocent does occur and death makes a miscarriage of justice irrevocable. Human judgment cannot be infallible.

4. When the death sentence is removed as a possible punishment, more convictions are possible with less delay.

5. Unequal application of the law takes place because those executed are often the poor, the ignorant, and the unfortunate without resources.

That will be enlarged upon by one of the other members of the committee. It is very, very important as far as the humanitarian aspect is concerned.

6. The state sets a bad example when it takes a life. Imitative crimes and murder are stimulated by executions.

7. Legally taking a life is useless and demoralizing to the general public. It is also demoralizing to the public officials who, dedicated to rehabilitating individuals, must callously put a man to death. The effect upon fellow prisoners can be imagined.

8. A trial where a life may be at stake is highly sensationalized, adversely affects the administration of justice and is bad for the community.

And, finally,

9. Society is amply protected by a sentence of life imprisonment.

Those are the general reasons, and now I would like to have the privilege of calling upon my committee, if the chairman will so let me yield the floor to the members of my subcommittee, and first I would like to call upon Mr. Wanger.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Millard yields to Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Thank you, Mr. Millard. Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, this recommendation carries the unanimous vote of the committee on legislative powers, and its report stating these reasons, as you know, appears in the journal on page 305.

The committee believes that it is both fitting and opportune for Michigan to step forward in the tradition which she began, as Mr. Millard pointed out, over 115 years ago; and that the adoption of this provision would be a significant contribution to the concept of civilized justice which all of us seek to serve.

The arguments have been very well stated in the committee's report, but I would like to enlarge particularly upon the fourth one, which, as pointed out, is that when the death sentence is removed as a possible punishment, more convictions are possible with less delay.

I received a letter on December 15 from Dr. LeMoyne Snyder, a former resident of the Lansing area, and a nationally recognized authority in the field of legal medicine. He writes as follows from California, where he now resides:

> Within the last week I have returned from a murder trial in Oklahoma, and during the past 30 years I have been involved in murder trials in a great many different states — most of them with capital punishment.
>
> One fact that few people realize is the ease and speed with which a murder trial is conducted in Michigan or other states which do not have capital punishment. In fact, a sizeable proportion of the case in noncapital punishment states require no trial at all because you have a plea of guilty to start with, which rarely happens where capital punishment is involved.
>
> Here in California at the present time there are 35 inmates of death row awaiting execution. Some of them have been there for years and within the past year one person was executed after 12 years. In fact it isn't far from the truth that Chessman served both a life sentence and a death sentence but, whether he was guilty or not, the fact remains that his conviction and execution required an enormous amount of time, trouble and expense.
>
> You may know that in this state, as well as in several others, the jury makes 2 entirely separate determinations — first a finding of whether the defendant is guilty or not. If the jury finds him guilty, they then listen to several days of testimony as to whether the death sentence should be inflicted. It happens quite often that the jury will find him guilty and then disagree on the punishment. This requires that a new jury be empaneled just to determine the punishment and it requires retrying the entire case over again.
>
> One of the greatest benefits of not having capital punishment is the fact that the ends of justice are attained swiftly, easily and at little expense and, all in all, justice is much better served.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman, I would like now to call upon Mr. Downs, who will take it from the legislative angle.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Millard yields to Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Millard, Mr. Chairman, delegates to the convention, I rise to speak in favor of the committee proposal which has, as was mentioned, a unanimous recommendation.

As was pointed out by other speakers, Michigan has a proud history in being the first state by law to eliminate capital punishment. However, from the year 1903 through 1956 there were 25 bills and resolutions dealing with capital punishment. In 8 cases proposals for capital punishment passed at least one house. In 1929 it passed both houses, to be vetoed by Governor Green. In 1931 the capital punishment provision passed both houses, was signed by the governor, with the proviso for a referendum, and the people defeated this by a vote of 352,000 to 269,000. So capital punishment did not become the law.

I think perhaps that Mr. Wanger has summarized the position of the committee best when he says that this recommendation is another step forward in civilized justice; a step that Michigan can historically be proud of, and I hope this committee will support the report of our committee.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman, I would like to call upon the next member of my subcommittee, Mrs. Koeze.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Millard yields to Mrs. Koeze.

MRS. KOEZE: Ladies and gentlemen, I would just like to have you refer to journal, page 306, argument 5 of the committee report.

Warden Lewis E. Lawes, of Sing Sing prison, a most eminent authority who knows first hand whereof he speaks, said of the 150 offenders that he was required to escort to the death chamber:

> In one respect they were all alike. All were poor and most of them friendless. Juries do not intentionally favor the rich — the law is theoretically impartial — but the defendant with ample means is able to have his case presented with every favorable aspect, while the poor defendant often has a lawyer assigned by the courts. Usually the lawyer assigned has had no experience in a capital case.
>
> Thus it is seldom that it happens that a person who is able to have eminent defense attorneys is convicted of murder in the first degree, and very rare indeed that such a person is executed.

Ladies and gentlemen, I think this points up very, very thoroughly what we have facing us here, and I do hope that this committee will give serious consideration to this section that we in the legislative powers committee deemed absolutely necessary to put in the Michigan constitution. Thank you.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman, just a final word. As has been stated, the legislative powers committee was unanimous in this recommendation that this proposal be adopted. I think it has been pointed out very clearly that capital punishment does not deter crime. Furthermore, there have been instances of innocent men being convicted, and if one is put to death there can be no appeal from that sentence.

I hope that the committee will adopt this proposal. Mr. Millard yields the floor.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, at the outset I would like to say I am sympathetic to the committee's proposal, but there are certain portions of the committee report which tend to disturb me. I wonder if Mr. Millard would indicate whether or not the adoption of this report might be taken as criticism by this convention of any jurisdiction which does inflict capital punishment for any reason whatsoever?

MR. MILLARD: Nowhere have we indicated that any other jurisdiction should be criticized. We made the general statement that capital punishment has not proven a deterrent in crime in other states, and the statistics will bear that out. We are not criticizing; we are just citing facts.

MR. BENTLEY: I wonder if Mr. Millard, then, would indicate as to whether or not the committee might feel that the federal government errs in taking lives in cases of, for example, espionage and similar situations where the death penalty is invoked.

MR. MILLARD: A crime against the patriotism of the country, and a crime against our country, should be punished by death. But we don't have that in this state. The federal government has preempted treason, and I am all for the death penalty as far as treason and espionage, and anything that has to do with the welfare and safety of our country.

MR. BENTLEY: Then, in other words, Mr. Chairman, the reasons adduced here by the subcommittee for taking a position against capital punishment would certainly not apply, in their opinion, to crime against the state or the nation, whether in this country or any other country.

MR. MILLARD: Certainly not. Not against our country, no, sir.

MR. BENTLEY: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: I just want to comment on this proposal, because I served in the legislature when one or more of these proposals to adopt capital punishment in the state of Michigan came before us. They always come when there has been a particularly serious crime and when emotion is at its highest. I think it is significant that after the legislation has been considered and the people have cooled a little bit, particularly in the case where it was submitted to the people, the people have turned it down.

I also had the privilege of serving for some years as chairman of the Michigan crime and delinquency council, which is an arm of the national council on crime and delinquency, and the opinion of that body, and of the many experts who serve it, including many judges who work with the council, is, I think, uniform that the arguments advanced by the committee are sound and that the death penalty is not a deterrent to crime.

It seems to me I remember also from studies we saw that in England, when the death penalty was given for matters as small as stealing a loaf of bread — in fact, it was used on all kinds of situations — crime was never higher. This is in the earlier history of England, so it seems quite clear it doesn't act as a deterrent and that it is only an act of vengeance on the part of the public.

It seems to me that this is a splendid proposal; that it is completely sound, and particularly sound because it is being considered at a time when we don't happen to be subject to some of the high emotion that affects this question from time to time. I think it is a good time for the people of Michigan to settle once and for all the question of capital punishment.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I rise also to support the committee, and I just want to make one statement. I support the right of every person in Michigan not to be put to death under the death penalty. I think that is a right which is stated here conversely in the proscription against a law in this field.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Millard a question just so I can clear my mind. Am I correct in assuming that by statute today treason in Michigan is punishable by death?

MR. MILLARD: I don't know whether I can answer that.

MR. CUDLIP: Well, I recall a few years ago, that there was a bank robbery, and I believe it was in Midland, and in connection with that there were some killings and, of course, the federal government took charge, and the convicted were hung at Milan because the federal law said the punishment should be that highest punishment afforded by the law of the state in which the crime occurred.

I am in favor of this proposal, but I have heard talk here about Michigan's leadership, and last night we adopted a proposal which said that in connection with commutations, reprieves and so forth, treason would be dealt with as other crimes. That is not too germane, but it is somewhat germane, but, if my memory serves me, treason against Michigan is now punishable by death, and I suppose if we adopt this, that would go off the books, and that is all right with me. But I think that is an interesting point, and I just wondered what the answer was.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, to answer Mr. Cudlip, I think the federal government has made provision in this regard that where it calls for the death penalty, as in the case that he speaks of — a murder took place in a federally insured bank — there may be executed a death penalty, and it provides that the execution shall be carried out by the U.S. marshal in the same manner as provided by the state laws; except that if there is no such provision in the state law, it shall be as the court shall prescribe.

If what you are concerned with is the fact that we might be infringing — have to have a federal amendment — this is not necessarily the case. It merely is that if it is found that the death penalty in the state law provides for execution by the electric chair, that will be used; or by hanging, or in some states they even have firing squads yet. But it provides also that in case there is no death penalty, then the court shall prescribe, and I think the method prescribed — if it is not in the statute — is by hanging.

There is no connection any more between the two.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: In reply also to your question, Mr. Cudlip, treason is punishable by death under Michigan Statutes Annotated 28.812. Also the case of '37, the Chebatoris case was tried under the national bank robbery act. It was the first case there tried, and it was done entirely pursuant to federal law as far as the conviction was concerned. I would merely add that if a situation should arise where Michigan's prohibition of the death penalty, as is here proposed, should make it inconvenient or impossible to execute a federally imposed sentence of death within the confines of the state of Michigan, that would be no great loss.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman, was Mr. Wanger's answer that Michigan does now presently punish treason by death?

MR. WANGER: By statute.

MR. CUDLIP: Thank you. That is the information I wanted. I am in favor of the proposal.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 20 is passed.

The secretary will read the next item.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 7 on the calendar, from the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, by Mr. Erickson, chairman, Exclusion Report 2006, A report recommending the exclusion of article XII, sections 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 7 and 8.

Following is Exclusion Report 2006 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule recommends that article XII, sections 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 7 and 8 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Erickson, chairman of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2006:

The committee has carefully reviewed the constitutional convention preparatory commission's study on Corporations and the Michigan Constitution, prepared under the direction of Professor Alfred F. Conard of the University of Michigan law school.

The committee has heard the Michigan corporation and securities commissioner, the executive director of the Michigan economic development commission, the deputy attorney general of Michigan, the general counsel of the Michigan state AFL-CIO, the general counsel of the Michigan manufacturers' association, and has received the recommendations of the corporation committee of the state bar of Michigan.

Section 1. The method of incorporating by general law is little more than 100 years old. The first sentence of section 1 requiring that corporations be formed only by general law first appeared as article XV, section 1 of the Michigan Constitution of 1850. Today there is no need for the retention of such a provision inasmuch as the statutes providing for free incorporation will remain on the books even without an express constitutional mandate. The substance of this provision is presently covered elsewhere in the constitution (article V, section 30) and the committee has been advised that the committee on legislative powers will recommend retention of the substance of that section in the new constitution.

The second sentence of section 1, generally known as the "reserved power" clause, was inserted in many state constitutions in the midnineteenth century as a direct result of the Dartmouth College case in which the U. S. supreme court held that the charter of a corporation was a contract, between the state and the corporation, which was protected from subsequent alteration or repeal by the contracts clause of the federal constitution. Now that corporations are almost universally formed under general incorporation laws, the rationale behind the "contract theory" of the Dartmouth College case has been weakened. The effect of these general incorporation laws, including the statutes of Michigan, make the corporate charter a grant, to numerous individuals, of a franchise, a privilege to conduct business in a certain way, which privilege, as a matter of sound policy, entails liability to public regulation.

Section 2. The first sentence is substantially the same provision as was contained in the Michigan Constitution of 1850. This sentence is not in fact a definition but a mandate that the definition of corporations shall be construed to include all associations and joint stock companies having the powers and privileges of corporations. However, the Michigan supreme court has held that the use of the word "corporations" in legislation, (e.g., having to do with taxation) need not necessarily include associations and joint stock companies. In fact a definition is considered unnecessary in light of the generally accepted definition of corporation at common law and by statute.

The second sentence of section 2 has been carried over unchanged from the Michigan Constitution of 1850. The power to sue and liability to suit are among the corporate attributes first recognized by the common law. Corporations have been recognized as judicial persons by the Supreme Court of Michigan as well as by the courts of most major commercial states.

It seems apparent to the committee that neither the definitional sentence nor the sentence giving corporations the capacity to sue and be sued serves any useful purpose.

Section 3. This provision limiting corporate life to 30 years had its origin in the Michigan Constitution of 1850, although it was amended in 1889 to substantially the form in which it was adopted in the Michigan Constitution of 1908. No other state retains a similar constitutional limitation on the life of a corporation. Since this provision permits expiring corporations to renew their charters whenever most of the shareholders desire it, it offers no real check on the power of large corporations. It merely requires the expensive nuisance of an election for those corporations served by adequate legal counsel, and creates a danger of considerable embarrassment and expense for those who overlook legal technicalities and allow their charters to expire. It poses a serious problem for corporations who seek capital through the issuance of bonds or notes having a maturity date longer in the future than the expiration of the corporate charter. It is one of the factors which have induced Michigan enterprises to incorporate in Delaware or some other state having no such provision and pay their organization taxes there instead of in Michigan.

Section 5. This provision is substantially identical to article XV, section 12 of the Michigan Constitution of 1850. In the Michigan Constitutional Convention of 1850, there was no debate with reference to the advisability of including this section in the constitution. However, the existence of "anti corporate sentiment" in that convention was recognized by the Michigan supreme court in 1872. This provision has in fact been a deterrent to the organization of corporations in Michigan and the executive director of the Michigan economic development commission strongly recommends its deletion from the constitution. It is readily circumvented and under the decision of the Michigan supreme court it is in fact a dead letter.

Section 6. This provision is a substitute for article XV, section 8 of the Michigan Constitution of 1850 and one of the reasons for its inclusion at the time is quite clear, because for the first time the Michigan Constitution of 1850 required incorporation by general law only. It is doubtful whether this provision was even necessary in the Michigan Constitution of 1908 since there were very few corporations in existence at that time which had been created by special act. Its retention would serve no more useful purpose than the retention of the first sentence of section 1 and accordingly the committee recommends its deletion.

Section 7. This section is obsolete. The Michigan supreme court has decided that the legislature does not need constitutional authority in order to delegate rate fixing powers to the railroad commission. This decision, coupled with the U. S. supreme court's interpretation of the state's police power, combined to render this section almost completely ineffective. It no longer serves as a source of the legislature's power to fix rates railroads may charge for passenger and freight transportation, for it is well settled that the legislature has the inherent power to regulate public utilities and common carriers. The committee therefore recommends its deletion.

Section 8. This section was added to the Michigan Constitution of 1850 as an amendment pursuant to joint resolution of the legislature which was ratified at the election of 1870. This provision is now obsolete. The interstate commerce commission has been given authority by congress to approve mergers, consolidations and acquisition of control of one carrier by another whenever such combining would be in the public interest. The authority of congress to regulate commerce comes from the U. S. constitution. Retention of this provision could not be dismissed as harmless even though it is a dead letter. Since it states a principle directly in conflict with federal law and policy, it deceives the reader and invites fruitless controversy. The committee recommends that it be deleted.

The committee has noted that the August 4, 1961, draft of the model state constitution, published by the national municipal league, contains no provisions whatsoever on the subject of corporations.

The committee has observed that there is no corporation article in the newest 3 state constitutions, (Alaska, Hawaii, Connecticut — revised) and none in the U. S. constitution.

The committee's decision to recommend exclusion of article XII, sections 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 7 and 8 was reached by unanimous vote of the members of the committee.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The chairman of the committee, Mr. Erickson.

MR. ERICKSON: This committee report was prepared by Mr. Woolfenden as chairman, Mr. Binkowski as vice chairman, Mr. Lawrence, Mr. Hutchinson and Mr. Mahinske.

The adoption of this report would reduce the present constitution by 460 words, and I now yield to Delegate Woolfenden.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Erickson yields to Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: This exclusion report is found on page 306 of the journal.

The subcommittee, the members of which were just mentioned by Chairman Erickson, has had the benefit of a comprehensive memorandum from the governor's preparatory commission which was prepared by Dr. Alfred F. Conard, of the law school of the University of Michigan. Dr. Conard, who is a professor of corporations of the University of Michigan, also appeared before the committee.

In addition, the committee had the benefit of appearances by the corporation and securities commissioner of the state, the executive director of the Michigan economic development commission, the deputy attorney general of Michigan, the general counsel of the Michigan state AFL-CIO, the general counsel of the Michigan manufacturers' association, and a recommendation from the corporations committee of the state bar of Michigan.

The subcommittee report, or decision, I should say, recommending this exclusion report was unanimous. The decision of the miscellaneous committee, the whole committee, was unanimous.

The report in the journal sets forth the reasons why each of these sections, in the unanimous opinion of the committee, should be excluded from the new constitution. I would treat briefly the reasons behind the recommendation covering the first 3 sections, and other members of the subcommittee will cover the balance of the sections. We will welcome any questions on the part of any delegate as to any phase of our report.

Section 1 sets forth substantially that corporations should not be incorporated by special act, but should be incorporated under a general act. Section 30 of article V already covers this same problem, and I will read the pertinent language from that section. Section 30, article V of the constitution reads:

> The legislature shall pass no local or special act in any case where a general act can be made applicable, and whether a general act can be made applicable shall be a judicial question.

That substantially covers the first sentence of section 1 of article XII.

[The supporting reasons for sections 1, 2 and 3 were read by Mr. Woolfenden. For text, see above, page 598.]

We feel that this provision particularly has been detrimental to the best interests of the state of Michigan, and has adversely affected the business climate in Michigan. The witnesses before our committee all agreed that it serves no useful purpose today; that it has been bad for the state in specific instances in the past, which were cited to the committee, and again the committee unanimously recommends that this section be deleted.

Now I would like to yield the floor to a member of our subcommittee, Delegate Binkowski, who will discuss section 5.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Woolfenden yields to Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Section 5 of the corporation section, of course, deals with the 10 year limitation upon the ownership of land by corporations.

Starting out with one of our studies, the citizens research council states consideration might well be given to omitting this restriction from the constitution. Professor Conard, who put out the very extensive legal study under the auspices of the Michigan constitutional convention study, commented that under the beneficent interpretation of the supreme court, it — referring to section 5 — is a dead letter.

As Mr. Woolfenden already indicated, we had testimony from the counsel of the Michigan manufacturers' association, and I would like to quote you very briefly his statement regarding section 5.

> Under the interpretation which the supreme court has placed on present section 5, it has become, for all practical purposes, a dead letter. For example, it has been held that life insurance companies "actually occupy" apartment houses which they buy and rent to tenants.
>
> I think that this dead wood could profitably be pruned.

Therefore, on the basis of our legal authorities, we thought that section 5 could be omitted. However, we did not stop there. We had further testimony from Mr. Don Weeks, who at that time was the executive director of the Michigan department of economic development, who also indicated that section 5 should be omitted.

For the benefit of the committee, I would very briefly like to go into the reasons for the adoption of section 5 by the Constitutional Convention of 1850, as Mr. Weeks indicated.

1. Corporate speculators in agricultural land, limiting the opportunity of the common man, without the payment of speculative land prices, to acquire cutover land and thereby hasten the development of the state.
2. Distrust of corporations and the possible undue influence large land owning corporations might have on state and local government.
3. As corporation franchises are renewable, such land ownership might be perpetual — not subject to a change in ownership as takes place at the death of an individual.

I think, based upon our experience, we have not seen any of these fears actually realized.

Now, the reasons for retaining section 5 in the Constitution of 1908 very briefly:

1. Holding unimproved land indefinitely adjacent to land now used by the corporation and preventing its development by others.

2. This provision had been in the constitution for over 50 years and it should be retained until such time as it can be shown that corporations suffer losses therefrom.

I think, on the basis of our experience, we have seen corporations show losses.

I would like to quote very briefly just a few more statements from Mr. Don Weeks, because I think it reflects the business attitude toward section 5.

As a result, Michigan's economy is handicapped in competition with other states. The Detroit board of commerce adopted the report of its legislative committee of October 3, 1961 which states that many million dollars of financing have been lost to Michigan because of this section in Michigan's constitution.

The industrial development advisory committee of the Michigan economic development commission, at its meeting on December 28, 1951, stated, "It is obvious that we are at a disadvantage with respect to other states on this question of long term investments by insurance companies."

This is confirmed by managers of mortgage loan and real estate investment branches of large insurance companies. They state that their investment activities in this state would increase materially if article XII, section 5, were deleted from the constitution.

Therefore, on the basis of our legal authority, on the basis of our business people, we thought we could help improve Michigan's economic climate by recommending to this convention the deletion of section 5.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: For a discussion of the reasons behind the unanimous committee recommendation for the deletion of sections 6, 7 and 8, I yield to Delegate Mahinske.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Woolfenden yields to Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: With reference to section 6 in the existing constitution, you will note that the rule is laid down that the legislature shall pass no law renewing or extending any special act of incorporation heretofore granted. Now, the original appearance of this item in the constitution goes back to section 8, article XV of the 1850 constitution for the reason that at this time, 1850, for the first time the state of Michigan required incorporation by general law only. This provision was put in as a saving clause to any incorporated bodies we had at that time that were incorporated under special acts of the legislature. It appears from our investigation in this area that probably in 1908 this provision was not necessary, but for one reason or another it was inserted. The general opinion of the committee at this time is that there are none of these corporations in existence, and if there are, the exclusion of section 6 would not jeopardize them at all.

Going on to section 7, which is entitled Passenger Fares and Freight Rates, it was concluded by the committee when we went over this section that the section is also obsolete. It has been determined by court cases and otherwise that the legislature does not need constitutional authority in order to delegate rate fixing power to a railroad commission, which we have in this state, and it no longer serves as a source of the legislature's power to fix rates. Also we have determined that the legislature has the inherent power to regulate public utilities and common carriers, and for these reasons we feel this section is no longer needed. There are other provisions in the constitution permitting the establishment of such bodies as the Michigan public service commission and so forth which we have in existence now that handles this area.

Section 8, we feel, is in absolute conflict with the federal laws in the area; section 8 being entitled Consolidation of Railroads. This area of section 8 is taken care of by the interstate commerce commission, by the federal government. Federal laws have been set up, and there is even federal constitutional authority giving jurisdiction in this area to the federal body. For these particular reasons the committee feels this is an obsolete section and there is no point in retaining it in the constitution.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: For the reasons which have been submitted to the convention, we recommend that this exclusion report be adopted. Support for the committee's recommendation is found in the action of other constitutional conventions in connection with the 3 most recently adopted state constitutions, and I refer to the constitutions of Alaska, Hawaii and the Connecticut revised constitution. In none of those constitutions is there any corporation article, and the model state constitution published by the national municipal league also contains no corporation article.

I would like to supplement what Delegate Mahinske has said with respect to special charters. There are probably some special charters still in existence. However, neither by the recommended deletion of section 3 or section 6 will any organization which does have a special charter antedating 1908 be adversely affected. We have been into that question with Dr. Conard and with the counsel for these organizations that we mentioned, and we are satisfied that the legislation — the special legislation — creating those charters is not affected in any way by this proposed deletion. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, we recommend that these sections 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 7 and 8 of article XII be excluded from the new constitution.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Woolfenden yields the floor.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct a question to Mr. Binkowski in connection with section 5. It seems to me that the reasons which Mr. Binkowski has given are most laudable, but I wonder whether the committee has considered the possibility of something other than a bona fide corporation organized for profit; in other words, a corporation organized by a given individual for the sole purpose of maintaining title to the land in that corporation indefinitely. What I am getting at is whether the committee considered the possibility of elimination of this provision in some way affecting the rule against perpetuities; in other words, tying up land.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Hatch, I think that on the basis of our study, and on the basis of what we have been reading, we feel that the supreme court has rendered this section of the constitution a dead letter, and that it is of no force and effect. I think on that basis the committee did not feel that a corporation would be in any better position, so to speak, to violate the law against perpetuity than an individual. I myself do not see how a corporation would be in that position.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct a question to Delegate Woolfenden, whom I believe discussed section 3. My question is this: we have now thousands of Michigan corporations existing under the present general corporation act within the constitution, article XII, section 3. What will be their legal status under this proposed exclusion? Will their life automatically be extended indefinitely?

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Frankly, I am not in a position to answer that authoritatively. I believe that the attorney general, at the conclusion of this convention — should the constitution be adopted — will have to give an opinion on that. My own thought is that corporations presently in existence would have their charters extended indefinitely by the adoption of the constitution. If not, upon their first renewal they could then renew for an indefinite period.

MR. PRETTIE: Thank you, sir. I merely wanted the record clear.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any amendments to the body of the exclusion report? If not, it will pass.

Exclusion Report 2006 is passed.

The secretary will read the next proposal.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 8 on the calendar, from the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, by Mr. Erickson, chairman, Committee Proposal 21, A proposal pertaining to the division of the powers of government. Amends article IV.

Following is Committee Proposal 21 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

The powers of government are divided into 3 [departments] BRANCHES: The legislative, executive and judicial.

No person belonging to 1 [department] BRANCH shall exercise the powers properly belonging to another, except in the cases expressly provided in this constitution.

Mr. Erickson, chairman of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 21:

This is the doctrine of the separation of powers, a principle quite fundamental in our system of government. It is this principle which distinguishes the foundations of our American governments from the parliamentary systems of Britain and western Europe.

The apportionment of powers to 1 of the 3 coordinate branches is understood to be a prohibition of its exercise by either of the others. By a system of checks and balances of government, each is a restraint upon the rest. The 3 branches are equal under our constitution and are to be kept as distinct as possible.

The powers of 1 branch cannot be extended to another otherwise than by explicit language or by necessary implication, to be discovered in the constitution itself.

The doctrine of the separation of powers prevents the collection of governmental powers into the hands of 1 man, thus protecting the rights of the people. It is as old as our American governmental system, and was devised by our founding fathers, greatly influenced by the French political theorist, Montesquieu. Desirous of protecting a free people, their idea was that if, somehow, the powers of government could be divided, it could not grow so large as to enslave them.

Basically the doctrine means that he who makes a law shall not enforce it, nor sit in judgment upon it; that he who enforces a law shall not make or change it nor shall he judge of its violation; and he who sits in judgment shall have neither made the law nor enforced it.

This doctrine is so much accepted in our system, that it is unexpressed in the Constitution of the United States and in at least 10 of our sister state constitutions. Without exception, the doctrine is found within those constitutions, from the structure of government created.

It may be conceded, therefore, that the substance of article IV of the Constitution of 1908 could be excluded from a new constitution without risk of weakening the doctrine. But the doctrine has been expressed in all of Michigan's earlier constitutions and it is the recommendation of the committee that it should be reexpressed in a new one.

The committee has substituted the word BRANCH for the word DEPARTMENT, for the reason that in modern usage the word "department" means a division of the executive branch, as the department of state, treasury department, department of conservation, etc.

This report is concurred in by the committee on judicial branch, the committee on legislative powers and the committee on executive branch.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, Mr. Erickson.

MR. ERICKSON: This report is for the entire article IV. This report was prepared by Delegate Hutchinson along with his committee, and obviously I can't yield to him this afternoon. This report that he and his committee prepared really reads like a text book. The only change in this takes out the words "department and departments" and substitutes the words "branch and branches."

[The supporting reasons for Committee Proposal 21 were read by Mr. Erickson. For text, see above.]

To me, the most important part of this report is the phrase "Basically, the doctrine means that he who makes a law shall not enforce it." I recommend the adoption of the report.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? Mr. Heideman.

MR. HEIDEMAN: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I would just like to make a statement in connection with this historic document. I taught American government, constitutional history and some constitutional law for a long time, and I used to say rather jokingly to my students that some day I should like to have the honor of being elected to a constitutional convention to make a correction in the historical records.

I have on my desk 6 documents, I believe, which purport to contain the Michigan constitution, and reference in all of them is to the doctrine of division of powers, not separation of powers — all except the Comparative Analysis of the Michigan Constitution by the citizens research council. That refers to the doctrine of separation of powers. Now, of course, there is the question of the caption. That is descriptive and not part of article IV itself.

I introduced a proposal which I believe the committee took into consideration, because part of my proposal was adopted. The part that was adopted was the substitution of the word "branch" for the word "department" on the grounds that Chairman Erickson read from the report.

By the way, I would like to say that I think that this is a masterful and brief presentation of the doctrine of separation of powers; the presentation as it is contained in this committee report, and though I have read on this for many years and many places, I enjoyed reading it very much.

Now, in my proposal I suggested, in addition to changing the word "department" to "branch," also the substitution of the word "separated" for "divided." It would have then read, "The powers of government are separated into 3 branches."

Now, perhaps it is a better expression to say "divided." I will not raise any point about that. I would like, however, for the record, a change to be made in future references to this doctrine as the doctrine of the separation of powers; one of the world's most famous doctrines in the history of the development of constitutional government and human liberty.

The doctrine of the division of powers is the doctrine which refers to the distribution of power between the federal government and the state governments, whether delegated expressly or by implication.

I would like to call attention also to the accompanying terms "checks and balances," "coordinate branches of government," that is, executive, legislative and judicial branches, along with this doctrine and terminology, "separation of powers," and I would like to end up with a quotation from a very famous constitution in which I believe this is most felicitously expressed; the famous Constitution of Massachusetts of 1780 by John Adams. I will not read the whole constitution, just the felicitous expressions.

> In the government of this commonwealth the legislative department shall never exercise the executive and judicial powers, or either of them; the executive shall never exercise the legislative and judicial powers, or either of them; the judicial shall never exercise the legislative and executive powers, or either of them; to the end it may be a government of laws and not of men.

That haunts me, that expression.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal?

Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct a question to Mr. Erickson. I noticed in the committee report which you read it states:

> Basically the doctrine means that he who makes a law

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

shall not enforce it, nor sit in judgment upon it; that he who enforces a law shall not make or change it nor shall he judge of its violation; and he who sits in judgment shall have neither made the law nor enforced it.

and that this is much accepted in our system.

For the record, I wonder, Mr. Erickson, if by this statement, and in the field of the administrative agencies, if you would care to comment upon what the intention would be with regard to the passage of regulations by such an agency and the subsequent enforcement and judgment of the violation?

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Erickson.

MR. ERICKSON: That is a subject that was discussed in committee at considerable length. We even thought that it might be desirable to add another section in there dealing with this administrative law, but we wanted to wait and see what some of the other committees come up with. We knew that legislative powers was discussing it, the executive branch, judicial branch, and also the committee on emerging problems. I think all 4 of them have this problem under consideration. I am reasonably sure that before we get through, somebody is going to come up with something dealing with this problem of administrative law.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal?

Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, like Dr. Heideman, I am also an ex teacher of government. Like Dr. Heideman, I am sure this proposal would make it much easier for teachers of government in high schools as well as in colleges and universities to explain the doctrine of separation of powers.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 21 is passed.

The secretary will read the next proposal, Committee Proposal 22.

Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, the next matter of business before the committee of the whole is Committee Proposal 22, which is a proposal pertaining to the state civil service. There has been filed with the secretary a minority report which did not appear until yesterday in the journal, which I imagine a great number of delegates have not had an opportunity to view as yet.

Based on this fact, and because I feel that this is a matter which should receive the serious deliberation of this body, I would move, as was moved yesterday by Mr. Iverson, that consideration of Committee Proposal 22 in the committee of the whole be postponed until Friday, January 19, 1962.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Hatch moves that further consideration of item 9 on the general orders calendar, being Committee Proposal 22 relative to civil service, be postponed until Friday next.

Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, it is desirable that the delegates have an opportunity, of course, to read the minority report as well as the majority report and the committee, I am sure, has no objection to postponement. But I am wondering whether it is necessary to postpone it that long. I wonder if we couldn't postpone it until, say, tomorrow or Thursday. Mr. Hatch, do you have any special feeling about moving it to Friday?

MR. HATCH: My only thought was that we had postponed this other matter until Thursday, and because that day may be taken up with considerable debate on Committee Proposal 15, Friday might be preferable.

MR. MARTIN: Suppose we postpone it to Thursday. The other matter will take precedence, and if we do get to this, fine; if we don't, we can carry it over until Friday. Would that be satisfactory?

MR. HATCH: In other words, until Thursday, and if we do get to it, fine, but —

MR. MARTIN: I suggest that we postpone it until Thursday. The other matter would take precedence on Thursday, but if there is time to discuss the civil service proposal we could get started on it and carry the discussion until Friday.

MR. HATCH: I would have no objection to that.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Hatch amends his motion and states it to call for a postponement until Thursday next.

Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: I certainly want to agree with Mr. Hatch, if the delegates want to carry over a minority report for time for the other delegates to speak on it. I also agree with Delegate Martin that Friday is usually not the best day to discuss. I just raise the question, if he would like to take this up tomorrow, or do you feel that would be too soon? I don't feel too strongly about it.

MR. MARTIN: It will be entirely satisfactory with the committee to take it up tomorrow, if Mr. Hatch is ready and feels that his people have an opportunity to look over the minority report.

MR. HATCH: I would prefer Thursday, which would give the usual 3 days from the date of submission.

MR. DOWNS: There is no objection.

MR. MARTIN: That is satisfactory with the committee.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Hatch moves that further consideration of item 9 on the general orders calendar, being Committee Proposal 22, be postponed until Thursday. All those in favor, say aye. Those opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 10 on the calendar, from the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Committee Proposal 23, A proposal to prohibit the issuance of evidences of state indebtedness, except as authorized by the constitution, to authorize state borrowing and prescribe the method therefor, to limit the use of state credit and to permit the loaning of state funds to school districts under certain conditions, and covering the general subject matter found in sections 11, 10, 12 and 28 of article X of the 1908 constitution.

Following is Committee Proposal 23 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. [No scrip, certificate or other evidence of state indebtedness shall be issued, except for such debts as are expressly authorized in this constitution.] NO EVIDENCE OF STATE INDEBTEDNESS SHALL BE ISSUED, EXCEPT FOR SUCH DEBTS AS ARE EXPRESSLY AUTHORIZED IN OR PURSUANT TO THE PROVISIONS OF THIS CONSTITUTION.

Sec. b. [The state may contract debts to meet deficits in revenue, but such debts shall not in the aggregate at any time, exceed $250,000. The state may also contract debts to repel invasion, suppress insurrection, defend the state or aid the United States in time of war. The money so raised shall be applied to the purposes for which it is raised or to the payment of the debts contracted. The state may borrow not to exceed $50 million for the improvement of highways and pledge its credit, and issue bonds therefor on such terms as shall be provided by law.] THE LEGISLATURE, FOR THE PURPOSE OF MEETING ITS APPROPRIATIONS FOR ANY FISCAL YEAR, MAY BY LAW AUTHORIZE THE STATE TO ISSUE ITS NOTES PLEDGING ITS FAITH AND CREDIT FOR THE PURPOSE OF BORROWING MONEY IN ANTICIPATION OF THE RECEIPT OF ANY UNDEDICATED REVENUES TO BE RECEIVED WITHIN THE SAME FISCAL YEAR WHICH SHALL BE PLEDGED FOR THE PAYMENT OF SUCH BORROWINGS. SUCH BORROWING IN ANY FISCAL YEAR SHALL NOT EXCEED 15 PER CENT OF ALL UNDEDICATED REVENUES RECEIVED BY THE STATE DURING THE PRECEDING FISCAL YEAR AND SHALL BE REPAID AT THE TIME THE REVENUES SO

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

PLEDGED ARE RECEIVED, BUT NOT LATER THAN THE END OF THE SAME FISCAL YEAR.

THE STATE MAY BORROW MONEY FOR SUCH OTHER SPECIFIC PURPOSES AND IN SUCH AMOUNTS AS MAY BE PROPOSED BY THE LEGISLATURE BY THE AFFIRMATIVE VOTE OF 2/3 OF THE MEMBERS ELECT OF BOTH HOUSES, AND APPROVED BY A MAJORITY OF THE ELECTORS VOTING THEREON AT ANY GENERAL ELECTION. THE QUESTION SUBMITTED TO THE ELECTORS SHALL STATE THE AMOUNT PROPOSED TO BE BORROWED, THE SPECIFIC PURPOSE TO WHICH THE FUNDS SHALL BE DEVOTED, AND THE METHOD OF REPAYMENT.

Sec. c. The credit of the state shall not be granted to, nor in aid of any person, association or corporation, public or private, EXCEPT AS AUTHORIZED IN THIS CONSTITUTION.

THIS SECTION SHALL NOT BE CONSTRUED SO AS TO PROHIBIT THE INVESTMENT OF PUBLIC FUNDS UNTIL NEEDED FOR CURRENT REQUIREMENTS IN SUCH MANNER AS MAY BE PROVIDED BY GENERAL LAW.

Sec. d. The state, in addition to any other borrowing power, may borrow from time to time such amounts as shall be required, pledge its faith and credit and issue its notes or bonds therefor, for the purpose of making loans to school districts as provided in this section.

If the minimum amount which it would otherwise be necessary for a school district to levy in any year to pay principal and interest on its qualified bonds, including any necessary allowances for estimated tax delinquencies, exceeds 13 mills on each dollar of its assessed valuation as last equalized by the state, or such lower millage as the legislature may prescribe, then the school district may elect to borrow all or any part of the excess from the state. In that event the state shall loan the excess amount to the school district for the payment of principal and interest. If for any reason any school district will be or is unable to pay the principal and interest on its qualified bonds when due, then the school district shall borrow and the state shall loan to it an amount sufficient to enable the school district to make the payment.

The term "qualified bonds" means general obligation bonds of school districts issued for capital expenditures, including refunding bonds, issued [(1)] prior to May 4, 1955, [(2) on or after May 4, 1955 but prior to July 1, 1962, only if, and to the extent that, such bonds shall have been qualified as provided by law pursuant to section 27 of this article, and (3) on or after July 1, 1962, but prior to July 1, 1972, if such bonds shall be qualified as provided by law pursuant to this section] OR ISSUED THEREAFTER AND QUALIFIED AS PROVIDED BY LAW PURSUANT TO SECTION 27 OR SECTION 28, ARTICLE X OF THE CONSTITUTION OF 1908, OR PURSUANT TO THIS SECTION.

After a school district has received loans from the state, each year thereafter it shall levy for debt service, exclusive of levies for nonqualified bonds, not less than 13 mills or such lower millage as the legislature may prescribe, until the amount loaned has been repaid, and any tax collections therefrom in any year over and above the minimum requirements for principal and interest on qualified bonds shall be used towards the repayment of state loans. In any year when such a levy would produce an amount in excess of the requirements and the amount due to the state, the levy may be reduced by the amount of the excess.

Subject to the foregoing provisions, the legislature shall have the power to prescribe and/or limit the procedure, terms and conditions for the qualification of bonds, for obtaining and making state loans, and for the repayment of loans.

The power to tax for the payment of principal and interest on bonds hereafter issued which are the general obligations of any school district, including refunding bonds, and for repayment of any state loans made [pursuant to this section] TO SCHOOL DISTRICTS, shall be without limitation as to rate or amount.

All rights acquired under [section 27 of this article] SECTIONS 27 AND 28, ARTICLE X OF THE CONSTITUTION OF 1908, by holders of bonds [issued prior to July 1, 1962] HERETOFORE ISSUED, AND ALL OBLIGATIONS ASSUMED BY THE STATE OR ANY SCHOOL DISTRICT UNDER SAID SECTIONS, shall remain unimpaired.

[This section shall take effect on July 1, 1962.]

Mr. Brake, chairman of the committee on finance and taxation, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 23:

Sec. a. The effect of this section, which is substantially the same as section 11 of article X of the 1908 constitution, is to limit state borrowing on full faith and credit to the borrowing expressly authorized by the constitution. The provision is not intended to interfere, for instance, with the highway department's borrowing on tax anticipation bonds, the borrowing on revenue bonds, or any other of the forms of borrowing that have been used but does not involve the faith and credit of the state.

Sec. b. The purpose of this section is to give the state greater flexibility in meeting cash crises within the general fund and to replace with short term borrowing the present practice of "borrowing" from the state's creditors and the local governments by late payment. The state's income flow is irregular and not necessarily correlated as to time with its disbursements. For instance, at the present time the corporate franchise fee which brings in between $65 and $70 million a year is all received during the last part of the fiscal year.

The committee believes such short term borrowing should be limited to approximately $60 million under the present size of the state's general fund budget. The state treasurer testified that this would be a realistic figure. In order to provide flexibility, however, the limitation has been expressed in terms of a percentage of the undedicated revenues of the state.

The section provides that any borrowing must be in anticipation of revenues to be received within the same fiscal year which shall be pledged for the payment of such borrowing and must be repaid in full at the time such pledged revenues are received. The purpose of this provision is to prevent the state from borrowing up to its limit and then merely renewing the loan from year to year, thus defeating the purpose for which the section is intended.

It is to be noted that even limited borrowing can be done only when authorized by the legislature.

This proposed section deals with long term borrowing such as we used when we paid bonuses to the veterans of 3 wars, when we borrowed for hospital construction, and in the decade of the '20s, borrowed on full faith and credit for highway construction. The legislature is not empowered to authorize any such borrowing without the approval of the voters of the state, but this section provides a method that can be used without cluttering up the constitution with amendments, authorizing the borrowing as we have had to do in the past. The voting will be the same, a 2/3 vote in both houses of the legislature on a bill, but the bill will carry a referendum provision and will not be effective unless and until approved by a majority of the people who vote on the proposition. The voting is, therefore, the same as that under the present constitution for a constitutional amendment but it avoids the necessity of amending the constitution.

Insofar as section 10 of article X of the 1908 constitution deals with state borrowing, the subject matter is covered by sections b and c of the committee's proposal.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

The committee gave careful attention to the provision in section 10 that the state might borrow to repel invasion, suppress insurrection, defend the state or aid the United States in time of war. Since this provision is something that was not used in the Spanish American war, 2 world wars, or the Korean war, and the matter of defense of any kind has become so thoroughly a federal problem it is the feeling of the committee that there is no reason for continuing this language in the new constitution.

The last sentence of section 10 in the present constitution providing state borrowing of $50 million for highway construction, has been completely executed and need not be included in the new constitution. The money was borrowed, the roads built, the bonds have been paid, the sinking fund liquidated, and there is nothing remaining to be done under the authority of that sentence. The borrowing took place in the decade of the '20s. The last of the bonds were retired and the sinking fund liquidated in the early part of the decade of the '40s.

We were asked to authorize the legislature upon the finding of appropriate facts to authorize the issuance of general obligation bonds to refund all or any part of the revenue bonds issued by agencies of the state. The request came particularly from the Mackinac bridge authority, but it was the conclusion of the committee that if and when any such move is desirable and feasible the procedure in this section should be used, and that the legislature should be required to obtain a favorable vote of the people of the state in addition to their own vote of a 2/3 majority.

Sec. c. The first sentence of this section is the language of section 12 of article X of the 1908 constitution except that it has added at the end these words, "EXCEPT AS AUTHORIZED IN THIS CONSTITUTION." This exception is needed, of course, to put our section having to do with school borrowing and this section in harmony. The second sentence adds new language designed to avoid any possible interpretation of the "loan of credit" provision as precluding the investments of idle funds of the state and its political subdivisions until needed for current requirements. The evils sought to be avoided by the "loan of credit" provision did not include the prudent, businesslike investments for the purpose of deriving revenue from idle public funds. However, attorneys for public bodies in this state have been reluctant to authorize any investments except in federal securities in the face of the language of the present constitution. The attorney general recently in an informal opinion raised a question as to the constitutionality of certain statutory provisions authorizing investments of public funds. The section lets the legislature authorize such investment under appropriate safeguards.

The committee did not overlook the several proposals referred to it, which asked that we make an exception of the use of credit in order to facilitate economic development within the state. Those proposals were turned down because of the belief on the part of the committee that they do not represent sound procedure. Neither did the committee overlook the desire of many people in the state to make an exception to the section by adding the words "EXCEPT FOR PURPOSES OF HEALTH, SAFETY, OR GENERAL WELFARE." The committee rejected that idea as being entirely too inclusive.

Sec. d. This section continues in substance the provisions relating to school bond financing which are presently contained in sections 27 and 28 of article X. Section 28, which was voted by the electors as recently as November, 1960, is not to take effect until July 1, 1962, when section 27 expires.

These provisions which would be continued accomplish 3 principal objectives:

1. The state is authorized to borrow money for the purpose of making loans to school districts where necessary to provide support for school district bonds.

2. School districts are permitted to obtain such state loans only to prevent default in payment of their "qualified" bonds or to avoid having to levy more than 13 mills (or a lower millage if the legislature so provides) to pay principal and interest on such bonds. In order to be qualified for this purpose, bonds must have been issued before May 4, 1955, or must have been or hereafter be approved by the superintendent of public instruction as meeting certain standards. This provision for state loans, which according to the present section 28 would expire in 1972, would have no expiration date in the new section.

3. School district bonds are removed from the 15 mill tax limitation but, of course, still have to be voted by the electors as provided by law.

Continuation of these provisions is regarded as desirable not only because they were so recently approved by the electors but also because they enable school districts to finance needed construction without incurring excessive tax burdens and at lower interest rates than would otherwise prevail. It is significant that actual state lending has been held to a minimum — the advantages being the result of availability of state support rather than in actual lending.

The conclusion of the committee has the concurrence of the committee on education.

[Section a was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 602.]

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, this proposal covers the general subject matter found in sections 11, 10, 12 and 28 of article X of the present constitution, and covers the whole field of state borrowing and the use of state credit.

I think all of us are familiar with the fact that under the present constitution the state is authorized to borrow only the sum of $250,000 and that whenever we have wished to borrow more money than that we had to do it by a constitutional amendment. In this proposal we are suggesting to you, and I hope that anyone who has not read the report will not jump to any conclusions until this has been explained, borrowing to the extent of $50 or $60 million without even a vote of the people; and authorization by the legislature only. That we wish to explain.

But in going from a limitation of $250,000 to $50 or $60 million, to say nothing about the power for long term borrowing in addition, I think we ought to get the setting involved in the 2 periods of 1908, when the one constitution was adopted, and the present time when we are talking about a new constitution.

I asked some of the members of my committee, just to get a part of this picture, if they would check in their respective communities some of the tax values and the taxes being paid at the time the 1908 constitution was drawn. They brought me so many figures that I can't possibly give you all of them, but I think it may be worthwhile to just add this in order to get the difference in the economy of that day and this. Mr. Seyferth brought back from Muskegon a resident property assessed in 1908 at $9,000, which is now assessed at $21,100. The tax at that time was $257.13. At this time it is $1,096.77. And a business block assessed then at $50,000, now at $182,200; a tax of $1,428.50 in 1908, $9,470.76 at this time. My own residence property, in our little town — which I didn't own in 1908, but the description can be identified — was assessed at that time at $1400, and it included the lot with the house on it and two vacant lots. The one lot with the house on it is assessed now at $7,200. The tax then was $45.22. The tax now is $253. I will be very glad to have a lot of you move in to Stanton because I realize that is a very modest tax under the conditions we have now.

For the agriculturists of this convention, I would like to translate that into language that we can understand. That tax in 1908 meant 3½ 200 pound hogs, or ¾ of a 1,000 pound steer. At the present time it means 7 hogs and a steer and 2/10. I didn't realize we had all the agriculturists concentrated in this part of the room. Mr. Haskill, from Lapeer county, told us about a farm property assessed at $2,850 in 1907, $5,200 now. Tax, $41.50 then, $276 now. A town property, $4700 then, $8500 now. Tax, $121 then and now $328.

---

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

I was interested in the fact that of all the figures we got back, there has been the least change in Manistee county, where the assessments have been just about doubled; whereas in most of the other territories they have multiplied by 4 or 5. But the taxes are running the same rate of 4 or 5 times in Manistee, in spite of the little change in assessed value.

But he brought this figure I think you will be interested in. In 1908 the percentage of the property tax that was used by the schools was 4.6 This year 70 per cent.

Perhaps that is enough of that, but here is a figure that I am sure you would like to have, bearing in mind that the legislative appropriation in this state is now running $500 million. The state's total budget, total expense — I didn't get the 1908 — but for 1906-1907 it was $5,118,675.67. Five million dollars in 1908, when we drew the constitution and a half billion, approximately, today, depending on the items you put in it.

Coming down, you will remember — those of you who are in the law business — that the corporate franchise tax was a very nominal figure until comparatively recently. I asked Governor Groesbeck one time, long after the event, why they set that tax at so low a figure, and the reason I am telling you this is because of the answer I got, which I haven't heard since, "That was all the money we needed."

Now, taking up the proposal, I shall yield to some members of the committee as we go along through this. But the first section is the one which limits state borrowing. It is the one which keeps the door from being wide open. We changed the wording. I don't think we have changed the meaning. It says, "No evidence of state indebtedness shall be issued, except for such debts as are expressly authorized in or pursuant to the provisions of this constitution." Bear in mind as you consider this that we are talking here only about general obligation indebtedness. This does not apply and is not intended to apply to the various forms of borrowing used in connection with state government but not actually by state government.

The state highway department is borrowing, and the amount is somewhere about $300 million, on tax anticipation bonds. The dormitories at our universities and colleges, with the figure of somewhere about $120 million, are borrowing on revenue bonds. The Mackinac bridge, at just $200,000 less than $100 million, all of which is still outstanding, is on revenue bonds.

This building across the street where we go for lunch doesn't belong to the state. We have to pay some $4 million more before it belongs to the state. It was built by an authority, with money borrowed without the use of the state's full credit.

I think, Mr. Chairman, that is perhaps a sufficient explanation as to the first section, and I will yield for questions on it.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any amendments to the section first read? Any questions of the chairman of the committee?

Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: I just ask a question of procedure, Mr. Chairman. Are we going through this section by section, and then will each section be passed after we go through it?

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: That is the way the Chair thought that probably we were going to proceed. The Chair would like to remind the committee that it may proceed in any fashion that it directs. Unless it otherwise directs, we will handle this section by section.

MR. DOWNS: I had a general question, and if it applies more to a later section, I will withhold the question. Here is the problem that I am trying to look at, Mr. Brake, "No evidence of state indebtedness shall be issued. . . ." Looking realistically at the situation we are now in, wherein I understand there are many millions of dollars owed, even though the borrowing power, as you pointed out, is only a quarter of a million dollars, my question is, under this provision could the state have, in fact, gone into debt for the purpose that we used in the financial crisis in the last period of time?

MR. BRAKE: Because of this provision, we have been able to borrow, Mr. Downs, only by making use of a constitutional amendment each time we needed to make a loan. But we do not speak of the deficit as a state debt. We talk only of the borrowed money.

MR. DOWNS: Perhaps I used the wrong term. I was referring more to the state deficit, in fact, the indebtedness that was done in spite of a $250,000 debt limit. Would the language the committee has in section a prevent the deficit from being created that was created?

MR. BRAKE: Not as we keep our books. We have the deficit because we just didn't pay and are overdrawn. It is not regarded as a state debt.

MR. DOWNS: So that this proposal would not affect the deficit one way or another either at present or in the future?

MR. BRAKE: That is right. You may be interested in knowing what that outstanding indebtedness is. Of the world war II bonus, $51,993 is still outstanding. Of the hospital building where we procured $65 million, $36,250,000 is still outstanding. Of the Korean bonus, $54 million is still out.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any amendments to the first section of the proposal which has been read and been explained by the chairman of the committee? If not, that section will pass.

Section a is passed. The secretary will read the next section.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section b.

[Section b was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 602.]

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: I will take up first, Mr. Chairman, the matter that is excluded, because the subject matter is included in the section just read. The language, much of it — practically all of it — is deleted. That takes care of the $250,000 limit we had, and then follows the provision that the state could borrow to repel invasion, suppress insurrection, defend the state or aid the United States in time of war. That was given consideration by the committee. It was something that was not used. It was not used in the Spanish war, neither of the 2 world wars or the Korean war and the committee considered it need not be carried forward into the new constitution.

Then there is the other provision, in which Senator Hutchinson was interested on another occasion, of the $50 million borrowed for highway purposes. That borrowing took place back in the '20s, and the bonds were finally retired and the sinking fund liquidated in the early part of the decade of the '40s. So that has entirely served its purpose. There is no reason for carrying it forward. I am speaking entirely from memory, and not going back to recheck the figures, but you may be interested in them. As I recall it, when we had that interest all paid, and the principal repaid, we had paid $94 million for that $50 million deal. The interest rate, of course, was very high.

Now, for the next material, we had divided this into 2 sections. The drafting division apparently disagreed with us and put it together, but we will separate it, if we may, for the benefit of discussion. The first paragraph relates to short term borrowing, and for that I will yield to Delegate Staiger.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brake yields to Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: Mr. Chairman, on this section — and I am speaking of the first paragraph of section b, which we refer to as the short term borrowing section — I think it would be well, at the outset, if we all understand the problem we are addressing ourselves to in this case. This is short term operating capital borrowing. There are 2 different ways generally, or needs, for operating capital borrowing. The obvious one is that revenues do not come up to meet expenditures for the year. If a deficit is created there would be a need for additional money. This is not the problem we are addressing our borrowing to. The committee went into this, and felt very strongly that this type of deficit should be met not by borrowing, but rather by appropriating additional revenue to meet expenditures.

There is another problem, however, that the committee went into and designed this section to cover; that is the situation where the legislature has appropriated sufficient revenue, but because of the timing, expenditures — if you stop and think for a minute, payroll goes on during the fiscal year fairly evenly. So much per week has to be paid out. Whereas the nature of our taxes, some of those come in not every week but, rather, all at once, maybe at the end of the year. Actually some of these taxes come in, as in the case of the corporate franchise tax, very near the end of the fiscal year, sometime in May. That represents approximately, as we say in our report, $65 or $70 million. With expenditures going on evenly toward the year, revenue coming in, some of it evenly and some toward the end of the year, this creates a cash crisis during the year. This is the problem that this section is addressed to help, to give some flexibility within the year to permit short term borrowing so that, in anticipation of these revenues, expenditures can be made when due, and yet picked up at the time and repaid at the time the taxes come in during the fiscal year.

The committee, in studying this, first agreed that such a provision should have the following principles: first, it should be a grant of authority to the legislature to provide for such borrowing if they so desire rather than being a self executing provision; and second, it should be limited to approximately $50 or $60 million under the present size of the state general fund. This primarily was the testimony we received from the state treasurer, that this was approximately the amount that he would need in order to meet the expenditures as they came due, and would like to be able to borrow in that area, in that amount.

Rather than putting a fixed figure — which we realized would be adequate only under the present size of the state general fund — into this section, we felt that we should use a percentage of the general fund; so that as the general fund grows, obviously the cash crisis problem would grow at the same time and by putting in a percentage it would be flexible as time went on. So we used 15 per cent of the undedicated state funds for the preceding fiscal year, which is just another way of saying at the present time $60 million would be the authorized total for this purpose. We also decided that such borrowing should be limited to within the fiscal year and to the extent possible this provision is drafted to prevent the state from defeating the purpose of this provision by borrowing up to its limit and then merely renewing the loan from year to year. As I said, the reason for this section is to provide flexibility so that when they need the cash they will be able to borrow, and they won't use up the whole limit. They will be able to borrow the money, make the expenditure, and then pick up the money when the tax comes in.

Now, the problem we have is, if we just put a flat limit and said it shall be repaid within 12 months or within the fiscal year, they could run the loan right up to the end of the fiscal year, up to the maximum of the debt limit, and just merely renew it for the next year. So that you really wouldn't have short term borrowing; you would have long term borrowing and renewals from year to year. So, for that purpose, we have made some provision in this section to tie it to a pledge of specific practice, and say that it must be repaid at the time those taxes come due.

I would like also to point out that this is full faith and credit borrowing. It does require, however, the pledge of a specific revenue to be received within that fiscal year. As I said before, it is limited to 15 per cent of the undedicated funds received within the preceding fiscal year, and must be repaid when the pledged revenues are received; and then with the additional limitation on there, in no case later than the end of the fiscal year.

Just so we have the problem we have addressed ourselves to clearly in mind at this time, I would yield for any questions that you might have.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: I would like to ask one question pertaining to local school districts. How is it that because of the shortage of money from the state on dedicated funds, or state aid, the local districts have to go to the local banks, borrow the money and then pay the interest out of the operating capital? With this proposal, would this eliminate the need for local districts spending their money for interest to the local banks, or would the state be able to take care of it directly?

MR. STAIGER: Well, it would all depend. As I understand, the reason the state hasn't made the payments when due now is that they had appropriated adequate revenue but it hadn't come in yet during the fiscal year. Under this proposal they could borrow this to pay it. But, as I understand, where the school is really given the pinch is that the legislature provides for a deficit appropriation or an emergency appropriation at the end of the year to come up with the state money. Now, if they haven't appropriated enough revenue, or have enough revenue to provide for that, they've got a deficit at the end of the year. Something has to give there, and it is the schools that they aren't able to pay because it is coming right at the end of the year.

This provision is not designed to take care of that type of a deficit, if it is something that goes beyond the end of the fiscal year. The cure there, we feel, is to appropriate enough money to take care of this.

MR. PERRAS: In my 10 years on the board of education it seems that we were always waiting for sales tax money or something else to come in.

MR. STAIGER: If it is something where enough appropriation has been made, this will allow them to make the payment, but if it is something where there has been a failure to appropriate enough to meet expenditures, it won't help.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Perhaps Mr. Brake or Mr. Staiger could answer this. The sentence, line 7,

> Such borrowing in any fiscal year shall not exceed 15 per cent of all undedicated revenues received by the state during the preceding fiscal year. . . .

as Mr. Staiger pointed out, and perhaps I interpreted you wrong, when you set this 15 per cent, possibly this year, does this become a dedicated fund this year? What about in reference to next year when you are borrowing; does the 15 per cent which you dedicated this year go out of the undedicated fund for next year? Because it seems to me after a period of years, possibly 5 or 6, in preceding years your undedicated fund will be cut down by 15 per cent each year that you do set up your maximum.

MR. STAIGER: No. This 15 per cent is not a dedication in itself. It is merely a yardstick to be used as a limit on their borrowing. For instance, right now, this year, say, if the legislature right now realized they were running short on cash they have appropriated, they have this corporate franchise coming in in May. So they want to borrow against that to meet present expenditures, to meet expenditures now, when they are due. They could borrow up to the amount of 15 per cent of the undedicated revenue for last year, or the general fund for last year. That is the yardstick of the maximum on the borrowing. It in no way dedicates any fund.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, then, later on, you say at the end of line 9, ". . . and shall be repaid at the time the revenues so pledged are received. . . ." Now, are different words than "pledged" used on dedicated procedures?

MR. STAIGER: Yes, "pledged" is used to refer to — say the corporate franchise fee is coming in in May, if they want to borrow money, they would have to pledge their corporate franchise fee for the repayment to the extent of the borrowing.

MR. MAHINSKE: But that 15 per cent pledged this year would still be considered as undedicated funds next year?

MR. STAIGER: Well, by next year it would have been repaid.

MR. MAHINSKE: What I am getting at is, in time, if you keep cutting this down, if the pledged funds become the dedicated funds, you can't draw 15 per cent of that amount on credit next year.

MR. STAIGER: Mr. Mahinske, think of it this way. If we borrow now against the corporate franchise fee coming due in May, and pledge that tax for the payment of this borrowing, come May, when that tax came in, that loan would be repaid. Now, the next fiscal year starts in June. By that time there is no pledge of revenue under this provision, and we would start out with 15 per cent for next year of the general fund for this year.

MR. MAHINSKE: But then, in the event it were not repaid within the fiscal year, it would not be taken into consideration as a basis for the succeeding year?

MR. STAIGER: The provision is that it must be repaid or else it is in default.

MR. MAHINSKE: But, what I am getting at is, this pledged amount, does it become a dedicated amount?

MR. STAIGER: No, not under that section.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, the question that I have — I don't know the degree of germaneness to this thing, but since we are talking about the question of appropriations here in the first sentence, I would like to ask Mr. Brake more or less a general question, since this will perhaps come up at a later time. I think one of the problems we have had in Michigan, at least financially speaking, has been the fact that the legislature has been appropriating funds based on an inaccurate or overrated estimate of revenue to be received.

The state of Oklahoma has in its constitution, I believe, a provision which prohibits the legislature from appropriating more funds than the average of the previous 3 years' income. I wondered if the committee gave any thought to this approach to appropriations, which may have some effect on short term borrowing?

MR. BRAKE: The problem that you are talking about lies in the jurisdiction of 3 committees. It is being handled primarily by the committee on executive branch, but the committee on legislative powers is involved and the finance and taxation committee is involved; and we have not arrived at an agreement among the 3. But we have a meeting for that purpose tomorrow. It is a problem that is being studied.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman, may I ask a question of Mr. Brake, please. Mr. Brake, the day we recessed before the Christmas holidays, we had under discussion money matters, commingling of funds. If that was successful, as the committee proposed at that time, would that still make necessary this provision for borrowing for temporary uses?

MR. BRAKE: I remember that event very well, Mr. Shackleton. You can take it either way. If that had carried, or if it still carries, it would make less necessary this provision for temporary borrowing. The other way around, this provision for temporary borrowing makes less necessary the provision that we had before us at that other occasion, the commingling of funds. The ideas are mutually helpful to each other.

MR. SHACKLETON: Then, in your opinion and the opinion of the committee, it would be well if that were successful, to continue this one also?

MR. BRAKE: I think so. We will be back with something having to do with that subject matter probably next week. Maybe this week.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: I would like to ask Mr. Brake a question. Am I in error when I engage in the thinking that in the suggested financing system here in this proposal, you are asking this body to participate in continuing financial crises?

MR. BRAKE: Not at all, Mr. Bledsoe, but we are dealing with a state that carries through its treasury in the course of a year about $1,200 million. That is a lot of money. The income can't be evenly divided; the expenditures can't be evenly divided so that every month it balances up. Even if we were on a pretty level keel, and had very little in the way of a deficit, or perhaps none, there might well be periods when you would have to have a little extra money, the same as any business corporation has to have a little extra money once in awhile.

MR. BLEDSOE: May I ask another question? And may I preface it with a matter here that is contained in the program for Michigan tax reform adopted by the citizens for Michigan in December of 1961, which reads as follows:

> The circumstance that gave birth to this study — indeed to the organization of citizens for Michigan itself — was the state financial crisis of 1959 that produced payless paydays, an unparalleled deficit of $95.5 million in the general fund at the end of the fiscal year, June 30, and national embarrassment for Michigan.
>
> In the intervening 2 years, 3 legislative moves were made which provided stopgap relief. The first was the liquidation of the veterans' trust fund, which produced about $40 million and helped reduce the general fund deficit to $64 million by June 30, 1960. The second was the imposition of certain temporary taxes which produced about $50 million in revenue during the 1960-61 fiscal year and were allowed to expire June 30, 1961. The third was an increase in the state sales tax from 3 per cent to 4 per cent, effective January 1, 1961.

Now, in view of this program, are we meeting this problem by the process suggested here in this proposal?

MR. BRAKE: Not completely. Of course not. We are endeavoring to.

MR. BLEDSOE: Do you feel that we here — that that is a part of our duty? Is it paramount that we do that?

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Bledsoe, we can't present to you a complete program in one proposal or in one constitutional convention.

MR. BLEDSOE: Then I take it this is another stopgap, is that it?

MR. BRAKE: No, it is not a stopgap. It is just a help to get along at any time, whether we are in a financial crisis or not.

Mr. Austin would like to comment on something if you will permit, Mr. Staiger.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Staiger has the floor.

MR. STAIGER: I yield to Mr. Austin.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, there are really 2 subjects on the floor that I would like to comment on. The first is related to the question of the commingling of the earmarkings. At the time we had the debate on that subject it was felt that the delegates were not clear in regard to what the committee had in mind as to what it would do about earmarking. Therefore they were a little worried about our getting involved in commingling without knowing what the ultimate disposition would be of earmarking. The committee is at this point considering what to do about earmarking, and when we have completed those deliberations we will get back to the other subject of the commingling.

Now, as to the question raised by Mr. Bledsoe, if you will consider that the state of Michigan is receiving approximately $1,200 million a year in tax receipts, you will realize that the state is receiving approximately $100 million monthly, and the appropriations are based upon these receipts of $100 million monthly. The tax revenue does not actually come into the treasury evenly, at the rate of $100 million monthly. There are some months in which no money is received from certain tax revenues. As was pointed out, the franchise tax produces approximately $65 to $70 million annually. That money does not come in evenly throughout the year. It comes in in the month of May. Appropriations are based on the receipt of that money as though it did come in evenly throughout the year.

The purpose of this proposal is to give the treasury the right to go to the bank, to borrow money earlier than the receipt of the corporate franchise tax, to have the money in its treasury to meet the appropriations that would normally be met by the receipt of that money. When the money is received from the corporate franchise tax the loan will be paid off.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Austin, may I ask you this question, what is necessary to correct the financial narrative that you have just given?

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Bledsoe, there is one other problem which should be mentioned at this time, and you are concerned about that problem, and that is —

MR. BLEDSOE: I think we are concerned.

MR. AUSTIN: — the problem of whether the total revenues of the state are adequate to meet the full appropriations —

MR. BLEDSOE: What does that call for?

MR. AUSTIN: — and over a period of years the revenues of the state have been somewhat short of meeting the full appropriations, and that is how we accumulate the deficit. Now, that is a problem for the legislature to solve. The legislature has to levy enough tax revenue to meet our appropriations; and as long as the legislature is failing to levy enough taxation to meet the appropriations, we are going to have a deficit.

MR. BLEDSOE: Then I take it you are asking us to usurp the functions of the legislature?

MR. AUSTIN: No, no, this problem that we are discussing now would exist even if the legislature were levying enough taxation to meet our appropriations. Let me make it clear, Mr. Bledsoe. If the legislature were levying $1,200 million of taxation each year it would be, in effect, levying enough taxation to take care of our appropriations, because our appropriations are equal to $1,200 million. Is that clear?

MR. BLEDSOE: Isn't the fact, Mr. Austin, that what we really need to do is lay a foundation for a complete financial tax structure for our state? Isn't that what is needed?

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Bledsoe —

MR. BLEDSOE: You can answer that yes or no.

MR. AUSTIN: No, Mr. Bledsoe, only the legislature can levy the taxation that is needed.

MR. BLEDSOE: The solving of that problem, then, becomes the duty of this body?

MR. AUSTIN: No.

MR. BLEDSOE: Then, where does it fall?

MR. AUSTIN: We are not here to solve that problem.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Gentlemen, the Chair has been very lenient, but Mr. Staiger has the floor, and the Chair noted that Mr. Stevens desires, I suppose, to ask Mr. Staiger a question.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Staiger, I have something here that is bothering me. On line 13, the statement reads ". . . affirmative vote of 2/3 of the members elect of both houses . . ." Should not that read "members elected"?

MR. STAIGER: Mr. Stevens, we have another member of the committee that is going to take this up in a second. On that second paragraph, section 3, we will get to that in a moment, if you could postpone the question until we have an explanation on that.

MR. STEVENS: May I ask this of the gentleman who makes the next report?

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: All right.

Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, Delegate Staiger, I am sure that this committee has given this consideration. I may have missed it during some of the discussion, but I am interested in the last clause, "not later than the end of the same fiscal year", and in particular, I assume that you have given consideration as to the relative need for tax moneys during the course of the fiscal year, and that you have chosen this language advisedly rather than saying "but not later than 12 months after the time of borrowing." I wonder if you would care to comment upon that?

MR. STAIGER: I would be glad to. In fact, that provision and the provision that it must be repaid as the revenue so pledged is received — which, if you check back, is revenue received during the fiscal year — is really a double limitation on that. We did this specifically to meet the type of problem that Mr. Bledsoe is raising.

If you could borrow beyond the end of the fiscal year, the tendency then would be for the governor and the legislature, on the budget — at least there would be the temptation — to borrow to meet present appropriations for the fiscal year, rather than appropriate new taxes. This is exactly the thing we don't want to do. We want to fix the responsibility for a balanced budget right where it should be, in the governor and the legislature, and merely provide for borrowing within the fiscal year when and only to the extent that they actually have to have sufficient revenue coming in.

We drafted this specifically so there wouldn't be this type of borrowing which, in effect, is deficit borrowing because there was not adequate revenue. This is not the case where you do not have adequate revenue, but it is the case where the revenue comes in at different times, and does not come in at the same time of expenditures.

MR. HIGGS: Then, as a practical matter, in the tenth month of a fiscal year you could not borrow money inasmuch as you have only 2 months to pay it, is that right?

MR. STAIGER: You could if you have the taxes coming due within those next 2 months. If you start borrowing against next year, then you are getting into deficit financing; a situation which should be met by appropriate additional revenue and not by borrowing.

MR. HIGGS: I am not meaning to quarrel with you, and I favor this kind of limitation, you understand, but I wonder if you would tell us, for the record, during what particular months the need is greatest and what particular months the money is abundant?

MR. STAIGER: I don't have the figures on that. I know that taxes do come in at different times, and particularly right now on this corporate franchise tax, right at the end and, of course, by that time most of the expenditures that were appropriated to meet should have been met. I know that there are other instances. When we had State Treasurer Brown before the committee, he pointed out this fact that we have the different taxes that come in annually and at different times and, as a result, revenues do come in unevenly and expenditures go on rather evenly. This is the reason we need this type of flexibility in the system. Does that satisfy your question?

MR. HIGGS: I think it is fairly critical, if we are going to solve the problem, to know just how we are solving it. As I read it, Mr. Chairman, as a practical matter our borrowing is limited to the earliest part of the year. I wonder if Mr. Brake could answer that question?

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Staiger yields to Mr. Brake to answer Mr. Higgs' question?

MR. STAIGER: Yes.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: I can't go through the 12 months of the year, Mr. Higgs, and tell you which months are high and which are low. One thing that they wait a little while for is the corporate franchise tax, which, of course, is paid in May. Your intangibles tax, with what the state gets from it — of course, intangibles are divided — comes in in April, or at the end of March and the beginning of April. There isn't the idea at all, on the part of the committee, that this is something that is going to be used every day. It takes legislative authority, and it will be used only when the legislature authorizes it, and it will be used whenever it is needed if the legislature authorizes it. It is a safety measure more than anything else.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: Reducing this to terms of everyday life of people, this is like a man borrowing $20 until payday. So instead of the kids going hungry and having to eat beans and then turkey on payday, they can eat during the week, spending the money that they will receive at the end of the week. Or, in the case of a businessman, he's got $10,000 in accounts receivable coming in at the end of the month, but he has payroll and other expenses coming in at the beginning of the month. He borrows $1500 or $2,000 from the bank and takes care of his immediate needs.

It is not going to produce any more money. There is not going to be any more revenue. Nobody claims there will.

But there won't be the feast and famine. It will just level it out and you can spend it when you have to spend it. You won't spend any more. You won't take in any more. But it will alleviate the situation where you have no money for a long time and then a lot of money, and a lot of people have to wait for their money.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: I have no further comments. I yield the floor to Mr. Hoxie.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to address a question to Mr. Brake. In reading this proposal, it refers to anticipation of receipt of any undedicated revenue to be received within the same fiscal year. Now, we have heard the figure mentioned of $1,200 million of appropriation — something of that nature, Mr. Brake, is that correct?

MR. BRAKE: No, that is not correct. Mr. Austin was not using quite the correct terms when he spoke of collecting $1,200 million in taxes. The figure I used, $1,200 million was the money that goes through the state treasury in the course of a year, which includes some federal money.

MR. HOXIE: We are getting to the point now, Mr. Brake, that I would like to have some enlightenment on. When we are talking of 15 per cent, and also referring to undedicated funds, do we consider federal funds that are not due to be appropriated at the time received? Are we considering we can borrow against those, or only such general revenue, money of general government of the state of Michigan?

MR. BRAKE: As a member of the ways and means committee for years, you don't need any enlightenment at all. You know that what we are talking about is money that is ours, and that is not dedicated to a specific purpose. This excludes the highway money, the dedicated sales tax, and anything else that is dedicated to a specific purpose, and the percentage is figured only on what is left.

MR. HOXIE: Thank you. That is the answer I wanted.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I just want to make a brief comment on this, and that is that this is the provision that I had hoped Mr. Brake's committee would bring out when we were discussing the earlier matter before the Christmas recess. It is a very useful device for leveling out this unequal flow of income and uneven flow of expenditure. It doesn't solve any long term problems at all, but if we had had it when I was auditor general, I think we would have avoided the very crisis that we got into and I think it is a very useful provision. It is a short term matter, and it does not solve any of our long term problems.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: If there are no further questions, I will yield the floor to Mr. Brake on this matter. I guess we take this all in one paragraph, these 2 sections.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: The other part of the section, the second paragraph, has to do with the long term borrowing. As I mentioned to you, in the past when we have needed to do some long term borrowing, as we have 5 times, as I recall, since 1908, we had to resort to a constitutional amendment. It is generally proposed by the legislature by a 2/3 vote, and then approved by the people. We have the same protection written into this section that we have had through those years. It still will require a 2/3 vote of each house of the legislature and approval by the people, but not the encumbering of the constitution by an amendment which the next constitutional convention will have to get rid of. This is to be by bill, requiring a 2/3 vote, requiring the approval of the people. It is a simple thing. This will not prevent the people, of course, from borrowing by a constitutional amendment if they so desire, and if we build a constitution which permits amendment. But it is a better method because it doesn't encumber the constitution.

I think you should have, before your questions, something that we didn't do. We were asked, particularly by the Mackinac bridge authority, to provide the necessary provision for refunding the other kinds of bonds that are outstanding by agencies of the state. Of course, they were interested in a possible refunding of the Mackinac bridge bonds. But the proposal that they brought to us would have permitted a refunding of the university dormitory bonds, this proposition across the street, and anything else, including the tax anticipation bonds of the highway department. They wanted that possible by action of the legislature, when certain facts were found, without a vote of the people. We have rejected that. Our decision, of course, is subject to your decision. But we rejected it, and believe that if there comes a time when they can profitably refund any of those bonds, and wish to do so, they should be required to use this long term provision, 2/3 vote of the legislature and referendum to the people.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any amendments to the body of section b in this proposal?

Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, just a point of inquiry. The provision seems to me an excellent one and will enable us to borrow by a vote of the legislature and a vote of the people without putting in a constitutional amendment, but I wonder if the committee inquired of the bonding attorneys as to whether the absence of this provision as a constitutional provision would affect the cost of borrowing, would make the cost of borrowing higher by doing it just by bill? Does that have any effect on it at all?

MR. BRAKE: I think not. We had plenty of experts before the committee, and we had a member of the committee who is a member of a firm that handles a tremendous amount of this business, and I think we are entirely safe in that regard; the same vote, the same securities.

MR. MARSHALL: The bill approved by the people would have the same effect, exactly, as the constitutional amendment?

MR. BRAKE: Yes.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Brake, once again my question, should not the third and fourth words on line 14 read "members elected"?

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Stevens, there are many here who have been in the legislature since I, but as I remember, the terms "senators elect," "house members elect," have always been used.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Brake, I am reading from the Constitution of the State of Michigan of 1908, where it says ". . . will prevent a majority of the members elected from discharging —" and so forth. All through the constitution you see that term "members elected." It is my construction that the term "members elect" refers to persons who have not been sworn in.

MR. BRAKE: I think it is used the other way in the statute and in the legislature, in contrast, of course, with "members present and voting". That is the purpose.

MR. STEVENS: I am only raising the question because it will come up in style and drafting.

MR. BRAKE: They will have a chance to look at it, I hope. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I want to make a little inquiry about this provision we are just talking about here expressed in lines 12, 13, 14 and 15. It is my understanding that the proposal is that this action would be by a bill or statute rather than an amendment to the constitution. But in reading it, I don't find anything about bill or act or statute, or anything, nor do I find that this proposition would be submitted to the governor. I wonder if this is a sort of different type of action than we now have, or whether that was just taken for granted?

MR. BRAKE: It would be a bill. It would be submitted to the governor. It would be subjected to veto, but having been passed by the number of votes that it takes to override a veto, you would hardly expect a governor to veto it.

MR. POWELL: I was just wondering as I read this, for instance, in line 13, after it says, ". . . proposed by the legislature . . ." if you would like some language like "a bill passed by an affirmative vote of 2/3" or something — maybe it is entirely clear to everybody else, but in reading it, where we don't find any reference to bill or act, or that the governor has any hand in the matter — it talks about the 2/3 vote and then going directly to a referendum. I wondered if there was something behind the scenes that I didn't understand.

MR. BRAKE: The legislature acts by bill or joint resolution. It acts by joint resolution only when it is proposing an amendment on the ballot for people to vote upon.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Van Dusen, do you desire the floor?

MR. VAN DUSEN: I don't like, Mr. Chairman, to take issue with the distinguished chairman of our committee. However, I don't think it is entirely clear that this would be by bill, in view of the fact that the language is almost identical with the language of the present section dealing with amendment of the constitution, and I believe it was our intention that the process would be the same as is presently followed in the amendment of the constitution. Therefore, the action would be by joint resolution rather than by bill.

MR. BRAKE: I can't see that it would make any particular difference, Mr. Van Dusen, but I think it would be by bill, because you would either have a statute or you would have a constitutional amendment, and this would not be a constitutional amendment.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I bow to the superior wisdom of our chairman.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any amendments to the body of section b of this proposal?

Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: I would like to ask Mr. Brake a question. Since this procedure involves an election following the legislative action, why is it necessary to require a 2/3 vote of the entire membership of the legislature instead of just a simple majority? It would seem to me that the public interest is amply safeguarded if the legislative action, whether by bill or joint resolution, is followed by an election. It seems that this is a needless limitation on the legislature.

MR. BRAKE: I think you would probably call us conservative, Mr. Woolfenden. We have provided the same conservative vote that we have always required for constitutional amendment by which we have abided in the past. Mr. Woolfenden sent over a note that I didn't answer. He asked whether the action of the committee on these matters has been unanimous. My memory may be slightly wrong; I think not. As I recall it, there was no negative vote on any part of this proposal. I think on one or two parts there were a couple who abstained.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: There is an amendment on the secretary's desk which the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Downs offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 13, after "legislature by" by striking out "the affirmative vote of 2/3 of the" and inserting "a simple majority of"; so the language will read:

> The state may borrow money for such other specific purposes and in such amounts as may be proposed by the legislature by a simple majority of members elect of both houses.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I believe Mr. Woolfenden, in a sense, made the comment I was going to make, I noticed the model state constitution provides that

> No debt shall be contracted by and in behalf of the state unless such debt shall be authorized by law for a single project or object distinctly specified therein.

That does not provide for any check by the people.

It seems to me that there is some merit to using the "simple majority". I was going to ask the legislative organization committee what a simple majority was going to mean before the convention closes. But I think in some cases, such as the Mackinac bridge, if I understand correctly, that by putting the full faith and credit of the state behind the project we could save as much as 1 per cent — which could mean a $1 million a year if it is a $100 million bond issue — and while this is not a major issue, I do think it might make the long range borrowing a little more flexible.

I did have another question of Mr. Brake, but it is not germane to the amendment, and I will hold that in mind until the amendment is voted on.

MR. BRAKE: There is no question about the fact that a simple majority would make it easier to get the question submitted to the people. Our view of it is that this is something which should be used very, very seldom, and only in case of urgent and unusual need. Five times we have done it, for bonuses for 3 wars, one highway construction program, and once for a hospital construction program. It is just a question of whether you wish to make it easy or whether you wish to be sure that there is a real need before you let the people vote on the question of borrowing money.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Brake, or whoever wants to, can answer. I did not notice in the amendment any statement of either members elect or members elected. I am afraid I didn't make my question quite clear to Mr. Brake. I am aware of the fact that all through the state constitution it requires these elections to be by members elected, in the past tense. My objection to the language in this proposal was it is in the present tense; it is not "elected," it is "elect." In the amendment there doesn't seem to be required anything except a simple majority of those voting on it, if I heard the amendment correctly.

MR. BRAKE: ". . . of an affirmative vote of 2/3 of members elect of both houses."

MR. STEVENS: Yes. I quote here from section 15 of article V:

> Each house, except as otherwise provided in this constitution, shall choose its own officers and determine the rules of its proceedings, but shall not adopt any rule that will prevent a majority of the members elected from discharging —

MR. BRAKE: I told you, Mr. Stevens, I speak as a legislator where we have used those terms repeatedly. Help us get this to the committee on style and drafting and let them handle it.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is on Mr. Downs' amendment. Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: I have a question for Mr. Downs. I note that before this amendment the question arose whether or not the governor's approval was required, and the answer was it was a 2/3 vote. Now, if we had a simple majority it would mean yes, the governor's approval is required, and therefore I would like to know whether Mr. Downs' amendment contemplates whether the governor's approval would be required or whether it would not?

MR. DOWNS: The amendment just applies to replacing the 2/3 with "a simple majority". If the amendment passes, it would then reopen the question that Mr. Brake said was moot if the 2/3 majority was required, and I would suggest that after this is voted upon we then go into the other question. But I believe it is more in order to limit our discussion to the amendment that is before us.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: I happen to be a member of this committee, and we discussed this very proposition of the 2/3 vote. We took the language that is exactly as it is for the constitutional amendment. We also considered the situation of an initiative referendum. We decided to leave that as it is, and you can still do it. I would speak against Mr. Downs' amendment because I think what we get into, if you use just a simple majority, might be a very good way for the legislature to not face up to their current responsibility and get a simple majority, and then the people, not knowing the real facts, would vote it in, and would just create continual indebtedness, and keep right on going.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Davis.

MR. DAVIS: Mr. Chairman, I too would like to oppose the amendment and support the committee's proposal. I believe that this proposal, as it comes from the committee, lends an orderly and businesslike means of transacting government business. I think that also contained in it is something which lends itself to fiscal integrity, one thing I think all these citizens have a desire for.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: I would like to speak against this amendment as a member of the committee. We did consider this. I feel that the legislature should have the responsibility to determine when they want to have long term borrowing. They should very definitely consider it as an entire body, and a simple majority could confuse the people many, many times. So I feel a 2/3 majority is necessary for good, stable financial management in our state.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I would like to ask Delegate Brake a question. Is this, the 2/3 vote, the only time in which the full faith and credit of the state is pledged as security for borrowing?

MR. BRAKE: No. The short term borrowing.

MR. FAXON: But that isn't in the 1908 — this would be under this proposal, but it isn't in the 1908 constitution. In the 1908 constitution you can't borrow on anticipated revenue.

MR. BRAKE: You can borrow $250,000 on the full faith and credit of the state.

MR. FAXON: And under this now we would be able to add 15 per cent to the undedicated funds, plus whatever would be approved by the 2/3 vote and the vote of the people?

MR. BRAKE: That is right.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I too would like to speak in opposition to the amendment. Our purpose here was not really to make it easier to borrow money than it has been under the present constitution, but simply to provide the same procedural steps and to avoid the cluttering up of the constitution with repeated amendments referring to specific bond issues which might long since have been paid off. We do not intend to encourage profligacy on the part of the state. We simply intend to keep the constitution free from specific reference to bond issues.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is on the amendment. All those in favor, say aye. Those opposed, say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

Are there any further amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will pass — I beg your pardon, gentlemen, the Chair is in error.

Mr. Howes.

MR. HOWES: Mr. Chairman, this section could very well be used by the legislature and the people of the state of Michigan to issue full faith and credit bonds to buy back the Mackinac bridge authority bonds at an opportune time. Senator Prentiss Brown explained to our committee that full faith and credit bonds would actually save the state about $1 million per year in interest, and would allow a substantial reduction in toll rates across the Mackinac bridge. In the opinion of some good authorities, the toll rates across the bridge are high enough that they are lessening traffic across the bridge, especially truck traffic. The substantial reduction of toll rates on the bridge would be an economic aid to both the upper and lower peninsulas of Michigan. I believe the people who use the Mackinac bridge need this $1 million per year, and could use it possibly to better advantage than the bond lawyers from the New York bond market.

The full committee, with the help of the most capable people and the best information available to us, gave this proposal very long and deliberative study before voting to approve this in its present form, and I now urge the delegates convened here to carefully consider this, and then to approve this proposal as it is now written.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, I move the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brake moves the committee do now rise. The motion is not debatable. All those in favor, say aye. Those opposed, say no.

The motion prevails. The committee has risen.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration several proposals, on which the secretary will make a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 18, A proposal to provide for a great seal of the state and to authorize its use; Committee Proposal 19, A proposal to provide for a state militia; Committee Proposal 20, A proposal to provide that no law shall be enacted providing for the penalty of death; and Committee Proposal 21, A proposal pertaining to the division of the powers of government; and reports these proposals back to the convention without amendment and with the recommendation that they be passed.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Committee Proposals 18, 19, 20 and 21 are referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Committee Proposal 18 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 593.

For Committee Proposal 19 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 593.

For Committee Proposal 20 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 595.

For Committee Proposal 21 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 600.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 17, A proposal respecting eligibility for the offices of governor and lieutenant governor; reports this proposal back to the convention with an amendment, recommending the amendment be agreed to and the proposal as amended do pass.

[The following is the amendment recommended by the committee of the whole:

1. Amend page 1, line 9, after "registered" by striking out "voter" and inserting "qualified elector".]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on agreeing to the amendment to Committee Proposal 17. Those in favor, say aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

Committee Proposal 17, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 17 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Any registered qualified elector of the state who is at least 30 years of age shall be eligible to the offices of governor or lieutenant governor.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole has also had under consideration Exclusion Report 2003, A report recommending the exclusion of article X, section 20; and Exclusion Report 2006, A report recommending the exclusion of article XII, sections 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 7 and 8; and reports these 2 exclusion reports back to the convention without amendment and recommends the adoption thereof.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the exclusion reports. Those in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

Exclusion Reports 2003 and 2006 are adopted and referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Exclusion Report 2003 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 594.

For Exclusion Report 2006 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 598.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 22, A proposal pertaining to state civil service; and in committee has postponed consideration of this proposal until Thursday, January 18.

PRESIDENT NISBET: It will be on the general orders calendar on Thursday.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 23, and has come to no final resolution thereon.

This completes the report of the committee of the whole, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The following committee announcements:

The miscellaneous provisions and schedule committee meeting, scheduled for after this session, is cancelled and will be held at 10:30 tomorrow morning in committee room G. Several subcommittee reports have been completed and will be discussed. Claud Erickson, chairman.

The committee on judicial branch will meet in room B Wednesday at 8:30. Mr. Danhof, chairman.

The subcommittee on higher education will meet Thursday at 9:00 o'clock. Anyone who has a proposal relative to higher education may appear at this time. Roscoe Bonisteel, chairman.

The committee on legislative powers will meet in room H Wednesday at 8:30 a.m., and on Thursday, 8:30 a.m. T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

The committee on style and drafting will meet at 2:00 p.m. on Monday, January 22. Mr. Cudlip, chairman.

The committee on administration will meet tomorrow in the conference room at 1:00 o'clock. Walter DeVries, chairman.

The remaining announcements appear in the composite calendar.

The apples today were furnished by Mr. Turner. (applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. President, earlier in the proceedings we had a report from Delegate Romney with respect to the present status of invitations which were accorded to President Truman and President Hoover. In view of the report, I would like to know whether I might direct a question to you, as presiding officer, and through you to Delegate Romney, as to whether or not, in view of the present status of these invitations and the declinations, it may be appropriate to renew or initiate the invitation to President Kennedy to appear and to ask whether or not appropriate steps might be undertaken to implement that invitation.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: Mr. President and Delegate Norris, I would personally favor a renewal. We made 2 efforts to get President Kennedy, and they preceded his trip to South America. At the time it was indicated that he might also have to go to Europe sometime early in the year. I think that looks less likely now, because there doesn't appear to be a likelihood of an early summit conference. Personally I would be in favor of renewing the invitation, if it is the wish of the convention to do so, and if the convention wants the special committee to consider this question, we could have a meeting for that purpose.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: I so move, Mr. President, if it is appropriate at this time, that the convention extend that invitation to President Kennedy to appear.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Norris that the special committee extend an invitation to President Kennedy to appear before the convention. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: Mr. President, that motion having passed, I would like to call a meeting of the members of the special committee immediately following this session so that we can implement this action promptly. We will meet in the office of the administration committee, unless the administration committee is planning to use the room following the session. Would that be all right, Mr. DeVries?

MR. DeVRIES: Yes.

MR. ROMNEY: Very good.

SECRETARY CHASE: I have the following request for leave of absence: Delegate Goebel would like to be excused from Friday's session to attend a meeting of the board of regents of the University of Michigan.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, he will be excused. Any further business? Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I move that the convention adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The convention is adjourned until 2:00 p.m. tomorrow.

[Whereupon, at 5:15 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 2:00 p.m., Wednesday, January 17, 1962.]

FIFTY-NINTH DAY

Wednesday, January 17, 1962, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation today is to be given by the pastor of one of our delegates, Mrs. Anne Conklin. He is the Reverend William Whitledge, Pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church in Livonia. Will you please rise.

REVEREND WHITLEDGE: Almighty God, who art the author and giver of law, from whom all just designs and righteous judgments proceed, and who hast taught us that righteousness doth exalt a nation; we beseech Thee to guide and govern the minds of these delegates in wisdom, sincerity and judgment; that, being called upon to put into the written form the guide of law for the people of this state, they may both understand the sacredness of this trust and the eagerness with which the people follow their actions.

To Thee, O Lord, we do commend our state and nation, for which Thou hast done so much in days of old, that in the days to come we, Thy stewards, may walk in the way of righteousness and truth. We beseech Thee to abolish here all mean desire and motive, let none be deceived by glittering promises or vain words, cleanse all thoughts and uplift all minds that the things considered this day may be with singleness of heart and honesty of motive for the good of the state and the honor of Thy name. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present, please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is now locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Absent with leave: Mr. Thomson.

Absent without leave: Mr. Douglas.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, Mr. Douglas is excused.

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hoxie, for the committee on legislative powers, introduces

Committee Proposal 24, A proposal pertaining to inclusion of section 39 of article V in the constitution;

with the recommendation that it pass.

T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 24 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 707.

PRESIDENT NISBET: It will be referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hoxie, for the committee on legislative powers, introduces Exclusion Report 2008, A report recommending the exclusion of article V, section 31.

T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2008 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 708.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the standing committee reports.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing there.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Danhof moves that the subcommittee assignments for the committee on judicial branch be printed in the journal.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they will be included in the journal. I hear none, it is so ordered.

Following are the subcommittee assignments for the committee on judicial branch:

Subcommittee on legislative matters:
Mr. Prettie, chairman
Miss McGowan
Mr. Everett

Subcommittee on administrative agencies:
Mr. Leibrand
Mr. Krolikowski
Mr. Iverson

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders of the day. Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, I move the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for consideration of items on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Hutchinson. All in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

Mr. Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. President, before we resolve ourselves, may I rise to a point of personal privilege?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, you may.

MR. TUBBS: On page 3 of the Detroit Free Press this morning, I was singled out for some sort of honor, I guess, because I seem to be a lone dissenter on the judicial committee. I am not unaccustomed to that spot, so it doesn't bother me too much; but, in the interest of accuracy, I would like to have the Free Press and the record show that I had company. Don Lawrence was the other dissenter and his vote apparently did not get recorded by the man who represented the Free Press; but this was a vote that wasn't recorded by the committee either, so I cannot correct the record officially. But I would like to have the members here, who may have read the Free Press, know that I had company. I also made the remark that if Mr. Woolfenden had been present he would have joined in the dissent. (laughter)

[Whereupon, Mr. Hutchinson assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The committee will be in order.

The secretary will read the item which is first before us.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Committee Proposal 23, A proposal to prohibit the issuance of evidences of state indebtedness, except as authorized by the constitution, to authorize state borrowing and prescribe the method therefor, to limit the use of state credit and to permit the loaning of state funds to school districts under certain conditions, and covering the general subject matter found in sections 11, 10, 12 and 28 of article X of the 1908 constitution; which was under consideration on yesterday, and section b was under consideration.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 23, see above, page 602.

Mr. Faxon has filed the following amendment to section b:

1. Amend page 2, line 13, after "proposed by" by striking out "the legislature by" and inserting "an act of the legislature requiring"; so the language will then read:

The state may borrow money for such other specific purposes and in such amounts as may be proposed by an act of the legislature requiring the affirmative vote of 2/3 of the members elect of both houses. . . .

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment. Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I offered this yesterday because I had heard, at the time, there was some confusion as to whether this was to be a joint resolution or an act, and I would like to ask Mr. Brake whether he feels it would be any clearer with this language; and if he feels not, I will withdraw the amendment.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Amendments aren't generally made with those conditions attached, Mr. Faxon, and I appreciate it. Let me read to you a section, section 19 of article V of the present constitution: "All legislation by the legislature shall be by bill and may originate in either house of the legislature." I think my answer yesterday was completely correct, but the very fact that the question has been raised by members of this convention, I think, makes it acceptable, at least, that the language be clarified so that no one can misunderstand it; I have no objection to your amendment.

MR. FAXON: Then I will keep it. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment of Mr. Faxon. All those in favor will say aye; those opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted. Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Binkowski, Perlich, and Perras offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, after line 17, by inserting the following paragraph:

"The legislature is authorized by general law or laws to irrevocably pledge the full faith and credit of the state of Michigan for the payment of the principal of and interest on bonds or refunding bonds to be issued by the state, or any of its officers, boards, agencies, commissions, departments, or special authorities pursuant to law, and payable out of specific taxes, tolls, fees, charges or other specifically designated and earmarked revenues. Such law or laws may also provide that the specific taxes, tolls, fees, charges or other specifically designated and earmarked revenues out of which said bonds are payable shall be continued and used to the extent necessary to provide reimbursement to the state for any money paid by it pursuant to said full faith and credit pledge.".

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment. Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, the amendment is being offered in response to some of the comments made by Mr. Howes at the closing of the meeting. I have a statement. I would just, very briefly, like to restate his position respecting the testimony by former U. S. Senator Prentiss M. Brown regarding the use of full faith and credit bonds, for the fact that it possibly will save $1 million in interest and allow a substantial reduction in toll rates across the Mackinac bridge.

Now I am offering this amendment because I believe that the full committee should consider some of the testimony and some of the comments made by the chairman of the Mackinac bridge authority, and I hope that my chairman and the members of my committee will not misconstrue this and believe that I am opposing any of their actions; but I think that because of the fact that Mr. Brown did come all the way from St. Ignace down here to testify before the committee, and the fact that this would possibly result in a savings of $1 million a year, it is worth a few minutes of the committee's time, and therefore, I would like to quote a few statements — with your indulgence — made before the committee on finance and taxation by Prentiss M. Brown, the chairman. He said:

It is essential at the very outset that I put to rest any rumors or speculation that the Mackinac bridge is in any financial or physical difficulty. Also, it should be made clear that our appearance before this committee should not be interpreted as an effort on the part of the bridge authority to have the state of Michigan take over Mackinac bridge authority indebtedness. That this could happen is true, depending upon the will of this convention, the people and the legislature, and as my remarks will bear out, would be advisable; but I do want it understood that the authority is prepared to carry on under its present obligations.

However, I would be remiss in my duty, both as a public official and as a private citizen, if I did not take this opportunity to point out that through comparatively simple means and with proper safeguards, the people of this state can save literally millions of dollars every year in the management of its financial obligations, particularly with reference to borrowed funds.

Because I am familiar at this time with Mackinac bridge financial operations, I will use the bridge as an example of how these savings can be accomplished. Please bear in mind that what I say about the bridge indebtedness could apply just as well to many other state facilities financed by revenue type bonds, such as dormitories, highways, buildings and such.

Ever since the opening of the Mackinac bridge, the primary objective of the members of the authority has been to make it toll free. We have tried to keep abreast of all possible methods and suggestions such as the proposed reimbursement for the interstate highway system of which the bridge is a part. Notwithstanding our efforts in this direction, we have had no success and very little encouragement. As a corollary of our objective for a toll free crossing, we are equally desirous of obtaining any possible reduction in tolls. Since nearly 100 per cent of our revenues are used for interest payments and reserves, it is therefore obvious that to reduce tolls, short of legislative or other subsidies which appear impractical, it will be necessary to reduce interest payment requirements.

It was nearly 8 years ago at the time of the Mackinac bridge financing, that the chairman of this committee, namely Mr. Brake, stated with great accuracy that if the state issued the bridge bonds, backed by the credit of the state after a popular vote of the people, the project could be built and financed for $64 million less than it will ultimately cost under revenue bond financing, the difference being in the payment of interest charges. This statement is as true today as it was in December of 1953. We differed with the chairman at that time over whether or not the people would have approved a general obligation bond issue for a bridge at the straits of Mackinac, which many persons at that time were certain could not be financed and, if financed, could not be built.

Now the bridge is built. It is certainly a physical triumph of linking our 2 peninsulas. We know that even in this current recession year, its net earnings will be over $5 million. We fully expect to place $½ million in our reserve funds during 1961. With these 2 factors — physical and financial feasibility — proven, it then seems sound, reasonable, economical and just plain good common sense to make every effort to reduce interest costs, particularly when such a move can be made with no jeopardy to the state general fund and, practically speaking, no possibility that the general tax sources of the state will be called upon to financially support the structure.

We submit a suggested section for inclusion in the constitution which would permit the legislature to pledge the full faith and credit of the state of Michigan for the payment of the principal of and the interest on refunding bonds to be issued by the state or any of its several instrumentalities, with the provision that tolls, fees, charges, and such designated and earmarked revenues out of which said bonds are payable, shall be continued and used to pay off the indebtedness.

In the case of the Mackinac bridge, it would be my suggestion to wait at least until January 1, 1964, when the call premium on our bonds will be reduced from 8 per cent to 5 per cent. The authority is now paying approximately 4¼ per cent interest on its 2 series of bonds. We now have over $5 million in reserves and will have substantially more by 1964, so that we are certain that with our reserves our outstanding bonds could be refunded with an issue of $100 million or less. We would wait for the most favorable market, issue serial bonds, and aim at an interest rate of about 3¼ per cent.

Now on the basis of the recommendation made by our committee with respect to long term borrowing, the question is: why adopt something like this? I think, essentially, the judgment which the committee has to make is that as a practical matter it is rather difficult to get 2/3 of the legislature to agree upon anything. That is number one. Whereas, if this provision were adopted, it would at least permit a majority of the legislature to do this. And again, I want to emphasize the fact that this is permissive. It is not mandatory. The legislature would not have to do it. It would depend upon the circumstances.

And secondly, we have a situation here, like the Mackinac bridge, which has proved that it is a paying proposition. I wonder, what would the vote of the people indicate in this matter? And I wonder, too, if the legislature would not be in a better position to decide this question without the vote of the people. And, therefore, I submit this amendment for your consideration.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I invited this kind of an amendment, of course, yesterday when I mentioned to you that we had been requested to include this in the financial article of the constitution.

I think there is nobody in this convention who doesn't take the opportunity to take a pot shot at me in connection with the Mackinac bridge whenever he gets a chance. I have one facetious and somewhat satirical friend who said that he was going to paint a big sign on both ends of the bridge, "'I told you so.' D. Hale Brake." I am glad to have Senator Brown's testimonial to the accuracy of my prophecy, if you call it that, many years ago.

Now, this is something of a serious nature, and since it has been raised again I want to take time to go into what it means. If we had borrowed the money for the Mackinac bridge on the full faith and credit of this state, at the time we borrowed it we could have had the money for between 2 per cent and 2.10 per cent. There is no question about that, because we were borrowing on highway anticipation bonds at that very time for 2.12 per cent. Our computation disagrees a little with the Senator's. We figured that we were actually paying 4.34 per cent, as the money was borrowed for the bridge; but take it at 4.25, as he says. Four and ¼ per cent interest at that time was an outrageous rate of interest. It is not so outrageous now. But even now, if those bonds were in position to be refunded, with the market as it is now, there could be a saving, very possibly, of 1 per cent or near 1 per cent.

Now, they are not in a position — they haven't gone long enough — they don't know what their financial future is enough for refunding now, and the Senator admitted that when he appeared before the committee. He was talking about getting in position by 1965 or 1966, depending on the bond market and depending on the experience of the bridge, to get the legislature to authorize the refunding providing the bonds could be sold so as to make a saving. This is a fair proposition for consideration and, believe me, the committee didn't pass it over lightly.

That, however, is not all that there is in the proposed amendment, either as he made it or as Mr. Binkowski has made it today. He has suggested that we authorize the legislature to authorize the refunding of all these outstanding bonds of the agencies of the state, whether they are revenue bonds, whether they are tax anticipation bonds, whether they are dormitory bonds, or what have you.

I called your attention to the fact yesterday that that is approaching $1 billion. If you want the job of going to the people of this state and selling them the idea that the legislature of this state should be authorized to put them under $1 billion of indebtedness without any vote on their part, you do it; I don't want it. I don't think they will buy it and I don't think they ought to buy it.

Remember, this proposition is not with the vote of the people. This is a proposition that the legislature can authorize, without any vote of the people. I told them at the time that if they wanted pretty serious consideration of it, they better include only the Mackinac bridge. They thought they ought not to do that. Of course, that change can be made now.

It seems to me that we might better leave it for action under the proposal we have submitted to you. If it is clear, at any time, that this refunding can be made with profit to the state, 2/3 vote of the legislature, and the people themselves, can authorize it. The people are not so completely ignorant of the taxes they pay that they won't save themselves some money. I am still convinced that if we had asked the people back in those years when we were borrowing this money, they would have saved themselves 2 per cent interest and authorized the building of the bridge on general obligation. But we didn't do it and we can't cry about it now. It is too late.

Suppose we don't do anything of this kind. Suppose somewhere, in some agency of the state, the bonds go sour. We have no legal obligation to meet the payment of those bonds on the bridge, on the dormitories, on this building across the street, anywhere; no legal obligation. I think, maybe, you can say that there is no moral obligation. We haven't guaranteed anybody, either by full promise or half promise, that we will pick up any sour bonds. I do think that we've got what you might call a policy obligation. We don't dare let any of those things go sour. The credit of the state is something that we've got to preserve. If the bridge should get in trouble, if the dormitories should get in trouble, if the road bonds should get in trouble, we will pick them up because we've got to preserve the credit of this state.

We did it once and we will do it again if we have to do it, but personally I don't want the responsibility of trying to persuade the people of this state that the legislature should be able to put $¾ billion or $1 billion, depending on when you do it, of general obligations upon them without a vote that they pass upon it themselves.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment. Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: I would like to speak on this amendment and ask that it be changed, that the Mackinac bridge tab be picked up by the state. For years I have heard about the help to the economy of the upper peninsula that the Mackinac bridge was going to give. But has it been? Has it helped us? The fees, instead of being decreased, have been increased at least twice. Why not give the upper peninsula a toll free access to the rest of the state? The only toll road in the state of Michigan is the Mackinac bridge. We are paying for it, but paying for it at the cost of the upper peninsula economy.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, may I request that the secretary read the proposed amendment again?

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Binkowski, Perlich and Perras offered the following amendment:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 614.]

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment. Mr. Pellow.

MR. PELLOW: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I would like to speak in favor of this amendment. Mr. Brake has raised the argument that we should wait and see whether or not the legislature would put this proposition on the ballot under our long term borrowing provision that we have presently before this convention. As you all will recall, this will take a 2/3 vote of the senate, as well as of the house. And most people of this state know that where the senate refused to take $20 million in federal money, they would certainly be not likely to place this issue before the people at that time.

I would suggest that this could be placed on as a separate proposal and if the people can save $1 million a year, I certainly would suggest that this convention owes it to the people to place this before them and allow the people themselves to decide this issue.

Mr. Brake said that he doesn't want to sell it to the people. Well, there are many of us that do want to sell it, and in the upper peninsula we certainly need this. I think that this committee and the convention owes a duty to the people of the upper peninsula to support this amendment as a proposal and to place it before the people of the state of Michigan.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I would like to ask one of the sponsors of this amendment — maybe the Chair can answer this. As I heard it read, it did not provide for any vote of the people, but a mere act of the legislature to issue the so called refunding bonds; am I correct?

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The Chair so understands the amendment.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I would like to ask the sponsors, then, if you aren't opening Pandora's box, for the reason that the state could immediately build, under your proposition, any number of buildings, provide for the original financing by revenue bonds and the payment of rent, as is common in the highway building. Within one year or less — in fact, it is your proposition as I understand it, the minute the bonds were issued, the legislature by an act, could convert them into general obligation bonds. Am I correct?

MR. BRAKE: You are correct.

MR. W. F. HANNA: The trouble with revenue bond financing and building capital buildings at present is the circumvention of the people's right to approve indebtedness on one side, and the very thing that Mr. Bledsoe recognized yesterday, the shirking of the legislative body, whether it is the state legislature or the board of supervisors, of having intestinal fortitude enough to levy taxes to build capital improvements.

MR. BRAKE: The legislature has authorized the issuance of various kinds of bonds by agencies of the state, if that is what you mean.

MR. W. F. HANNA: But they could have saved money had they taken the bull by the horns and built them either by general tax revenues or general obligation bonds; am I right, Mr. Brake?

MR. BRAKE: Always, but you should address your statement to the city councils, boards of supervisors, township boards, and everybody up and down the line.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I recognize that the problem is not alone with the senate and house of the state of Michigan, but exists in cities, townships, and —

But the same problem of overpaying when you appropriate direct — in Musekgon county we went through this on the court house. Why, revenue bonds would have cost approximately twice as much as it did to levy the general obligation tax of 1 mill.

MR. BRAKE: There shouldn't be that much difference, but the cheapest way to borrow money is always on general obligation bonds.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, I rose, really, to raise the point raised by Mr. Hanna. This committee yesterday took the position, I thought rather authoritatively, that we wanted long term general obligation borrowing in the state of Michigan to be approved, in the first instance, by 2/3 vote of the members of both houses of the legislature, and then by the affirmative vote of the people.

What Mr. Hanna suggests is entirely correct: that this amendment would totally vitiate that safeguard. It would enable revenue bonds to be issued one year with nothing but a vote of the legislature, simple majority vote, no vote of the people, and be refunded, on a general obligation basis, the next year by a simple majority vote of the legislature and no vote of the people.

Now, either you want your general obligation long term borrowing in the state of Michigan approved under the safeguards recommended in the committee proposal or you don't. It is as simple as that. For that reason, I would oppose the amendment offered by Mr. Binkowski.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Pellow, did I cut you off?

MR. PELLOW: No, sir. I haven't had an opportunity to speak.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: You may proceed.

MR. PELLOW: I would suggest to this committee that we certainly have the issue before us now of whether or not we want to trust the people of the state of Michigan. If this proposal is placed on the ballot by the constitutional convention, then the people themselves will have the right to vote on this issue and not 2/3, determined by the senate or by the house, over there, sitting in the capitol. I say to this committee that the people, when they have a chance to vote on this constitution, if they want this, they should have the right to vote in favor of it. I would strongly suggest that even if this convention will not place it on in the total package, they would at least have the courtesy to the people of the upper peninsula to place it on as a separate proposition.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: I think Mr. Brake pointed out that this, for all practical purposes, is a fiction; even though it is a legal reality, it is a practical fiction. We know, as a practical experience, that the state of Michigan is not going to let its revenue bonds, if they are in default in any place, default, because they can't afford to, because the credit of the state would be still in jeopardy if we were to do so. So, as a practical matter, we are always going to meet our obligations.

The harder we make it to pledge the full faith and credit, the easier we are going to do and the more facility it is going to be to just go on revenue bonds, and we know what happens. What we are talking about is ½ per cent to 1 per cent interest difference that we are going to continually be paying. As long as, as a practical effect, Mr. Brake admitted the state is not going to let revenue bonds default, they are, in effect, as a practical matter, actually backed by the full faith and credit of the state, even though, as a legal significance, this is not true. I think this is what is involved.

Therefore, it seems to me that we should take advantage of this, allow the full faith and credit of the state to be legally applied and save the money that we can save.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I don't rise to disagree with Mr. Brake, but I think Mr. Hanna injected something that was confusing to me. Mr. Brake answered it quickly yes, but along with something else. Mr. Hanna started off on the proposition that this amendment would authorize the state of Michigan, itself, through the act of the legislature, directly, to begin issuing revenue bonds of various kinds. If this is true, then I would want to see this changed in some manner. But it is my understanding of the purport of this amendment that what it would actually do with respect to the Mackinac bridge authority, for example, would be to permit the Mackinac bridge authority to refinance, if it became wise to do so by reason of the 2 factors that Mr. Brake has mentioned, the principal one being the condition, from time to time, of the bond market, but without going back to a constitutional amendment.

It has been stated here that we would be moving with some temerity to approach the people and ask them to permit the "unlimited borrowing" of $100 million.

You are going to consider, as the next item on the agenda, as I see it, a proposition that was placed before the people in 1955 to do just that, with respect to the lending of the state's credit to the sale of school bonds for capital improvements, and this expired in July; and again, in November of 1960, the people voted to do the same thing, but without the $100 million limitation, as I read it. There is no longer any $100 million limitation. If this could be tied down in the same manner as the present conditions of sections 27 and 28 of article X, so that there would be no question in the people's minds of the purpose for which it was intended, I wouldn't have any objection and I don't believe that you could find any substantial objection by the people, because in both instances, on the adoption of both sections 27 and 28, I am informed that the people overwhelmingly approved the use of the state's credit behind the borrowing power of school districts.

I don't think it should be left here as an impression that it is intended to say to the legislature, "You can go out and start issuing revenue bonds that you cannot now issue." It is simply a matter of permitting them, as a legal proposition, to become a guarantor — if you will — on the note of the Mackinac bridge authority, or the Mason building authority — or whatever it is called, however they are constituted over there.

Perhaps if we explored the possibility by referring it back to the committee on finance and taxation, of placing similar limitations to this thing, it might become more palatable.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Staiger

MR. STAIGER: In reply to Mr. Hodges, first, that this is a fiction, the committee on finance and taxation did take considerable time to seriously study this whole question. If it was a fiction, I think that you would find it wouldn't make any difference in the bond rate. However, the bondholders are willing, as you state, to take it at a considerably lower interest to have the full faith and credit. I do think that it is not there now, and if we had it it would be something different than what we have now. You are not getting something for nothing in exchange for a lower rate. You are also placing all of the state's resources behind it.

By using the vehicle that we have, and also the 2/3 of the majority vote of the people, this would permit it to be selective. It may be that the people, rather than the broad involvement that the amendment would have, which would mean that all of these revenue bonds which are now getting close to a $1 billion, would then be free to pledge the full faith and credit upon the vote of the legislature. This will allow the people to be selective and, maybe, on the Mackinac bridge, there is reason in the near future that they would want to. On some other bond, well, maybe they will decide that they do not want the full faith and credit. This will permit the people to decide on them one at a time, by using the vehicle of the 2/3, and then a majority vote of the people. This is part of the reason that the committee came to the conclusion that they did on this question, I guess.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: I just want to say, Mr. Chairman, that about finance and taxation I know very little, except that I have been a long time taxpayer of real and personal and all the other taxes, so that I am not judging either of these proposals as really understanding them. But I would like to see the Mackinac bridge go on a separate proposal, and I sure would like to see that toll taken off of the upper peninsula.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mrs. Butler, are you wanting to offer an amendment at this time?

MRS. BUTLER: I would like to amend to have the Mackinac bridge considered as a separate proposal, taking the toll off.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Do I understand, then, that you want to make that as a separate proposal? In that case, the amendment, at this time, would not be in order.

Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, at the time that this Mackinac bridge was built, I was in the senate and I did everything I could to see that it was built and that proper financing was undertaken. It wasn't finally approved until I was no longer there, but those of us on the administrative board did have something to do with the approval of the bonds which were finally issued.

This is a project which is one of the great prides of the state of Michigan. There isn't any more likelihood that we are going to let the bonds of the Mackinac bridge go bad than there is that we are not here today. There is no question, it seems to me, but what we ought, if we can, to do whatever we can to make it possible for people to get to and from the upper peninsula at the lowest possible fee. The bridge has been there long enough and the operation has been successful enough so that it, unquestionably, can be refinanced at this time with a substantial drop in the interest cost. This is a perfectly good time for us to take that question up.

The present amendment is altogether too broad. It includes all kinds of other things which might or might not be properly handled in this way. But the Mackinac bridge, taken alone, is certainly a sound proposition. It seems to me, while I would vote against the amendment that has been proposed, if an amendment were proposed to include solely the Mackinac bridge, I would vote for it, because the legislature could properly authorize the refinancing of those bonds at this time. The upper peninsula would benefit greatly and the state of Michigan would be in absolutely no danger of having to do anything which it doesn't have to do at the present time.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: I would like to just answer one thing that Mrs. Butler, I think, implied that I think is a little bit of a misunderstanding. In the committee when we discussed the Mackinac bridge, it was given very serious consideration. However, if the state did refund the bonds by special constitutional amendment so that when the people voted for the constitution they wouldn't have to vote on it again; actually, in order to finance these bonds, I think you would find — and I I think I am pretty accurate in this — that the rates would be substantially the same. You couldn't very well reduce the rates appreciably. You would have a savings in interest — there is no question about that — probably, as Mr. Brown stated, in about 4 years, if you did the refinancing then.

The purpose of the language which we propose, is to substitute for the constitutional amendment borrowing which, in the past years in our state, we used for most of our veterans' bond borrowing for world war I, world war II, the Korean war, and the hospital bonds, and then this case of the school bonds. Now, as I understand the school proposition, what the state was doing, it was loaning the credit to school districts where, when they had a bond issue — this is the case in all programs — in their setting up of their millage, in order to retire the bonds they couldn't do it because they had to go above 13 mills and this would take them out of the 15 mill limitation. But by putting the state's credit behind the bonds, then they could get a fair rate and extend the length of time to pay it back, so it was a loaning of the credit.

Now, that was the reason that these things were done. I think actually, now, that the legislature would do the very same thing. This is just to simplify it so you wouldn't have another constitutional amendment in the constitution and clutter it up with those things.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Richards, of the Marquette district.

MR. L. W. RICHARDS: You called upon me representing Marquette county, and that is very good, Mr. Chairman. Certainly anything that is for the good of the U. P. — we delegates from the U.P. realize we are outnumbered 134 to 10 — we are certainly going to have to rely on the support of our good friends and delegates from the lower peninsula.

I am a little disturbed, and this is the first time that I was aware of this amendment. I am not too well acquainted with it. Certainly, as Mr. Martin has stated here, the possibility of handling this particular proposition individually, if that was a possibility, I would like to have it referred back to finance and taxation, as Mr. Ford has suggested. And I realize we are very disturbed when we keep referring these things. We like to get these things accomplished as we proceed with them. But the economy of the upper peninsula is very important to us, and I might add that it does disturb me greatly when I come back into the lower peninsula and pay $3.75, and I enjoy it somewhat when I pay the $3.75 to go back into the U.P. We like to get that angle in there.

But I would certainly, and if it is in order, like to make a motion when the committee rises, to have it referred to finance and taxation for further study where this could get separate consideration.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Richards of Marquette moves that when the committee rise, it recommend that the proposal now before us be referred to the committee on finance and taxation. On that motion, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: I certainly oppose the motion. The committee has given this very careful consideration and I have no idea whatsoever that the committee would change its mind upon it. Mr. Martin and you, Mr. Richards, I think are working under considerable misapprehension. The bridge is there. They even let the people from the upper peninsula cross it. If you think that that bridge is going to be run without any tolls and that the people of this state are going to pay $100 million plus interest from general taxation, not attempting to get any of it from the tolls, you are certainly taking a long, long chance.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The Chair would like to state that the Chair was in error. The practice in this convention differs, in some respects, from the practice in the legislature, and this is one of them. Under our rules, I am advised that a motion to commit is subservient to amendments to the proposal. In other words, the question before the committee at this time continues to be the amendment offered by Mr. Binkowski, which we have been debating. So that on the amendment of Mr. Binkowski, the Chair would next recognize Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: I want to quote something that was given to the committee on education at Marquette by Mr. Holloway concerning the mighty bridge. He had this and everybody seemed to enjoy it, and I thought it might inject something here. He said that it is intended to make people think twice about the subject of equality and opportunity and fairness of representation.

> Let us rewrite article I, section 2 of the constitution to move the seat of government from Lansing, where it is now established, to the straits of Mackinac, the geographical center of the state, where the senate will reside in Mackinaw City and the house of representatives in St. Ignace, at each end of the mighty Mackinac bridge. I am sure that the legislature would soon be impressed by the $3.75 toll charge placed upon each person who attends a conference in southern Michigan. While millions of dollars worth of toll free bridges and highways carry our southern compatriots leisurely from meeting to meeting, we not only must travel great distances but also pay a $3.75 fee for the privilege.
>
> Needless to say we do not object to the return charge because we know it is worth it to return to that area of the state where it is first said, "If you seek a beautiful peninsula, look about you." (laughter)

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: In answer to Mr. Staiger's comment about a fiction, I think we come back to what Mr. Martin just said a minute ago. The people of Michigan certainly are not going to let, whether they are revenue bonds or faith and credit bonds, a default of the bridge bonds come about. But I think this is equally true to the other bonds. They are given to purposes that are necessary for this state, such as building dormitories and the Mason building, and so on. Certainly no one in this state is going to, in the legislature or elsewhere, let a default occur on these bonds, and that is the only realistic picture.

Certainly, I suppose, in some states, there would be a justification for doubting the sincerity or the wisdom of taking revenue bonds, and because of this you have a disparity in interest rates. This is something that I don't think exists in the state of Michigan, and I think we should try, if at all possible, to get the lowest interest rates possible, even if it means puting everything under full faith and credit bonds.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I would like to ask D. Hale Brake, through the Chair, this question: part of this argument is particularly about Mackinac bridge — which I am sure we are all interested in and we all want to help the upper peninsula — but as I understand it, the committee proposal, the committee proposal as adopted, and assuming the constitution is adopted, would allow this very issue to be placed in front of the voters in 1964, and take care of the refinancing at the time they think it should be done; is this correct, Mr. Brake?

MR. BRAKE: As we have the proposed amendment before us, it would permit the legislature to act as soon as the constitution is adopted. Replying not only to you, but to Mr. Martin, the authority itself said it was not ready for refunding, that some time, some years, maybe '65, '66, somewhere along there, they might be ready for an attempt at refunding. If, at that time, it is advisable, the legislature can submit the question to the people, and if there is money to be saved I think they have no reason to fear that the people will go along on it.

MISS DONNELLY: Well then, in effect, your committee proposal, without any of this amendment, will take care of this at the time it is necessary to have it refunded, is that not right?

MR. BRAKE: That is the judgment of the committee.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I have risen, Mr. Chairman, only to make the precise point which Miss Donnelly and Mr. Brake have now covered.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: I just want to restate that there are many 4 lane highways in the lower peninsula. We have one short 4 lane highway in the upper peninsula, and the plans up to 1968, I think, are for still this one 50 mile 4 lane highway. There are no tolls on the highways in the lower peninsula and to wait until the Mackinac bridge authority gets around to it in '66, '67 or '68 is a long time to wait for the economy to change. I would like to at this time support Mr. Martin's suggestion.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Binkowski. Mr. Pellow.

MR. PELLOW: I would agree with the chairman of our committee that there isn't any sense in sending it back to the committee, since this was argued before the committee by the chairman and it apparently was the consensus of opinion among the majority of Republicans that there wasn't any use to place this issue before the people at this time, but to wait and rely on their good judgment at a future date. I say to this committee that the time is here and now to place this issue on the ballot before the people so that they will have an opportunity to vote on it, and then the Mackinac bridge authority can ready themselves and take care of this issue in order to have it all set for the ballot. I have no argument with Mr. Martin. I think he makes a good point, and I would support Mr. Martin's suggested amendment to Mr. Binkowski's amendment, that the Mackinac bridge authority be placed on as a separate proposal, and that this committee act on it now.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The Chair does not understand that Mr. Martin has offered an amendment. Has he?

MR. MARTIN: No, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin has no amendment. He only wanted to correct an impression that Mr. Brake suggested that I might think that this would make a toll free bridge. Of course, it wouldn't make a toll free bridge. It only reduces the amount of interest paid and the fees of the bridge have to be determined by how much is required for interest and payment on principal in the establishment of a reserve. The less we have to pay on that, the lower the cost of financing, the lower the fees can be, as I understand it. I don't have the terms of the bond indenture in front of me, but I believe that is the situation.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, I want to protest against what Mr. Pellow just said. This was not a Republican vote. There was no politics in the committee in connection with this matter whatsoever. I would like to yield to Mr. Austin.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brake yields to Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I would like to confirm Mr. Brake's comment, that this was not a partisan issue within the committee.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Richards.

MR. L. W. RICHARDS: Mr. Chairman, one of the points I wanted to clear up, that Mr. Brake interpreted my remarks to mean that I was endeavoring to have a toll free bridge. It was something in the clarification Mr. Martin has made, but I will have to admit that at times I am working under misapprehension.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: Mr. Chairman, I think I am somewhat responsible for the beginning of this issue; this is not a Mackinac bridge issue. It started originally when we had our first public hearing on earmarking of funds. At that time it developed that the state was paying 3.9 per cent interest on highway revenue bonds. In the testimony we elicited the fact that had those been full faith and credit bonds, the interest rate would have been 3.40 per cent. There is still $190 million in highway bonds to be issued, and I asked why we couldn't make those full faith and credit bonds to save the state ½ of 1 per cent of interest a year. That was prior to the time that Prentiss Brown appeared before our committee.

In the discussions before the committee, it was pointed out that we had this Stevens T. Mason building. We had other revenue bond issues outstanding. Prentiss Brown testified, and then Dean Doty and I introduced a proposal which was substantially in the form of Mr. Binkowski's amendment. What we were trying to do — and it was not just for Mackinac bridge — realizing that the state of Michigan would not let its bonds go into default, was save the people of the state of Michigan the difference between the rates they were paying and the rates they would pay on full faith and credit bonds.

In the working out of the mechanics of that, the consensus of opinion within the committee was that this form of proposal would be best; that this is not an upper peninsula matter, nor is it a Mackinac bridge matter. It relates, at least that was my understanding in the committee, to all of this type of bond issue.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Dell.

MR. DELL: Mr. Chairman, I should be in sympathy with this discussion because I live in the upper peninsula but I don't see this entirely as an upper peninsula project. The bridge was built for the state of Michigan. It seems to me that the committee proposal is opening up the opportunity to give us an opportunity to present this to the people later on as an issue in itself and not confuse it with the entire constitution.

For that reason, I will go along with the committee proposal. I think, too, that possibly over the past years, I know pretty well the history of this entire project. I have lived it for a good many years. I am happy to see the bridge there. I appreciate that we must pay tolls and that the revenue bonds — let this committee proposal go through and then we will take this up — what has been said on the floor here — at a later date. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Lundgren.

MR. LUNDGREN: I rise in support of the committee proposal here today and against the amendment because, as Mr. Dell has just so ably stated it, he comes from St. Ignace, right at the end of the bridge; he knows the history of the whole bridge. And I, just in retrospect, would like to tell you people, when I ran for the constitutional convention my opponent's main cry and the main amount of money that he spent for advertising, both on radio, the newspaper — I saw and heard it all over the 7 counties — was the issue of making the Mackinac bridge toll free. And I got quite scared about that and I traveled around quite a bit. But come the day when the election votes were in, I won by 4,000 votes. So therefore, making the bridge toll free, in our area, was not quite the issue that we thought it might be. So I would just like to let the people here know about that, and support the committee with what Mr. Brake said, that in the future, when the time comes — as I know it is going to come as well as Mr. Brown knows it is going to come — we will have to have another look see at the bridge but now is not the time.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Doty of Eaton.

MR. DEAN DOTY: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I rise to urge you to support the committee report. I would like to remind you that this is not a partisan issue. Mr. Ostrow and I introduced this proposal that he spoke about. It has been taken care of by the committee. We have full confidence in this provision doing the job, and I urge you to support the committee report.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, first of all, I would like to say that I am generally very much in accord with the committee position, and I would not be in favor of the Binkowski amendment in its broad form. I am persuaded by some of the remarks made by the delegates that we ought, at least, at this convention raise the question in a separate form as to the Mackinac bridge, so that we can determine what our position is on that. I gather that Mrs. Butler would have made such an amendment, and maybe some others would have offered this amendment just so that we could determine what our position is on that.

The reason, I gather, that it has not been forwarded is that nobody has the exact text before them; it is difficult to do. Therefore, what I am proposing to do now is to offer an amendment which would be, let's say, an inartfully drawn amendment, but at least it would put before you the objective and then, in the event that it should be adopted, it could be straightened out by the style and drafting committee. I realize the style and drafting committee is not enthusiastic about doing that, but the intention would be absolutely clear.

The amendment I would offer and I do offer — and I will forward it to the desk in a moment — would be this inartfully drawn language:

1. Amend the amendment after the last word "pledge" by inserting a colon and "Provided however, That this provision shall apply only to Mackinac bridge authority bonds".

As I say, my purpose in offering this amendment to the Binkowski amendment is to give the members of this committee an opportunity to vote on the separate issue, without worrying about the details of the language. If it should be adopted, I am sure that the intention will be crystal clear. It could be then handed to the style and drafting committee.

As to the merits of this amendment, it seems to me that the broad proposal, the broad amendment before us, is too big. It does, in effect, support everything that went before. But the question then is whether there is any reason to take a special look at the Mackinac bridge, and it seems to me there is a reason to do that. The reason is that that is the link between one part of the state and the other, and there is no other analogous situation that I am aware of.

I do think we want to strengthen the link between those two to make it possible to have freer transportation back and forth and I agree, I am certain there is no partisan problem involved here. But I believe we ought to have a chance to vote on this issue, and I would further urge that you accept the amendment to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Nord offers an amendment to the amendment of Mr. Binkowski, the sense of which, as the Chair understands it, would limit the proposition to the Mackinac bridge. Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: I would speak against this amendment, as I planned to speak against the amendment of Mr. Binkowski. To me, this is putting in strictly language that should be handled by our legislature. I believe that the language that we have put in before this committee of the whole will cover any item that the legislature or the people wish to take under consideration for long term borrowing.

Just one other comment, in reviewing our action journal of December 20 of our committee, it shows that Mr. Pellow did vote for this proposal as presented by the committee.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: This is a much more reasonable proposition than that offered by Mr. Binkowski but I still oppose it. I am sure that the committee still opposes it. I do agree with what Mr. Nord said, if we are to vote, we should vote on the general idea and not send it back to committee in order to get refined language.

If you are in favor of this proposition, the language can be taken care of by maybe one day's delay. But, bear in mind while this is just the bridge, it is $99,800,000 now. Interest for possibly 40 years hence, that is a lot of money. Even in the economy at the present time, it is a lot of money. It is not going to result in a toll free bridge at all. You are still going to have to pay those tolls. Let's let the people have a chance to say whether or not they want to burden themselves with that kind of an obligation.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The Chair noted that Mr. Downs was seeking recognition. Do you desire to speak on the amendment to the amendment?

MR. DOWNS: No, I wish to speak on the original amendment. I do have a point of parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman, if I may state it at this time. As I understand it, we first vote on the amendment to the amendment and then the amendment.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: That is correct.

MR. DOWNS: Would it be in order to make a motion that we vote on the amendment first? The reason I say that is I, for one, would favor the amendment that was introduced and, if that lost, I would favor the narrower provision, namely, the Mackinac bridge. If a motion is in order to vote on the amendment first, I would make such a motion. If it is not in order, I will not make it.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The Chair would rule that it would not be in order for the reason that if the course of action proposed by the gentleman should be followed, and the original amendment should fail, you see, there would be nothing for the amendment to fasten to.

Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I would like to address a question to Mr. Brake, when he is free or maybe some other member of the finance committee could answer it. Mr. Brake, in your committee on finance and taxation, have you explored at all the possibility of issuing revenue bonds to which the full faith and credit of the state of Michigan is attached, which is, in effect, saying dedicated revenue in another language, but with a vote of the people?

Now, what perturbs me, in both the amendments, whether it is the Mackinac bridge or Mr. Binkowski's, is the ability to issue, in effect, general obligation bonds without a vote of the people. We want to give the legislature power to issue general obligation bonds in the first instance, without any vote of the people; then it seems to me that your whole paragraph preceding this falls. If we limit this to full faith and credit of revenue bonds or if we limit this to revenue bonds that are outstanding but insist in the Binkowski amendment that any refunding be subject to the approval of the people, have we accomplished the safeguard, even though those revenue bonds, the question of refunding under general obligation bonds, was submitted to the people only by a majority vote?

MR. BRAKE: You would have safety if you regard the liability for 3/4 of $1 million to be safe. That is about where we stand now. You could prevent the use of full faith and credit in connection with revenue bonds in the future or you could permit it.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Let me ask you a second question. Would you have any objection to the Binkowski amendment if it were amended to provide that the revenue refunding bonds would be general obligations, if approved by a majority of the legislature and by the people?

MR. BRAKE: We don't object to any borrowing that the people want to approve. That's what we've got here.

MR. W. F. HANNA: You are not insisting on the 2/3 majority of the house or legislature to submit the question of refunding revenue bonds by G. O.'s? If it is subject to the vote of the people, would you still require a 2/3 majority of both houses?

MR. BRAKE: That specific question in that form was not considered by the committee. Personally, I would oppose it. I think that there should always be a 2/3 vote of the legislature before this kind of a proposition goes to the people.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Brake, do you allow revenue bonds or authorities to be issued, authorities to be established with power to issue revenue bonds? In that respect, do you require a 2/3 vote?

MR. BRAKE: No. That is done by general act of the legislature.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Wouldn't you think, then, that if the bonds were at a refunding, I mean, if this were limited to refunding of revenue bonds, and you have a practical matter of the call put in there, that upon refunding of outstanding revenue bonds a majority of the legislature, subject to a vote of the people, would be sufficient?

MR. BRAKE: I think not.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Nord to the amendment of Mr. Binkowski, the sense of which, as the Chair understands it, would limit the amendment to the Mackinac bridge. Mr. Rush.

MR. RUSH: I rise to support what Mr. Brake has just stated. I believe we have the machinery set up in the committee report that will take care of this matter, and therefore I am very much opposed to both the amendment and the amendment to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that I ought to rise to a point of information. I think there is some misunderstanding in the reports that have been given here. As I understand it, this will apply only to revenue bonds, and I would like to ask Mr. Brake if this is not true; that these revenue bonds will remain as they are. They are simply going to be guaranteed by the full faith and credit of the state of Michigan.

MR. BRAKE: In the first place, the first part of your statement is not correct. All of these outstanding bonds of the other agencies of the state are not revenue bonds. The more than $300 million of highway bonds are not revenue bonds; they are tax anticipation bonds.

MR. TUBBS: Well, a tax anticipation bond means that the person who is going to pay the money has to collect it from a certain fund, certain taxes that are anticipated or certain revenues from something else.

MR. BRAKE: That is right.

MR. TUBBS: So that the money of the state of Michigan, which might be raised by the taxpayers, is only a secondary obligation.

MR. BRAKE: It would be expected, I would assume, in case of any refunding, that the source of revenue would be continued.

MR. TUBBS: So that the Mackinac bridge authority would still have to pay for these bonds out of revenues derived from the bridge.

MR. BRAKE: If the revenues were sufficient, I should think that they—

MR. TUBBS: But aren't they required under the terms of the bonds to make the revenue sufficient to pay them?

MR. BRAKE: Yes, they are.

MR. TUBBS: Well, then, all we are doing is guaranteeing that the bridge authority will pay for these bonds out of the revenues derived from the bonds.

MR. BRAKE: And guaranteeing that if the revenues are insufficient, we will raise tax money to make the difference.

MR. TUBBS: That is, we are guaranteeing that the authority, if it does not increase the revenue of the bridge enough to pay for the bonds, the state of Michigan will pay for them.

MR. BRAKE: Right.

MR. TUBBS: We would have a remedy, however, against the bridge authority, would we not?

MR. BRAKE: I wouldn't know how the state would sue the bridge authority.

MR. TUBBS: Don't you think the state of Michigan could compel the bridge authority, as the bondholders can, to raise revenue enough to pay for these bonds?

MR. BRAKE: It might be impossible.

MR. TUBBS: You mean the bridge might go kaput.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Habermehl, on the amendment to the amendment.

MR. HABERMEHL: Yes, Mr. Chairman. If I understand this correctly, the real contention seems to be on the question of a 2/3 vote of the members elect of both houses. There is no question but that under the language of the committee proposal, the question of the Mackinac bridge refunding can be submitted to the people, and I believe there have been several suggestions here that this be placed as a separate section before the people for adoption. I suggest that the vote on that would be precisely the same, on precisely the same question, as it would if an action or a proposal were made under the committee's language. Therefore, the only difference that there could be is that one would require a majority vote under Mr. Binkowski's amendment, and under Dr. Nord's amendment, the other would require a 2/3 vote.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Habermehl, you have not correctly reached your conclusion. The difference and the main difference is that under Mr. Binkowski's amendment and under Dr. Nord's amendment there would be no vote of the people.

MR. HABERMEHL: Except for the idea that they want to submit this as a separate section of the constitution for adoption by the people.

MR. BRAKE: Their amendment does not include a vote of the people at any time or in any way. It is legislative action pure and simple.

MR. HABERMEHL: I would like to, in addition, ask a question of Mr. Brake, though. These building authorities, which is the method of financing some of these capital improvements, require only passage by the legislature, do they not?

MR. BRAKE: I assume you are talking about the court house in Delta county and St. Clair and so forth? They operate under a general statute, not one that is passed for each particular place.

MR. HABERMEHL: Requiring only a majority vote?

MR. BRAKE: A general statute that is passed by a majority vote.

MR. HABERMEHL: I would oppose both amendments, first of all on the grounds that whenever money is going to be raised, it seems to me fundamental that the people ought to have a voice in the matter, and on the second ground, that I believe the proposers of these amendments can accomplish what they wish to under the language proposed by the committee.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: I believe, Mr. Chairman, that what I had expected to speak upon has just been clarified and established by the discussion between Mr. Habermehl and Mr. Brake, and for those same reasons I would oppose the Nord amendment and the Binkowski amendment.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment to the amendment. Mr. Goebel.

MR. GOEBEL: Mr. Chairman, I object to the Binkowski amendment and the amendment to the amendment by Mr. Nord. This involves, in my judgment, if I read the amendment correctly, the question of putting about $900 million of revenue bonds under a general obligation bond issue and I do not feel that we should do that very lightly.

We have, for a great many years, provided in our constitution for a provision which would make it rather difficult, you might say, in order for the state to accept a general obligation bond. If we adopt the Binkowski amendment, also Dr. Nord's as far as that is concerned, we will be making about $900 million, or roughly that amount of money, a general obligation of the state; and referring specifically to Mr. Nord's amendment, the Mackinac bridge, in my judgment, for what it is worth, is not in a position yet, where the bonds should be refunded, and I think that under the provisions as submitted by this committee, we can, at any time that it is deemed necessary, have a vote of the people on the Mackinac bridge and provide for a general obligation. That is by a vote of the people, as provided for in the long term borrowing provision of the committee, which has just been presented to you.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: On Mr. Nord's amendment to the Binkowski amendment, all those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment to the amendment is not adopted.

The question is upon the original amendment offered by Mr. Binkowski. All those in favor will say aye. All those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

The question now is upon the motion made by Mr. Richards of Marquette. Mr. Richards.

MR. L. W. RICHARDS: I will withdraw that motion, seeing the results of the other two.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Have we got some other amendments? The secretary will present the next amendment.

Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I don't think it ought to go unnoticed, as long as we are discussing this bridge question, that perhaps the father of the bridge, who was a bachelor at the time, is presiding over this session. (laughter and applause)

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The Chair regrets that it is unable to respond to that. When I get on the floor, I can elucidate further. I don't claim to be the father of the bridge.

Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman, I am still concerned with one matter of the committee proposal. I think the argument this afternoon developed the fact that revenue bonds, authorized by a simple majority vote of both houses, are seldom a very good answer to the state's financing of capital improvements.

I asked Mr. Brake a question about these authorities, which is another method, actually, of financing capital improvements. This method also was adopted by majority vote of both houses, and it, again, has some very serious financial defects. Aside from the fact that they are financed by revenue bonds with a higher rate of interest, in addition, you have the cost of administration of the building authority itself, which can be, in some instances, a pretty serious item.

In view of that, I wonder why we make it more difficult to get before the people the question of a G. O. bond or general obligation bond, as we do in this proposal? To the end of not putting a general obligation bond or not making a general obligation bond more difficult as a method of financing than a revenue bond or a building authority, I would move for reconsideration of Mr. Down's motion, or amendment, made yesterday, which would require only a simply majority of both houses.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: In the first place, may I say, Mr. Habermehl, that you are finding fault with the method of financing that is the prevalent method of financing on every level of government from the state down to the township at the present time. Townships, cities, villages, everybody is using revenue bonds. If you are going to upset part of that, you will need to upset the whole thing.

As far as a 2/3 majority is concerned, I think I have stated my position. It isn't the intent that this shall be used often. It is for unusual situations, emergencies, times when we must have considerable money, and it ought to be done on a conservative basis.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question, as the Chair understands it, is now upon the motion of Mr. Habermehl to reconsider the vote by which Mr. Downs' amendment of yesterday — which the secretary will now read — was defeated. The Chair would say that the question is properly upon the subject of reconsideration and not properly upon the merits of the amendment. Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Speaking in favor of the reconsideration, I think Mr. Habermehl's point is well taken, and it is what I suggested a few moments ago; that by making it more and more difficult, by setting up 2/3 and a vote of the people to take full faith and credit bonds, we force the state into more and more revenue bond financing at a higher interest rate, and in the long run, we are costing the people of the state of Michigan much more money than necessary, and for that reason I support the Habermehl motion for reconsideration.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The secretary will now read the amendment which Mr. Habermehl now moves to reconsider.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Downs, on yesterday, offered the following amendment:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 610.]

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question now is not properly upon that amendment. The question is upon whether we shall reconsider it. Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: I will start out by saying, on this question of reconsidering, this would not make it that much easier to make any difference in revenue bonds, because you still, on full faith and credit, have the vote of the people, so with that hurdle in mind, just by making it a majority and then a vote of the people, compared to revenue bonds, which is by a simple majority of the legislature and no vote of the people, you are not going to discourage revenue bonds by that type of an amendment, in my opinion.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is shall we reconsider? Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, the secretary did not read the proposed reconsideration with the amendment that was already adopted earlier by the committee of the whole. Could he read that with the amendment? There was some confusion on that when he read it.

SECRETARY CHASE: Thank you, Mr. Faxon. The amendment, previously adopted, was in line 13 after "proposed by" by striking out "the legislature by" and inserting "an act of the legislature requiring," which the secretary does not see as being affected by this amendment that is being reconsidered.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The reconsideration of the amendment now before the committee would not, in any way, carry with or affect the amendment which the committee has heretofore adopted, upon your offer. The question is the reconsideration of this amendment. All those in favor of reconsidering will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion to reconsider does not prevail.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Stevens offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 14, after "members" by striking out "elect" and inserting "elected".

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I didn't get much consideration when I asked about this yesterday. I intended to leave it to style and drafting, but inasmuch as we are taking the time to put in things which in no way change it as it was in the beginning, I thought we might as well make this correction in grammar and make it consistent with the 1908 constitution. I refer you to article V, sections 15, 36 and 24. There are 3 pages where this term is used, and in each one the word is in the past tense, so that it reads, "either 2/3 or majority of the members elected."

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Stevens. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, if we are to follow the suggestion of Mr. Stevens and correct the grammar and make the language consistent with the 1908 constitution, we should then change the following word, which is now "of" to "to".

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: I would judge that that would not be a proper amendment to the amendment that is now before the committee.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Might I ask, Mr. Chairman, if Mr. Stevens would incorporate that in his amendment, in view of his concern for consistency in grammar?

MR. STEVENS: I have no objection. I think either one is right. I agree with you, Mr. Van Dusen, that should be "to".

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Stevens revises his amendment to:

1. Amend page 2, line 14, after "members" by striking out "elect of" and inserting "elected to".

All those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

Are there any further amendments to section b of this proposal? If not, section b will pass. Oh, there is another one.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Mahinske has filed the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 13, after "affirmative" by striking out "2/3" and inserting "a majority".

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: In reality, Mr. Chairman, this is putting to a vote exactly what we have just voted down reconsideration of, except that I dropped the word "simple" here. I think that this will cure the looseness of the Binkowski amendment, and at the same time cure the strictness of the committee proposal. What this will, in essence, call for is a majority vote of both houses and then the proposition shall be submitted to the people.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The Chair will rule that the committee has just decided this question by refusal to reconsider, and therefore does not think that the amendment is in order. The committee has already decided this question.

MR. MAHINSKE: Is this the ruling of the Chair?

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: This is the ruling of the Chair.

Are there any further amendments to section b?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Shanahan.

MR. SHANAHAN: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I would just like to point out in this last amendment that we just made, we said "elected to both houses." I don't believe anybody is elected to both houses. I would like to amend from "both" to "each".

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: I just want to point out, yesterday and today we spent a considerable amount of time on something that clearly belongs to the jurisdiction of the committee on style and drafting.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Does Mr. Shanahan insist on his amendment? Mr. Shanahan withdraws his amendment.

Are there any further amendments to section b?

If not, it will pass.

Section b, as amended, is passed and the secretary will read the next section.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section c:

[Section c was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 603.]

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, the language, the first part of the language, as you note, is the old provision from the constitution. We have added the words "except as authorized in this constitution," because, since 1952 the state has loaned its credit in connection with the school districts. That matter will come up after this present section and will be fully discussed.

We have added a paragraph there of new language, saying that it shall not be construed to prevent investment of idle funds. I am not sure that that clause is necessary. All over the state, local units of government invest idle funds. I know that for 12 years, the state didn't hesitate for a minute to keep every possible dollar invested in short term securities in order to earn as much interest as possible. It has been pointed out to us, however, that there are attorneys for cities, and I think some prosecuting attorneys, who have advised that the investment of these idle funds, short term investments, are not in harmony with this provision of the constitution, and that is the reason for the language here. I think it makes it completely clear that there is no objection, that it is the thing to be encouraged rather than discouraged. That is why that language is there.

In spite of the controversy that perhaps I invited by calling attention to things we were asked to do and we did not do, I shall follow the same procedure this time. I think it is fair that you should know what the delegates asked us to do that we have not done.

One thing that we were asked to do that we have not done was to so change this wording that it would not prevent the loaning of state credit for the purpose of improving, bringing in industry and making industrial inducements. That was carefully considered by the committee. It was ruled out. We don't think it is sound policy. We know that we have competitors that use it, but we don't think that we should add to that situation by permitting Michigan to get into the same category. We realize that is something upon which people differ in their opinions, and since we have been talking about authorities, one of the persons who asked us to take that step was a rather prominent citizen of the state, Congressman Griffin, from Traverse City. It is the judgment of the committee, however, that that is a policy that we should not enter.

Then there were a couple of others, and they have the support of some very imposing names in this convention. Here is one of them, that we should add at the end of the old language the words, "except for purposes of health, safety, and general welfare." That is so broad, those terms are interpreted so broadly that you might just as well take the provision out of the constitution. There is very, very little that the state would want to do that you cannot include under the words "health, safety, and general welfare." We had an idea on the committee that what the people who sponsored this proposal really wanted was a rather limited thing, but they offered it in language that was almost completely unlimited, and we were not willing to go that far.

We have another, and we had a good deal of controversy over it. As I recall it, there was no difference when we came to a vote. I may be wrong about that, but I think not. That is that we should say this:

> Money or property received from the United States shall be redistributed for the purpose designated by the United States. Such money or property shall not be denied any person because of race, religion or national origin.

There was no controversy, no question, as to the last sentence. The question was entirely as to the first sentence. This would not compel the state to accept federal money, but if it did accept federal money, it would compel the state to administer it just as congress had dictated in the congressional act, not this year, perhaps for 50 years in the future. We asked the sponsors if they thought congress would always be infallible, that the direction from Lansing or from Washington would always be right. They thought it would. There are members of the committee who were not so sure of the infallibility of congress. This is a very crude expression, and applied to a serious subject, but it appeared to us to be something like "buying a pig in the poke", I believe the old saying is. On sight unseen, we were not willing to buy federal programs for maybe 50 or 100 years in advance.

Those are the principal items that were turned down by the committee. We think the proposal is necessary. We believe we have added something that is important and that it is in good form as we have proposed it to you.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any amendments to section c of the proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Ford, Hodges, Perlich, Pellow, Perras, Sablich, Binkowski and Marshall offer the following amendment to section c:

1. Amend page 2, after line 23 by inserting the following paragraph:

"The credit of the state, up to a sum of $100,000,000, may be pledged or granted to or in aid of public benefit corporations, for the purpose of financing industrial, manufacturing and municipal development projects in this state: Provided however, That any such extension of credit shall require for approval a formal act of the legislature.".

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment. Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, speaking in favor of the amendment, yesterday's journal contains in it a letter from the governor of this state to the constitutional convention requesting language of this nature. We all know the question of the economic climate in Michigan has been one that has been readily debated for the past few years. He says:

[Paragraphs 4 through 11 of the governor's message were read by Mr. Hodges. For text, see above, page 590.]

Mr. Chairman, this is not a new type of proposition. It has been adopted by several states already and it has helped those states, and I not only refer to southern states — many times this has been offered as a way of trying to compete with southern states.

I don't think that we, in Michigan, want to try and compete in terms of low labor and so on with the states that take runaway industries. But in other industrial states this has been used, and I would just give you a short history of what has happened in the state of Pennsylvania with their experience on a state loan plan. This method was first used in Pennsylvania when the legislature authorized the establishment of a Pennsylvania industrial development authority in 1956, and initially appropriated $5 million for the revolving fund. Since then, the fund has been replenished several times with additional appropriations. As of June 28, 1961, the authority had made loans of $18,737,393 on 159 projects costing $16,104,624, which, when all completed, will provide factory employment of 28,124, with payrolls at full, normal operations of $100,112,058 per year. On the basis of this data, it requires a loan of about $640 to provide one job, not including any territory employment resulting therefrom.

These projects are located in 79 Pennsylvania communities and 43 counties. They include 49 relocations from other states, 30 branch plants of out of state firms, 14 branch plants of Pennsylvania plants, and 52 expansions of existing plants with 14 listed as miscellaneous, including such projects as reconstructions after fire.

Among the well known companies that have taken advantage of state loans in Pennsylvania are: Chrysler corporation; Fruehauf trailer company of Detroit, 2 plants; Frontier Homes of Nebraska, 2 plants; Gar Wood industries of Detroit; General Foam corporation of New York, 2 plants; Highway Trailer company of Delaware; New Moon Homes of Alma, Michigan; Phillips Van Heusen corporation of New York; Radio Corporation of America, 2 plants; and Textron of Rhode Island. The state loans range from $6,600 to $1,071,000 on any one project. The total state loans made on properties operated by Fruehauf trailer company are $1,701,000 and RCA, $1,644,000, and on Chrysler corporation, $845,000. I think it is interesting to note of those corporations listed, the number that are home based Michigan corporations.

This is not an attempt to bring in fly by night industry to compete with well, stable industry, but to give the same advantage to Michigan which other, large industrial states of this union are taking on their own. I am afraid if we don't come up with something like this we are going to see this continual drift of large corporations. These are responsible corporations, not fly by night corporations, which have asked for these loans and have gotten them.

I could go on with Maine's experience in this very same field, but because of the time, and I think the point has already been made, the governor of our state, and the economic development commission, feel this is necessary in Michigan to implement our expansion and industrial growth, and therefore I will support the amendment.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I would defer, of course, to Mr. Brake on this. I just happened to be on my feet. This matter, of course, was discussed at length in the committee. The type of amendment which is suggested here is, in effect, a gimmick designed to attract industry. I think on the merits of it, you have to recognize that recent statistical studies indicate that 80 per cent of plant expansion in Michigan or 80 per cent of the new plant construction in Michigan is the result of expansion of existing plants. This means that, essentially, this public money is going to be devoted to enabling one Michigan city to compete with another Michigan city for the industry which is already located here. This is not really a particularly desirable sort of economic activity. Companies which come in as a result of this kind of preferential treatment don't have the same kind of stake or investment in the location which they choose as those who come in with a desire to be here permanently, investing their own funds, becoming a taxpaying, important part of the community.

Finally, I know that there are those who seem to set great store by this kind of an argument. Precisely, this kind of proposal was presented to the people of the state of Michigan in the 1960 election, the figure then being, as I recall it, $50 million instead of $100 million; and it was rejected by a vote of the people. I think there is no reason to believe that the people are any more enthusiastic about it now than they were then.

For that reason, because of the careful consideration of the matter by the committee, its determination that this was not substantively desirable, the immediate past rejection of the matter by the people of the state of Michigan, I would urge you to vote no on the amendment.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Van Dusen has already used my script, thank you.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Likewise, he has used my script.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I wish to state definitely that if properly used this is not a gimmick. It is a means of accentuating a wholesome economic development of the whole state, as part of our national economy. It is not a move to outArkansas Arkansas, or out some other state. The approach is to see that we do what we can to further a sound economic base in the state.

I shall try to be brief, but I think if we try to put ourselves in the place of our 1907 and 1908 predecessors, they were facing an economy where the great upsurge was the change of transportation, namely the auto industry. We are in a different kind of an economy. One of the real developments is going to be the St. Lawrence seaway and the waterway developments. The kind of transportation that will combine 2 or 3 countries. In making use of these, we do not have a situation where one industry, by itself, is in a financial position to do that, but rather there will be the semi public type of corporation to help develop port facilities and other things.

I, for one, think looking ahead toward the next 50 years, that one of our great developments is going to be our research and industrial expansion around our great universities in the field of scientific, electronic, medicine and various areas, much as is being done at M.I.T. and at California.

This, too, is the kind of economic change where it is not one small plant by itself making these changes, but rather a community wide development which will include the need for additional transportation facilities, additional research facilities, additional industrial park developments to see that these necessities for the modern economy are present. I can cite, for example, the new power plant going up near Charlevoix, an entirely new type of energy. It may be that, as time goes on, in the next 50 years there will be the need for some kind of public investment to see that the greatest utilization is made of that by both public and private, as well as the changes within the iron ore industry and so on.

The point I wish to make is that we are drawing a constitution and not a statute. A constitution looking ahead, and the only real, economic certainty we have is the uncertainty of the economic and technological changes. This is designed to set up a framework within which the state can meet the opportunities of a changing economy. It does provide the check by providing the individual cases needed to be authorized by the legislature, so that while we are creating the framework for what we hope are the next decades, we are having the mechanics of that done through the legislative process, to assure that it will be properly done and there will be a year to year control within the framework we establish. I think while this is not the entire answer to Michigan's economic problems, it can be one of the significant steps coming out of this convention to encourage a sound, wholesome development of our economic life. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Walker.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Chairman, I, too, just happened to be on my feet, and it appears to me that if this were a gimmick, it is a gimmick for moving forward, not a gimmick for standing pat and standing fast, such as our cure all for everything, the cure all that was pointed out to us was going to stop all further taxation, like the additional 1 per cent sales tax. This will move us forward and not hold us pat.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman and delegates, there is one large company which moved south under the gimmick; they bought all of the bonds with which to have the plant built. That was a tax free investment. They sublet part of the plant, so they are getting their plant for nothing, even at a profit.

I would like to remind you that the guaranteeing of mortgages prior to the 1930-'33 depression resulted in the failure of trust companies and insurance companies — 2 large ones — when called upon to meet their guarantees. This resulted in tremendous losses to creditors and investors. The state could ill afford to absorb losses which might and often do result when the time comes to make good on guarantees, and no one can be assured, even the state, that demands under guarantees might not sometimes be required to be met. This was called the industrial FHA. Since the inception of the FHA, our economy has, in the main, been one of inflation and on a general upward trend. Even so, congress has repeatedly appropriated funds to continue the FHA program, which it was generally thought would be self supporting. The final chapter of the FHA program has not yet been written. If not entirely successful, the experiment will come out of the taxpayers.

The suggested program is another one to rely on government to do what private enterprise does not have enough confidence to do. The composite judgment of private enterprise is not always wrong. Because private enterprise does not move into a situation until it is assured of being a sound project is no reason for government to supersede their combined judgments.

Many Michigan companies have moved to other states where state or municipal subsidies, in one form or another, have been authorized. They are subsidized by taxpayers of these other states. The citizens, voting for such programs will, someday, realize that they are supporting the popular "something for nothing" program at their own expense. The best securities have to be met by our own efforts. If that is supplied by others, the more we support subsidies the harder it becomes to make our own security because we must attempt to make others secure at our own expense. I would heartily oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: In answer to Mr. Van Dusen, I thought we had laid to rest this fly by night. I think it is amply clear from Pennsylvania's experience and other states that in the large, industrial states that have used this, that it is substantial, good employers that use this. We are not trying to compete with 50 cent an hour labor and all the other things that are offered in the south, but just setting up a competitive basis with the large, industrial states. I point out that the state of New York, with the support of Governor Rockefeller, just adopted a similar plan this past year.

I would just, again, agree with Mr. Downs, that what is really needed here is new industry, and we are not talking about nickel or dime industries, but new industries that are just coming on the brink of discovery, and those that may have trouble, because of the nature of our industrial complex, getting adequate financing for research. We all know that this state's main trouble, in terms of its economic growth, is how it has lost out to other states such as California, which have had a breakthrough in the technological fields of electronics and aircraft and so on. It is on this type of basis we have got to compete, and for many jobs, not for runaway air rifle companies that go south, but for the real, purposeful type of industry that we want to bring to this state.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, may I direct a question to either Mr. Van Dusen or Mr. Brake on this subject? Without this amendment, the additional paragraph to section c, in lines 21 to 23 says:

> This section shall not be construed so as to prohibit the investment of public funds until needed for current requirements in such manner as may be provided by general law.

Perhaps I am missing something, but doesn't this allow the legislature, by general law, to provide for exactly the types of development corporations and projects that the amendment seeks to add?

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: With regard to the point that Mr. Wanger just asked, I wonder whether or not that is covered in the sentence prior to that, ". . . except as authorized in this constitution." As I understand it, the issue is whether or not the credit of the state shall not be granted to or in aid of any person, association or corporation. That is the point, I believe, to which Mr. Downs' statement was addressed. I should like to rise in support of that proposition.

I think we ought to be mindful, Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, that we have a tremendous job problem in this state, and that the prospect of the impact, intimate and pervasive, upon every family, of automation and all of the tremendous technological developments that we can see now on the horizon, imposes a tremendous challenge upon this convention. I don't see that the negative approach that is implicit in the committee report and the statement that was just made by Mr. Shackleton is, in any way, commensurate with the realities of the twentieth century.

We have not only the question of attracting industry, as Mr. Van Dusen suggested; we have the problem of creating industry, and if we are going to develop and enhance the concept of creative government, of government that does not sit idly by while problems multiply, and people become immobilized and lose faith and credit, if you will, in their government — and that is involved in this particular matter. There are people walking the streets today, who look upon the government and ask for action, that do not find it being taken in appropriate quantity and quality.

I just look upon this amendment, this proposal which has been advanced, as something more than merely a method to meet a problem today. It is a method to meet the problems that we know are on the horizon. And if this convention is to lift itself and have a perspective commensurate with the realities of the future, we have to, it seems to me, support this particular proposition. I am disturbed only because the discussion seems to reflect that the government has no function in the stimulation and fostering of private enterprise. I believe it does, and I believe that is exactly what this particular amendment seeks to do. It is not to conflict with private enterprise; it is not to set anything against it; it is to add a helping hand in the public interest. And if we don't address ourselves to this problem, I submit that what we are actually doing is telling the people of this state the government has no function in this field. I submit that it most certainly does, and I want to support the amendment.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman and my fellow delegates, I would like to reply to Mr. Hodges and Mr. Norris, both. I think what we are concerned here with is the matter of fundamental economic law and political philosophy. As far as I am concerned, to get the government further into the free enterprise field, through the lending of money to so called "stimulate" business, is an entirely wrong approach. If we want to improve the economic climate of Michigan, the best thing we could do is to get the government as far out of business as we possibly could. If we want to stimulate sound growth in Michigan, and sound business, let the free enterprise system do this through fundamental economic law and not through the form of government meddling and socialization. (applause)

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, a few moments ago Mr. Wanger put a question which, I think, deserves a response, regarding the authorization for the investment of public funds until needed for current requirements. It was not the intention of the committee that this language authorize anything more than the temporary investment of idle public funds. I think the committee report clearly indicates that the only purpose of this was to avoid the concern expressed by some city attorneys and prosecuting attorneys relating to the right of municipalities to temporarily employ their idle funds through interest bearing investments, so as to conduct their affairs in a prudent fiscal manner.

Responding briefly, further, to points raised by Mr. Norris, the solution to Michigan's financial and economic problem lies, in my judgment, not in some occasional bright bauble, some gimmick designed to temporarily stimulate occasional plant construction, but rather in the kind of progressive step that we took yesterday when Mr. Binkowski, I believe, explained the removal of the 10 year limitation on corporate ownership of real estate in this state. I submit to you that the action we took yesterday in excluding that provision from our constitution will do more to bring new investment, new capital into the state of Michigan than any 5 of these economic development gimmicks, such as the one proposed by this amendment.

I simply remind you again, this precise proposal was put to the people in 1960, just a few months ago, and it was rejected.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Fellow delegates, I, too, would like to speak in opposition to this amendment and in support of what Delegate Hubbs had to say and Delegate Van Dusen, and I further would like to say that I feel that the spirit of this amendment is a negative one, as opposed to the positive spirit of this convention. We are here seeking positive answers to the problems of our state, and I feel that we have the capability here to do it.

Our problems will not be solved by getting into what Delegate Hodges describes as an industrial FHA program, which seems to be more properly a form of a crutch — and a costly one, at that. That this great state of Michigan, endowed as it is with its great wealth of natural resources — agricultural, mineral, industrial — in the presence of an adequate labor supply and industrial facilities, should get involved in a program such as this is beyond my comprehension. It seems to me to lack, basically, a faith in the future of Michigan and in the capabilities of our people. The soundest and most wholesome economic development will not be an artificially stimulated state industrial subsidy, which is what this would be, but one based on a positive, forward looking leadership, sound government and free enterprise. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I came into this debate without having heard of the issue before and I have gradually become convinced, largely on the basis of Mr. Norris' remarks, that he isn't always wrong, and in this case, that he is right. It seems to me that some of the remarks that have been made missed the point. The remarks that have been made — and I might say, in addition, I object to the language that has been used, which has, to a certain extent, been rather derisive, such as, these are gimmicks, and these are bright baubles, and so on. I think that this loses sight of the fact that there is something very serious at stake.

It has been pointed out that this kind of proposal indicates lack of faith in Michigan and the people. But it seems to me we miss the point of what is at stake in this amendment. As I understand it — I may be mistaken — but as I understand the amendment, and I don't have the text before me, it was that what is being asked is to authorize the legislature to do something. If I am mistaken on that, then my conclusion will be wrong, too. If I am correct that what is being asked is to authorize the legislature to do something, then why is that a negative approach? The approach of those who are opposed to the amendment is not to allow the legislature to do something. It seems to me that the negative and the affirmative have been mixed up.

Not only that, I would point out that the attitude of most people on this issue seems to be reversed from what it was at the beginning of the convention. At the beginning of the convention, many people started out by saying we should give the legislature as much power as possible. Some of the people objected to that on the basis that we couldn't trust the legislature. Now it looks like almost everybody is on the opposite side of that issue from where they were before.

Before, I know I argued that we couldn't trust the legislature to do certain things. Other people said, "Oh, yes you can." Now on this issue we are on the reverse side; the people who then said, "We can trust the legislature," now say, "No, we cannot trust the legislature on this issue." And I say we can. We can trust the legislature on this issue.

I would like to point out why there seems to be this reversal of views. When we wanted certain specific action to be taken, then we thought we should not leave it to the legislature but we should just go ahead and do it. Now that we only want to take away the restriction on the legislature, which is placed in the present constitution as to what the legislature can do, in that case it seems to me we are not faced with a situation where the legislature has refused to do something which it should have done or which it would have done. What we are asking now is to allow the legislature to do something which it never could have done before. It certainly could not be said to have failed in not doing what it could not do before.

So we are in an opposite position, and the question at hand, it seems to me, is only this, shall we anticipate the future of the next 50 years, shall we be so sure as to what the legislature needs to do in the economic area that we will make it impossible for them to do what they might need to do?

We have to be absolutely certain in our minds, if we leave the constitution as it is or as it has been proposed by the committee — to leave it that way we must be 100 per cent certain that in the next 50 years this power will not be needed. Maybe I shouldn't say we need to be 100 per cent certain, because we could get it by constitutional amendment. But we need to be quite certain, anyway. We need to be quite certain that this power will not be needed. Now, how can we be quite certain that this power won't be needed or some such power as this? It seems to me that we cannot anticipate — economic situations cannot be forecast in 50 years. As far as I know, they can't be forecast at all. If we look back at the last 50 years, we have been through some terrible times and it would be nice for the legislature to have the power to cure them if the situation requires it.

I would say further it is not a moot point. This is not a question that something might happen in the next 50 years; this is something which is likely to happen.

I believe that the problem of automation is one which is a severe problem. It is a tremendous problem, in fact, and is a problem which somebody will have to face. It isn't a problem, in my opinion, where sooner or later the business of earning a living by having a job will become less and less possible, because there won't be that much work required to build the goods that we need. Even though we produce more goods, the trend is towards labor saving devices which make it possible to produce those goods and still give every person more and more time away from work. Therefore, that means there is less work per person. If we ignore this and if we lock the situation up so nothing can be done about it, we take a terrific risk.

I think in this case what we should do is to trust the legislature over the next 50 years to find out whether there is any solution it can present. I don't think we can present the legislature with a dictate: do the following. But I do think we can give the legislature the power to meet a crisis if it occurs.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Seyferth.

MR. SEYFERTH: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this has really developed into a full blown discussion as I view it. When Congressman Griffin appeared before the finance and taxation committee he presented to us a proposal wherein we would, in effect, place into our constitution the support of the state of Michigan to entice industrial complexes into the state of Michigan. This proposal of Congressman Griffin's really had its genesis in Muskegon with the moving out of the state of the Norge corporation.

Right at the time this happened, of course, it created quite an emotional problem. We envisioned great disaster, loss of a lot of employment; up into thousands. I think it was 1,200, to be exact, in the Norge plant itself, plus other subsidiary supplying companies in the town. However, what has happened? Somehow or other we have seemed, in the greater Muskegon area, to correct that situation without any outside help. We are still having some bleeding spots. We are still sore. But we can see corrective therapy taking its proper place.

How was that corrective therapy applied? The local greater Muskegon area has what is known as the greater Muskegon industrial fund. This is a locally sponsored fund rolling over about a half million dollars, and this half million dollars is used in the same manner, but on a smaller scale, than is now being proposed before this committee to be done on a state level.

The people of the greater Muskegon area, who were directly affected by this Norge situation, do not prescribe to the state participation, in fact, in the so called gimmick arrangement in order to compete with other states who are offering at the present time this lucrative lure. It won't be long before all states will have the same situation, the same lure, so that we will not be in an advantageous position at all.

Out of this local participation, we have been able to increase many jobs. We have been able to increase plant facilities and jobs of existing industries. Therein lies the big problem, insofar as we are concerned, as a local unit of government. If this is put on a state basis, then counties are going to be competing against counties, state against state, and local governments against local governments for the same possible plant. This we have seen operate too many times in our local territories. We feel very strongly that this should be handled at the local level, at the will of the local people.

Therefore, in view of our participation in the Norge project and the state project, insofar as Congressman Griffin has presented, we vote — I vote against the amendment as presented and I certainly request support.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brown, of Kalamazoo.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I have listened rather patiently, I believe, to the arguments that have been presented here, and it seems to me that if we analyze the amendment that has been proposed, the exercise of this function that necessitates the amendment is, of course, section c that says that the state's credit, and so on, shall not be advanced on behalf of private purpose.

Certainly, I don't think that any of those who are supporting this amendment would feel that to act to create an incentive, a financial incentive for industry to come to this state should be put at a higher level or less restrictive basis than a refunding, for instance, of the Mackinac bridge or any other project of that nature. There is nothing in the committee proposal, as it presently stands, that makes it more difficult to have the incentive, the financial incentive that is suggested by the amendment, than is presently applicable to a refunding program.

The refunding program, you will recall, and the borrowing of money for specific purposes other than the ones set forth in the report, starting at line 12 of the report, provides for a 2/3 vote of the house and senate. It provides for an affirmative vote of the electorate. This is all that is required for a constitutional amendment, which will put this amendment in the constitution if the people want to change their mind and put it back in. It is no more difficult to do this than it is to do a refunding program, and I think that certainly the amendment to put in this financial incentive should not be less difficult than the refunding of state indebtedness.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a few remarks in favor of this amendment, and I would like to add that these are a few remarks that I made in the committee when the subject was under discussion. I would like to remind you of something that President Eisenhower said when he spoke to us. He spoke of the necessity for facing up to our responsibilities, otherwise we are going to find our local governments turning more and more to the federal government for services and assistance that ought to be rendered, perhaps, by our state.

We are living in a changing economy. There is no question but there is a decentralization of the large industry that is operating in our state. There has been a decline in the heavy metals and durable goods industries. What is before us is that in order to fill these pockets of unemployed people and unemployable and to create the jobs that are necessary in Michigan, is to put American ingenuity, Michigan ingenuity, if you prefer, back at work. We have got to encourage creative initiative. No one can foretell exactly how the state should proceed to do this. All we are saying is that in writing a constitution we should give recognition to the need to do something about it.

On this matter of subsidy, it cetainly is not appropriate to build a permanent subsidy in our tax system. This is the type of thing that has been advocated so often by those who contend that no other forms of subsidy are in order. If we are going to give subsidies, then let's know what we are doing. Let's specifically provide for those subsidies and not build them into our tax structure.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: First, Mr. Seyferth states that pretty soon all states will have this, therefore there will be no advantage to Michigan. I submit if all states are going to have this and Michigan doesn't, that certainly we will be at a disadvantage. I am glad to see that many of our delegates here are saying there is nothing wrong with Michigan. Maybe if some of their brothers in their parties had said that a couple of years ago, some of Michigan's problems wouldn't exist today. I would also submit that those who are against this would also be against the minimum wage law of a dollar and a quarter an hour in this state, for one reason: they would rather compete at the workers' expense than at the expense of helping improve the climate of the state of Michigan.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: This discussion has taken a different turn than I expected on this point, but I would like to go back to the testimony we had by Congressman Griffin and point out that while he did recommend that we take a good look at this in our committee, and he wanted to bring some of the facts that he had to us, he stated, strongly, that the real solution to this competition between states of offering more and more through a municipal bond — really at the expense of the federal government because they are a tax free bond — is some action by congress. He stated — and actually gave us a copy of the bill that he had introduced — that there were a couple more bills introduced to see if they could not remedy this situation of the competition between states on this question.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Plank.

MR. PLANK: I am sorry Mr. Hodges wasn't more active in his own party about 3 years ago when there was an extremely big debate on the position of Michigan as far as being favorable to industry is concerned. People of my party were advocating that we needed 125,000 jobs a year and the people of his party were advocating there wasn't anything wrong with Michigan. Now, it has come to be, and all of a sudden he says the only way to answer this is to subsidize industry in the state of Michigan to keep up employment. All I have to say is that there is no such thing as a free lunch.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I rise to oppose this amendment, and I call your attention to, perhaps, something that many of you haven't thought of, perhaps. We are writing a constitution here, and I think it would be a grave mistake for us to place in bond issue after bond issue, or matters which would create a situation which would make this document unacceptable to the people of the state of Michigan.

One of the reasons I would and did oppose the placing of the Mackinac bridge matter in this thing is for that very reason. I think it is dangerous for us to do it, in the first place, and I see no reason, especially in view of the fact — why we should encumber this document with this matter at this time, in view of the fact that within the past, I believe, 2 years, the people have voted upon this matter.

I call your attention, further, to the fact that they use, as a basis for an argument for this amendment, that we should get in step with other states. It is my recollection that those states that have used this type of assistance, have done it on a municipality basis, and not on a state basis. I know of none where it is done on a state basis. I don't know that it would make much difference but I call your attention to those cases where it has been called to the attention of the people of Michigan, where they claim they have stolen our industry, it was municipalities which acted on this matter, not a state.

I think it would be dangerous, if for no other reason than we would be cluttering our document and finding opposition from people who should be passing upon the basic law. I call your attention, again, to the fact that the people have just recently voted on this question and if, in the near future, this is a matter which the people feel could well be placed before the people again, that is another thing, but it could be done under the present language as it is presently written.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Haskill.

MR. HASKILL: Mr. Chairman and members of this delegation, being a member of the finance and taxation committee, we have studied this program quite severely. We have considered it from both sides and I don't think that the real reason why industry is leaving this state has been touched upon. It appears to me, from what information I can gather, it has not been credit. I am sure that every one of the industries, if they had wished to build another factory in this state, had credit to do it with.

We haven't mentioned what it is, but I think it is taxation. I think it is somewhere down the tax line that most of these industries will have left this state for other states, for the reason that they got a much better benefit from the state on taxes, whether it be personal, property — personal or property taxes. That seems to be the thing in this state that we can do to benefit industry somewhere, to make it much healthier for industry to survive in this state. I think it is something we really haven't taken a look at yet. It will probably be coming out in the future, but I think if you want to help and do something for industry to create more jobs we have got to look at this taxing of industry in this state and the amount we have been pulling out of them.

I think, whether it is for education or local government or what not, the people of this state have got to begin to bear the responsibility themselves instead of trying to shove the taxation off on some industry to the point that you are forcing them out of this state. I urge that you vote against this amendment.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Pellow.

MR. PELLOW: I rise to support this proposed amendment. We in the upper peninsula have a severe economic depression that has been created by the mining industries. It is alright to talk about industry and what they are doing for the people, but it seems to me that throughout the state there is one thing that comes to my attention: the poor are getting poorer and the rich are getting richer. I think that it is time to take care of all of the people of the state of Michigan, including the unemployed people.

I say to this committee, an amendment like this is completely in order. What good is it for the federal government to give money away to Yugoslavia or communist countries to take care of those countries? Do we have to go to Berlin and Japan to allow our people to work in this country? Aren't they entitled to industry and more development here? I say that it is time to consider this problem seriously and take care of all of the people of the state of Michigan.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: In response to Mr. Iverson, that no state has done this but only on a municipal level, I merely point out that I already indicated 2 states, large industrial states, Pennsylvania and New York have already adopted it. I think there is the very danger of what Mr. Seyferth is talking about happening. I, for one, would not want to see municipalities and local units get involved in this at the local level, because if this happens we are going to have competition within the state of Michigan for industry. And I think this would be very bad, if Muskegon starts competing with Detroit for jobs, or Berrien county.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brown of Kalamazoo.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I spoke once before on this point, and I think that the delegates here are not paying attention to the point. First of all, the amendment provides this shall require a formal act of the legislature. To me this means that this shall be done as prescribed by law. The legislature certainly is not going to put a lesser requirement on the passing of a proposition of this nature than it does on the refunding of indebtedness. That proposal, you will recall, as it is presently incorporated in the committee report, requires a 2/3 vote of both houses and a referendum by the people. I suggest to those who are supporting this amendment — and I am opposing it in case there is any question in anyone's mind —that that is exactly the requirement that is made of a constitutional amendment. It requires a 2/3 vote of both houses. It requires a referendum of the people.

So, whether the amendment passes or not, nothing has been accomplished. It is still the legislature that puts the requirements on. It is not going to put a lesser requirement than is presently required for a refunding of indebtedness, otherwise, a 2/3 vote of both houses and a referendum by the people. This is what is required for a constitutional amendment. It is the same requirement. And so, of what effect is the amendment?

I suggest that we stop further discussion on this matter and vote upon it.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Gover.

MR. GOVER: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I've got to speak in opposition to this amendment. During my campaign, I referred to the Arkansas amendment in their statute and brought it up for debate and discussion at one of my meetings and I was almost thrown out of the meeting because they were entirely against that proposition. For that reason I will have to go on record for my area, at least, in supporting the committee report and not the amendment.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I have to agree with Mr. Brown that we seem to be discussing everything else here but the point at issue. But as one of the sponsors of this amendment who feels that all of the pertinent arguments have been presented, I do feel that I should rise — and a few moments ago I was angry when I wanted to rise, and now I am a little calmer — but it does disturb me for Mr. Van Dusen to take the cavalier attitude that something as important as this is a gimmick and let the record of this convention and the people who are here, stand with this misconception — the word socialist was also used over here, and socialism — and this one is particularly bothersome when someone with a name like mine, because I can picture a newspaper headline "Ford sponsoring a socialistic bill," causing some concern in some quarters of my home territory, not to mention damage to my own nervous system.

But lest we be too quick in dismissing this as a quick scheme, I would like to remind you that a well known congressman from a party not my own has sponsored this and pointed out — and perhaps this is one of the areas that is going to shift over to the federal government — and the governor of this state has very seriously sponsored it as recently as his letter to us yesterday; and perhaps the combination of these 2 gentlemen might explain, somewhat, the discomfort of Mr. Van Dusen with the proposed amendment. But, nevertheless, the legislature has — as it is now constituted — very recently voted by a 2/3 majority in each house, to submit to the people a constitutional amendment that would, in fact, give them permission to use this. And I submit that this demonstrates on their part an intention to attempt to take this constitutional restriction off of them. I don't think that you can suggest that either house or both of those houses over there got the 2/3 vote thinking that they were supporting either a gimmick or a socialistic move.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, I hope this may be the last comment on this. I do not like to take credit unduly for the phraseology into which I lapsed and, therefore, I should point out that it was Mr. Ostrow, with his inimitable gift for felicitous phrasing, who suggested in the committee on finance and taxation that this type of proposal was "a gimmick".

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I think that earlier in this discussion it was said that this would help sound, responsible business get established in Michigan, and I submit that this will place the load of supporting sound business on the backs of small taxpayers, and that the poor will get poorer through excessive taxation. And I also say that the gentleman who lives in a so called economically depressed area should probably move where the rich are. It is a well known fact that if you seek economic opportunity, you are not going to find it selling iceboxes to eskimos, and when the expedition leaves the south pole this year, they are going to leave an economically distressed area.

Now, I don't have any distaste for the upper peninsula — far from it. I think the upper peninsula is a great place, but if I lived up there and I couldn't find anything to do and I considered myself poor, I would take that old adage to heart which says, not "go waste" but "go west, young man." The one in Washington now is "go waste."

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. McAllister.

MR. McALLISTER: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates and particularly Delegate Pellow, I agree with Delegate Pellow's statement that we are spending too much money on Yugoslavia and other communist areas, and I think that Mr. Pellow has a friend in Washington who can relieve this situation, and probably if he does it will create a lot of employment and this $100 million won't be necessary.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, as one of the supporters of this amendment, I rise to speak in support of it. I am going to refrain — and I am somewhat in the same position as Delegate Ford was, I had to sit until I could calm myself down some before I rose to speak — I am not going to indulge in the type of facetious remarks and asinine statements that have appeared here on the floor today. I am not going to attempt to turn this into a political debate. We are here to write a constitution. I will participate in the political debate in the political campaign side by side with all the rest of you.

It is obvious to me that we got away from the discussion of the amendment and we started throwing charges and countercharges. I would hope that you would refrain from this type of action, for whether it is upon the part of one or the other on the floor of the convention, I am not so sure that it is conducive to the type of atmosphere that is necessary to soberly and sensibly and sanely discuss these proposals.

I am not going to take exception to the statement of Mr. Van Dusen, referring to the amendment as a gimmick. I will, however, defend it. It is not a gimmick. When I attached my signature to the amendment I was dead serious. When the legislature put the amendment on the ballot at the last election, I actively campaigned for a yes vote on the amendment in the election, and it only failed to carry by a small vote. It wasn't an overwhelming rejection. There was a problem, I think, in getting the full intent of the proposed amendment and the story over to the electorate at the time they were called upon to vote on it.

This is a serious problem that we have here in the state of Michigan. I think all of us recognize it. We may disagree on the approach to it. We may have different ideas as to how we should go about the job. Be that as it may, that is understandable. But if we have these different ideas and the different approaches to the problem, we are not going to solve it in the next 100 years if we are going to continue to throw charges and countercharges, particularly in this all important area.

I would ask you to give consideration, in my closing remarks, to favorable action because this does not, in any way, bind the state. You still have a right to submit it to a vote of the people, and with that I am going to close. I think that I refrained from getting involved in any political controversy, Mr. Chairman, unless I am forced to get into it. Then I will sit down.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I can't imagine anything that could possibly be said on either side of this question that hasn't been already said, and most of the things that have been said have been said at least 6 or 7 times on the same point. Can't we, please, stop talking and vote? If we can, I will make you a promise, the next time the finance and taxation committee comes before you, we'll give you something to fight about.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Ford and others. I think it is clear to everybody. All those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no. Division has been called for. All those in favor of the amendment will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Thirty-nine.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: All those opposed will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Eighty-four.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The amendment is not adopted.

Are there any further amendments to section c?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. DeVries offers the following amendment to section c —

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Wanger, do you desire to be recognized on something other than an amendment?

MR. WANGER: Yes, but I yield to Mr. DeVries.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The reason the Chair recognizes you at this time is because I recognized that you were getting up at the time that we started the last amendment some 2 hours ago. If you yield to Mr. DeVries, then you will wait until after the disposition of this amendment before you are recognized on your question. Is that agreeable to you?

MR. WANGER: Yes, sir, it is.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: All right, the secretary will read the amendment offered by Mr. DeVries.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. DeVries offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 20, after "authorized" by striking out "in this constitution" and inserting "by law".

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Dr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I feel that by inserting this language we give flexibility and we allow the legislature to decide if we will loan money to private industry or any other private institution that it desires to.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Dr. DeVries. Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: May we have it read again, please?

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment is:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

MR. BRAKE: I think that that is perfectly understandable to everybody. It is a question of whether you want the protection of a constitutional restriction or whether you simply want to leave it to the legislature to say for what purpose the state may loan its credit. It seems to me that the place for that is in the constitution, that we do not want the state's credit thrown around loosely and I am opposed to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I would simply join Mr. Brake and point out that this is really the exception that swallows the rule and if the DeVries amendment were adopted, the entire section would be virtually meaningless.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct a question to Mr. Brake, that question being that if this language is used, is it his interpretation that it would be then covered by the preceding paragraph relative to a 2/3 vote in both houses plus a referendum by the people? And —

MR. BRAKE: I don't think so.

MR. G. E. BROWN: — if so, why not?

MR. BRAKE: This is a matter of loaning the state's credit, backing up something; not a matter of the state borrowing the money, necessarily, if it could get it in other ways.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: I simply would like to say that I agree with what Mr. Van Dusen and Mr. Brake have said.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment. Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: I feel strongly about this. If you do adopt this amendment, you might as well write the whole language out of the constitution pertaining to this particular fact. I oppose Mr. DeVries' amendment.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Dr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I have faith in the legislature that they won't extend our credit. If it takes a 2/3 vote, I think they will do the right thing. I have implicit trust in the legislature.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. DeVries. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, I notice in the language of this provision referring to the investment of public funds, that they may be invested as provided by general law. Perhaps this is not a proper time to debate this, but I wonder, under this section, would not this permit the legislature to authorize the investment of several hundreds of millions of public funds in voting securities, and if it would permit the investment of public funds in voting securities — that is to say securities which, at certain times it can be voted to control the progress of the corporation, private enterprise of this state — whether or not this raises very, very serious implications to our economy.

MR. BRAKE: I think that Mr. Van Dusen fully answered what you have asked. This is not a matter of authorizing the local units of government to go into any long term propositions at all. It is a matter of the idle funds that are available for a short time and might just as well earn a little interest during that short time. And, it is not a matter of the legislature saying, "You may do this," or "You may do that." It is a matter of a general law laying down the rules under which these investments can be made, including what they may be made in.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: If I might simply elaborate briefly on Mr. Brake's response, I think that Mr. Wanger's point would be particularly well taken if this section stood alone in the constitution. However, in another section of the present article X, it prohibits the investment of public funds in common stocks. So, I think the language is that the state shall not be interested in the stock of any corporations. I think that this language would preclude the legislature from authorizing, pursuant to this section, any investment in voting securities of a corporation.

I think you may recall that the language of the section to which I have just referred is incorporated in an earlier report by this committee, to which the committee suggests only 2 exceptions: the investment of public funds held for pension and retirement funds, and the investment of public funds held for endowment funds by universities in common stocks. I think that taking the 2 sections together, there is necessarily a prohibition against any legislative enactment which would authorize the investment of public funds pursuant to this section, in voting securities of a corporation, except those public funds held for pension and endowment purposes.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I am not as familiar with the securities market and the legal aspects of securities issues as many of the people in this delegation, but I know that section 13 of article X, to which Mr. Van Dusen refers, says the state shall not subscribe to nor be interested in the stock of any company, association or corporation.

I wonder if there may not be voting securities which are not included in the words, "stock of any company, association or corporation." And, certainly, I suggest that when they are either in a pension fund or even in the general treasury, there are hundreds of millions available, but it is possible to have a situation where one of these funds might be invested, say, in 5 per cent or 10 per cent of the stock of some company. And I suggest further that such a percentage is often enough to control that company, to place certain people on the board of directors of such a company.

And, while I do not wish a protracted debate on this, in light of the fact that there is another section under which it might more properly be considered, I would like to ask the chairman of the committee if there is any intention that when we reach the point of discussing section 13, that the committee desires that the state should be able to invest in any voting securities of any kind?

MR. BRAKE: You have answered your own question. That matter will be before us, the section that Mr. Van Dusen referred to, and if you don't like it at that time, you certainly have the opportunity to propose an amendment to that section. We can't present everything in the constitution at once.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any further amendments to section c? If not, it will pass.

Section c is passed.

Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, we have, as a member of the finance and taxation committee, one who was in the legislature of 1952, Mr. Van Dusen, and who was one of the sponsors, one of the active supporters of the provision that was written into our constitution by popular vote that year, in authorizing the state to back up, with its credit, certain school districts. I yield to Mr. Van Dusen for the purpose of explaining what we have done, and again try and promise, if we don't run into too much controversy, we might get through today.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The Chair will recognize Mr. Van Dusen, but will call your attention to the fact that under the rules, the secretary should read section d first, unless the committee otherwise directs.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Because of its length, Mr. Chairman, I move that it be considered read, unless there is some objection.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Is there objection to it being considered read?

The Chair hears no objection, and it is so considered, and the Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen.

[For section d, see above, page 603.]

MR. VAN DUSEN: I would like to correct Mr. Brake in just one minor particular, that it was 1955 rather than 1952, when the language of section 27 of the present constitution was considered in the legislature and proposed for a vote of the people. The school districts of the state were then confronted with the impact of 2 developments of the last decade. One, the beginning of what we have come to know as the population explosion; the other, the beginning of a substantial shift in the population around our metropolitan centers from the core cities out into the suburbs. This confronted many school districts with overwhelming problems of school building construction.

The problem of finding adequate funds to finance school construction in the early '50s had its roots in 3 different constitutional provisions.

One of these was the 15 mill limit which precluded any additional millage beyond the 15 mill limit being levied for a period longer than 20 years, and this imposed a serious limitation on the ability of any school district to enter into long term borrowing for the purpose of school construction. The fact that its borrowing had, necessarily, to be on a fairly short term basis, meant that the amortization of principal proceeded at a rapid rate, and therefore a very substantial percentage of the schools' total income had to be devoted to the retirement of any debt incurred for school construction; a retirement of that indebtedness which took place over much less than the total life of the facilities which it was incurred to construct. So that the 15 mill limit presented a positive impediment to sound school construction financing and made it very difficult for districts which had, in particular, a low base of assessment to provide, even through borrowing, adequate funds for school construction. There were 2 other constitutional impediments to this. The state has an interest and a desire to advance money to the school districts to assist them in solving this problem, but it could not do so; first, for the reason that the section which we have just considered prohibits the use of the state credit in support of any public corporation, including a school district; and second, for the reason that the state itself had insufficient funds to do so without borrowing and it could not borrow without a constitutional amendment.

Therefore, these 3 constitutional problems, the 15 mill limit, the limitation on the use of the state's credit in support of another public corporation, and the limitation on the state's right to borrow, all were considered in the provisions of section 27 proposed in 1955 by the legislature as an amendment to the constitution. The state, under the provisions of that amendment, could borrow up to $100 million to make loans — to use its credit — to support local school districts, provided those school districts engaged in a particular kind of financing for their school construction, and entered into qualified bonding contracts with lenders of money.

These qualified bonds had to have a maturity longer than the 20 year period prescribed by the 15 mill limit, and therefore these bonds were made supportable by unlimited tax funds. In other words, the 15 mill limit was not applied to them. This amendment was proposed and was adopted by the people in 1955, but had a termination date, providing that the entire provision would come to an end in 1962.

Well, it proved very successful, and in large measure it solved the problem of providing funds for school construction in Michigan's school districts. And it became apparent in 1960 that its provisions should be renewed. Therefore, the legislature proposed its extension for a 10 year period beginning in July of 1962 and running through July of 1972. They took off the $100 million limit because during the entire period, only a figure under $2 million had been borrowed by the state and loaned to school districts in support of their bonds, and made certain other minor changes. This amendment was adopted by the people, overwhelmingly, in the fall of 1960.

What this committee now proposes is a consolidation of sections 27 and 28 into a single section, continuing the provisions of section 28, as adopted by the people in 1960, with only one change, that being the elimination of the termination date in 1972. It is the feeling of the committee that if this system is good, and 5 years' experience has proved it to be, then it should continue for the foreseeable future, and rather than putting the legislature and the people to the problem of reenacting it and extending it in 1972, it would be better to simply put it in without any terminal date and, if it eventually outlives its usefulness, it can be removed by constitutional amendment. The committee strongly supports its adoption.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any amendments to section d? Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: May I ask a question of Mr. Van Dusen? Dick, this is rather complicated for me, but I can go along with it if I can have your assurance it isn't a gimmick.

MR. VAN DUSEN: You have my assurance. I wish Mr. Ostrow would come back so he could give you his.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman, I just have a couple of questions to address to Mr. Van Dusen. I have had some experience in this field, Mr. Van Dusen, and is it true that on not more than a half dozen occasions, these loans have actually been made to school districts?

MR. VAN DUSEN: I think the number is a very modest one. I can't quote the actual figures. As I indicated, the total dollar amount is less than $2 million.

MR. HABERMEHL: Was the committee aware, too, that in the sale of school bonds now, the market for such bonds is diminished unless the bonds have been qualified as provided by this section?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Virtually all bonds of a type which you and I would like to see issued are qualified, Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: And the department of public instruction, of course, imposes a fee for such qualifications running from a minimum of $200, I believe, up to about $500.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I think the committee did not get into the details of the fee charged by the department of public instruction. I trust it is not a revenue issue on the department's part but simply a method to recoup its cost on reviewing them.

MR. HABERMEHL: I simply asked the questions to see if those matters had been considered by the committee. I have no objection to the proposal.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: Are there any proposed amendments to section d of the proposal? If not, it will pass.

Section d is passed.

Are there any further amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 23, as amended, is passed.

Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: May I thank the ladies and gentlemen of the committee for their consideration, and I move that the committee rise.

CHAIRMAN HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the motion made by Mr. Brake that the committee do now rise. All those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The committee has risen.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration a certain proposal on which the secretary will make a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole, Mr. President, has had under consideration Committee Proposal 23, A proposal to prohibit the issuance of evidences of state indebtedness, except as authorized by the constitution, to authorize state borrowing and prescribe the method therefor, to limit the use of state credit and to permit the loaning of state funds to school districts under certain conditions, and covering the general subject matter found in sections 11, 10, 12 and 28 of article X of the 1908 constitution; reports this proposal back to the convention with amendments, recommending the amendments be agreed to and the proposal, as thus amended, do pass.

[The following are the amendments recommended by the committee of the whole:

1. Amend page 2, line 13, after "proposed by" by striking out "the legislature by" and inserting "an act of the legislature requiring".

2. Amend page 2, line 14, after "members" by striking out "elect of" and inserting "elected to".]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on agreeing to the amendments. Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: I ask that section b and section c be divided.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the — Mr. Downs, do you wish to make another amendment?

MR. DOWNS: I believe another amendment is on the secretary's desk.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase informs me that the question would be on the approval of these amendments, and then if you care to make a subsequent amendment, that is your privilege. The vote should be, first, on the committee amendments.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, I just want to be sure on the parliamentary procedure. I understand that there are amendments on section b and section c on the secretary's desk, and your ruling is that we vote on the committee amendments first and then we will have the opportunity to vote on the amendments that have been filed with the secretary, is that correct?

PRESIDENT NISBET: That is correct.

The question is on agreeing to the amendments made by the committee of the whole. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendments are agreed to.

SECRETARY CHASE: The first amendment, by Mr. Perlich:

1. Amend page 2, line 17, after the end of line 17, by adding the following paragraph:

"The legislature is authorized by general law or laws to irrevocably pledge the full faith and credit of the state of Michigan for the payment of the principal of and interest on bonds or refunding bonds to be issued by the state, or any of its officers, boards, agencies, commissions, departments, or special authorities pursuant to law, and payable out of specific taxes, tolls, fees, charges or other specifically designated and earmarked revenues. Such law or laws may also provide that the specific taxes, tolls, fees, charges or other specifically designated and earmarked revenues out of which said bonds are payable shall be continued and used to the extent necessary to provide reimbursement to the state for any money paid by it pursuant to said full faith and credit pledge: Provided however, That this provision shall apply only to the Mackinac bridge authority bonds.".

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Perlich.

MR. PERLICH: Because of the extensive discussion on this subject, there is nothing more for me to add, and I ask for a roll call vote.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Perlich has asked for a roll call vote. Is the demand seconded? There is sufficient number up.

Those in favor of the amendment as proposed by Mr. Perlich, will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is now locked and the vote will be recorded.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

YEAS — 46

Austin	Greene	Murphy
Baginski	Hart, Miss	Nord
Balcer	Hatcher, Mrs.	Norris
Barthwell	Hodges	Pellow
Binkowski	Hood	Perlich
Bledsoe	Kelsey	Rajkovich
Brown, T. S.	Krolikowski	Richards, L. W.
Buback	Lesinski	Sablich
Cushman, Mrs.	Liberato	Snyder
Dell	Madar	Spitler
Downs	Mahinske	Stopczynski
Elliott, Mrs. Daisy	Marshall	Suzore
Faxon	Martin	Wilkowski
Follo	McCauley	Young
Ford	McGowan, Miss	Youngblood
Garvin

NAYS — 85

Allen	Hannah, J. A.	Pollock
Andrus, Miss	Haskill	Powell
Anspach	Hatch	Prettie
Batchelor	Heideman	Pugsley
Beaman	Higgs	Radka
Bentley	Howes	Richards, J. B.
Bonisteel	Hoxie	Rood
Boothby	Hubbs	Rush
Brake	Hutchinson	Seyferth
Brown, G. E.	Iverson	Shackleton
Butler, Mrs.	Judd, Mrs.	Shaffer
Conklin, Mrs.	Karn	Shanahan
Danhof	King	Sharpe
Davis	Kirk, S.	Sleder
Dehnke	Knirk, B.	Stafseth
DeVries	Koeze, Mrs.	Staiger
Donnelly, Miss	Kuhn	Stamm
Doty, Donald	Lawrence	Sterrett
Erickson	Leibrand	Stevens
Everett	Leppien	Tubbs
Farnsworth	Lundgren	Turner
Figy	McAllister	Tweedie
Finch	McLogan	Upton
Gadola	Millard	Van Dusen
Goebel	Mosier	Wanger
Gover	Page	Wood
Gust	Perras	Woolfenden
Habermehl	Plank	Yeager
Hanna, W. F.

On the question of the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Perlich, the yeas are 46; the nays are 85.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is not adopted. Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I suppose I must be much confused here, because the wiser heads are saying nothing, but it was my understanding that after the committee of the whole rose and its action was voted on, the next procedure was that the proposal went to the committee on style and drafting. I am glancing at the rules. The place that I looked at was the middle of page 52, here, where it talks about the order of consideration. I didn't realize that after the action of the committee of the whole had been ratified or rejected by the convention, that the proposal was once more open for debate or amendment here on the floor. There is later a second reading and a third reading. Are we in order in what we are doing at this time? I would like a ruling from the Chair.

PRESIDENT NISBET: I understand, Mr. Powell, under the nature of the rules of order, after the report of the committee of the whole, the proposal may be amended on the floor.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hodges offers the following amendment to Committee Proposal 23, section c:

1. Amend page 2, line 23, after the end of the paragraph, by adding another paragraph as follows:

"The credit of the state, up to a sum of $100,000,000, may be pledged or granted to or in aid of public benefit corporations, for the purpose of financing industrial, manufacturing and municipal development projects in this state: Provided however, That any such extension of credit shall require for approval a formal act of the legislature.".

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Hodges requests a record roll call vote. Is the demand seconded? Those in favor will rise. There is sufficient number up.

Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The machine is locked and the vote will be recorded.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

YEAS — 40

Austin	Greene	McGowan, Miss
Baginski	Hart, Miss	Murphy
Balcer	Hatcher, Mrs.	Nord
Barthwell	Hodges	Norris
Binkowski	Hood	Pellow
Bledsoe	Kelsey	Perlich
Brown, T. S.	Krolikowski	Sablich
Buback	Lesinski	Snyder
Dade	Liberato	Stopczynski
Downs	Madar	Suzore
Elliott, Mrs. Daisy	Mahinske	Wilkowski
Follo	Marshall	Young
Ford	McCauley	Youngblood
Garvin

NAYS — 93

Allen	Gust	Pollock
Andrus, Miss	Habermehl	Powell
Anspach	Hanna, W. F.	Prettie
Batchelor	Hannah, J. A.	Pugsley
Beaman	Haskill	Radka
Bentley	Hatch	Rajkovich
Blandford	Heideman	Richards, J. B.
Bonisteel	Higgs	Richards, L. W.
Boothby	Howes	Rood
Brake	Hoxie	Rush
Brown, G. E.	Hubbs	Seyferth
Conklin, Mrs.	Hutchinson	Shackleton
Cudlip	Iverson	Shaffer
Cushman, Mrs.	Judd, Mrs.	Shanahan
Danhof	Karn	Sharpe
Davis	Kirk, S.	Sleder
Dehnke	Knirk, B.	Spitler
Dell	Koeze, Mrs.	Stafseth
DeVries	Kuhn	Staiger
Donnelly, Miss	Lawrence	Stamm
Doty, Donald	Leibrand	Sterrett
Durst	Leppien	Stevens
Erickson	Lundgren	Tubbs
Everett	Martin	Turner
Farnsworth	McAllister	Tweedie
Faxon	McLogan	Upton
Figy	Millard	Van Dusen
Finch	Mosier	Wanger
Gadola	Page	Wood
Goebel	Perras	Woolfenden
Gover	Plank	Yeager

On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Hodges, the yeas are 40; the nays are 93.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is not adopted. Are there any other amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: I have none on file, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: If not, Committee Proposal 23, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 23 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. No evidence of state indebtedness shall be issued, except for such debts as are expressly authorized in or pursuant to the provisions of this constitution.

Sec. b. The legislature, for the purpose of meeting its appropriations for any fiscal year, may by law authorize the state to issue its notes pledging its faith and credit for the purpose of borrowing money in anticipation of the receipt of any undedicated revenues to be received within the same fiscal year which shall be pledged for the payment of such borrowings. Such borrowing in any fiscal year shall not exceed 15 per cent of all undedicated revenues received by the state during the preceding fiscal year and shall be repaid at the time the revenues so pledged are received, but not later than the end of the same fiscal year.

The state may borrow money for such other specific purposes and in such amounts as may be proposed by an act of the legislature requiring the affirmative vote of 2/3 of the members elected to both houses, and approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon at any general election. The question submitted to the electors shall state the amount proposed to be borrowed, the specific purpose to which the funds shall be devoted, and the method of repayment.

Sec. c. The credit of the state shall not be granted to, nor in aid of any person, association or corporation, public or private, except as authorized in this constitution.

This section shall not be construed so as to prohibit the investment of public funds until needed for current requirements in such manner as may be provided by general law.

Sec. d. The state, in addition to any other borrowing power, may borrow from time to time such amounts as shall be required, pledge its faith and credit and issue its notes or bonds therefor, for the purpose of making loans to school districts as provided in this section.

If the minimum amount which it would otherwise be necessary for a school district to levy in any year to pay principal and interest on its qualified bonds, including any necessary allowances for estimated tax delinquencies, exceeds 13 mills on each dollar of its assessed valuation as last equalized by the state, or such lower millage as the legislature may prescribe, then the school district may elect to borrow all or any part of the excess from the state. In that event the state shall loan the excess amount to the school district for the payment of principal and interest. If for any reason any school district will be or is unable to pay the principal and interest on its qualified bonds when due, then the school district shall borrow and the state shall loan to it an amount sufficient to enable the school district to make the payment.

The term "qualified bonds" means general obligation bonds of school districts issued for capital expenditures, including refunding bonds, issued prior to May 4, 1955, or issued thereafter and qualified as provided by law pursuant to section 27 or section 28, article X of the Constitution of 1908, or pursuant to this section.

After a school district has received loans from the state, each year thereafter it shall levy for debt service, exclusive of levies for nonqualified bonds, not less than 13 mills or such lower millage as the legislature may prescribe, until the amount loaned has been repaid, and any tax collections therefrom in any year over and above the minimum requirements for principal and interest on qualified bonds shall be used towards the repayment of state loans. In any year when such a levy would produce an amount in excess of the requirements and the amount due to the state, the levy may be reduced by the amount of the excess.

Subject to the foregoing provisions, the legislature shall have the power to prescribe and/or limit the procedure, terms and conditions for the qualification of bonds, for obtaining and making state loans, and for the repayment of loans.

The power to tax for the payment of principal and interest on bonds hereafter issued which are the general obligations of any school district, including refunding bonds, and for repayment of any state loans made to school districts, shall be without limitation as to rate or amount.

